We welcome home our absent friends, but I am sure they know and realize that we have been with them. (Thank you.) In times of distress, in times of disappointment, in times of being unsure, these times are those when you must find yourselves. I have spoken with you about this many times in your past months, but I will say it to you once more my dear friends: in times of trouble, that is when you come to truly know yourselves. Therefore, I ask of you that you try to do this each day of your living, not only when we come together, but each day that dawns I would ask that you connect with us to allow the Spirit to be free, to allow the Spirit more knowledge, in order that that knowledge be used wisely in your everyday lives. I feel this time my dear friends that I must give you the opportunity to ask of me what you will, but I feel this time a great heaviness which surrounds you. Have you questions this time?

Jan: The lady to your left (Lilian) and I went to Mark Brandish, a medium, on Saturday and I was really grateful when he came to me, he said that he could see coloured lights all around me, but it wasn't my aura. Could you explain those lights to me? I have interpreted that those are the lights that are visible from us. Would I be correct?

I understand what you say. Let me say this to you, that as you sit here now, each individual is showered in many colours. I have explained a little to you about colour, but not a lot. Colour as seen by those who give you words from our world, have developed sufficiently to see not only the auric field, but those who stand close by you. I will say to you this, my dear friend: that you were bathed in those colours for your own upliftment at a time of some distress. They were there to help you and uplift you and still they remain with you. The person who could see them around you, had the ability to know these spirits by their lights. You, my dear friend, have had many from our world join you, not only in your waking moments, but as you so aptly told your colleagues, in your sleep-state. They will remain with you for some time to come, not because you are in emotional trouble, but because at times of grief or distress, those beings come closer to each one of you, whether you are aware of them or not.

Jan: I've been very aware and it's been lovely and I really grateful that I am able to know that.

Do not assume that these beings are all of your family members, they are not. They are your protectors, your friends, your teachers. That is why they are seen in many colours. Do you understand?

Jan: Yes I do now thank you.

Sara: Often when I'm feeling particularly distressed about something or a situation, I often find I hear a sudden noise or I become aware that possibly a Spirit is in the room with me. I don't know if I am right in assuming this, but a piece of furniture or something will move suddenly in a way that I can't see how it could have moved, except by some other means. Am I right in assuming—today something moved in the house and I didn't know if it was my negative mental state that might have caused it to happen or if I was in the presence of a helping Spirit.

I would say this to you my dear friend, that at your spiritual growth it would be most unlikely that any negative feelings from you would create such happenings. All of you who have come here for any length of time are protected. It would only happen if that negativity remained for any long period of time, in which case it allows that negative thought to become reality—and you know also that like attracts like. So firstly I say to you that you are protected but, what I also wish to say to you is this: that each one of you is developing in their own unique way. Not all of you see or feel the same. When those from our world come close for whatever reason, they have to, if they cannot influence you through the Spirit, they influence through the emotions or sometimes physical happening. They will select which is best for each individual. If you cannot see with clear vision, they will speak to you with the spiritual ear, you may hear or you not, dependent upon you own capabilities. But yes, that would be those who come close to you to make you understand that they hear and know what is happening in your daily lives.

Sara: I felt it was to comfort and reassure.

I would tell you this—and I do not often give these things as you know—but there is a lady who has been with you from your birth and who seeks to encourage you and she has been responsible for many of these movements. Please do not be afraid, but it is her way of letting you know that she is there to comfort you.

Sara: That's wonderful. I am very grateful actually and that does explain a lot. And I will try to go within when I become aware of her presence...

You do have the gift of clear vision, but it has yet to be unlocked, but it is there for you to use if you so desire.

Sara: Yes I would like to yes. Yes, I'll meditate more now.

Lilian: Any questions Sarah?

Sarah: No questions thank you.

Lilian: George? (Yes...)

May I be so rude as to interrupt our gentleman friend? I wish to say to the lady who has said 'no' a few words. She has gained much in experience these past weeks of her time, but with the knowledge and experience there has been created a few little doubts. Yes?

Sarah: I wasn't aware of any doubts, I don't think.

Yes, there is within a doubt. What I would say to you is this: accept what comes to you with love and understanding and whatever happens must happen. I say therefore to you my dear friend, take each experience and handle it with love.

Sarah: Thank you, yes I will bear that in mind.

Now, gentleman friend please.

George: Thank you. You talked to us recently about beings of light that walk the planet at the present time that come from other worlds. I was just wondering if you would clarify, are these beings who have gone through the usual incarnation process and have Earth bodies? Would this be so but the difference would be that they would have a different from usual soul connection? And I think you said the spiritual light beamed from them.

Yes, you are correct in what you say. There are beings of light which live in your world and the only way they can live in your world is to don the cloak of human flesh. They do have a different soul connection, because beings of light their task is to look after this planet. When they incarnate to human form, their light can never be dismissed, diminished or extinguished. Their light shines forth like a beacon, their light shines forth with such brightness that no one can doubt that they are beings of love and light and goodness. There are many in your world in this present day; their task is to protect this planet Earth, their task is to show and direct love where it is needed, their task is to show humankind the way forward. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes, that's wonderful, thank you. So, at a glance, they would appear as ordinary Earth beings, but at a second look there would be this light from them.

Yes. You will know them if you should meet.

George: I see, I follow now—so, before coming to this planet they would have light form elsewhere. (Yes) Yes, that makes it clear. Yes, we are very, very fortunate to have such beings with us, obviously.

Lilian: So even in physical form, if we met them we would be aware of the light, would we?

Their spiritual energy and light would not be mistaken. You all have heard of these beings of light whose goodness and love extend throughout your planet.

Lilian: Yes, I can think of one. I didn't meet this person, but it would have been interesting to.

Are there more questions please?

Graham: I was going to ask a question about schools. With the changes that are occurring in schools at the moment, there is some negativity amongst the teaching profession that children these days are harder to teach, because of indiscipline and often children want to do their own thing and not necessarily follow the lesson plan. But one of the changes that has occurred in the teaching profession is that teachers these days I think are gentler and more caring and I think that the classroom atmosphere is probably more compassionate than it used to be. Yet despite these things, the children are very difficult to teach, because of the way they obstruct the lessons. I was wondering what we are doing wrong as teachers?

Firstly let me say my dear friend that there is no fault with those who teach. The basic fault in your world today is materialism. Your children of this world, in this age, in this time lack for nothing except spiritual gifts. Very few of your children in your schools fully understand their true nature. They have been raised in a world full of what they consider to be their right—these gifts of material things; and so do I have to say, all parents of these children, who feel that you are giving them everything that you can. The most important thing that you can give a child is love and understanding and to stop thinking of them as just children. They are people. They may be younger, they may be under your safeguard, but they are individual. There is coming a time in your world, when materialism will fall, when people will realize that the gifts of love and giving are more important. So do not feel that those teachers have fault—that is not the right approach. I would say as a teaching person, that you must look at each child individually, you must take them to your heart, you must look for those spiritual gifts that are there and you must help them to develop as people. I know when you have a number of children that this is not always possible, but if you use your spiritual eyes, you will see what gifts they have, what gifts that need to be developed.

Graham: Yes there are new things coming in, like I think they call it PSE, where we do have an opportunity to teach spiritual messages. I think that these are very important. It's coming more and more I think (Yes) and it is an opportunity to connect a bit more in a spiritual way. I found that that was very useful and valuable.

When the Spirit is touched—of course you must live in the physical world, of course you need these material things, but what you do not need is the love of material things. There is nothing wrong in having material goods, but it is the love of them which is the downfall of your young children in your world. Do you understand the difference? (Affirmed)

Graham: Children seem to get very competitive over what they have.

Yes. You should nurture their love of giving, their love of liking all others—I will not say love for these very young people, because love for them means something entirely different, but children have a natural instinct and children want to be loved more than any other thing. Therefore the responsibility I would say of your schools upon this Earth, is to help to nurture these children, bring out their spiritual gifts and their capabilities of living in this most material world.

Graham: That is very interesting, thank you for that. I agree with what you are saying.

There will always be those who will disagree, there will always be those in your world who have harsh words—words of discipline. Look to your animal kingdom. Which animal treated harshly or with love responds to the human touch—and therein lies your answer. I do not say this is an easy task, because in your world today there is much that has gone in the wrong direction, but that is no reason to be afraid for the future, because as I have told you my dear friends, there is change. That is why, as the gentleman has already discussed these light beings upon this Earth, because they will not allow this planet to be destroyed. So I say, take these words as a message of hope to you all. (Thanks expressed)

I feel that for this time I have spoken enough. Next time I hope to bring you some more teaching, but I say to you my dear friends, if you need the time for questions, then do not be afraid to ask, because my task here as you know is to help and encourage you also. So as you leave this room tonight, I know that the heaviness which was with you when you came will be a little lighter. (Thanks expressed)

George: So we must try to get away from too much emotional involvement and obviously live more within Spirit.

The emotional body creates many problems in your world. It is something that you must truly try to control. But I leave now my dear friends deep and safe in my love. (Thanks + farewells)

There then followed a few brief clairvoyance through Eileen before closing.

~9th December 2002~

Good evening. (Greetings)

This time my dear friends I would like to say to you all that as you near another of your earthly years, I would like you to look back—and that is not a strange request as always I tell you to look forward, but in looking back over these past months I am sure you will recognize how much self-knowledge and self-empowerment that each of you has gained. It may take you a little time to realize and understand those words, but I would like you to think about it carefully, to think of the choices that have been placed before you on many occasions and the choices that you as individuals have made. Think deeply my dear friends and only then will you realize how much you have capitalized on the knowledge that you have gained here.

George: Yes, I have the feeling that as that knowledge becomes more complete we become better in a position to spread that knowledge to others.

That you do my dear friends, but what you must also understand is what that knowledge has done for you as an individual, as a spiritual being. You must fully understand where that self-empowerment comes from, and it comes from the very fact that your self-awareness has grown so much. Only in understanding yourselves can you then help others, but what I wish you to do is to look in hindsight at what you as individuals have achieved. Each one of you in your own individual style, are always helping others, but my question to you my dear friends: 'do you understand why'? That is something for you to go inwards to find. I have spoken many words in these past months about your own self-development, about meditative states, about your own seeking. I hope now that as you approach the end of this earthly year, that you are able to recognize full well all that you have achieved. Can any of you tell me what you have achieved? (Pause) Please put your human modesty to one side—allow those true selves to come forth.

Margaret: I've found that I'm more contented with my life and I try to help other people as much as I can. Yes. You my dear friend I have been uplifting, because in these last few months you have been a little depleted of spiritual energy.

Margaret: That is true.

Yes, but we are with you always. (Thank you very much.)

Graham: I feel as if I have gained the confidence to actually go ahead and make decisions. Sometimes decisions are hard to make and there is a lot of self-doubt, but I think that the knowledge that I've had has to some extent enabled me to see a wider picture perhaps and enabled me to go about thinking about making decisions which are going to have to be made in the future and I am very grateful for that knowledge. I think that I would have floundered at times without it. It's been very comforting. It is like having a side companion having this knowledge.

Yes my dear friend, of all within this room, you have been one who I would say has achieved the most. I do not say that lightly, because, as you all know, this earthly year for you physically has not been an easy one and I think I say truly to you, that had you still had full health your thinking and your decision making would have been entirely different. Therefore what you must ponder upon is the outcome of these health problems that you now have. You have been told that you have the power within yourself to become healthy, and to be healthy—and this applies to all—to be healthy you must have a healthy mind, you must have a healthy disposition to all aspects of life. So you, my dear friend, are weathering the storm very well and I say to you, continue on this spiritual journey and it only can become easier. And I don't mean by that that all physical problems in life will suddenly disappear. It is only in times of stress that the Spirit shines.

Graham: I like to think about my life as almost like becoming a meditation as you go through the day, think many things and try to apply them and as I said it is a tremendous companion and I like to try and think about my life as being a meditation in a way. In quiet times I go cycling, because it gives me an opportunity to think and it is very, very useful and I can understand what you mean about quiet times.

Yes. In your quiet times then Spirit comes forth; the true self appears. In those quiet times those who are close by you have the opportunity to help you, to uplift you, to guide you. That is why during these past months, that I have repeated many times about meditation. I have stressed also that we cannot make you meditate, we cannot force you to take quiet moments; that responsibility lies with each one of you. But I know as you also do know that in seeking these quiet times, then the self-awareness and self-empowerment becomes so much stronger.

Sarah: I find like George, I find it quite difficult at times to not chip in and say something when people are talking, because I find that I'm thinking quite differently to the way that they are and I do try and say my little bit. Sometimes I have to keep my mouth shut as it is obviously not being taken, but very often I find that people do listen. It's made my life a lot easier to live. I find problems that I would have had before; I don't think I do have so much now, because I am thinking in a different way. I know I haven't done the meditation that maybe I should have done, but nonetheless I do feel much more confident in the work—yes just my faith with you.

Yes. I hope my dear friend that it is a little more than faith, that it is a knowledge that you have gained individually, by the way you live this earthly life. Yes you are a much stronger person than when first you came to this group. We know you do not always appreciate how much you have grown and it is difficult for us at times to tell you, because until now you are unaware of each other's light. But the time can come, with the love and dedication which you have, for those spiritual gifts to become manifold and to be expressed by each one of you. But it needs patience, it needs dedication and above all it needs you to offer yourselves to be used. After all my dear friends you are all sowers of seed and as you have said my dear friend, you can only but utter those words. It is up to those who receive those words, whether or not they allow those seeds to flourish, or whether they allow those words of wisdom to die. But that is not your responsibility, you have done your work when you have given of those words. So I would say to you my dear friends, continue, because your words are healing to many ears, your words to others uplift them, you are words to others: feed them. And as I have said to you many times, each one of you works in your own individual way.

Lilian: I think for myself, as Sarah has just said really goes for me. I have let more people read the transcripts of your words which are rather nice and I know they're interested, so that's good.

Again my dear friend, life for you is not always easy, but you have a generous heart, although sometimes you are harsh on yourself. Let me tell you that any doubts you may have are unfounded. Your work for Spirit is commended. You, by your way of living life is an example to others. I hear you chuckle and think to yourself, 'but I am no saint'.

Lilian: True. (Chuckles)

We, my dear friends are not searching for angels—they already exist. You people upon this earthly planet, were never meant to be perfect, that is why you are here. So do not chide yourself, do not be so harsh upon yourself, because in your earthly years, you have given much, much love. And I know you would be one to say: 'but I have not done anything that other people have not', but there I will correct you, because my dear friend, whatever you have done has always been with an open heart. I have to tell you, you are much loved in this, our world. I will not speak longer this time. It has been good to join with you again my dear friends, but as always at this time of your earthly year I have to take my leave of you for a little while. I will return to that place where I belong. I will return to you, as I hope also you will, much refreshed and ready to give you more of our teaching. (Thanks expressed) If there is any question that must be asked, I will be happy to answer it now before I leave you.

Lilian: Have you any words for your own instrument to tell her before the year is finished?

Only that we are grateful for the privilege of being able to use the instrument, also that her earthly year has held many problems also, but we have no concerns. She has reached a stage of acceptance and we cannot ask more of you than that.

Lilian: Yes and we are all very grateful to her as well.

I would say this to you that perhaps you will tell her that what she felt is indeed correct. I am sure she will understand my words. Are there any questions please?

George: A gentleman asked a question of me which I said I would pass on: On learning about the work of light escorts, he was intrigued know, in his words, 'who overshadows the light escorts?' By that I think he is seeking information on the chain of command above the light escorts. Can you help us with that?

Yes, I understand the question. There is much spoken of and many words are used. I understand when you use the words 'light escorts'. To many they mean the light escorts from other planets. Am I correct in my thinking?

George: I know he was concerned with the light escorts who oversee at the time of physical death, the passage from this planet.

I see. I understand your question. This is always the problem when we have earthly words which are used to describe our world. Those who are present at the passage of the human being to our world, those workers you mean? (Yes) Yes. Those workers can be many. There are of course degrees of workers in the light. It begins with people who have inhabited your world, inhabited other worlds and then they graduate to the beings of light who have never existed on any planet. You have to see that there are many and not one explanation. All of these beings of light are there to help those souls who return home to our world. It of course depends on the passage and the person and the time, and of course these light beings are overshadowed by those light beings from our world who look out for them in the same way as you have Spirit beings who come to your world, but there always is a regime of order—there has to be, nothing happens haphazardly, all is organized. And I would say and I do believe that what your friend means is ‘who is the governing power?’ And I would say that that the governing power is that all superior universal being from which we all come. That is the simple answer. If he wants more explanation, I will return to it when I come back to you. (Thank you.) I need really I believe to know exactly which light beings he is speaking of. After all, those beings from our world are all light beings. We need to have a little more definition for me to answer your question fully and I will be happy to do so for you.

George: Thank you, I shall pass that on.

Now my dear friends, as I take my leave from you, know that although we are apart for a few weeks of your time that always I am still here. (Thanks + farewells)

One through Sarah followed with information concerning the next few meetings over the Christmas period, where the group may be used to help bring more happiness to those in need.

~20TH January 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

It is good to join with you once more. I hope that the time apart has given you time to think and to look forward to all that is to come. When last we met we spoke briefly about how each one of you has grown in your own awareness, in your understanding and in your own spiritual knowledge of yourselves. I hope my dear friends it gave you food for thought. I hope these weeks apart has given you time to consider where you are at this moment in time. Before I continue, there is one who is with us this evening who has been giving out a little fear, fear not for themselves but for others. I would say to you my dear friend, there is no room for fears, there is no room for any negativity within your lives. If we are to continue onwards and upward, we must let go of these emotions which hold us back. Therefore my dear friends I say this to you: as we go forward in this one of your earthly years, let it be known that lies ahead much good, much joy, much upliftment throughout this, your earthly planet. (Optimism expressed) I know there will be many who will doubt these words, but it is to you my dear friends that these doubters will turn for reassurance, for upliftment and for any knowledge that you wish to impart to them. As you know, never have I interfered in your lives, but always you know I stand close by to help and uplift you in any time of trouble. I am sure by now each one of you is aware of the times when you feel that upliftment within your daily lives. (Agreed) That is of course not to say life does not throw at you hardships or sorrow or any other of the physical emotions, because as you well know my dear friends, it is in troubled times that the soul comes into its own. Therefore my opening words to you this time is: be joyful, continue to look forward and upward, look always into the light of love; never look backwards, because in doing so you are holding yourselves back. I say to each one of you, look not only to others, but firstly know yourselves. That was my parting words last time and they are my words to you now. Where are you? Where do you stand at this moment in time? Who are you and how do you play your part in this, your earthly planet? Find the answer to those questions and indeed you will be channels of Spirit. My heart is full that I am with you once more, that we may begin this earthly year knowing that there is to come to you, this group, new knowledge for you, but again remember my past words: no knowledge is new, only to those who need to obtain it whilst in these physical garbs. Therefore, when I say ‘new knowledge’, I mean knowledge which you will regain, but which you already know as Spirit. So, my dear friends I will answer any questions this time if you have any, but next time we will speak about subjects not yet touched upon.

George: Following on from what you were saying, we stand and see ourselves as we are, but part of that self-awareness connects with others I believe and I have been aware recently of links with other people, several others. One, in fact, in New Zealand is a priest, a third generation priest who was part of a group in the 70s, such as ourselves, and the one who came through to that group was St. Stephen, the first Christian martyr in the 1st century. And you have told us that like attracts like, and it seems to me that St. Stephen coming through to that very much Anglican church-orientated group seemed very appropriate. Would you wish to comment on that or say anything about that group in New Zealand? I would add that the person I have been in touch with has written a book about the channelling that happened within that group.

Yes, I thank you for your question. I have told you my dear friends in the past that when the soul/the Spirit reincarnates into any lifetime, they reincarnate in the knowledge of where and who they will be, but you know that Spirit has always been, the soul has always existed. Do you remember my words when I explained—and I believe you my dear friend (George) was the questioner about ‘did Jesus still walk this Earth, did the Holy Mother come to this Earth? (Yes) My reply to you then was that the soul has many aspects. This to you all must be the source of all of your knowledge, that there are many aspects to the soul which reincarnate into physical form. You understand me so far? (Affirmed) Therefore the connection with St. Stephen and the friend that you have mentioned, is not new by any manner of means. All who reincarnate, reincarnate for a purpose and of course they will return to the physical form to those places, to those people where their purpose of life is most needed, for the purpose of the soul; not because of any name, not because of any denomination, but for the growth of the soul. So, if you keep this in mind it will perhaps be a little clearer for you to understand. Remember, there are many, many aspects to the soul and remember it is not who or where that individual life goes to, but the reason behind the coming to this physical life. May I say something to you my dear friend whilst we are speaking?

George: Yes, please do.

That if you are to achieve in one physical life, all that you have to in physical garb, then the understanding of the being has to be the understanding of who this individual is at this point in time. You have to accept that any one being is not alone, but is but a part of a whole, a whole being whilst on this Earth. Do you understand? No man stands alone. As each one of you within this group is connected, we call you a group of light, a spiritual group, because there has in past times been many connections with you, but each individual here is connected to the rest of this earthly planet. Do you understand what I am trying to say to you? (Affirmed) You need to see the fuller picture.

George: All humanity is connected (Yes) and I imagine some connections are stronger or more to the fore than others.

Yes. Therefore in answer to your question my dear friend, if your friend in the far-off country has connection with one from our world called St. Stephen, so too have many others that capability, because of this one connection. But I understand your question. Of course like is attracted to like—this is a fundamental issue when first you begin to recognize that you are more than the physical being. Yes, like will be attracted to like, but so too are the opposites attracted to you. Have you thought along those lines? Why should this be? Because all things, all life is connected. We are moving into deeper matters, but I would like you to think about it just a little.

George: Can I mention one other detail? My friend Michael in New Zealand, he found that he has the ability to type a question on a piece of paper and a book reference will then come into his mind, and he will go along to the library, look up the book reference and he will find that it is the answer to the question that he typed. (Yes) They got into the way of thinking of this as ‘the library angel’. Would you care to comment on that?

Yes, that is good and humorous I feel, but let me say this to you my dear friend: That is not something that is unique, you could be capable of this also. I already feel your doubts, but let me say...

George: It is a matter of listening within, is that correct?

Yes, this is the lesson that I try to teach all of you that you must go within if you are to find the self, if you are to find the true self, and only by going within can you allow those others to come to you to influence and to help you. It is because he is an open channel, a very good open channel, but it is not something that only he is capable of. It takes time, it takes dedication and it takes listening to those who come to you to give you that inspiration which you seek. You will find my dear friend that there will be many more connections around the world for you to make. You will find as time continues that the evidence each is given will eventually be collated together and each little bit will come forth as truth, will come forth as knowledge that has always existed, will come forth as evidential knowledge to each one in connection. All of these happenings will take place, because your world, this Earth planet, no longer will be static; it must grow in spiritual knowledge. There are many avenues through which this knowledge will come. When first I came to you did I not say that much would come from far places, much to uphold the things that I told you and this my dear friend is what you are now embarking upon.

George: It is a journey with much joy. Thank you.

There is much spiritual joy to be had by you all, but again my dear friends let me say that the bulk of the work belongs to each individual. We are limited in what we can bring only in as much as we depend upon your silence and your dedication.

Sara: You were talking about being an open channel and as I see it we all, presumably are open channels, in particular with regard to different areas. I have had the experience of sitting at the piano and having a piece of music arrive complete and just playing it once only and having it as a complete piece. Presumably with dedication and time that would be more effective and that could happen more often?

Yes, of course. And what you should realize my dear friend is that the inspiration of music is close, if not one of the closest things to our world.

Sara: I am always of the fact that it's nothing to do with me, I know it comes from your world, because I've never been able to understand how I do it anyway, because my fingers have a life of their own. When I am peaceful it comes through.

Yes, because you are an open channel. But, do not be harsh about yourself. Without you allowing those people who wish to inspire you to come, without you being an open channel that would not be possible.

Sara: Thank you. I feel very grateful and humbled by the help I have, because I know it is often there and I only feel frustrated sometimes that I can't do more, but I think that in the future I will have more time.

Yes, it will come. Your physical life at this point in time is busy with other things, but knowing what is possible, that is enough for the time being. Do not become frustrated, because it blocks the opportunities for those who wish to inspire you.

Sara: Yes, I do feel very contented generally and I know that children mustn't be hurried, they need time too and they are most important at the moment.

And do you not agree that music is a language of its very own.

Sara: Yes it is, but I know that it relates to feelings entirely; my feelings seem to become expressed in the music.

That's right, but let us differentiate between feelings and emotions: Feelings belong to our world—that is where the very best of sound and what you call music comes from.

Sara: Once when I was sitting in the house, I was discussing music with Graham and suddenly we both heard what sounded like celestial music from your world (Yes) and we knew it wasn't from our house at all, but we felt that someone was simply encouraging me, because I was expressing doubts at the time about my ability to find enough time and then this beautiful music was played.

Once we have an open channel, we are loathe to let them go, therefore in hearing this music, those who wish to inspire you were letting you know that those doubts were unfounded.

Sara: Well I am very grateful too, because it brings me great joy.

And it brings those spiritual gifts of upliftment and happiness into your household, when this music is used as a channel to our world. Continue on this pathway and you will be amazed by what can happen.

Jan: I came here tonight with a question for you and I think whilst I have been sitting here I've been given the answer. (Yes) So thank you, but I would like to voice it if I may: I've not doubted at all, doubt is the wrong word, but wondered sometimes if I could define between my imagination, my physical imagination, and what I feel is being impressed upon me. I get flashes of people or events sometimes and I think to myself: 'Am I imagining that or have I seen that?' While I've been sat here tonight the same vision I had just recently has been shown to me again. And while I'm sat here, I'm so cold and so nervous and I'm wondering if those feelings that you say come from Spirit and why I'm feeling shaky and nervous at this moment are because that's what's being impressed on me. I can't explain it any other way.

Yes. Again I will say this to you my dear friend that when you allow yourself to become an open channel, you will experience many things, not always understood by you earthly beings; but always because you are human these doubts creep into your thinking. The more you doubt, the less can be given to you. So what I would suggest to you my dear friend is to allow these thoughts, this clairvoyance, because that is what is happening to you...

Jan: And that is what I desire or wish, if I can use those words, that is what when I meditate, I ask for.

And that is what you are given, but because it makes no sense, as you would say, you then begin to doubt what you are given. In being given clairvoyance—clairvoyance means only clear seeing—it matters not what the clear seeing is, it is important that you accept what is given to you. In that way, in accepting you can be given much more. Then, and only then, can we begin to work with you as a channel for clairvoyance, when you alone have accepted that what comes to you is from our world. Do you understand? (Yes) I know how difficult, and you my dear are the one I spoke of who has had the fears. You do not recognize it as fear, but that is what it is. You have a disbelief of what is being given to you, you are afraid that what you see is not true.

Jan: I think it comes from the baggage or past lives and especially the early part of this life being told that what I was seeing was not so.

Yes, but now in this lifetime it is (Salumet's voice becomes stronger) time for you to understand that you are part of all things, that you are part of all vision, that you are part of giving clear evidence of our world to others. Therefore in this lifetime I say to you my dear friend, now is the time to put to one side any doubts or fears that you may have.

Sara: Yes, we value your input every week, we miss you when you don't come, and I can vouch for the fact that some of the evidence you gave recently was true for one of our friends.

Jan: I just feel very emotional at the moment—I'm not sure why.

Yes, because at this moment you are being comforted, you are being shown the pathway that you must follow. There is much love that surrounds you.

Jan: Yes, I know I hear people talking to me all the time.

But you must take control. You have control of what you allow and what you do not allow into your life. This begins with being an open channel, which what I am talking about this evening, but when you become an open channel, you must take responsibility for all that comes to you, because not only do you have inspiration from our world, you are open to many areas that lead to our world, many areas that have to be controlled. Do you understand? (Yes) If my words seem harsh to you my dear friend, they are not meant to be. I am here to tell you this time that now is the time for you to take control. You must in your quiet times protect yourself first, you must ground yourself afterwards, but most of all you must offer yourself only for that clairvoyance from our world which is in the name of goodness and the light. Do you understand?

Jan: Yes, thank you.

I will help you in your sleep state.

George: Could I just mention something which I think connects. I was in meditation and our old cat who passed on nearly a year ago, there was suddenly a wonderful image—well more than an image, I think—but a resplendent image of our old cat and she was on a piece of furniture rather high and I raised my hand to touch her fur and I came out of meditation at that moment with my hand in the air. That is such a strong memory.

Yes. Do you not see my dear friends as we speak here this evening of how much each one of you have grown in your own individual lives? Can you not see that there is opening before you your own individual developments that we placed much emphasis on last year? (Some agreement) I would like to say to you my dear friends that each one of you, your light shines ever brighter and I hope as we continue onwards with more information for you, that you devote your time not only to what I give you, but to your own being, because when you know yourself, when you know where you are and at what part of time you are at, then you begin to know all things.

Jan: Can I share with the group please what I saw and what's being impressed with me?

If you so wish.

Jan: I think it would help if you don't mind. It happens a lot when I am walking the dogs, that's my time, and I was walking through out local woods and I looked to the side of me and I saw this group of people—you don't see them physically, you just see them as a picture—it is difficult to explain. I thought, 'is that my imagination or have I seen a group of people in the woods?' I felt that they were medieval type people with sacking on and what have you, and each time I've gone past that is where they are. And tonight as I have been sat here in silence that is what I have been seeing: the same group of people in the same spot. So it has made me feel better to tell you.

I would say to you this that any area as you have mentioned—woodland, open spaces, by water, hills—all of these areas in your world are areas of power, that is where much of life's inspiration comes from.

Jan: That's obviously why it happens to me in the woods.

Yes, because those who wish to show and inspire you are aware of this, but you must begin if you wish to continue on this pathway, you must take control, you must say what you want and ask the question. But always you must protect yourself and then ground yourself where you know the power to be the strongest.

Jan: And you can do that purely by power of thought?

Your power of thought by now should be sufficient to enable you to do this. Remember how much I have told you about the power of your thinking.

I feel this time that have spoken enough.

Sarah: Salumet could I interrupt and ask one more thing before you go? (Yes) Could my son come and join the group? You said he could at some stage. Is he ready to come now?

Yes, I remember. Yes, he will be welcome now.

Sarah: Thank you very much. He will be pleased.

Sara: Can I ask? I have a friend called Rachel who is keen to develop as a healer. She's interested in coming. She is 30.

Can we say for this time, ask me next time I come to you and I will give you my answer. I will leave you all my dear friends with a blessing from that eternal light from which we all come. I give thanks that you have all been inspired to come here together this evening. I hope my words have given you a little more to think about. (The tape ended there—Salumet went on to thank Lilian for letting us use her home for our meetings)

Good evening. (Greetings)

I will begin this time by saying to you, when you hear the words 'seek and you will find', what my dear friends, what is it that you seek to find?

Jan: Truth.

Sara: And wisdom.

Margaret: Happiness.

Lilian: And love.

Sarah: Our purpose of being here.

Each one with a different answer—I would say this to you that each one of you, whatever you may seek, that is what you will find; but if we take that question to a spiritual level, what then would your answers be?

Jan: Ourselves and home, going back home.

Sara: Our true selves. Our Spirit selves.

Jan: Our soul.

Lilian: Is it an unfoldment?

These are all good explanations of what you seek.

Sara: Pure love and light.

Yes, what you seek is that which will never be known to you. You seek to return to that great energy from which we all come. Unconsciously, that is what you seek. So many times in your world we hear people say: 'Who or what is this Creative Energy?' Or to use another phrase better known to you: 'Who or what is God?'

Lilian: Yes that is a very common one.

We will use that one for your understanding. Again I say to you my dear friends, who or what is God? Have you found your answers to that question?

George: Yes, I think we have a number of possible answers. This Creative Energy is one expression, Love is another. An interesting one that was voiced in the New Zealand group that we mentioned last time, is the Space Between—that is the space between everything there is that we detect.

And also that which you do not detect—it is all things, it is all being, it is all creative, it is a creative energy which in the terms of physical speech is difficult to explain to you; but I hope my dear friends that you have reached the point in your own development that you can now stand and say, 'I know a little from whence I came'. Would I be wrong to say this to you? (Agreed) Would you like to continue my dear friend?

George: Yes, it occurred to me that the space between, although that covers an enormous amount, it does not cover quite everything. (Yes) As you say, the Creative Principle is in absolutely everything, more than just the space in between, but it's good to view the space in between as being included, because scientists for so many years have regarded space as being nothing at all.

Yes. Your scientists have now realized, of course with the inspiration from our world, that all that they have placed their trust in has now been shattered, that their thinking now has to expand in order for them to accept truth.

George: Yes, happily some are expanding in that way.

More than you would imagine, although many are still afraid to voice what they have found, but yes it is becoming much more acceptable within that sector of teaching, that all of life cannot be placed within a small box. What I would like to say to you this time my dear friends, is if you are to achieve that knowledge which you seek, then you have to become in touch with the feelings, not so much the thinking, or the words or the physicality of anything in this world, but you must go within and find the feelings, because in the feelings there lies all of Creation. But I hear you say, but we all feel so much so differently. Let me say, that is part of your own individual evolution, but in feeling you become part of that Creative Force. Do you understand? (Affirmed) Does anyone have any comments to make?

Sara: I think it's possible to access every human feeling if you look inwards to your own. Even on a day-to-day basis you can identify many feelings (Yes) and then you have access to others.

Yes, but I do not speak, my dear friend, of human feelings. I am speaking of those inward feelings that you obtain when indeed you do go inwards, because in going inwards you find all that becomes reality. I have told you on previous occasions that this life that you lead, this human form on this planet is but a dream state, it is not reality, and if you wish to seek then you must be in touch with those feelings which come from within. Is this making sense to you?

Sara: Yes, I do understand now what you meant. Yes that's the detachment that you then have that comes from going within, isn't it? (Yes) You can feel detached from emotions (Yes) and feelings which you have around you.

Always I feel for you that the difficulty is in separating human, physical attributes to that of the Spirit. It is something which has grown much within all of you, but as yet is still very immature. You each have much to gain by thinking deeply about those inner feelings, because when you are in touch with those, then truly you only begin to understand what life is about. Do you have any questions?

Lilian: Yes, when we say 'God', thinking say of the father figure, it's always been and always will be, is that right? There's no beginning and no end?

When you use your word 'God', it is but a name.

Lilian: Yes, I understand that.

It is a name that has been given to you. You people of the Earth of a certain denomination as in all other religions, we have spoken of this, but what mankind needs to do now is to leave behind all of these dogmas and creeds and to find what is within. (Pause) Yes, let us continue. Have you more questions about what we are discussing? (No questions)

Let me place one thing before you. As you begin your meetings here, always you ask for help for those who are sick or in need of help. Always these thoughts are taken, always they are received by those who can help, but what would you say if I said to you that the Great Creative Force needed no asking for help? How would you react to that statement?

Sarah: He knows all, he knows everything so he would know that these people needed help. (Yes)

Sara: It would demonstrate that we had stronger faith perhaps if we didn't ask.

Yes, you have spoken wise words, because I want you to understand that in asking for help you are kind of disbelieving if I may use that word, you are disbelieving that the Creative Force can make all things happen. I do not say you are wrong, but what I want you to try to understand is that all of these things are on a much deeper level than up until now you have previously understood.

George: I think you are saying that if we go within and if we are sufficiently deeply in touch, (Yes) then we have a certain bonding and confidence which requires no asking to be present; it just is.

It is, and I would say to you this my dear friend, and of course it depends on your own free wills and what you have carefully achieved so far, but I would say this to you, that the proper form, we shall call it prayer, is to give THANKS. Do you understand this?

Sara: Can I just tell you something Salumet in response to that? (Yes) The last 3 to 4 weeks—I forget the time—I have been on a daily basis counting blessings in written form as well as thought and I have been astounded by the support and love from friends and family. It has been like a whirlwind and I couldn't help feeling there must be some link between; there seems to have been a very positive change in our lives in the last few weeks and I was relating to this thanksgiving, daily thanksgiving which I have been doing.

Yes, you have given a good example of what I am telling you. In giving thanks you have accepted that it can be done. In asking, what you are doing is in fact doubting. Does this make sense? (Affirmed) I know it moves from the normal way of thinking.

Sara: It makes perfect sense to me, because I felt over the last few weeks that I have finally understood about the power of the mind, (Yes) because I realize now that it is—I don't want to make the analogy of a computer, but it is as if we must programme our own minds and realize that we have to take great care to input them with good thoughts.

Yes. The power is within you all; that first and foremost is what you must understand, that each one, each one of you on this planet must be responsible for that power within. And you can utilize it for the benefit of others only when you understand the workings of that Great Force. I hope this has given you something to think about my dear friends. It is not as complicated as some would have you believe, in fact I would say that Truth, Love and Light are the most simplest of all things. It is only in the understanding of yourselves as Spirit that will bring to you an even greater understanding.

Sarah: Salumet, when you said to us to ask for help whenever you need or want help, did you say that, because at that point we would not have understood?

You would not have understood what I have told you now. You see, each step along the way has been slow in order that each one of you can absorb the information in your own individual ways, but I feel now my dear friends that we have been acquainted long enough for me to give you just a little more.

Sara: Many spiritual writers at the moment are using the word 'decree'. Is that more appropriate, do you think, or is that relevant?

It is only but a word.

Sara: It's asking still, isn't it?

Yes, you know how I feel about the human form of words. It is the most difficult barrier to overcome, but yes, I would like you to go beyond that word, I would like you all to go within, to find there within the power that each one of you possesses.

Sara: Trust and faith?

Not trust and faith but knowing. Not trust, not faith, because those are negative words; it is an all-knowing. Do you all understand what I say? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, I suppose it could be seen as a deep feeling rather than a faith.

It is feeling and that, my dear friend, is the word, and we have to use it as a word for your understanding, but feeling encompasses all; it encompasses your thoughts, your words, your deeds.

Jan: The way you have put it is exactly the same way as my husband the other day and I were talking—and he has never sat in the circle—he just described how he felt exactly the way as you have just done.

Yes, he is wiser than he knows.

Jan: I said that to his mother (Lilian). It was like having you in the room, it was amazing, it was like a light bulb moment.

Do not forget that those who do not accept this work or whatever you wish to call it, they are still Spirit. They have that inner knowledge, the same as you do, and that at moments in their lives will come forth these inspirational words for others without them truly knowing what has happened. That is why you must never judge another, you do not see their Spirit, you do not know how much they know. Do you understand what I say? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, and I know that there is one group who, instead of asking for help for another, they consciously place the problem into God's hands.

Yes, that is the way to ask for help, because in placing the problem to that Great Creative Force, it will be dealt with. There will be no interference from your feelings and your thinking and your thoughts.

George: So that is really a nice way to do it?

Yes, yes. As I say I would prefer to give thanks on all occasions, because in giving thanks you are saying that you know it will be done, there can be no doubts, there can be no interference and it is just an all-knowing. So, perhaps my dear friends when next we meet and you wish help for others, perhaps that would be the way forward that prayers of thanks can be given. And, as our dear lady friend has expressed, she has found quite a difference in what she receives by doing and giving thanks.

Sara: It's very exciting, actually, it's very exciting.

Not only is it exciting for you, it is powerful. Think carefully my friends; it is another avenue of thought for you, but you are ready for it.

Lilian: So what you just told us about giving thanks, could that help in any way, remembering your words, when healing is taking place?

All healing should begin with thanks. Is that what you mean?

Lilian: Yes, I just wondered if the thoughts of the healer would...

There should be no thoughts of the healer. The healer is but an instrument, a channel that comes from that Great Creative Force. All that a healer offers is either their mouth, their words or their hands. The healer should have no participation and does not have any participation in the healing; that is between the person and God, if you like, or as I prefer: Creative Force.

George: Yes, and only Creative Force can take into account karmic considerations. (Yes) Do the karmic connections to illness—I imagine they would come to an end at some point when certain things have happened. I sometimes wonder if the karmic consideration would be for a whole lifetime, or is it likely be lifted at some stage during a lifetime?

I do not like the word 'lifted', as if each individual can be exonerated; that is not how karma works. It will be released when the soul recognizes what the karmic debt is. Then, and only then—of course with the Creative Force's help and inspiration, in any one lifetime or another will the soul come to the realization that the karmic debt must be paid and released. Remember freewill; you must always remember that we have been bestowed with freewill, not only in this human form, but the soul retains freewill. Do you understand? (Affirmed) Of course the Spirit can be helped to release karmic debt. There can be inspiration, there can be a change of thinking, but the Spirit must release their own karmic debts.

Sarah: When people are healed through—for example when they go to Lourdes and they become well after being ill for so long, is that maybe when the Spirit has recognized what it has done wrong?

A healing that you speak of can only take place when the Spirit is touched, but having the connection with the life force, inspires the Spirit to work for good, but no healing can take place until the Spirit is touched.

Sarah: So this is why you said to us that sometimes people could be healed and sometimes they are not. Yes. The desire alone to be healed is not enough, especially as we are speaking about karmic debt—that is something to be worked through by the Spirit alone. Always there will be help and upliftment, but a healing will not take place whilst there remains karmic debt. Is that clear for you? (Affirmed)

George: Yes thank you. This is an area we have had some difficulty in understanding. Yes that does clarify, thank you.

Jan: When you use the help, when you're asking for help, it has a different effect on the physical as well as the soul, because when you say 'thank you', the word 'thank you' has a different philosophical effect. I have been asking for help and with that asking for help comes that almighty stress actually, because you are not quite sure where to end it: you are asking help for yourself, you are asking help for other people and to suddenly stop saying that and say 'thank you' has a totally different effect on your soul. And I think probably Salumet was so right that now was the time, and with whatever is going on in the world at this moment, rather than say we have all got to help with positive thinking, just to say 'thank you' for what is actually being done that we can't feel as yet.

We need to give thanks for what you are, for where you are, for all problems that you have and may I say to you my dear friends, we have spoken only briefly about sound, but let me say this to you: When you say 'thank you' and you mean it with all of your being, listen to the resonance of that sound. Try it now if you will and really listen to the vibration of the sound. Would anyone like to try that?

Jan: It's a deeper vibration within the body. (Yes) It's much, much deeper; it's not as shallow as 'help'.

It is part of your being. I would like you, if you would, when you leave this room, when you are in your quiet moments alone, say 'thank you' and feel what is within, and perhaps next time we will discuss what each one of you has felt. Take this into your lives, give thanks my dear friends and see how your lives will change.

George: Yes, the 'thank you', the second syllable sounds rather like the 'Aum' vibration.

It is a sound that is your very being. Feel what you say. You do not even have to say the words out loud, but this is something I will come to at a later date that words become unnecessary when you are in tune with that inner self.

Lilian: Then maybe if there's something that really we'd rather not do but know we've got to, we should say 'thank you for the privilege of doing that' would help there as well?

All thanks is never left unnoticed. I will leave you this time with those thoughts. It is something for you all to cultivate. It does not come easily to human beings, unless you have reached that point of all-knowing, of that stillness within your lives when you know all things are possible. Take my words with you, think carefully about what I have told you and I am sure before we come together next time that your thinking will have changed.

Lilian: I think you're right. I can feel it already! (Chuckle)

I will leave you as always with much love and comfort and knowledge that we will come together again, and let me end by saying 'thank you' for allowing us to come together in this way. (Thanks + farewells)

~4TH March 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

There is with you this time a stillness and a gentleness which is good to feel. Last time that we met we discussed healing thoughts and we spoke briefly about healing and giving thanks. I hope my dear friends that you have pondered my words.

Lilian: Yes, I think I can speak for all of us.

I said to you that we would discuss what each of you felt when you gave thanks, instead of the way that you have done thus far. Would anyone like to speak about this?

Sara: I think we feel more confident and more powerful when we give thanks and we feel that everything is being taken care of. It strengthens our belief I think.

May I ask you a question? (Mm) Do you believe that the Creative Force is like a parent to you all, who offers assistance and takes care as you say of all things? Is this how you conceive that all-consuming energy?

Lilian: I think I would say 'yes'.

Sarah: Yes, I think that's a good way of putting it.

Lilian: It's a simple way to look at it, for our understanding, or mine anyway.

Would anyone care to differ?

George: I see the Great Creative Force as a comfortable, enfolding thing, a little like resting in the living heather; it's a nice place to be and I think it also goes along with seeing ourselves differently as well. In healing or not healing if that is necessary, an illness, it's like seeing ourselves from afar and seeing not just the physical body, and not just the physical body enwrapped in the Spirit, but seeing it on a different timescale, which might require the Spirit to return to soul or the Spirit to go to the next plane. I think we must see ourselves on that extended timescale in respect of any healing which may or not be the next best thing.

Yes. I would like to say this to you my dear friends: We have reached this point in time with what I have told you. I have watched you grow, I have watched your light shine, but we are approaching times when your understanding must be fuller. When I spoke to you of giving thanks, we have stepped forward in all that until now you have understood. Would you agree? (Agreed) I would therefore put these words forward to you. The all-consuming energy you are part of; you may be separate for a short time, but still you are that part of the whole. As part of the whole you have all knowledge, therefore when you give thanks you are not giving thanks to one separate part, you are giving thanks to that which is within you. Let those words sink in just for one moment.

Sara: Because we are a part of the Creative Force.

You are part of the Creative Force, so in the same way you have all knowledge. What I am about to say to you is this—you have heard many words, but what I say to you now my dear friends is this: As part of the Great Force with all knowledge, you come to these lifetimes not so much to learn what you do not know, but you come—and some of you come many, many times as you have been told—you come to relive what you already know. That, my dear friends, is the true purpose of life. Do you understand?

(Affirmed) Are you sure?

George: To relive what you already know because while we are in these physical bodies ...

... all memory is erased.

George: Yes. The knowing is more of a feeling within which is a guiding principle.

What I would further say to you my dear friends, if you truly were to know yourselves, there would be no need for the continuation of lives that you now have. That is why I said in giving thanks it is the knowing, it is free from any doubt, it is free from fear. After all, thoughts, deeds, are motivated by only two things: either love or fear, and we have spoken of these.

George: Yes, I see a common thing that we see: greed—that is a fear of poverty.

Yes, in any area of human life you will find many decisions are either made from these two emotions, love or fear; even deeds which people see as good are sometimes taken because of fear. Love is freedom, fear is restrictive. What I would like you to try to understand is that in knowing yourself you must be free from all fear, and you already have that within you. If you wish to become as one with that Creative Energy from which we all come, and after all so many times people say, 'our thoughts go unanswered'—this you know to be not so. The way to have your answers is from within: not by deed, not by word, but by feeling from within. This, my dear friends, is what I would wish for you now at this stage of your developments to try to cultivate. That is why within the silence you are united as one, where all of your answers will come to you, where all that is known can be released to you. Am I making sense to you my dear friends? (Affirmed) So, now after those words, do you still feel that the Creative Force acts as a parent to you? What would be your answer now?

George: At least a parent, rather more than a parent I would feel.

I would say, 'not at all' as a parent'. A parent restricts, a parent chastises, a parent controls; that is not what you are.

George: Yes, I was thinking of something more ideal in the way of parents.

Sara: We have freewill so we can make enormous mistakes if we wish (Yes) and it's up to us to seek and find the wisdom to go beyond.

But if you have all knowledge within you—that is the difference—you need not go outside of yourself.

Sara: You can find it within.

Yes. Now you are beginning to understand. We must go slowly with these things I tell you, because it has taken us some of your years to reach this point of teaching. If there is anything you do not understand, then I am happy to repeat my words. Can you tell me now what anyone else felt when they give thanks instead of asking, which I told you created negative doubts.

Sara: I find, day-to-day, when I find my mind becoming negative, now I quickly give thanks for blessings instead and I have an instant feeling of positivity, I feel much better almost instantly and I can stop my mind from becoming negative more easily and quickly. (Good.) Because I have been writing my 'thank you's' for my blessings, I think I am beginning to programme my mind to think more quickly of them every day so I stop the negative trend sometimes more easily.

So you are becoming in control of your thinking.

Sara: Yes, at last!

That is wonderful.

Sara: It is wonderful for me. (Said with chuckles)

I feel your amusement. Can I but ask one more question of you? (Yes) When you feel this, in which part do you feel this energy?

Sara: I think it affects my whole being, it is not just my head I don't think, I think it's possibly my heart too. It depends how still I am, if I'm not very still, I don't think I would notice especially where it was.

May I ask each one of you in turn to say 'thank you' and to tell the others where you feel the 'thank you' is. You should feel. Can you do this? Try it my friends and you will know.

(Each person spoke it out aloud)

Paul: I get that tingle in my stomach.

Sarah: Yes, I get it there too.

Sara: I think it's the heart.

What about the others?

Lilian: I realize there is so much to say thank you for.

But when you say those words 'thank you', where do you feel that love?

George: Heart and throat with me.

Would you say it together, then perhaps you will find that each one of you has the connection.

(The group as a whole all said 'THANK YOU' several times)

Sara: Heart.

Yes—the heart and the solar plexus, because it is the seat of all emotion. You should feel it each time you give thanks for anything within your lives.

Lilian: It's connecting with the Spirit side of us each time?

It is part of Spirit, not connected to it; you are Spirit, therefore it is part, it is natural for the Spirit to give thanks for its existence.

Sarah: That's the thing that came to mind; it seemed absolutely the right thing to say.

Yes, you are correct. It becomes the more that you give thanks for all things—it is and becomes Spirit.

You are Spirit and it is unique to the Spirit, if I may say, in the sense that it is the correct thing to do whilst clothed in these bodies. It is freedom, it is given in love, which as I have said a few moments ago, is freedom. Only fear is restrictive. Whenever you are faced with choices in your world, stop just for one second and your highest thought will always be the one of love. Do you understand? I know this is new ground for you, but I feel you are ready to expand and to grow and to know yourselves more.

Sarah: Salumet, when you said 'your highest thought is love', would that be the thought that comes first? For now, I will say it is your first thought. We have not spoken about the thought behind the thought as yet, and for now that is not something I will speak about, but your first thought is normally the thought that is given in love, yes. When you know and recognize the true self, then you will feel within which thoughts are of love and which are of fear. Remember that some thoughts you will convince yourselves are done for the betterment of others or yourself, when in fact they are done from fear. Think about this my dear friends, think about your world now, think about your politics, your scientists, those who are trying to save the Earth. Think of those people with their decisions and see for yourselves those which are done from love and those decisions taken through fear. It will help your understanding.

George: Yes, I think where it becomes difficult is the ego gets a little bit tied up in this. One can see people making very good decisions for the planet and then perhaps writing about it. A little bit of ego seems to have to come into it to get people to read what they have written.

It is because they do not understand who and what they are and from whence they come. In the same way as you have been asking for help and healing for others, but in the asking you doubt that it can be done. You see, in the same way you are fearful for many things, because you doubt what the outcome will be. Do you understand?

George: Yes I think I follow.

It is difficult I know, it is changing many things which you have been accustomed to feeling and thinking.

Sara: Yes and many writers and many people in the media and in the world at large think in a cynical way because ...

...they are afraid.

Sara: ...they are afraid and they don't see the bigger picture for themselves or for anyone else.

George: I can see that the development of the ego can result from the fear of being say a non entity.

Yes, and of failing.

George: Yes, but I have the feeling that one can usefully harness just a little bit of ego to help a good thinking process along.

In the physical sense, yes, but only in the physical sense of course. I would not wish to take from you any of your life's experiences, but, oh my dear friends how you suffer needlessly! I would gather you up and hold you so many times when I see your reactions because of fear. And in the same way that parents stop the exuberance of their children, because they are afraid they might fall, they might do this, they might do that. It is the fear of the parents. The Great Creative Force has no restrictions. You, as part of that Force, know all things, understand all things, but it is entirely up to you because of freewill to find the true meaning of yourselves. If only I could give to you in just a few words all that you need to know, I would do so, but that is not my pathway for you. My desire for you is that you find yourselves, truly find yourselves, that your understanding becomes so great that there is no need for myself or others who come to teach, to tell you these words. I know you might find it difficult, but my dear friends you are perfect beings, but we all have doubts, do we not?

George: Mostly about our own abilities I think.

Yes, which is a negative, fearful thought. Try to take these two words and look at them in your lives now and how they have affected you in times gone by and see if you can change your time that is to come, and then my dear friends you would be even brighter stars in this dark, dismal Earth of yours—you would be beacons of light that may never be extinguished. You have plenty to think about this time, I am sure of that.

George: Yes, could I ask you a question which may connect with this? (Of course.) A contact I have in the north of our country named John, is knowledgeable of meditation and he studies similarly to ourselves and he asked the question: could he meditate with us when we do so here? He would be far away in the north of our country, but he is wondering if he could link with us in meditation and I wondered if you could advise on that and give any useful pointers.

I would say this to you: the desire to join with us can only be good. I ask only that in the meditative state that he closes down on any connection with others who may come to him. Being without this room allows other to come forward. Do you understand?

George: Yes I do and I am sure he would understand too.

Under those circumstances, we would be happy for him to join with us.

George: Thank you, I will see that he gets this transcript.

But he must close down from others who come to him whilst I speak. I am sure he will be guided and I will see to it that he understands the words. It may be also that in his state that he will be able to confirm things to you that until now you have been unaware of, but we will speak of that at a later time.

George: Yes, he's knowledgeable. He has written a book on the Spirit communications concerning Jesus.

Yes, but that is why I ask that he make no connection with other people whilst I speak. Do you understand?

George: Yes, thank you, that is good advice.

Whilst you are enclosed in this room whilst I speak, there is a protective ring around you. Perhaps this will be clearer to him and outside of that protective light, there always is possibility for others to make communication, but of course it will be controlled if he so wishes.

George: That's wonderful to know, thank you.

Are there more questions before I leave you?

George: I do have some more questions if that is in order?

I am happy to answer them if I can.

George: There is another contact named Paul who lives on the Welsh island of Anglesey and I would describe him as an author and a powerful psychic and he is able to channel the ancient site guardians and some of these guardians have had Earth life, some have had life elsewhere. I don't think that we've mentioned ancient site guardians—I am talking of ancient sites that are spiritual places such as the stone circles—I was wondering if you could say anything about the guardians? There is one in particular named Jobe, whom he channels who is from Sirius. Are you able to confirm that this is possible?

There are many forms of communication. There are many who communicate through many channels.

Let me say this to you my friend: There are still within your Earth many who protect; this has always been and always will be while this planet travels through its evolution.

George: Yes, and I think they look after the lay-line energies as part of their work.

Yes, I can confirm that for you. This does happen. It is not something I have approached with you, because we have spoken only briefly about angels, elementals and I would say that these protectors are people of different (Salumet paused and the breathing became deeper—the voice then became stronger) They have not come under my teachings, because their purpose are clear for channelling through others. But I say to you my dear friend, the protection and power they bring to those who channel, is indeed very strong. (Pause—voice returns to normal) I can tell you my dear friend that there will come to this gentleman another of the Earth protectors not as yet known to him. You can inform him but he will soon become aware.

George: Wonderful! Thank you. One thing I picked up is that—I think we knew this already probably but—the lay-line energies are in the process at this present time of being upgraded and one of the protectors' duties is to watch over that upgrading and I think that is one of the energies used in crop circle formation that we talked about.

It is also the energy used for travel for other life forms. Remember, energy comes from one source, but in many shapes and forms. Earth protectors are a group who are dedicated to the survival and the evolution of these energy lines. Always there has been areas on this planet where energy is much strongly felt by others; it is the unseen work that continues. It has continued from the time when this Earth was created and it will continue till the end of this Earth's time, which of course, as you understand, there is a time and an end for many things.

George: Yes. Most valuable work as far as we're concerned.

But the Earth protectors are not widely known about and it is not something that teachers speak openly about, because too many people ridicule these things. It is only given to those people who are ready to accept, but I am happy to confirm for you that of course there are protectors.

George: That's very good to have that confirmed, thank you very much. I am sure that Paul will be very happy to know that another will contact him.

His work is not yet finished.

George: That's good news.

I feel that this time I have spoken enough. I hope my dear friends that you can feel the energy which is here with you. I hope that each of you has been aware that not only my presence, but that of another has been quite significant in these past minutes.

George: Yes, we've noticed a change and a small detail, but the extra energy sometimes shows itself with a little whistle in my hearing aid—so it is physically manifesting! (Laughter)

I do not know whether to congratulate you or to apologize! (More laughter)

George: In any event, it is entirely accidental.

Lilian: I would like to apologize, because I don't always hear what is said and like George, I think I need a hearing aid.

(The tape was turned over at this point and some words were lost. Salumet said that he found it difficult to jest with us, but could feel our amusement at various times.)

I will leave you this time hoping that my words will bring more in realization what you are about and how much more you have to discover. I will leave you with our words and our 'thank you's'. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Greetings)

I thank you for your love and your welcome this time. I would like to begin this time by saying that my words have impacted upon your consciousness, because we are aware of how many thanks have been offered from you. We are aware that there are those with us this time who have not discussed what they felt about saying 'thank you' and before I continue this time, perhaps it would be in order for those others to discuss with you what they too have felt. Yes.

(Lilian then established who had not been at the meeting last time)

Let us hear from her lips what she feels when 'thank you' is uttered.

Margaret: I always feel pleased to know that someone has been pleased with me so they say 'thank you'. I like saying 'thank you' to people, because it is just one of those things that I like saying. (Yes)

Jan: Using the word 'thank you' in my meditation and just quiet moments rather than saying 'help' has been received—it seems to come from a deeper vibration within myself rather than 'help'. I can only describe it as my soul receives those thanks and they seem to roll off the tongue much easier than help. I now know that I don't need to ask for help at all, because if I was to ask for help I would be doubting, and I'm not doubting now. That's basically it; I have just felt very much more one saying 'thank you' rather than 'help', if that makes sense.

Margaret: I'd agree with that.

Yes, so you understand that 'thank you' is to yourself; that is what we discussed last time.

George: It seems to be a very nice way to begin the period of going within, to give thanks. For me it seems to put things on a very personal level and the very word itself seems to have a subtle vibration.

Yes, and remember that sounds do vibrate. We have not gone deeply into that yet, but we will. But yes, each one of you in your realization of the word and giving thanks has come a long way. Last time, my dear friends, I spoke briefly about all of life's experiences, that decisions made by you were formed by either from love or fear. Do you remember my words? (Affirmed) This duality reigns throughout your human existence. Love and fear are the creator for all deeds. What I wish to say to you this time my dear friends is going a little further along the road of life's realization of finding yourselves. We have discussed that each one of you, as I also and all who exist, are part of that Creative Force. What I am about to say to you follows from what we have discussed in previous times. Most of you I would say, feel that your existence upon this planet is for learning purposes. (Agreed) Yes, I hear unanimously. What I am about to say may puzzle you, but I hope not, because it is one step further for you to take in your understanding. As aspects of that Creative Force you are all-knowing. You agree with that statement, I know. As all-knowing beings you would say to yourself, ‘what do I need to learn?’ Does that make sense to you? Would that be a human equation? (Agreed)

George: Yes, I think you have said before that knowledge and wisdom are growth factors. We can grow in respect of knowledge.

Yes. Let me take you a little further along this road of discussion. As all-knowing beings, the power of all-knowing is within you. You understand this? (Affirmed) Yes. So, in human terms there should be nothing to learn. Do you understand? (Affirmed) But in a sense you are learning and the problem here is using your earthly word ‘learn’. Yes, in a sense you are learning, but what I would say, is you are relearning that all-knowingness. Do you understand? Do you see where I am coming from? (Affirmed) Therefore, this is not a school of learning as you imagine, but for the purpose of your understanding thus far, that has been the way of teaching you, because you can only go forward when your understanding has reached a point of more knowledge. Therefore, the purpose of all life is to relearn that all-knowingness which you possess. You are all-knowing beings, but you have come to this physical world with memories erased. I would like, my dear friends, to put forward to you three words: CONCEPT, EXPERIENCE and KNOWING. Does that mean anything to any of you?

Paul: I think maybe our knowing is more conceptual at the moment, but as we live we get the experience. Yes, you are correct. You cannot exist with just the concept. For your understanding let us take an example, shall we? You may think that you are tall, but how would you know unless you have the experience of being short or what short is—you cannot make the difference, you cannot differentiate between the two. In the same way you may think that you are good and kind, but until that thought has been expressed by deed—do you understand what I am telling you? You need to have the experience.

George: We are living the idea.

You are living the idea, thank you my dear friend for helping me with those words. Always I feel restricted by your earthly words, in trying to keep them simple for you, in order that your understanding is greater. But yes, the idea has to be lived, before you have the full knowing. And that is what life is about for you all. Does this make sense to you? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, it’s an interesting concept. (Chuckles) An interesting fact!

Sarah: I think it makes more sense than just saying we are here to learn.

Yes. Is there anything you would wish to know further?

Sarah: I keep having in my mind that you say that things are ever-changing and therefore each time we come back each experience is going to be different, because things are ever-changing. It’s never going to be the same, is it?

But if you would only realize that there is no purpose in continuing to return. If you could reach that point of knowing, there would be no necessity to return. It is the not knowing that brings you back to experience and re-experience the same things. Do you understand what you are saying? (Affirmed) So what I am trying to say to you my dear friends is that you have the power within yourselves now to make of life what you will, but you are all-knowing beings, there is no doubt of that, otherwise how can you say you are the essence of the Creative Force?

George: Yes, we can’t really tap that all-knowingness without affecting our going within.

Yes, that is true and that is the purpose of your lives here. Remember some time ago I told you that you have helped to create this world? (Agreed) And that is how, because you are sparks of all-knowingness, all knowledge. It is within my dear friends; that is why it is most important for you all to go within and to find that all-knowing being which you are, but you cannot achieve it without the experience.

Paul: So, you could say experience helps us to get to know what we know.

What you are and what you are not; that is what experience achieves. Because, remember the duality—always there is duality, whether you say, ‘light-darkness, love-hate’, all of existence is duality. Therefore you need with the concept the experience to make that knowledge. Do you understand? If you do not, this is the time to discuss it together. I am always humbled by your silence. (Laughs)

Lilian: I was just thinking, we are all-knowing and it's within us all there is to know, so in this lifetime that must have come to the fore with each one of us here, because we are ready to accept what you tell us? You are travelling the right pathway, let me say that, but I have to say this my dear friends, that you hurt yourselves by doubts, by fear, by not going inwards. Each one of you is responsible for your own life's pathway. You may find that difficult to believe, but if you accept that you are all-knowing then you must accept that that has been your choice. You see how the jig-saw, as you would call it, begins to piece together?

George: Yes, I have the picture that the all-knowingness is with the parent soul, and it is our responsibility to have good connection with that parent soul, with the all knowingness and by our living of the idea we are sharpening that all-knowingness that is with the soul.

Yes, you are returning to what you already know, but your purpose here is to experience in order that that all-knowingness can be fulfilled. And yes, your purpose here is to return to the whole essence of the soul in order that these factors may become as a whole.

Jan: Am I right that when you feel happy or sad that that's the reaction that our soul is giving us? If you please your soul, you can feel such elation and if you are on the wrong path, that inner voice is saying, no, no, no, no, no! Is that your soul is not being very happy with the choices that you are making?

We discussed last time that the highest purpose of your thinking is with love. Any other decision would be taken from fear. So therefore the elation you feel is that highest purpose expressing itself. You are correct in that way of thinking.

Jan: I understand completely what you said first of all tonight about that there are two emotions—if I can use the word 'emotion'—the love and the fear, and if you take away every other human emotion we are encumbered with, those are the two that do matter, they really do, because with everything negative comes that fear. (Yes) And sometimes I think it can be the most powerful and that's when listening within, the love can shine through, but only really by listening within.

The umbrella of love covers all emotions. From the umbrella of love stems fear; love and fear are dualities, but all of the minor emotions that you human beings concern your lives with are mainly coming from fear. We discussed this last time, but yes, it is something I would wish you to think about on many occasions, when you are about to do some deed of which you are unsure, then you must go within to find that answer which comes from love.

George: I was impressed by the school children who were demonstrating in London against war, and I think their action came from love: love of people, love of planet, love of peace.

Yes, but you must be careful always as I have told you in past times, of making judgements about other's decisions, because you cannot know why those decisions have been taken and whether those decisions have been made in love or fear. And sometimes my dear friends I have to tell you that decisions that you feel are wrong, to the individual soul they have been done for the right purpose. Therefore it is difficult to pass judgement on any other being, because you do not have that wider picture. But the soul is all-knowing and has the ability within this human life to make all of life's correct choices. But I have to tell you that there have been so many misconceptions given about the soul and the structure of the soul, that these ideas—and they have been taught also by many people you behold as wise—that there are so many misconceptions that it is little wonder that the soul returns to the physicality so many, many times. But the time has come in groups such as this, when the truth must at last come to the forefront of all thinking. We are here my dear friends on a mission, in order that this world and the souls within it recognize that all-oneness, that all-knowingness, that experience of love which belongs to you all. So many times in the evolution of this planet has mankind denied his true self; so many times so many words have been used which have confused and restricted mankind in his searching, that the planet has on many occasions been on a very precarious way of life, that it has been necessary for those of us who come to you in love to multiply in numbers at this time of your existence, in order that the truth may be renewed and that each of you be reminded of who and what you are. Each individual here knows within what needs and should be done. You do not need words my dear friends; if you but realized that all is within you, that all that you need to know lies within. And if you are to stop this constant return to earthly conditions, then you have that power within you to do so. I feel this time that you need to absorb my words, to think carefully, but not to think with that logical mind, but to quietly go within and find yourselves. I will leave you this time to think about what I have said this time. I would like you to ponder my words and next time if you have questions to raise then we will discuss them. You will find as time continues my dear friends that we will take things slowly, because what I am bringing to you now for your understanding is of a much deeper nature than you have to this present time been given. Therefore, I leave you all as ever with my love and ask only that each one of you gives to yourself the love that you need. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Greetings)

Before I speak with you this time let me give thanks for all of you. Let me say thank you for the choice that each one of you has made in coming together this time. By now I know you are a little more comfortable in giving gratitude rather than having those thoughts of asking. I feel each one of you is now beginning to understand the energy behind a word. Would you agree with me? (Agreed) There is so much in your lives for you to give thanks for, but you have taken but one step closer to that Force of which you are part. As your awareness grows, so too will your understanding of your own lives. You will not doubt my words when I say to you my dear friends that what you call 'heaven' is also part of your existence here and not something that you should strive for outwardly. Do you understand my words? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, I think your meaning might be: living with a strong soul connection?

Yes, because with the all-knowing comes the pathway that is indeed heaven as you call it, and that is your earthly word for God-connection. Yes, heaven already exists, but it is up to each one of you to become aware of it here and now. After all, I will use an earthly word again: that is what you strive for. May I say this to you: why strive when you already have the knowledge? I pause there in order that you digest the meaning of those two words. Would anyone like to comment?

Paul: I think where some of us fall down is thinking that heaven can be achieved with certain material things, whereas it's a state of mind, I think you're saying.

It is not just a state of mind, it is the all-knowing part of you that already exists. Do you see the difference? (Pause) Each one of you on this Earth, except for the ones you call Masters, Masters of seeking, strive for what you call spirituality or searching for the God-energy. What I tell you this time my dear friends, there is no need to strive, because you already have that knowledge within. All too often we hear it said that only the Masters in your world understand what it is like to be part of that all-encompassing energy. So many times we hear that is why they put to one side all material areas of their lives. I say to you it is not so much that they place to one side, they do not suffer because of it, but it is because their awareness is such that they know all material goods, or neglect of these things, lead them to the energy from which we all come. I say to you my dear friends that each one of you has this awareness, but it is up to you to bring it forth in order that it may be used.

George: Perhaps it could be said that the striving comes in bringing it forward.

That would be the only correct use of that way of thinking. We could use it in that context, yes, but you should not strive to seek what you already know; you should not strive to find what you already have; you should not strive to understand who and what you are, because all is already known to you. Can you see where I am leading you my dear friends? We must take small steps in your understanding of what you are and what you seek. And again, the word 'seek' is one of your earthly ones for your understanding.

Paul: So if we manage to attain this awareness, is it something that we can then continue, as opposed to a state of mind which is a bit transitory? This inner-knowing is more permanent, we can live it through our daily lives.

This inner-knowing continues throughout all of your existence. It is this all-knowing that you need to find whilst on this Earth. We have spoken briefly that it is not so much that you need to seek yourselves, as to return to what you already know. Last time I spoke about that awareness growing within you. We cannot go too quickly, because what I am telling you now has taken many of your years to reach this point for your understanding. It is important that each one of you takes in and understands each step as we go forward. Each of you, as you know, are at different steps of your own growth, therefore it is important that you understand my words as we go slowly. If you have questions or doubts—and remember when first I came to you, I told you if any of my words were to sit with you uncomfortably, then you must let them go, until such time as the realization comes that what I bring to you is truth. Do you understand? (Affirmed) Are there questions you would wish to ask?

George: I will just observe that the way you've taught us, it is rather like a natural process, like the opening of a flower. When the flower is fully opened, there is all-knowing.

I like your description very much—(Affirmed)—and think of the beautiful flower that is opening; remember how many veins within one petal and then you may have some idea of how much there is to understand, before you reach the middle of the beautiful flower. That is why we must go slowly, slowly. I could of course bombard your minds with many things, much that you would not understand, but what would be the purpose? As we go slowly each detail will become clearer to you and this I see as time continues. I see your light so much clearly from when I first came to you. I only wish that each one of you could look at all of the others and see how brightly you all shine. I am sure you are aware of how many situations each one of you has encountered and given food for thought to others. I would like to say to you that each one of you my dear friends are seekers of truth, but this you already know. But there are many types of seeking, and when I call you seekers of truth, I believe I am right in saying that you are seekers of the one Truth. Perhaps I could compare you to one in your religious book known to most people and whose name was Moses. He was but a seeker of truth. He was the one who introduced in that religious book what you term 'commandments'. I would like to say to you this time—and it may surprise you, or at this time in your growth it may not, that as a seeker of truth he brought many words to many people—I think you would not disagree with that—but what I would say to you my dear friends, that the words that he brought to this world were not 'commandments'—that Great Creative Forces does not command—but issued forth words that should have been 'commitments'. I would like you to ponder those words this time and perhaps when next we meet, we will discuss what you think I mean. Would anyone like to comment briefly?

George: So we are thinking of what we might call 'the ten commitments' as a pattern for living? I would feel more comfortable with that, yes. Of course 'ten' is but a number. There were many words given that were to enable mankind to seek out the truth, the truth that already existed, but which mankind at that time in your history needed to hear.

George: It is just that ten of those commitments were written into the book as commandments. Yes, and named as commandments. I would say but one thing: why would the Creative Force who is all-knowing—and we are part of that Creative Force—why would he need to command part of himself? That is what I wish you to think about.

Lilian: Yes, I see what you mean. If the knowing is within us, why did we need to be told? That is for each one to ponder. I feel this time I have said enough on that, but I will give you the opportunity my dear friends to speak and we will discuss it next time. Are there any questions for me?

Graham: I can hardly talk; I hope you can understand me; I have got a cold. I was reading from a spiritual Master called Seth, who said that in Spirit world there is a belief that there is never an excuse for violence and I thought about those words with the war that is going on at the moment. I was wondering if you could confirm that that really is the truth that there is no excuse for violence under any circumstances?

Firstly let me say this to you: that when placed upon this Earth each one was given freewill, free choice. How your world is at this present time is because of the actions of each one of you: the thoughts and actions of each one. Now I hear you say, but we do not want war, we do not wish this, we do not want that, but it remains that because of the way mankind has gone forward, he has created for himself all of the existence of these problems on your planet. Mankind has to accept responsibility for the state of the Earth planet at this time. The Great Creative Force—and so often we hear: (Salumet's voice becomes stronger) Why does he not step in to prevent these what you call disasters and wars? Why should the Creative Force do so? You have been given freewill, you are responsible even if that responsibility lays heavily upon you. The Creative Force has given each one of you the answer. It is simple: mankind needs to go inwards and to speak to his brother gently and with kindness. But that Great Creative Force has to stand by and see those images of himself taken to his own hearts and minds all of the destruction which happens upon this planet. You each have the answer within you, but I have to say my dear friends that mankind on the whole has ignored what he knows. Remember, that consciously mankind might justify these wars, but deep within he knows the answer. I hope that has answered your question my dear friend.

Graham: That was a wonderful answer, thank you very much.

George: Could I go back to the stone circles that we have talked about before and you said there was religion connection and energy connection. (Yes) I thought further about that and I am wondering if it would be correct to see them as Sun Temples where in past times in ceremony people recognized and welcomed the spiritual energy of the sun and its connection to nature?

You speak of the spiritual sun or are you speaking of the physical sun?

George: I speak of the spiritual sun.

Yes, thank you. I am pleased to hear you speak of such. Always there has been connection with mankind on this planet. This planet was endowed with many energies, energies from all aspect of this Earth. When you speak of the spiritual sun that is what belongs to Spirit and it is the spiritual sun which encompasses all things in you what you term your earthly nature: in storms, in water, in trees, in all of existence. Many of these storms upon your Earth hold many mysteries not yet unfolded. When I came to you first, did I not tell you that much had still to be discovered? (Agreed) Gradually, gradually mankind's awareness is becoming raised in many areas of living. Yes, the spiritual sun is imbued on all of these things and in many places upon your planet. Without that spiritual sun this planet would not exist. It is a simple statement, but one that is so true: Mankind could not exist without the spiritual sun. Within each one of you exists a counterpart of the spiritual sun. Within each one of you, within that heart area, there is a spiritual sun which shines forth for others to see. You are but small rays of spiritual sun. Do you understand?

George: Yes, I think it was the practice of the early North American and South American Indians to begin the day by facing the sun and, in a sense, taking in or breathing in the spiritual essence of the sun, and then breathing out to spread that Spirit to humanity, and that would make sense.

Do you not see that this practice still exists? It exists within this room each time you meet. Have you not been aware of the change of breath when you are going deep within? (Yes) What is that if it is not the spiritual sun? It has become lost in the passage of time, but it is not exclusive to the race of which you speak. It is mankind's right to know of the spiritual sun; it is just another way of connection to that Creative Force.

George: Then it's not surprising that religious ceremony in past times has been built around this.

Again I say to you, so much over your earthly time has been lost, but that is our purpose in returning at this time, that for once the truth will not be denied, that awareness will grow, that each individual will find himself, will find himself to be the spark of all Creation. That is our task in teaching you, that the truth will be upheld. I know at this time upon your Earth there are many troubles, but keep in mind my words to you, that in time to come this will become indeed a heaven on Earth; but mankind needs to become awakened to this fact. I will leave you this time my dear friends. As always I give thanks for your time and your efforts to come to listen to my few words. If only you could know how much joy it gives us in our world to see you grow.

George: Equally, I must say, it gives us joy I must say, to listen to your teaching.

As always I feel humbled by your words. I will leave you now until next we meet. I will leave you in the hands of our dear lady friend, (Lilian) who gives much to each of you and I am sure you give your thanks for her.

Lilian: It's a great pleasure to have the meeting in my house. Until we meet again. (Thanks + farewells)

~7th April 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

I am pleased to join with you once more. I hope that you can feel the peace that I bring to you all.

(Affirmed + thanks) We also give thanks to those dear friends who have not joined us this time. When last we met we spoke quietly about what is given to you, what truth is given to you now and what truth has been given by many on this your planet by many, many people. When I left you last time we spoke briefly about what you know on this Earth as your 'Ten Commandments'. I assured you my dear friends that the information given should not have been 'command-ment' but should have been looked upon as a form of 'commitment' by each soul. I asked that you ponder my words and that we would discuss this time, our next meeting, what you had thought about. Would anyone like to ask me anything or would you like to discuss what you feel?

George: I would just like to say that your term 'commitment' feels much more comfortable and certainly I see the logic of this and I'm sure it goes along nicely with the idea that what we have in the past called the 'Ten Commandments' as being a guiding set of principles for our living. I think we've probably all taken it as that anyway and I agree the idea 'commandment' seems to be a misnomer with not quite the weight of meaning that it should have.

Of course when I spoke to you about the 'Ten Commandments', that is only one religion known to you. Of course, throughout all of earthly time, truth has been given to many nations, many people and each have their own source of knowledge and truth. But what it does mean is that which has been given has amongst all nations the same aspect of truth, which comes from the Creative Force. I chose the 'Ten Commandments', because it would be known to you all, because of the religion of your time. Would you like to comment on any one of the commandments given and focus rather on why it is a commitment rather than a command?

Sarah: It's Love thy neighbour as thyself. So that's in a way, not having any bad thoughts, which is what you've told us, and it makes you focus on good instead of bad. That is part of what you have been teaching us, the thought that is so important—good thought.

It is not only the thought which is important, it is that you must now have the awareness, you must have the all-knowing experience, because in loving your neighbour you are loving yourself, and in loving yourself you are expressing that God-force which is all-loving. Do you see? (Yes)

George: Of course the overriding one I think is: 'Love your God with all your heart, with all your mind, with all your soul'. I think if one lives to this then everything else follows.

Of course, because we will use the word God for your convenience, but you know it is a much wider picture. (Yes) Yes, if your awareness is such that you love that God-force, then what you are doing is saying 'I am aware of who and what I am' and if that awareness is there, then of course you must understand that you are part of the greater picture of life.

George: And other commandments such as 'Thou shalt not kill,' they seem to be, or that particular commandment seems a mere detail embraced within the love principle.

All is embraced in the love principle, because if you are love itself, there would be no need to harm anyone; so the important word for these commitments is love, awareness, thankfulness of beginning to know yourselves. Each one of you has the responsibility of taking those commitments and working through them, seeking, searching in order that you may know yourselves. It all sounds so simple does it not? (Yes) But full well you know that as you tread each step in life that sometimes it seems more difficult. The more awareness you gain, the more difficult life seems to be at times. Remember what I told you: you have to experience life. That is the secret, but in gaining the experience then you have that fuller awareness. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Lilian: The harder times we are experiencing at any given time makes us more aware of our failings. It should make you more aware of who and what you are and that you are that all-knowing—all-knowingness which is part of the fuller picture. It is not easy my friends, but if we return to what we call the 'Ten Commandments', they were given to the people of that time, whose minds were not completely open to the truths. Therefore to be commanded to them was a natural progression. It was easier for them to take those words of truth and to use them for the betterment of mankind, for that particular time. As in all cases with other nations, they have their own Masters, if you wish to call them that, who came at specific times onto this Earth in order that the people would accept what was truth. Truth has never altered, but men have; and in this time of your evolution on this planet and especially amongst groups such as this, mankind is now beginning to awaken once more. Mankind for too long has existed in quite a great deal of darkness, because they have not accepted truth. Would you have any comments? Would anyone like to speak?

George: Yes I can see the consistent truth as received from Silver Birch and White Eagle and from yourself, to name three recent teachers of truth. I would comment that you are able to talk to us about certain items which previous Masters have not mentioned, such as UFOs, space travel and corn circles. These are all very modern things and so I can see the present teaching embraces more details of knowledge, I would say.

Each one who has come to this planet teaches to the ability of the pupil. You must know and understand that throughout your earthly history mankind has varied so much. There have been many civilizations, as I have told you previously, whose knowledge was far greater, but in the course of time for whatever reason has been extinguished. There also has been on this planet many people who have been simple in their lifestyles, but who have had great knowledge and truth. But each one of us who have come to this planet for the betterment of mankind has always taught to the ability of those to whom we speak. And yes my dear friend, you mentioned the modern areas of living, which is of interest to man, and that is as it should be. When I came to you, I came to you in the knowledge that each step we took would be a single, simple step that my teaching to each of you, each in your various degrees of understanding, would be simple, my words would be simple and my teaching would be understandable. I know that my approach to you my dear friends has been the right one; I have seen you grow so much. I have appreciated your tolerance and time with me, I have seen the hearts of each one of you shine forth, not only in this room, but when you are in your everyday lives; I have seen my teachings to you come to fruition through your very words to others. Therefore, I accept that my simple words to you my dear friends are all that is needed, because in those simple words, I see come forth from each one of you understanding and knowledge. Would you wish to comment?

Sarah: Yes, there's one thing I would say. You said to us just now that with the knowledge, each step gets more difficulties, but on the other side, with your teaching it has helped me enormously to get through the problems, because of the understanding and the knowledge which you've given to us, and so for that I am very grateful.

That is because your awareness of life has grown, your awareness of who you are has grown. When first I came to you, I am sure that you would not recognize yourselves now, but life back when first I came to you was troublesome at times, but that is why you have grown so. You have not only taken my words but you have experienced them. Do you see? (Yes) I could say that each one of you within this group, now knows and understands that life is a great responsibility upon this planet, that each one of you accepts not only for yourselves, but for the whole of the planet that mankind has a great responsibility. In accepting that responsibility, what you are doing is accepting that you are part of all Creation. That is profound my dear friends.

George: I think we feel the responsibility; we are aware of so many deep connections; we experience all sorts of synchronicities and recognize them I think for what they are and they in themselves seem to indicate a vast connectedness.

Yes. You can delay knowledge, you can delay truth but not for long. Each individual is given in any one lifetime the opportunity to recognize and to grow. And you are quite correct, there are so many instances within your life, which I know sometimes amazes you, but it is as it should be. This planet at this time my dear friends, although you feel it is troubled, this planet is growing, this planet has much to give; the people of this planet are being bombarded with the Truth. So, never despair, there is no room now for such emotion in your lives. You must recognize always what you are, that you belong to the Creative Force—you are part of the Creative Force. You have responsibilities and you are going forward with all that I give to you. Therefore again this time I would say, look to those words given as the 'Ten Commandments', look to them through new eyes and see how you are committed to them.

I think this time that it is not necessary to speak more words to you. These commitments of life should to each one of you possibly have different meaning, but to each one of you these commitments are the next step forward in our growth together. Therefore my dear friends I ask that you think a little more deeply about them. Perhaps next time you will tell me what you feel within your hearts before we move on with some more fresh words. I feel the love and the power that is here with you this time. I say that you are not alone. I say that as you leave this time, there will go with you many others who will help you with your thought. I leave you now my dear friends. I give thanks for your time and your love. (Thanks + farewells)

Another followed through Eileen, in a strong, powerful voice:

What beautiful people you all are. (Thanks expressed)

Paul: I'm sure you're not too bad yourself.

Unfortunately that is not true. My disfigurements caused much distress to others and this is my time of release. So I hope that my face does not offend you.

Sarah: Not at all, it's the person that counts, not what you look like.

Lilian: We know that's not so important anymore.

No, but this journey needed to be undertaken for me to release my past and you are beautiful understanding people and I have chosen you, so that I may return and release these dreadful, dreadful disfigurement.

George: We can only regard that as an honour.

Paul: Yes, it's a privilege to have you. It's pleasing to be able to assist.

Lilian: It feels good to think we may have helped—so it's a two-way thing.

Indeed you have helped, in allowing me to use one of you. I of course know that the disfigurements are not necessary, but I needed this physical return to release me.

Lilian: I see. Well the lady that you're using will be more than pleased that you've used her—a very kind lady.

I have been brought to you by one known to you and I'm allowed to give his name: Leslie. (Expressions of joy and requests to send our old friend our best wishes)

I feel so emotional that you should all be so happy to know who is with me. (More expressions of our high regard for our dear friend Leslie)

George: So do you spend time with Leslie?

No, he has only brought me here. (George then asked if this was part of Leslie's healing work)

He says he never stops! (Chuckles)

George: That sounds like Leslie!

Now he tells me enough is enough.

Lilian: Well, best wishes to the both of you.

Thank you all, thank you all, thank you all.

We expressed our thanks and as Eileen returned she described the huge contorted feeling in her face that she had felt.

It is good to join with you once again my dear friends. I hope that thought has been given to what we spoke about last time. I know that each of you will have considered the words that we used. My hope this time is to listen to you to see what you have understood and what you have felt within your hearts about what we called 'commitments'. My purpose this time is to listen to you quietly whilst you discuss what you have come up with. I can say to you that as I work quietly with this one there will be one other before the end of this evening who will come to speak to you. I hope that you may find it of interest. (Affirmed) Therefore, my dear friends, I will listen quietly to each one as you speak but I will not respond to it because I will be working quietly with this instrument. Therefore you know by doing so there is much work going on.

Lilian: Yes, could you tell me which instrument the other person will be coming through?

I feel it will be this lady here, (Sue) but of course whoever is able to accept and take will be the one. As always my dear friends, know that I stand close by.

Lilian: So we'll discuss quietly between ourselves. My opinion was that the 'love' one was really the most important, because if everyone was committed to love, surely it would override all the others.

George: Yes, that is one of my feelings. There is another overriding feeling that the commandments as such, if I can still use that word, were given to the Israelites who had been a people in slavery and they were a much down-trodden people, and it was a code of living to raise them from where they were. I have just got the feeling that they were not in a good situation to develop spiritually before that time, because they were in such terrible slavery. So perhaps a fairly rigid set of standards was a good way to raise their opinion at that time and in later times they have continued to be good reference. But there was a later set of values that came during the Sermon on the Mount from Jesus: I think they were the beatitudes: blessed are the meek and blessed are various people with their qualities. So perhaps the Sermon on the Mount came as a later refinement to the commandments. I don't know if anyone has any thoughts on that?

Paul: I found them a sort of mixed bag in a way. Some of them seemed of a deep level; others, like 'thou shalt not murder', 'thou shalt not steal' seemed sort of preaching to—covering different spectrums of society. Some seem very obvious things you shouldn't do. Other things seem more moving on further.

George: Part of it is most amusing in today's world like, 'thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his ass'.

Paul: That's still relevant today, as they all are I suppose.

George: Yes in today's world that is probably equivalent to 'thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's Aston Martin'!

Lilian: It struck me, if in everybody the overriding thing was love, it would kind of wipe out all the others.

Margaret: But don't you think it is greed too?

Sarah: I think that they are what Salumet has taught us in many things. Salumet said to us that being angry and greedy and all those things aren't good things, so that's one of the things that he has taught us that were being taught then. And I think that some of them are also trying to, for example the one with the idol, get them to be spiritual and not to be physical. So, the underlying thing is trying to get the spiritual bit to come through and of course at that time they wouldn't have understood it, so they had got to do it in a way that they can understand.

George: In so many state-related churches they still have idols today. (Affirmed)

Paul: Yes that was quite a shocker reading that. It is one of the early ones.

Sarah: Yes, it's the second one, I think it is.

Lilian: They do the sign of the cross, they bow to the altar...

Sarah: The sign of the cross isn't so bad, but the actual...

George: The frequently seen 'Jesus on the Cross' is, I can't help feeling an idol. It is spelled out too that there be no idol in gold, no idol in silver.

Lilian: But there again you see, Salumet said there has to be good and bad to balance.

Sarah: But also, George, I was thinking of the Buddhists and in Thailand I saw the gold Buddhas. You could say that's not good but, on the other hand, the people have given what they have to create these Buddhas. So that is a good part of it that it has been a 'giving'.

George: I am sure perception comes into it. We can see it as an idol or we can use it as a focus point.

Lilian: The best commandment/commitment that one could pass on, say to a child or to whatever, would be just say 'listen to the inner self' and we should get it. I don't know...

Sarah: I think it's difficult. When I've spoken to friends of mine and said, 'listen to your inner self' ... I think we've been lucky with our teaching that it has gone gradually and we have learnt to listen to our inner self, but I think some people would find that very difficult to know where to start.

Lilian: Even before that, each and every one of us—we could imagine each and every one of us knew what was right and what was wrong.

Sarah: Yes, your conscience.

Lilian: So I suppose they just don't listen to that inner self.

George: It might be an interesting exercise to try and formulate the set of standards equivalent to today's world.

Lilian: I have a feeling that our Prime Minister would call himself a Christian.

Sarah: He's a Roman Catholic.

Lilian: Yet he was happy enough to send out soldiers to kill. I find that a bit strange.

Margaret: They are always young people who have to go out. It is so unfair.

Lilian: It's one I can't begin to understand.

George: One of the statistics that came out very sharply today, someone said in debate, that 50% of the population in Baghdad is under 14. Certainly there are a lot of children in the hospitals.

Margaret: I want to know where they get all the money from to buy the bombs and all that. Where does it come from?

Sarah: Going back to these commandments, can we remember them all?

George: Don't bare false witness.

Sarah: In other words, don't lie.

Paul: Don't envy, sort of thing. Don't take my name in vain. Does that mean, don't speak of Spirit lightly?

Sarah: I am not quite sure, actually. Could it mean not using it for false purposes? Could it mean that as well?

Paul: Or without sincerity, I wonder.

George: Yes, don't just set yourself on a pedestal for being a Christian.

Paul: That's the thing. Like 'thou shalt not murder' seems simple, but for a lot of people, meat is murder.

George: Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Sarah: But then going back to the murder thing, Paul, Salumet said to us that we should be vegetarians, but if we want to eat meat we can, so you could still say it is some sort of murder, isn't it?

Paul: I suppose it will evolve. As you develop you will perhaps read more into each commitment.

Lilian: Only eat meat if you were truly, truly hungry. I do think if you were really starving, anything would be on the menu. I could be wrong.

Sarah: Even those people who crashed in that plane, he ate the other one, didn't he?

Lilian: Yes, you know, it is easy to sit here and say don't eat meat or fish, but if I were starving what would happen?

George: Anything is on the menu except cannibalism.

Lilian: Just fade away!

Sarah: But even then, George, after that plane crash, the companion had died and he had nothing else to eat, so he ate the companion.

George: As Salumet has said, everything is possible. The adultery one is very practical I suppose and it can just make life too complicated.

Lilian: I would say that's quite a hard one especially... in all times... they're all quite hard.

Sarah: Today it doesn't seem to be a problem so much. I don't know if that was one for the times or...I suppose if you've promised something in marriage, then you have promised it.

Lilian: Even if they become priests or whatever, they still—and what would that be called?

George: Salumet said something about that too and something to the fact that marriages aren't designed forever. They're for journeying together, but it doesn't have to be forever. I think he said something like that.

Sarah: Salumet said that? (Yes)

Paul: This other Bible we had was a really big one and for some of them it said quite a bit more. For that one that talked about 'don't make idols', it also mentions about also not even building buildings using shaped stone, because as soon as you have cut the stone, you've sort of mutilated it. That made me think, it's better to worship nature outside like the Druids did and the American Indians. Worship trees and things like that.

George: Of course they did use uncut Saracen stones.

Lilian: But we shouldn't worship these things, we should just love them, surely?

Paul: Yeah, 'love' is a better word than 'worship', yeah.

Lilian: I must confess I didn't have a Bible. When I moved here a lot of books went out and the Bible went too, to my sister-in-law's jumble! So, ok, my mother's got a big one, but I thought I'd forget that one and I look at the children's one.

Sarah: Going back to not cutting the stones, it probably would depend whereby you were. If you were out in the snow and standing there for some time to go, that might not be very practical, so to have some sort of shelter seems appropriate.

Lilian: You meant a dwelling to meet?

Sarah: Yes, a church. I can't see there's a problem.

George: I suppose there is a difference between living and survival. A reasonable situation and building a great edifice and raising huge funds through taxation to do that. That's how the formal church began in Roman times.

Paul: I'm trying to imagine how would Jesus or Buddha or all these people (Masters) have gone about their daily worship/religious ideas, and I can never really see them going inside a church to meditate. I always imagine him finding a tree or a quiet area in a park or something, or a bench, or even just in his house. There is nothing wrong with a church, I suppose, but...

Sarah: It does provide a meeting place, doesn't it? At any time you wish to go and pray, just to have a building. A cathedral is perhaps a bit excessive...

George: A meeting place is logical—an all night edifice, there seems to be some question about that...

Paul: Keeping it humble seems to be one of the messages of the commitments...

There then followed our expected guest through Sue:

(Greetings) I have not wanted to interrupt such interesting words. My time here is limited and I do not wish to interrupt, but I have something that may give you a lighter food for thought. Your discussions on commitments are quite deep and you are having to stretch your minds, am I right? (Agreed) I am quite sure in the coming meetings the Master will give you more food for your thoughts in this matter, but the little I have come to say to you this time is on a lighter nature, not quite so woolly. (holy?) I could not even begin to teach you as the Master does; I would never even try. My purpose is not to teach you deep knowledge. Do any of you sing?

Lilian: Yes, we have one.

Sarah: I did a bit.

Lilian: There's usually another one but she is off not feeling very well this evening.

The lady here that sings, does it lighten your heart when you sing?

Sarah: Yes, yes it does if I sing the music that I enjoy, yes.

Yes. Do any of you here wish you could sing?

Paul: I try to sing sometimes. (Chuckles)

Margaret: I can't keep the tune very long.

George: Yes, I think we all probably try to and I can appreciate there's a certain joy. It has been said I think, that song is an expression when ordinary words are not really enough.

That is a very succinct and profound thought, but your first word 'joy', yes joy. Music brings joy. You have troubled times in your world.

Lilian: Especially at this time.

Indeed, but the sound of music, of being able to express yourself in song will enable you to rise above the problems. It is a heart and soul-lifting experience: music, song and those that can do these things.

George: I imagine that includes the birds; they seem to do it rather well.

Birdsong is from Spirit. Can you appreciate that? Birdsong is a gift of Spirit. Music is a gift of Spirit. Does that make sense to you?

Paul: Yeah, I think it's too beautiful almost for it to be a manmade thing.

Lilian: Of course different people enjoy different sounds to the music or the singing.

George: Yes, I have sometimes felt that birdsong is a great gift. One can be amongst trees and the birdsong makes the world a beautiful place.

Indeed—a gift from Spirit to lift your Spirits. I am speaking very lightly. We could speak in great depth, but that is for another time. But I ask you if you can FEEL music, FEEL the vibrations, it can help you in so many ways. There is a healing colour to music. Does that make any sense to you? Music has colour. All music, whether you consider it to be the lowliest or just a cacophony of noise, it has a healing colour.

George: Does that relate to the colours of the auras of people listening to music and how that music changes the colour of the aura?

Were you able to see auras, you would see a changing the spectrum of colour, yes you would, and more so with those that are in need of some spiritual help. I say to you, the sound of music can be far more beneficial than your potions and powders. In your world unfortunately, they are used far more than they are necessary, but we can do little about that. Certain of your powders can be like poison and we are hoping in the eons of time that these will be replaced. We are moving on now to deeper things, which it is not my purpose to speak of.

George: I have read of one who cured herself of cancer through listening to music, so that is very much in line with what you are saying.

Yes, the power of the healing colour of music.

Sarah: There is of course Evelyn Glennie, who's a percussionist, who is stone deaf and she plays with very well-known orchestras. She's excellent.

Indeed, therefore is that not proof positive that her gift comes from the spiritual side of her? Whilst she is playing, her deafness is put to one side. She is unaware of this in the physical, but it is with her Spirit ear that she plays this music. Music is a powerful healer. I leave that information with you and hopefully it will be of benefit to you in times to come. (Thanks expressed) All music, I repeat, whether it be birdsong which is from Spirit, or whether it be the native drums of your jungle area, all has the power to heal.

Paul: It's all vibration.

A very good word my friend; vibrations which show themselves in sound. When you all come to our realms, the music you will hear will be nothing like you have ever experienced in this world. We have healing areas—it is the only word I can give you—an area where music is a constant source of healing power. We send lost souls into this music and it envelops them like a soft down, and the Spirit which is troubled absorbs the vibrations of music. That is something I hope one day someone more learned than myself will be able to talk to you about in greater depth.

George: Tibetan Buddhist ceremonies have some very strange sounds, which one would hardly describe as music, but I suspect those vibrations are very subtle and may well be healing and reaching Spirit.

What you consider to be a strange sound, to another may be as the song of the mistle thrush.

Sarah: It is the same with language. Each language sounds different to each person, so that must be true with language. The voice is vibration, isn't it?

Were you to be spoken to in a language known only to the, shall we say Inca tribes, it would be a cacophony of sound, would it not? (Yes) But to the Incas it would be melodious and understandable. You are right, it is the same with music, which is why I speak lightly now, but some music to young people in these times is most unacceptable to the elderly people of these times. But that has gone on generation after generation, but to each one they can hear wonderful music. Let each one accept their own music and let it do its will to their Spirit. We must all learn tolerance in these things, must we not?

Lilian: Definitely. It's something we could do with a little more of.

Sarah: But you also, when you hear things enough times, you get used to them and then you begin to like them just because you've heard them so many times, because it's familiar.

Think of that not as physical but spiritual. The Spirit is rejoicing in that sound, because it is bringing joy to the Spirit.

Lilian: I was just thinking of lots of sounds which we take for granted, like the buzzing of a bee or the purring of a cat, which is all very pleasant.

Those sounds, like the birdsong are musical, therefore come from Spirit. I leave you to think on that. May you hear your music through all the days of your life. (Thanks expressed) Thank you for allowing me into your room. It has been a privilege. (Thanks + farewells)

~21ST April 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

As I have been here quietly I have given to each one of you some small upliftment this time. (Thanks expressed) We were most interested in your conversations last time. It was comfortable to be with you and to listen to the words that you had to express to each other. You may have wondered my dear friends why I have raised that particular subject with you. After all, we have made many references to religion in our talks over time. I now feel that your understanding of my words 'commitment' has taken hold and that your understanding is a little clearer. But why, I wonder, do you suppose I used the word 'commitment'? Mankind, after all, has been guided by many throughout its evolution on this planet.

George: Yes, commitment tends to be self-guidance I would say.

Yes, and that my dear friend is where I am leading you to. I told you I believe that it is time for you all to begin to know yourselves; and how, my dear friends, can you begin to understand and to recognize the true self without that commitment, that responsibility of life. That is the key word now my dear friends for you all: 'responsibility'. Do you see that each step leads to another, that commandment, although used in those far-gone days, was useful for the time. But that Creative Force by all accounts would never command, because what would be the purpose of commanding that self-creation? Do you understand? (Affirmed) Therefore my dear friends when mankind was placed upon this planet, not only to discover oneself, the true self, the spiritual self; the purpose of life was that the human being recognize that spiritual self, whilst clothed in the physical body. But, to do so you must endeavour to take all responsibility for life. I told you recently in your time that mankind is responsible for all that happens on this planet. That responsibility my dear friends is a burden to some, but to you of some knowledge, I hope that responsibility shows you what you are about. Do you understand my words? (Affirmed)

George: I think joy and pride can be coupled to that responsibility.

Responsibility should bring forth much love in all that you do. Too often we hear: 'Why are there so many problems?' I will tell you why, because mankind has refused to accept responsibility. That may seem to you my dear friends a very sweeping statement.

George: Yes, it seems almost as if the Spirit part of us is endeavouring to train the biological part of us so that the material human gets it right in the end.

When responsibility is there then physical life becomes so much sweeter for you. Physical life holds no problems for you, and I do not mean that all is, how would you say, rosy?

Margaret: Hunky dory.

Hunky dory... (Much laughter at that phrase) I am not aware of that one.

Margaret: My children used to say that they were 'hunky dory' when everything was going right.

I will accept your words dear friend. Yes, but when mankind has realized individual responsibility and, after all, responsibility spreads to all of his neighbours, his friends, all that he has contact with: responsibility is not alone. Therefore, I would like you to look at this word 'responsibility' within your own lives, then I would like you my dear friends to express what you feel to the further field of all of mankind. If you think of the word now, what comes into your hearts? Would anyone like to express what they feel within their heart?

Sarah: I would say 'caring'. If you care for everybody then you are taking responsibility and helping at the same time.

Lilian: Not to move away from our responsibilities, as easy as that would be.

George: Caring/parenting/being part of.

Margaret: Showing people love and care.

Paul: Taking more care, yes, taking more care for the Earth and all the life on the Earth.

Graham: I think responsibility is a method to extend your love.

I like that expression. You have given me good answers my dear friends but all of those answers in a way are connected to physical living. Responsibility also includes the nurturing of your souls. One cannot be without the other, and I do not apologize for returning to that word 'love'. Before each one of you came to this lifetime, you expressed with love what type of individual life you would have in order for the soul's growth: that is responsibility. You chose the people to be born to, you chose conditions, you chose places: that is responsibility, because it was done by the soul. Do you see the difference? And when the soul is aware of all of those responsibilities, then it manifests into the physical life.

George: I think there are two types of responsibility ensuing from that: the responsibility and care for the planet and the responsibility for the soul's further growth.

Yes. The soul's responsibility is, of course, much greater, if I may put it to you in that way, but only in so much as the soul will continue. The lifetime on this planet is transitory, but is of utmost importance for you all to experience life. You do not come to this planet without the knowledge of what each one of you has to do to keep this planet beautiful, but as I have said, mankind has fallen down many times, but within each one of you lies that love which can encircle all things. The responsibility lies with you my dear friends, in so much as each one of you all have spiritual power which enables you to do anything that you so desire. And again, here is where responsibility enters. When you have such power, you have the responsibility to use it wisely. I would like to give you one example perhaps of how mankind does not use his responsibility. So often in thoughts we hear: 'Why does this happen?' 'Why cannot we help more?' Let me say this to you, the example I will give to you is simple: So many people on this planet who come to our side of life, because of lack of food and water. Shall we place a figure just for example? Let us say we have forty thousand people who are dying at this time. What is mankind's responsibility? Why can they not be fed? Why can they not have water? And yet mankind brings to this planet fifty thousand new lives. Can you see where responsibility lies? You have the answers, but you do not have the responsibilities. You have to, my dear friends, look at the wider picture if you are to begin to understand what I am telling you. I am taking in your silence. Would anyone like to comment? What I say seems simple, does it not? But indeed it is most profound.

George: Yes, as a planet we are squandering resources, we are producing monetary funds and spending those funds on the wrong things. I think we are all aware of that. We are not able to see all of the wider picture. This came up in connection with the Iraqi war when we are not always able to understand the wider picture, but I accept there are plenty of pictures which we are able to see and understand.

You are not, my dear friend, responsible for another human being's thoughts or actions. The responsibility you have is in developing your own soul, your own spirituality to be able to see what you truly are on this planet, whilst in these clothes. It is not easy and I do not say these things to you to make you wonder, but I tell you these things in order that your consciousness be raised, that my words although difficult at times to understand, will gradually creep into that consciousness which gives to you a wider vision. Do you see?

George: Yes, and we can change the world by changing the consciousness.

You can change this world by changing yourself. When mankind learns to talk to his fellow man in peace, then we will begin to go forward. Mankind must put to one side differences in religions, differences of culture and mankind has to recognize the Spirit within. It is possible and gradually we are going forward, but at this point in time, my dear friends, my purpose is that each one of you has a little more understanding. You are beacons of light, as I have told you previously, but we desire that that light be of such clarity that it cannot be extinguished. I hope you understand my words. Now you see the purpose of using the word 'commitment' rather than 'commandment'.

Paul: In helping the needy, we're helping them, but perhaps even more so we are helping ourselves to grow.

That is most important. Always I have told you, that you must go within. I have stressed these words to you on many occasions, because if you do not go within, you are without. They are simple words, but they mean so much. Think about them my dear friends and your understanding will be greater. We feel so much love for each one of you who gathers here. We do not often find the dedication which you as a group of people have given. It is part of your responsibility that you come together, and this you do with good and open hearts, and it is there for all of us to see, but it is our hope for you that in this lifetime, not only do you come together, but that you grow so much that the soul within is forever outside in your daily lives, in all that you achieve, because when the soul shines forth, it does not matter what conditions life brings to you, they will just become part of your responsibility, they will be dealt with and you will not give more than a thought to these very conditions. I feel such deep love for each one of you this time, and there are so many around at this time, who wish to come and stand by each one of you. I will say to you, to each one, that when you leave this time there will be much upliftment in your lives. (Thanks expressed) I feel for this time I have spoken enough words for you. I do not say to you, I say for you, because in your own individual ways, you will take those words, you will digest those words, and you will make sense in your own way of those words. As ever my friends, I will leave you, knowing that I will always be available to you if you so need. (Thanks + farewells)

The warmth of your greeting grows ever stronger; for this we thank you. It is important my dear friends that there is joy in your lives—not joy of good happenings, but joyfulness in all of living. Love and joy are closely connected and it is most important that you understand that no matter what your life brings to you, that always you sustain joy in your lives. So what is this joy I speak of? It is joy in knowing who and what you are, joy in just being: that is true joy. Without joy within your heart, all other aspects of living become as negatives in your lives. So I would like you my dear friends to consider what joy there is within your hearts. This may seem a simplified question, but I assure you it is one of great magnitude. When you feel what joy truly is, then you will come to these meetings with a completely different view. I know you are saying: 'But we cannot feel joy at all times.' But this I say to you my dear friends: 'yes, you most certainly can.' But that is what I wish you to consider this time.

George: Yes, I think you can sometimes see joy in people's faces and I have a picture of one known as Rinpoché who was referring to the Dalai Lama who was across the room and he was saying, 'Look at the Dalai Lama, he is not laughing at some joke, he is bubbling with joy.' And one could see it in the light in his face, he was joyful.

Yes. Yes, that is a good example for the others to think about. But I do not wish you to think of others, I wish only for you to think of joy within yourselves. I will give you time to consider this deeply and we will discuss it next time, and know and understand that love is the all-consuming thing in your lives, but as I say, joy is coupled closely to love.

Sara: Can I just say something Salumet?

Yes, of course.

Sara: I think that for myself I think that when I do things which bring me joy as well as all the things we try to do daily for other people, when I follow interests that bring me joy, then I find it much easier to access joy generally. I think if I want to sing and I sing, or dance or do something which brings me pleasure too, then I think I access the joyful part more easily. And children also help to put me in touch with joy, because they're very joyful and enthusiastic naturally. (Yes) I think that they remind us not to be complicated and to just take each moment and be whatever we feel at any given moment.

Yes, of course you know and understand that children are much closer to our world, therefore just being exudes joyfulness from children; that is what you must look for. It is absent in so many lives of today, because human living has dulled that very presence of utter joy, and remember I have said, joy is not obtained by physical happenings; joy is of course from Spirit, but manifests itself into human existence. That is the aspect of yourselves that you must look to. It is not a simple question, so I will leave it with you and will be most interested in hearing your words. Of course I am well aware of what you are going to say, but the others may not be. So, next time should make for interesting conversation. Do you at this moment in time feel just a ray of joy being placed upon your souls? (Affirmed)

Paul: Yes, I just felt it.

I hope my dear friends that you are aware, because the joyfulness within this room is ever-building. It is there for each one of you to access, to soak up and to retain. It is a condition which will see you through this earthly life without fear or without any doubts of what life holds for you. If you have love and joy, you have all things. I hope my words make sense to you. (Affirmed) As I have told you my dear friends, this year of your time will be devoted much to your own growth and in doing this I must allow each one of you to take each little step in your own way, and my purpose in all of this is to play the part of adviser for you if so needed, to encourage and to uplift you. Of course I will bring you more new information, of course when I feel that you are ready to absorb, but it is important at this time that each one of you takes and accepts what we bring to you for yourselves. As you grow my dear friends, much, much more can be given to you. Not only will your awareness grow, but your understanding will become greater and you will be surprised at how little you have known in the past. I will be working with this instrument on many occasions quietly, therefore unless you have any questions for me, I would suggest that perhaps our dear lady friend who takes you on a meditative journey, takes you on one and each one of you be open to what is given this time. You may be given my dear friends some clues of what you have been. I know in past times I have told you that who and what you have been is not important—that is still true, but this particular time it will give you a little more understanding of who you are and what you must be. So please accept my dear friends, all that is being given to you. Are there any questions before I leave you?

George: Yes, could I go right back to the very first time that you came to us and you gave us a name to know you by. You explained about how names are taken by Masters who come to teach, and we understand that. There was a little doubt at first and we thought Salumet or Salufet, something like that, and we settled for Salumet. (Yes) Can you tell us something of the derivation? Is the name relating to someone who once lived? It sounds Persian, but I wondered if you tell us anything about the derivation of it. It's a little thing that has bothered me for quite some time.

Yes, I know. I will be happy my dear friend to discuss this with you. Yes the name of Salumet was not the name first I gave to you, but as you know, names from our world have little meaning, but I know of your interest and I will be happy to discuss it with you another time. If you so wish I will make time at our next meeting with you—at the end of the meeting I will be happy to give you what you wish to know.

Lilian: When you first came we didn't perhaps pronounce the name you gave quite right, is that right?

The energy at that time was more difficult to control and it was quite an event for us to come to you, as you now understand. We had waited many long years to make this connection.

George: And I believe there was a considerable amount of fine tuning after that time to make communication better.

Yes, always this 'fine tuning' as you call it still continues. That is why it is important that I work at times with this instrument. I know you appreciate and understand that communication is not as simplified as some people would have you believe. But I will make this promise to you my dear friend; you will have a full explanation of your question.

George: Thank you. Could I also ask a question about—you talked to us about the pyramids and they being star pointers and you have made certain statements such as that they were not intended as tombs. And there are many incredible details within their construction and I appreciate that the details are too much for simple application—as simple as being tomb—it has to be something much more complicated than that. I think you indicated direction pointers in space. I think the complexity of the internal construction, suggests a process of dematerialization and connected with space travel. We know that we can't satisfactorily travel in space unless dematerialization happens first. Is there anything you would be able to say about the complicated layering of different types of rock within the pyramids, which obviously have I would say some energy application. Is there any you could say about that or can you say that part of their application is dematerialising?

Yes, let us first take dematerialization. To you it seems such a strange and unusual happening. To those of us who know more, it is a natural happening. That is first and foremost what you need to know.

George: Yes and I imagine that goes with a much stronger spiritual development.

Yes, of course. You have enough knowledge at this time to understand. I told you when first I came that all of these 'great happenings', as you call them, were quite natural occurrences and that people of your past times, had much more spiritual knowledge than many do now. Yes, originally those of greater Knowledge had those—we will call them 'points of light', points of light because all structures are light and energy; this you understand. (Yes) The pyramids were built as points of travel for those who came from other worlds. The drawings you speak of within the walls of these great rocks came later; they came from man and man's assessment of what they should have been. We are speaking of two different things here. It is a topic which we can enter into again another time if you so wish, but you must not mix the original construction or dematerialization within, with what you find in the inner walls of these structures. I will clarify it for you and make it a little more easier for you to understand. There has been much written, there has been much controversy, but I will tell you why and how and when, so that your understanding will be greater. Are you happy that we should do this? (Enthusiastic agreement)

George: Yes, that's very interesting. There seems to have been a time of...

There is a lapse of time.

George: Yes, there was a time of very early knowledge, (Yes) when the major pyramids would have been first built...

Yes, and mankind has not been correct in his timing.

George: Yes and then there has been further usage of the pyramids since their original construction.

Yes. You must always bear this in mind, but we will go into more detail. (Thank you.) But for this time I feel you need to devote yourselves to what is available. I will leave you now my dear friends. Be open to what is being given to you and you may be surprised by who and what you have been in past times. Do not try too hard. That is always, I will not say 'fault', but a little of your eagerness. Be open, be relaxed and let those come close to you, and as you receive the information, please speak with our dear lady friend, (Lilian) speak amongst yourselves, because the very vibration of your voices will bring us even closer. My love for you all grows ever deeper. (Thanks + farewells)

We then went 'within' as instructed, to see what was there. Some only got a little detail. Paul described a sort of Arabic or 'biblical' figure with short dark curly hair. Eileen had a much more detailed vision of someone who appeared to be living outside of a city slum, in rags and with rats running over feet. There were feelings of anger and despair, with the thought: there can't be a God, he would not allow this.' This was a past life memory of course.

Let us give thanks this time for this joining together, this meeting place and all who enter into it. We give thanks for all of those things which enrich your lives, which bring comfort to you and allows that Spirit within to grow. For all of these things we say, 'thank you'. I am happy to join with you once more my dear friends.

Lilian: We're very happy to have you once again.

So many discussions have we had just these past months of your time. Slowly you are beginning to blossom, blossom in your understanding of all that I have brought to you and all that I endeavour to bring to you. I hope this time my dear friends that you have brought with you not only love, love for each other, but love for who and what you are. Last time we spoke briefly about joy and the joy that you feel deeper within. Do you remember? (Affirmed) I said that we would discuss this next time and although I know what is within your hearts, once more it will be beneficial for the others to hear what you have to say. Would you like to begin with someone my dear friends?

George: Yes, I thought about joy and the opposite condition of being gloomy, and there are a number of things that help us to be joyful and I think one of those things is the increasing awareness. The more we are aware of the wonders of the Earth and Spirit life, the more joy we are able to experience. Another factor is meditation and strengthening the union with soul. There are other things such as laughter and music and birds song and all these contribute to joy, but I think above all is the increasing awareness.

Thank you for those words. If you noticed you started off by describing joy in physical terms, by describing what you call gloominess as opposed to joy: this belongs to the physical condition. I of course, always speak to you on a spiritual level. You then continued my dear friend to describe those attributes of Spirit which indeed do contribute to joy. We thank you for your words.

Lilian: Would you like some more answers?

Yes, it would be helpful for each one to express what he feels joy to be.

Paul: When I was thinking about it I felt it must come from when you have no judgement. Then the joy seems to come; like smiling within at the world and yourself as well in the world.

Yes, may I say that those words do make one want to smile. Smiling within are wonderful words to describe joy. I thank you too for your words.

Lilian: Have you talked to Sara (Graham's wife), Graham?

Graham: Yes I have and I agree with George and Paul and particularly the lessons that I have received here and the opportunity to think about things in a way that I never would have done without your guidance: it has given me enormous joy which I cannot begin to express. I've also felt joy from quiet times, particularly with painting. I enjoy my painting and these quiet times where you're alone and can be lost in your thoughts again is a time of tremendous joy. Sharing experiences with other people again brings me great joy. In fact, I would say that more and more of my time I would say that I am in a joyful state than I used to. So I am very grateful for this.

Yes, I thank you too for your words and the important part of your words as far as Spirit is concerned is the word 'sharing'. Thank you.

Margaret: I have surprised myself this year, very much so. I always wanted to be with somebody, but now I find if I go walking for an hour, most days, and I look at the flowers and the trees and the birds and it gives me new hope. I don't know whether that's good or bad, but it's very good for me to be contented with the life I've got.

Therefore you have joy within.

Margaret: Yes I have, yes.

Yes. You see the correlation of the words that each of you have spoken? Are you beginning to see the connection to joy? (Yes) Thank you.

Sarah: I felt with joy that it was also an inner thing that we're happy beginning to know why we are here; there's a joy of that recognition. So that is another feeling of joy. But I also felt it was a thing—an aspect that is—because you have joy within, it is that that you are giving to others that they are also recognizing that is making them happy too. It's the trigger between making somebody else joyful and your inner joy that is coming out.

Yes, it is that governing force from within. Yes, that is perfectly true; joy comes from within. Each one so far has discovered that joy does not belong to physical conditions. In thinking deeply my dear friends, you have come to this realization. I thank you for your words.

Lilian: As for myself, it's the joy of the spiritual teach which you have brought and the growth of Spirit within. On a day-to-day basis in the physical I am not always joyful, but spiritually, yes it is, thanks to you for your teaching.

Yes. In recognizing the difference from joy within and joy of everyday life, to recognize that difference is indeed a step forward; to you also, I thank you for your words. I would now like to continue just a little about 'joy'. You cannot extricate joy from love: joy and love go hand-in-hand. But what is this joy? I feel my dear friends that love is easier for you to accept, because you see the expression of love so often within your physical lives. Therefore love to you is more natural to accept. But joy, joy is in just being; joy is in the learning process of knowing who and what you are. No matter what physical conditions you have to bear, and each one of you as you full well know have different life styles, but that joy that comes from within, is in beginning to realize and recognize who you truly are and why you have come to these physical conditions. You should shine as beacons at all times my dear friends. The joy from within should overshadow all physical problems in your lives.

Lilian: I think with the knowledge we have gained, it does.

Yes, and that is why now I have broached the subject with you, because your understanding now is so much greater. Until now these have only been words to you, words that you have barely given any recognition to, words used in the physical sense of being happy or unhappy, when in fact joy encompasses you at all times; but it is the recognition that brings it forth. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Paul: Is it like we have joy all the time, but we don't realize it?

You have joy at all times within. It is up to you in your physical daily lives to allow that expression of joy to come to the fore. I will now say to you something which I feel that some of you may want to dispute, but I feel at this time I am sure my dear friends you will accept my words. The most loving of people are those who are self-centred. Would anyone wish to comment on what I have said?

George: We could probably put more than one interpretation to the word 'self-centred'.

That is the clue to what I have said. (Chuckles)

George: One could see it as a link with oneself or well-centred to one's soul body perhaps, but the other meaning might be a person who is rather egotistical.

Yes—again we come into your physical language; yes, this is always the problem—let me explain to you what I mean. The most loving of people are self-centred, and yes my dear friend, you have touched upon the very essence of the word 'self-centred', because those people who are self-centred, recognize who and what they are. Let me give you some examples. Why in your world do so many of your relationships fail? Why do you suppose this happens so often in your world? Because you do not look at one another as the special entities who have come to this world to evolve. So you join together thinking that together you become as one, that you create a whole; but what happens my dear friends is that you become two absorbed in the other's daily living. Why do they do this? Why should they not do that? When what you should be focusing upon is the growth of your own Spirit. When two souls come together, they should allow each other that freedom of joy and love which comes from within. I am afraid so often that you human beings stifle the spiritual growth of another. Now, do you begin to understand my words?

(Agreed)

George: There was a teaching by Kahlil Gibran, who said two people should be as the pillar of a temple: stand together but a little way apart.

Yes, support but do not suffocate—that is not his teaching, that is an eternal truth, but many have spoken words of truth as I have told you in past times.

George: Yes, he is one who was aware of the truth.

There are many who allow this to happen, but I have to say, they are not the majority of humankind. So, when I say to you, 'self-centred', do not use those words as you do in the physical sense. Always look to the spiritual meaning of my words, but I know if you were to leave this room this evening and say what I have said to you, many people in your world would be horrified. They would say, 'but that is not love'. I say to you my friend, it creates love and joy and happiness. Again there is no judgement, there is only love and joy from within.

Paul: Does that connect with the idea that you have to have self-acceptance and love yourself and then you can see the love in the world as well, but if you hate yourself you can't see the good things in life?

How can you love anything else if you do not know and understand and love the self? (Agreed)

Sarah: A couple of weeks ago, Salumet, you said somebody else would come through and somebody came through Sue who said that song was from Spirit. Did you help that person or suggest maybe that person came through, because in singing it brings the joy out in us, it helps the joy to come through. Was it a pre-planned visit?

You are speaking of joy in a physical sense; you are already well aware of the joy of musical energy. That comes from Spirit that is part of Spirit which belongs to you all. It is sad that in your world you have to be reminded that music is part of your soul. Music flies on the energy of Spirit: it is part of the soul, it is part of all Creation. So yes, that visit was intentional for the purposes of understanding. Are there any more comments this time?

Lilian: Could I ask a question on a totally different note? The instrument that you use, we think that she was experiencing a past life which we talked about last week. She appeared to be perhaps in a city maybe a couple of hundred years ago, what we call a down and out. (Poor homeless person) It was quite a distressful experience, I would say. Was she experiencing a past life?

In one word: 'yes'. It was told to you that these things would be tried last time and each of you had some experience, if not the full life that was being given to you. Of course you were told these lives are unimportant, but it was for the benefit of your own understanding. But yes, you may tell this instrument that what she felt was indeed one of those lives.

Lilian: Perhaps possibly she was the one who was strong enough to accept that.

Do not differentiate between you; you are all capable of much. You are given what you are able to take at the particular time that it is given to you. You all travel different roads, but you are all going in one direction. That is why in this year of your time, much of the time will be devoted to individual development. It is not that I do not wish to bring more teaching, but it is imperative that your own soul's growth is raised as we go along, in order that I can give you more and more that you may understand. Do you see? (Affirmed) There is much for you to continue to think about: love and joy, and dare I repeat, self-centredness! (Soft chuckles) I would like to end this time by speaking just briefly about the question asked last time by our dear gentleman friend. Would you like to place that question before me for the benefit of those who were not with us?

George: Yes, I refer back to the very first occasion when you came through to us and you gave us a name to know you by, and we understand about names that the Masters give to us, because we have that way on Earth with names. The conditions were not perfect, but it sounded like Salumet or Salufet or something like that and we settled for Salumet. I asked if we could have something about the derivation of that word. Perhaps you could give us something about where that name came from?

Yes, I understand. All too often you human beings need names for recognition. This we know and understand. You understand also that in our world names mean so little, except in the etheric body, which is newly come to our world and names are kept in order for recognition purpose. As we continue, we forego all bodies, all names and we are recognized by our energy, our light; this also you understand. When first I came to you, I know the name was not perfectly clear to you and that name of Salumet was acceptable to you and that is the name which I accept when I come to you. But when first I came to you, I told you that I was a conglomerate of beings and this is so, that has not changed, but in order for one aspect of that soul to come to these conditions, there had to be a name given in order that I would be recognizable to you. When I say 'I', I do not speak as a single entity. I am speaking for that conglomerate of being that is all-knowing, all-growing and always evolving. When it was decided that we must come to you as a group for the purposes of information and growth, you were not chosen lightly. I told you that it had taken many, many years of time for me to come to you. Salumet, it was indeed Salufet when first I came. We decided that Salu—if you were to consider 'Salu', what do you think of? It means greeting, it means good health, it means many things. It means I bring to you truth, health, knowledge, greeting.

George: We have the word in our language 'salute'.

Yes, 'salu' also means in your language many things. I did not come to you as many others have with names of those who have trodden this earthly path, but I can say to you that many of those who have given names, they are but pseudonyms, they are indeed much greater souls, but always names are given for recognition only. One aspect of the beings from whence I come to you has indeed trodden an earthly pathway, but to give you a name, a time, a place would be of little use to you, because that being was not one with recognition—but no matter, was indeed a great soul; but one aspect of this conglomerate of beings has indeed trodden an earthly pathway. Another aspect of this self has lived on other universes, on other planets. So you see, the knowledge which I bring is indeed varied and wide. I, to you my dear friends, am but a voice from afar, but the knowledge and the love that we bring to you is eternal. (Thanks expressed) It is a privilege to work with you my friends. You were not chosen lightly. There was much discussion and as you fully realize and understand, that to return to such heavy vibrations, especially at the beginning, was not always easy.

George: So the various aspects which you represent would be from several planets and...

There are those who have never trodden on any planet.

George: Yes, thank you. I was trying to search for the word: 'pure energy'.

Yes, pure energy is part of the conglomeration. It is difficult my friend to explain to you how these processes work, but let me assure you that indeed what we bring to you travels on the love vibration, and we have felt that that is all that you need to know. Always I have said to you: never accept what you feel you cannot until your understanding is great enough. We knew that you would question many things that were said.

George: I think I can say that in that very first time we felt the love in the voice. It was just there, we felt it. I thank you for those words. After all that is our purpose that not only do you physically hear the words that I speak to you through this instrument, but that you sense and feel that all-encompassing love and joy. For this we will be ever grateful to you all. (We agreed that we were all very lucky/privileged)

Sarah: Salumet, just a thought. You teach us and you come to a very heavy atmosphere to teach us. (Yes) Do you teach in Spirit as well?

Yes, but of course it is much easier. These conditions are not of the best, but we have adapted well and I do firmly believe it is because of the love energy that is emitted from all of you, the love that you give out to me as the voice of Salumet. So, in ending these words, I would like to thank each one of you, thank that Great Creative Force for the opportunity given to us in coming to know each one of you. I know my dear friends that when the time comes for you to depart these physical bodies that the knowledge given to you will radiate from your very beings. You will be prepared, you will accept and you will recognize that love energy which has come so closely to you. I hope these few words have satisfied you my dear friend.

George: Yes.

I know you are one who considers and thinks deeply, but there is only so much that we can give in order for your understanding to be there.

George: We are grateful, because it does help us to visualize the great privilege that we receive.

Remember what I have told you that names given are so often only pseudonyms for greater beings. I will give you one example, because I know it is one of recognition to you and that is White Eagle. You all believe him to have been a great Indian, but of course he was much more. I will end this time with those words. I know that my words have been taken and accepted by you and for this once more I give you my love and my thanks. (Thanks + farewells)

~9th June 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

Although words have not been spoken since last we met, I assure you my dear friends that the link with you all is still strong. (Happiness/joy expressed by sitters—several prior meetings had had to be cancelled)

George: That's nice to know.

I hear the dear gentleman's voice, and I would say to him that I promise to speak with you about the pyramids, but I hasten to say this to you: I will not speak this time, but I have not forgotten what I have told you and in some near time to come we will discuss this with you.

George: Thank you that would be very interesting. Yes, I have my thoughts on that. I expect you know something of my thoughts anyway.

Yes, I am well aware, that is why I wish to speak with you in order that you understand that I have not forgotten.

George: I am sure you wouldn't forget.

Our 'memory', as you call it, is not apt to forget! But we will speak about that subject as we will broach many others in the coming months. I wish only to say to you my dear friends that over the next few weeks of your time, each one of you should feel a great upliftment within yourselves, because we are making preparations with you all. So, be aware of those innermost feelings in the weeks to come.

Lilian: I will pass that message on to your instrument as well.

I know you do not always feel or understand how we work with you, but let me tell you that there is always purpose behind our actions with you. If there are any urgent questions, I will be happy to answer, but I would like to work quietly with this one (Eileen) this time, in order that we restore some balance to her.

Lilian: There was just one lady that's shown an interest in coming, (Sue—a friend of Graham's) and she lives in Reading. She does understand this work.

I have to say, we influence those who become interested in this group. Therefore of course the answer not only lies with us, but as I have said before, if each one of you is happy to invite another, then so be it. Already I feel you have forgotten that I told you many would come and many would go.

Lilian: And your instrument was impressed—we've probably mentioned this before but I will mention it again—before you actually spoke to us, (pre-1994) Eileen was impressed to write down that people from around the world would come to listen and yes, that's certainly happened.

I wish to say to you, as time continues my dear friends that each one of you will become much more intuitive as you call it. I would prefer to call it 'spiritual awakening', but of course you know and realize that you play the biggest part in that development. We can help you so much, but we cannot interfere and this you know well.

George: I was only reading about some philosophers very recently. You have been talking to us about innate knowledge and an alternative word used by them is 'a priori knowledge' which is the same thing. I didn't realize but it is clear that a number of philosophers from Plato two and a half thousand years ago, right through to Kant who is a particular one, who recognized the innate knowledge that comes to us 'through the gates of heaven' is the way that he put it, which seemed quite apt to me, and right through to an Australian philosopher in 1938. So, over that period a number of philosophers seem to have got a good understanding about innate knowledge.

Yes. I have told you my dear friend that there are many in your world at this present time and times that have gone by; and after all, two thousand earthly years is but a short number. There has always existed those humankind, who have extended knowledge and whose thinking is a little greater than most.

George: Yes of course. Two thousand years seems quite a long time to us, because it's a good proportion of the time during which we've had written records.

It is but one wink of your eye. (Yes) Yes. Now my dear friend (Lilian) I will leave with you the rest of this evening's work. I will tell you once more that there are many who are willing to come to you. It is now available to you; much energy, much love, much understanding of what you truly are within. If you would but open those hearts and minds, there is so much you could achieve within this room. I therefore will withdraw this time, but as always I enclose you with my love and light. (Thanks expressed)

Lilian: Thank you. Our love goes with you.

I would leave only saying that the instrument will need a little time at the end of this evening.

Lilian: Yes, we will help her.

One followed through Sarah:

We will begin by taking a little look at the thoughts that each one of you is currently transmitting. We are receiving many different ones from you. The 'gate' from which I come, is the one that takes the important requests and sorts them into the appropriate—perhaps I should say 'files'. We as you know, do not permit any bad thoughts to go to those who are vulnerable and likewise, some thoughts which may be of good intention, are also perhaps not appropriate at the time of being sent. These thoughts are never discarded and can never be got rid of, but are kept and at an appropriate time, will be forwarded to the appropriate recipient. So those thoughts that are being transmitted this evening have already been put into the correct 'file', and are being dealt with in the correct way. My purpose this evening is to do a joint exercise. These thoughts that you are putting forward, we wish you to try to do one thought together and to impress upon the one who is sitting to my right hand side—we wish you all to have one thought which we wish you to direct to this lady and we will tonight see if she can transcribe these thoughts for you. This exercise is a simple one, but it is one to show you how important your thoughts are. So, if you would like to transmit just one thought to this lady, we will in a few moments see if she has collected them in the correct way. These thoughts can be transcribed in a different way and sometimes the thought that is put forward comes out slightly differently. This is not because your thought has not been accepted, it is simply because the thought from the person receiving it, has put a little of her own thought into this idea, this thought and it has become slightly altered. But the general idea, the general theme, should be the same. So let us just try this exercise for a few moments. (There was a short pause of 1 or 2 minutes, while we attempted the exercise—we didn't do very well, but our guide encouraged us nonetheless with our efforts.)

~23rd June 2003~

It is good to join with you my dear friends.

Lilian: Yes, it's lovely to be together.

As we came together this time I observed each one of you. I was observing the light which emanates from each one of you. I know that when last we met each one did feel some upliftment in their lives, but as always in human living, these things are so quickly forgotten and gone from you. But, my dear friends, from each one of you there is a light which is now shining which can never be extinguished. It is the light of ever-growing knowledge, it is the light of union with that true self. It is our purpose, as I have told you that each one of you in this time of your earthly year will find and grow spiritually. To this end this time, or part of this time, will be given over again to individual development, because what is to come over the next few of your years, will need understanding that comes from within. It is simple to utter words to you, for you to listen, to try to digest those words, but unless that knowledge is taken on board and digested spiritually, then it means very little. So do you understand my dear friends the importance of your own individual growth?

Lilian: Yes I think we all do.

Because in your individual growth you come together as a group, which becomes stronger as a group, even although your own individual development is so varied. After all, that is our task that when we give knowledge to you, that you are able to utilize it to the best of your abilities, that the truth that is given to you at this time is passed to others in the process of your everyday living. I know my dear friends this you already do, but to become aware of it is indeed another step forward for you. Therefore, when we have these individual development evenings, do not feel it is because I do not wish to give you more teaching; it is part of the overall picture of the group itself. I would therefore say to you my dear friends that if there are any questions this time, I will be happy to answer them for you, but I would say that we must devote some time this evening to allow those who are standing close to you to come forward and help you all individually.

George: Perhaps I could observe that we have continued as a group now for 10 years and it's most refreshing that I notice you're looking ahead several years in terms of the next development. That is very nice to know, thank you.

I know that when you speak of earthly years, to you my friends it may seem some considerable time, but it is but one blink of your eye. There is much to know and to learn, and after all, my purpose in coming to you is not only to give you teachings, but to bring you together as that group which has existed in many times in many forms, but in this existence I want you to be more aware. So you see, it is a double-edged purpose that we have. What would be the purpose in giving you information if you know not what to do with the information, if you cannot take into your hearts and souls that eternal truth? So, it is of great importance, and I did tell you earlier in this earthly year that a great deal of this time this earthly year, would be given to individual progress. Can any of you within this room say that you have not felt to some degree some form of progress in your lives? Is there anyone who could say this?

George: No—I feel in myself that there has been progress and I am sure that goes for all of us. (Agreed)

Sarah: And the way you deal with things in life is much more easy.

Yes, it is that awareness within yourselves, the way you express the Spirit within: that is the purpose of development.

Lilian: I think the group that is here tonight, although we are a smaller number as to sometimes, say we are the old-timers, I am sure the others would agree that we can feel the love growing between us as the time goes along.

There is a bond with you which will never be broken. You may have other lifetimes, you may have other groups, but there is a joining among you that has existed for a long time, and this is important for you to know. That is why you constantly return to each other. There is no pressure upon any one, to sit within this room, to listen to my words, and my heart is glad when I see you gather and you listen to these simple words I bring to you; and although the words are simple, they have great significance to you.

Lilian: Sarah, do you wish to ask your question?

Sarah: If there's time—it's not really important...

I will take the question my dear friend.

Sarah: I was just interested, you said about nuclear power—it was something that's been developed and we don't understand it. You also talked about GM foods. I think you said they weren't good, but is this in fact another thing that we have developed that we don't actually quite understand? We haven't quite got to do the right thing with it?

There is much within your world that has come to you under the umbrella of progress. Let me just say this to you my dear friends: The majority of mankind wishes to help each other, but in the past few thousand of your earthly years mankind has developed a knowledge, has evolved to think for himself in a way which is not always best for all peoples. You know that all that comes to mankind originates from the world of Spirit. (Yes) Although many ideas come from our world, they are not utilized to the best advantage of mankind. The problem is always, as I have said on many occasions, that because humankind has freewill, they can abuse, and do abuse, that which comes to them; but that is their choice. We, as I have said before, can try to influence all for good, but the power of thinking, the power of thinking is so great that sometimes we cannot but help and have to stand back and watch mankind be destructive. It is a process of what you call your evolution. We may pick individual topics, and there are many upon which I could comment, but I will generalize for you and say that mankind is reaching a point when all that is coming to him will be used correctly, will be recognized as the spiritual gifts which they were meant to be. Throughout all of your worldly history there have been many civilizations previously, with far greater knowledge than that which is available today, and have I not told you how mankind have abused that knowledge? (Agreed) This still happens today. There is nothing new in so much as mankind still uses that freewill. Remember too what I have told you, that always there are two sides, there is always the positive and negative aspect to all of living. So, what one man might abuse, another will find good with, and this we must trust humankind, and we must influence those who are working for good. We cannot change any pathway which has already arrived. When mankind has made a decision, the thought becomes reality and all we can do is to influence and influence until such time as that knowledge is turned around and used in the way that it should be.

Sarah: If the knowledge is being used correctly...

It will be of benefit to humankind.

Sarah: Yes, but what I was going to say was that if something is used incorrectly, there is a balance and somebody will find something good with it; but likewise, when the good is being used, then someone will find something bad in it, won't they?

Always there will be this balance, yes; you have to look around all of your world in this age to see that. Man goes against man in every walk of your earthly life. What one finds good, another will find a purpose of objection or misuse, but what we are striving for my dear friend is that mankind stops and observes and takes inwards all that is given to him from our world. Only then, when mankind listens to the inner voice, will this world indeed become a much happier place. It is possible, it is possible, but each individual needs to accept some responsibility for what is happening in your planet. You cannot be absolved from it. These may seem to be harsh words, but I tell you, because in accepting that responsibility, you are accepting that you are more than a body of flesh. Do you understand? (Yes) Try not to, my dear friend, think of any one situation, try not to focus on the negative of any one purpose of life, but always strive to see the fuller picture, and then, and only then, will you see what has to be done. These are simple words from me, but not so easy to do; but if you do not strive you will not achieve. Is that helpful to you?

Sarah: Yes it is, thank you.

I hope my dear friends that you are beginning to feel the love which envelopes you all at this time. I am going to withdraw and work with this instrument (Eileen) for some time. I will leave with our dear lady friend (Lilian) all of you to go within and see what is round and about you. Do not be afraid to speak out, to say what you see, to say what you feel, to say what you hear, because my dear friends this evening all of your senses will be bombarded by those who stand close. Open your hearts, open your mind and allow it to be close. (Thanks + farewells)

We then sat quietly as instructed, dedicating time to individual development. Sitters voiced what they 'saw', felt or 'heard'.

~30TH June 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

It is good to join with so many of you this time.

Lilian: We have got two visitors, a lady, (Sue) who we spoke about and her husband. (Larry)

To them we say that we embrace them warmly. They, as you my dear friends, are seekers after truth. As you well know, there are no new truths. Eternal Truth has always been and always will be, but mankind is forever seeking what he terms Truth. For the purpose of our dear friends who have joined us this time, we will speak generally and I will invite you to ask any questions that you may have this time. I would say only this about Truth: What you harvest in your daily lives is dependent on the seeds that have been sown throughout that human lifetime. But what I wish to say to you my dear friends is that all truth is available to you only when you go inwards to those quiet moments when only the Spirit shines forth; then and only then, will the Truth of all eternity become a little clearer for you. Therefore I say to you once more, and my dear friends within this room have heard me say on many occasions: all is available to you but you must seek, but you will find if you are seeking with love and looking for that light within. Now my dear friends let us have any questions this time?

(Lilian asked our visitors if they had any questions, but they didn't have any at this time.)

George: One that has occurred to me recently. I value any comments you might have on alcohol. A little drinking of alcohol is a very common habit, and especially at the end of the week people go down to a pub and have a drink and they relax, and for a lot of people I am wondering if that is a good thing and almost a first step to going within to relax from the weekly problems. There's reference in our Bible to 'taking a little wine for your stomach Timothy', and I have also heard it said that alcohol diminishes the aura and anyway I would be glad of any thoughts you have. I am not looking at over-indulgence; I am looking at a small amount of alcohol at times to help people relax. I would be glad of any commentary you have on that.

I feel my dear friend that a little justification may be looked for this time, but what I wish to say to you is that all of mankind has the responsibility for the protection of that housing which you call 'bodies'.

Whether or not we from our world approve or disapprove does not matter, because as you know you come to this lifetime with all of those attributes which is to see you forward in this life. You have freewill and mankind uses it wisely or unwisely as you may see it. I would say to you only this: that all of living in this world which at times for many is not easy, whatever can help you to go forward with understanding, with peacefulness in your heart, cannot be totally bad. Therefore I say to you, after all, the fruit upon your trees creates what you call 'alcohol', does it not? (Agreed) And who would we be to say that what is produced upon your Earth is wrong—it would not be right to say those words. Therefore my words to you my dear friend is that those people who need the crutch of alcohol, let it be so, but I hasten to add that all of these substances are indeed crutches. Why do you need support to go inwards? All you need is but to close your eyes and focus your thinking. That is all that you need.

George: Yes indeed. Yes, those are wise words. I asked the question because it is such a common indulgence that I am sure it will be of interest to many, many people. Thank you for your words.

Always each one has to take responsibility and remember that these physical bodies are after all that temple for the Spirit. Therefore I would say only this to you all, that you can only do what you feel is best for each one of you, because each individual has the responsibility when they come to our world to see more clearly how they have treated that temple called the physical body. Then and only then will the whole picture emerge and the understanding that comes with it. I hope that is helpful to you.

George: Yes, and thank you for the word crutch, because that seems to be a particularly apt word to use. Yes. All of these substances are unnecessary, but as I have said, we cannot interfere in your daily lives and if someone finds benefit from it without harm to others, then so it must be. As long as they never harm another human being, then to them it seems acceptable, then that is how it must be. Do you understand my dear friends? (Affirmed)

Graham: There was a programme on our television which was talking about a scientific breakthrough on the subject of sleep and the fact that scientists now think they have greater understanding as to why some people find it very hard to stay awake and they spend most of their time fast asleep and it is a real battle to try and stay awake. In investigating all of these things, scientists now think that it is something to do with what goes on in the centre of the brain and a certain drug is released by the brain. Drug manufactures have now talked about creating this drug to have the opposite effect, thereby administering this drug with the intention of keeping people awake so that they no longer need to go to sleep. They have described a society where people are awake 24 hours a day and they never go to sleep. I can't help thinking that this would be an extremely bad thing, because of the link we have with Spirit world during our sleep time and that would be severely interfered with. I would be concerned that this line of scientific effort would probably be a bad thing for mankind. Could you say anything about that please?

Yes. Let me say this to you, that as I have told you many times, your scientists are impressed from our world for all and many, many things in this world. Information gained for the good of mankind, we have to say scientists in this age of your time are not accepting with full love and understanding. I have just said that we cannot interfere in your lives, and this still stands. We can influence, we can uplift, but we cannot interfere. Therefore, if information given to these scientists is abused, then again I bring to you responsibility, but to go further and answer your question, I must say this: that to interfere with the sleep state of an individual cannot be good for that Spirit, because, as you have rightly said, in the sleep state the Spirit frees itself from the human form. I believe you will find that this state of affairs will not happen. The Spirit will always find time to leave the body, to after all be rejuvenated in our world whilst the sleep state exists.

Graham: Yes. If that rejuvenation didn't happen, then I would imagine that the consequences would be awful.

Yes. I will not go into that just at this present time, but it does not leave much for your imagination to consider what the consequences might be. Are you happy with that?

Graham: Yes, that's very interesting, thank you.

Lilian: If we have what we call a 'nap' in the day time, and especially as one gets older, does the Spirit go then into the Spirit world?

The Spirit will always take any opportunity to be refreshed and rejuvenated.

Lilian: Sometimes I have woken up in the day time and felt very cosy.

Yes, that is because the Spirit has been freed from the entrapment of the body.

Sara: I was standing in a very long queue today at the post office and because I was beginning to feel bored, I started to send love to people in the queue—I thought it would keep me busy—then the man standing in front of me, I felt I wanted to project some colour pink around him and then I wondered if I should have been doing this as I didn't have his consent; I just wondered what you would say about that?

Yes, we have spoken before, have we not, about this, that the power of your thoughts are most powerful. But what you must never do is give those powerful thoughts to another, unless it is for good reason. You did not know that the person who stood before you was in need, unless it was given to you. Therefore, always be careful my dear friend that you are not interfering in another's life. To send love and healing thoughts, it is a different matter, but when you begin to send colour, then we are speaking about something entirely different. So, although your intention was good and honest, you were right to withhold it and to refrain from giving such thoughts.

Lilian: Any questions Sue?

Sue: You have answered my question...

Yes. You, my dear friend, would have much to give to our world, have much to give to this world, but as I have said, you are a seeker of truth and you are still searching within for who and what you are. Would you agree?

Sue: Yes I would.

Yes, you could be a worker for Spirit if you so desired. I believe you may have been told that you are capable of healing. (Yes) Yes, and have you done something about it?

Sue: Yes I have.

Yes, good, but you must go forward and seek. You need to move forward. You do not become stationary in the knowledge that you have. Always you must project yourself forward. They come close to you from our world. Yes?

Sue: Yes, I think so.

Yes—no, do not think so, they do. They come very, very close to you.

Sue: How can I learn to recognize those Spirits close to me?

You will begin to sense. There is nothing that you can do physically. All that you can do is allow yourself to become more open. You understand what that means, otherwise you could not heal. (Yes) It is not always necessary to feel the Spirit around you as long as you provide the hands that are needed; provided you allow your vehicle to be used then all will fall into place. So whatever you give to another, you give with an open heart and mind and we will do the rest. Do you understand?

Sue: Yes, I do.

You are much blessed by those who come to you.

Lilian: Larry?

Larry: Yes. Good evening. (Good evening.) Thank you for allowing us to be in your circle this evening. One thing I wanted to ask was a few years ago myself and Sue were involved in a circle and everything seemed to be working fine, but for reasons I won't go into, things have now drifted away and, although we have been going to church and that sort of thing along the way, we haven't really been that involved for many reasons, but do you think it is time for us to start getting back in a bit deeper at this time?

That my dear friend is why you are in this room tonight. (Laughter) I would say to you, now is the time for you both to go forward. Although you have been involved in previous times, it really was not meant to be, not meant to continue in the way that it was. In the same way as it has taken many, many years of these sittings with this group, and people have come, people have gone as many more will in the future, there is a time for each one to become more involved. Sometimes daily living interferes with what you know you should be doing. There are many reasons why people don't go forward in this situation, but I can say to you quite clearly my dear friends that this opportunity has been given to you. But we cannot live life for you and you must now recognize and take advantage of what is before you; you must become aware with those spiritual eyes all that is placed before you. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

There is a time for all people. For some it begins the moment that they are born, for others it comes later in their lifetime. But for all people, first and foremost you are Spirit and this you must never forget. Both of you I would say have the capability of sitting quietly together and allowing that Spirit within to come forward. But it is not for me to tell you which pathway you must take. I can offer you hope and guidance, but I cannot point the way—that must be your decision. Thank you. (Thanks expressed)

Lilian: Margaret?

Margaret: We have been praying for my friend Betty and great news, she should be home within a fortnight and she is getting on very well at the moment. Thank you all for praying for her.

And we thank you my dear friends for all of your thoughts. Do not forget that you also have played a great part in the help that the lady has received. I have to say my dear friends that I become increasingly aware how different your thoughts to us have become, how much stronger and with so much love they are sent to our world compared to a few of your years ago. If only you could be aware of your own lights, I am sure you would be truly amazed. I have to say to you this time that I have been with you for a short time, or rather perhaps you would consider it in your terms quite a long time. But it is not, it is but a short time. I came to you my dear friends on a wave of love and understanding. I came because the time was right for you all to learn more, and you have accepted me with love, love which at times has nearly overwhelmed me, but I say to you each and every one my dear friends that not only has it been your love, but your compassion, your humility for your fellow mankind that has attracted me to you. I can say this to each individual here, it is not just one or two, but it is this whole group. It is indeed spiritual gifts that each one you hold and it is indeed those spiritual gifts that have taken you forward and will continue to help you to grow. And each new piece of information which I bring to you, I am happy for you to dissect, I am happy for your question and I am most happy when you accept it with love.

George: It is our pleasure to receive. I rather fancied I had a conversation with you recently. I was trying to fathom personality and I was looking to yours and wondering if I was right to consider yourself as a personality. I seemed to get something coming back which suggested that I should attempt to define what personality is.

Is that not a good question?

George: A very good question, yes! And I felt on thinking about it that personality stems from Spirit and various factors, if I could loosely say that, in Spirit; in which case our personality, each one of us, has a very similar basis to your own, in that, well, yours derives from a much further and more refined and many more refined personalities shall we say?

Yes. We get into difficult waters when we try to define my personality, because as you full well know, I am not one personality. I show myself to you and speak to you as what you define as personality, but I am but a voice for many in our world who bring to you Truth and understanding. But that is not to say I cannot impress upon you the feeling that I am but one of you. Do you understand this?

George: Yes, it's more like you are many, many personalities.

Yes, yes, it is an interesting word 'personality' and perhaps it could be that all of you could think about that and we may discuss it another time. It would be interesting to hear you all speak about your own personality. I am sure you would find it most interesting. (Agreed + chuckles)

Sarah: I think that probably why George feels that maybe our personalities are a little like yours, is because we are all blending together.

Yes, that is one aspect of it of course, and that is something I would have expected to be discussed when we do discuss it. But yes, you are correct, it is the blending of each one of you which creates this idea or thought. But it is a very good question. Are there more questions this time?

Sara: Yes. I think my little girl is seeing the aura colours. Can you confirm this? I feel when she talks about people she is seeing a colour. She often says she can see a colour with them.

We have said before that your children do attract Spirit children to them. It is because of the energy that comes from them. But I would say and I can say to you that yes this child is aware of much more than you realize; so please try to encourage when you can. (Yes, I will.)

I feel this time that as I begin to leave you that each one should sit quietly and see who is with them. So I will leave it with you my dear lady, (Lilian) to encourage the others to speak of what they see and feel. Before I leave you this time my dear friends, I say to you, have upliftment in your hearts, be optimistic for your futures and that when you go inwards in your time of quietness, remember all of those people who come to help you in your daily lives. For this we ask that blessings be placed upon them, that your knowledge becomes expanded and that the love that you feel for each other continues to grow. And with those words I will leave you now. (Thanks + farewells)

~14TH July 2003~

Lilian: We have a nice full house tonight.

I am happy to be with you all once again. As I waited for you my dear friends I was thinking about the workings of your fan within this room and I would like this time to compare you to this fan. You see, its energy is supplying to so many of you—all of its ability. It touches not one but many, and so too do each one of you my dear friends in your everyday living. You know full well that the energy which exudes from all of you, touches many hearts in one lifetime. I am sure that each one of you has grown to the point of knowing when you touch another's life. (Agreed) What I would like to remind you of once more my dear friends: so often the thoughts come from you, 'what is the purpose of this lifetime?' You have journeyed far, you have gained much, but let me remind you that not every lifetime is for the purpose of the Spirit that is reincarnated. It may well be that the lifetime is devoted to the welfare of others. Sometimes my friends you forget that this is so, you become absorbed in thinking: 'why does this happen? Why does that happen?' Always you look for the purpose of events when your own soul is sending you forth to bring help and comfort to another human being. I know as you think upon those words that you will see in your own lifetime these purposes, and indeed many of you have come for unselfish reasons this time. Would you like to speak about those words I have given you?

Lilian: I can see it partly in my lifetime, I must say, especially as I've got older.

Yes, you feel that part of you is given for another. Does anyone else feel this purpose of life?

Sarah: Yes I do also to an extent. Now I am beginning to, not before, but through your teachings which are beginning to make me think differently.

George: Yes, one can give in various directions to other individuals and looking around at other people, there is the possibility of giving to the State and giving to the world.

That is always the purpose of any soul that the whole of the energy in this world is given to the whole of the planet. You cannot exist upon this earthly existence without giving outwards to all who exist with you. I would like you to think a little more deeply about the existence of this planet, not only your existence and why you are here, not only how you have touched the lives of those you have met, but what purpose you serve for the whole of humankind. To do this my dear friends, you must think more widely, to do this you must open your hearts and you must be truthful to yourselves. That is not an easy task; indeed it is the rare human who can look inwards and truly see for himself what he is about. But I am asking you this time, my dear friends, to think more deeply about not only your purpose here, but the purpose that you have brought for the unity of the whole planet.

Lilian: Yes, that's a difficult one.

Are you prepared my friends to try to ponder upon this aspect of yourselves? (Yes) If you are not ready I understand, but I feel the time now is ripe for you, all of you, to go much deeper inwards; to understand the energies within yourself and how they interact with all other energy on this planet. I will leave that with you.

Lilian: We will talk about that next time we meet.

George: I can't help thinking about particularly wonderful individuals like William Shakespeare, who wrote such beautiful wisdom and which has been translated into many, many languages and his plays are still acted on stage, and the energy of that play seems to go out to the audience and it seems to me he is a particular example of how energy spreads exceedingly widely.

His purpose was with his words; that indeed was his energy. That is the way I would like you to try to deduce how each one of you has opened up and allow your energies to go forth. You do not have to have a name that is recognizable to all. After all, within your world there are many who have always been unknown to the mass, but whose energy itself is purity and love and is spread in many directions. So, do not narrow down your views of what energy can do. But I thank you sir for your example, because it is a good one. Are there any questions? (Pause) You are all stunned to silence? (Chuckles)

Sarah: Mine isn't a question, but I was just thinking that you can affect a lot of people just by this ripple effect. For example, if you just smile at someone one day, they could be feeling unhappy and that makes them happy, they can do the same to the next person and so it carries on. So in that way you could influence people just by a simple action.

Yes, you see already your mind and heart is working along the right lines. Continue to think about those words and we will discuss it more fully next time. It is a stepping-stone in each one of your development. It is imperative that as we go each step of the way slowly, that the understanding that you have becomes greater. This is what we are trying to achieve.

George: May we ask general questions? (Yes) I'd like to mention that there have been reported 'light signs'. We have talked about the signs of crops circles, but there seem to have been signs in light which have appeared around the world, many countries, consisting of a circle with a cross in the centre and the signs in light appear on pavements, on walls... As a symbol, it's a very ancient symbol, I believe, which represents a cross, humanity, and the circle as the universe and the four quarters as the four elements of the beings that look after those elements. It's a very ancient symbol from the past and it's reported to be appearing in many countries at the moment. Would you have anything to say about the significance of the light signs?

I do, but you have already given what I would have explained to you. Therefore for those words I thank you. (Soft chuckles) What I will say to you is this: that light symbols have always existed since mankind has walked this Earth. Light symbols have appeared on stone, on mountains, on water, in air, in fact on all elements of existence. These symbols are not new, but they have been resurrected, if I may use that phrase at this time—and it is not new; it has been happening for some considerable time. It is happening at this time, because mankind needs to return to the basics of what living is all about. Your explanation explains the symbol. This is what mankind needs to understand.

George: So the signs at this time would be a reminder for us. (Yes) And would the light beings be producing them?

Always the light beings are the Masters of this universe. (Yes) You understand? I will speak a little more in detail when I speak to you about the pyramids, because there, my dear friend, is a prime example of when these light symbols were used. I will say no more this time, but I will elaborate for you when we have the evening about the pyramids. I hope it is enough for you this time; but these signs are not new, they have been given from times past.

George: Yes, wonderful! I didn't realize they went back forever, I thought it was something new, but thank you for explaining that.

They are new to the people of existence now. But new, what is new?

Lilian: Can you take some more questions?

If there are more.

Graham: My mother has expressed an interest in coming to the group. Would it be okay for her to come in the next month or two?

Of course. (Thank you.) Provided all are happy and our dear lady friend is happy to accept, then please do accept anyone who bears an interest. I will soon speak with you if I find there is anyone to be unsuitable.

Lilian: It is doubtful that we shall get anyone unsuitable if they are impressed or have a wish to come. If they are communicating with each one of you within this room, then let me say that their light will be impressed by you, but there are always those who are out to deceive and their energy and light can be quite strong. That is why it is necessary for me to say sometimes if I feel someone was not suitable. They can bring no harm to you, but they can disrupt your energies. Do you understand? (Affirmed) I will leave you this time. I feel there is more than enough for you to think about and I will say only this: that as we continue to work together, I feel your strength, I feel your joy, I feel your love. For this we are eternally grateful. Now, to continue, let us bring close once again those who stand by you, who wish to use you. Please open your hearts to them, because, my dear friends, they come only to help you in your development. (Thanks + farewells)

After maybe 20 minutes sitting quietly, there was one through Eileen asking for the lights to be dimmed. Another followed through Eileen, with a message for Paul. She gave the name Janice, explaining that in a previous lifetime she was Paul's soul-mate. This hasn't been transcribed, but here is the link to the audio file if of interest: http://www.solumentandfriends.org/resources/2003_07_14-janice+for+paulnr22.mp3

Good evening. (Greetings)

As I come to you this time I feel the wonderful peace and energy which all of you have brought in to the room this time. Much is being given to you this evening by those who come close to you. I hope my dear friends you are able to absorb that love which fills the room this time. I would ask you to feel that energy and love which is here. Can you all feel it? (Agreed) It is a little more stronger than normally would be here.

Lilian: It is very peaceful.

Sara: I felt it as soon as it began and it felt very warm to me and peaceful and gentle and warm.

Yes. You will all be absorbed into it and help given to each one of you in the particular way that is needed by you individually. (Thanks expressed) As I come to you each time, I am always most interested to find each time how different your energies are, how your light changes each time we meet and I would say to you this evening you have surpassed all that has gone before. And as we speak of being absorbed by the love and the peace and the gentleness as the lady describes it, it brings us to what we discussed last time. (Short pause) And even more silence! (Chuckles) Would anyone like to discuss it with me this time?

George: This is how we see ourselves as affecting the world? (Yes) As I see it, we affect the world to begin with, in several physical ways: the way we pass on knowledge, the way we interact with people and the way we disport ourselves, set an examples and we react in various spiritual ways by connecting with a collective consciousness, by thinking our thoughts, by being a shining light to some degree. I see us as affecting the world in those several ways which are part physical and part spiritual.

Yes, I am happy to hear those words, but might I suggest that rather than use the word 'we' that you use the word 'I' and try to find how your own energy has been utilized in this lifetime?

George: Yes, and I neglected to use the word 'love'—loving people: that's very important.

Yes, it is indeed most important, because without the love energy, all else is insignificant. You understand that all my dear friends? (Affirmed) Yes, it is I might say and call 'the ultimate energy that we possess'. But it is not always used wisely and it is important that each one of you recognizes the power that you each as individuals have when you use the love energy that you possess, but even more so when it is used for spiritual purposes. Would you wish to elaborate my dear friend on your own energy?

George: My own energy is, as I see it, striving to reach out and to bond with people, to express my love, to express knowledge and passing that on to the best of my ability.

Yes. We will leave it there and I will make comments when each of you have spoken. Would anyone wish to speak?

Sara: I feel that in this lifetime my energy has been a lot to do with communication and I think I am trying to refine my communication. And it seems that what I learn I then try to pass on to others. My spiritual process, like my own personal one, I then sometimes share that with other people. And communication in art forms as well: with music I try to write songs that contain messages which are to do with my process as well. So I think I am learning and teaching as well this lifetime.

Yes. Good. Anyone else please?

Paul: I don't think I can be too specific about mine, but I think I've got a generally calming, peaceful energy, but I don't really know very specifically at this stage how I affect the world. (Yes, thank you.)

Graham: I think that I have affected the world through teaching, I've done a lot of school teaching in my life and I've learnt a lot from that, particularly in the last few years. In learning compassion more—I hope I am learning compassion—I'm trying to see other people's point of view. I'm hoping that I'm giving that out and influencing other people in that way as well. I'm trying to avoid the sort of reactions that I used to give and to sit back and think well, what is the reason behind this? Why do these things happen? Why do people behave the way they do? And in trying to understand and share ideas about these matters with other people, I hope that I am influencing the world in a positive way there. I certainly feel as though I'm getting better at mastering impatience—I think I have been an impatient person in my disposition and again I am improving in that respect and hoping that I can help other people in the same way.

Yes. It is always important that you transmute energies, yes, thank you.

Sarah: I feel that I am changing quite a lot at the moment, but I think that my change to helping other people, to passing my love on to other people was at the time when I had the children. I began to understand people a little bit better and I think now, with your teaching, I am understanding people better. I think my energy is going to become more and more—I feel passing on your words that you've given us is a very important part of my existence now and I feel that my energies are going quite a lot into that now, and in that way it should help the world just by passing on your words. (Yes, thank you.)

Lilian: I think for myself, I probably started to help in a small way through meeting Les and his wife and then you started to come with your teaching, so I've been able to talk to other people about it—some of it accepted, some not, but I hope that is the way that perhaps I have been able to help the people on the planet.

Yes, thank you.

Margaret: I just feel that having come to this group, I have learnt an awful lot of patience and understanding of other people's problems and I try to help wherever I can. When there's a problem and I just feel happy all the time, which is rather nice.

Yes, and so you see once again my dear friends how each individual has their own ways to go forward in life and yet you are speaking about the same kind of energy. As spiritually you are unfolding, the realization is coming to you through your own quiet times and with my few words I have given to you, you begin to realize that you are more than just a physical and a spiritual being. The gentleman correctly said not only does he feel that he gives of himself, but also he receives; that too you must recognize, because in giving, you are receiving. We have spoken that like attracts like and as you give, you will receive; this you all know and understand full well. But what you are my dear friend is energy, which continues to expand, not only in places like this where you gather, but as you recognize to all those people and places that you have passed on your knowledge—and so the energy of your words grow. And as you do so, the love energy within you expands. But remember, you are like waves of energy that reaches out to our world where always there is connection. Therefore as you give out, you are received and it is given back to you ten-fold. And as this happens you can imagine all of your universe is flooded with the love energy. That is your contribution not only to your planet, but to the whole of the cosmos. No matter what your purpose is this lifetime, you must remember it is the love energy which is important. As the lady (Sarah) said last time, the smile, the nod of the head, the shake of the hand, the kindness within the eyes—all of these are love energies. So my dear friends, visualize how many times in your lifetime that these small things have occurred and only then will you begin to have some idea of how much you have contributed. You have knowledge now because that has been your choice, but there have been times in all of your lives when the knowledge was not there, but still the love energy within you grew and was nurtured, not only by yourselves but by those who influence you. So do you begin to see the pattern of your lives? (Affirmed) Never are you one unit. As you collect here, you are united, but you are united with all of us in our world, all of those people who have known you in times gone by; still the energy and love connection remains. Now do you begin to form a larger picture of what you are about? (Affirmed)

Graham: Yes, we carry a collective responsibility in this respect, all mankind. (Yes) It's nice when you can smile to a stranger or give way to somebody in a car or something, and get a positive reaction back; it makes you feel very good. It makes you want to do it again and again.

Yes, but do not forget the times when you have helped those strangers who could not smile back to you. In those times of trouble when humankind was in the depths of despair—and each one of you has encountered dark times in your lives, because that also is a purpose in your lives. Remember that all things are positive and negative: you cannot separate them. So now I hope I have explained a little more as to the positive energies that you all exude, and it is not only to do with this knowledge that you have attained this time.

George: And when knowledge of this energy is more widely known, the world has to become a better place.

Yes, and slowly, slowly that side of thinking, that side of knowledge is becoming more widespread within your world, but this you know my dear friends; I do not have to put it into words for you.

Sarah: Salumet, our energies are expanding...what about the people who are miserable, who are perhaps not doing the things they ought to do? The energy that they have created would stay static?

Yes—no, never static, but restricted. Never static, energy can never be static. But yes, those people who are in the depths of despair and who need the love energy to lift them, yes, their energy is restricted for that time that they are within that darkness of light.

George: There are so many people on prescribed drugs and medication which does have the effect of making them depressed—this is a physical thing, but it seems to make many people depressed.

Yes, and after all you cannot separate the Spirit and the physical whilst you are in this world. Each has an effect upon the other.

George: Yes. This artificial way of accidentally making people depressed seems very sad and something of our times.

Yes, but your world finds it all too easy to deal with people in this way. They are not looking within. They are not seeing the whole picture and it is too simple to say that you must take these chemicals, which are not natural to the human being, but sometimes necessary.

George: Yes, it is our fault that we tend to treat symptoms with chemicals instead of getting down to the root cause.

Yes, and always there is a reason why the soul is in the state that it is in. I have told you on many, many occasions that each one of you are responsible for this housing of the Spirit, this framework which covers the Spirit, and always people find this most difficult to accept. But, as you well know my dear friends, the power of your thought can change mountains, but this knowledge is not widespread amongst your physicians. It is available to them, but they choose on the most part to ignore it. There are those leaders within your medical profession, who are leading the way, who are showing that mankind is more than a physical body. It takes time, but slowly we are seeing changes and so it must be. But you my friends who have knowledge, who know all truth if you wish to seek for it, those of you who feel the love and support of Spirit as you enter this meeting place, you have the knowledge to be completely well and whole as a spiritual being. It is a great responsibility I know, but it is your choice.

Sarah: The thing with choice, you can pass the message onto people who are ill to perhaps use their power of thought to heal themselves, to help themselves, but they won't listen, so...

Yes, there is nothing you can do. You can offer comfort, you can offer your words of help and advice, but because of their freewill it will determine to how they act upon your words. But you have done what you must in giving of your energy and you can do no more. I know it gladdens your heart when you have a response to what you give, but what you cannot see my dear friend is the energy of light which is given off by you at these times. None of you can see your spiritual light. Perhaps in time to come you may become more aware within this room, but I have to say, there is beauty in your light and I speak for all of you. I am not saying you are perfect human beings, but I am saying that your Spirit does shine forth. It gives you a little more to consider and think about I hope: to see yourself as pure energy and how that energy interacts with all who come your way and with those you cannot see. Please do not forget them, because they are a big part of your unfoldment. I hope you understand my words this time. (Affirmed) I feel this time, because of the serenity around you, that I take my leave and that perhaps you go on a quiet meditative journey. If one of you would like to take you, then I feel it would be beneficial for you all to go on a journey to meet those close who guard and protect and love you always; to go on a journey to the inner temple of your Spirit and see who will meet you within. Would someone like to do this? (Sara agreed to do it) Until we meet next time my dear friends know that my energy encircles you all. (Thanks and farewells—Sara then took us on a meditative journey)

Good Evening. (Greetings)

I am pleased to join with you once more.

Lilian: Yes, it's nice to have you here again.

I hope that you felt the upliftment given to you last time. (Affirmed) I would like this time to speak a little about thought. I know many times I have spoken with you about the power of your thinking. This time I would like you, my dear friends, to consider—and let us try to collate the information given to you. I know that you have accepted well my words about the power of your thought; there can be no dispute about that. Your awareness has grown in many areas of growth, it has helped you in your own purpose and sense of evolution in this lifetime. I have told you that thought comes from our world. Therefore you feel that all thought is a spiritual gift that each one has. This you have accepted. Always the thought creates. You would agree? (Agreed) What I would like to discuss with you this time is a question that I have heard from some of you is: how do we manage to control the thought process? Because also I have told you that you must be in command of your thinking—yes. (Agreed) What I wish to say to you now may seem to be a contradiction on what I have already spoken about, but I assure you my dear friends that it is not. Would one of you like to explain what we mean by 'thought' and where it comes from?

Lilian: I'd say if it's a good thought it would come from Spirit and if it's not such a good one, it would be a human one.

George: One can also say it's an energy, it is moving, it is not static, and it is creative. There has to be a subtlety in the shaping of the thought (Yes) and that's where my thinking begins to fall down.

Yes, and that is why we must go one step further if you are all to evolve along the right pathway.

Thought is energy which is ever-moving, but how is your thinking shaped? You are in this lifetime in a physical body, you come to this world with your own consent, but your thoughts are guided and shaped by all who are around you. Do you see this? (Affirmed) Do you understand that the thought is not always exactly who you are?

Sara: Do you mean that we are impressed by those close to us in Spirit, or do you mean that we are influenced humanly by others also?

Yes. Mostly mankind is influenced by those upon the Earth plane, by those who are close to them by whatever situation surrounds them.

George: And would I be correct in thinking that intuition from our soul connection would also play a part in this?

It is also a great part: that is the part of the thought which belongs to the true self. But the part that I am speaking of this time is the thoughts that each one of you has whilst on this earthly planet. Let me give you an example. Let us take what is apparent to most of you: religion. You, each one of you, have been influenced in a way that the parents that you have had, the teachers within your world have instructed you in. You agree? (Agreed) Therefore those thought processes are not you. Do you begin to see what I am speaking of?

Sara: Yes, we are all conditioned.

Yes. Everyone of you have been influenced by many, but as the gentleman has said, the thought that is you, that comes from our world, is indeed the first good thought that you have. This I know you understand, but I want you to be aware of the influence that bears down upon you all, because if you are to become what you truly are, then you have to attain mastership of your thinking, and this is what you do not quite understand of yet. I feel your puzzlement.

George: I think this then connects with going within to improve our connection.

You must focus to make this thought connection. I have told you that there is the thought, the word and the action, but if you are to attain mastership, you almost have to reverse this learned process, because it is a learned process that you have all gained from walking on this planet. Do you follow me? (Yes) Let us for example, say that to be fully yourself, you must act first and then think, if you are to gain mastership over your thought.

Paul: Like not trying to...

Rationalize—

Paul: ...filter them?

—yes, that is correct. Let me try to give you an example, an example perhaps that you can all relate to. Let us see you walking along your roads, whereupon you are met by one who is collecting for some help, what you call charity—is doing good deeds. And as you approach, and you will my dear friends, because of the state of consciousness that you have reached, be willing to give, but rather than act instinctively, you allow the thoughts to come first: I will not give this—that is too much, I must have, I will give this. Do you begin to see a little of what I am speaking? (Affirmed) Much better that you give and allow the thoughts to come afterwards. In that way you begin to focus on the experience, and that is what thinking is all about, that you gain the experience of the thought. Are you understanding my dear friends? (Yes) I have said always that this subject of thought is not as simple as at first you may have perceived it to be. That is but one small example. You are in this world to remember, to experience and to have mastership of your thinking. It is no easy task, but it is something that will help each one of you to evolve in your own individual way. Do you have any questions about this?

Paul: I was just thinking: so it is really about not trying to control the thought process, just let the thought flow out without trying to organize it.

George: Thought as an adventure.

As experience—that is the word you must hold onto. You are here to experience or rather to re-experience what you already know. Then, my dear friends, you begin to recognize who and what you truly are: Spirit reincarnated. It is trying to seek that perfection of living that you are aware of, but that you have forgotten. So do you see my dear friends that your next step of awareness, of consciousness, of evolution, must be in your own hands?

George: I was just thinking of another possible example of a different nature. If a designer of a boat put an initial shape down on paper and then, secondary to that, he starts (Yes) examining the benefits and the disadvantages (Yes) of that shape. Is that again an example of what you are saying?

Yes, yes. He would have continued and put into fruition that experience and that would have been true and intuitive thought.

George: Yes, it's that first step, which seem to connect with intuition.

Yes, that is what you must focus upon and, in that way, in gaining mastership of the thought, you then can turn your lives around to experience what you have come here for. You can change all aspects of your living in this way, you can change whatever you feel are negative energies in your lives, in acting in this way. Do you understand my dear friends? I know it is not an easy step.

Sara: Yes, so you're trying to follow the prompting of the Spirit rather than...

You are trying to be. Does that make sense? (Yes)

Paul: Because our thoughts are us. (Yes) So to follow them is to be yourself. (Yes)

Sara: Just to be, who we are.

To experience who you are, to know who you truly are, you have to gain that experience, to re-gain that experience.

Paul: And that first, initial, spontaneous thought is the truest one. (Yes) Don't wait for it to be processed. (Yes) Jump in and be it, be that thought.

Yes, your words are very good.

Sara: Like a child in a way.

Spontaneity, yes; but as adults you are conditioned to think in certain ways, which of course, has a big influence on the way each one lives their lives. I say to you, return as the small child to find the truer picture of who and what you are. I hope this has given you a little more to think about. (Affirmed) Always we take small steps forward, but at each step forward you have grown so much in your understanding and awareness. Each one of you has seen your lives change in a way that enables you to cope, because of that self-awareness, of that knowledge which comes from within. By saying that, I do not mean that your lives are trouble-free—of course not. What I say is you are here to experience all of life's joys, pain, love, sorrow—all of these things. But you experience all of these things with a love and a stillness which is truly you. Am I making sense to you? (Affirmed) Are there any questions?

Graham: A lot of people who perhaps react very quickly to something are described as being impulsive, as though that is a bad thing, but it isn't from what I understand you are saying—that those first impulses in fact are a very good thing and that somebody acting impulsively isn't necessarily doing the wrong thing.

Yes. Yes, as we have said, if you watch small children, although you need to guard them, to protect them to some degree, they are speaking from the heart, from that spiritual aspect which is so much closer to them. It is only as you grow within this world that all the negative influences placed upon you affect your thinking.

Graham: You would do well to watch our children. We could learn a lot from them then.

I have always told you so.

Graham: Yes, I can understand what you are saying more deeply now, yes.

Sara: They naturally move away from negative energy. (Yes) They don't want to go near the negative energies.

They are full of what you would call living. (Yes) Yes.

George: And what is upsetting sometimes is the negative impulses invade one's stillness and perhaps that's something that we just have to guard against.

Yes, it is something that should be instilled within humankind from a small age that the Spirit should not be dampened too much, that the thinking and the actions of children be allowed to flourish, that they be allowed to become human beings of their making. We have here on this planet so many human beings who do not know themselves and from our world it is sad to see so many people who are lost in human emotions and do not know what to do. They are at a loss to know how to control their thinking, and as I have told you, the power of your thinking is indeed the most powerful thing that you possess. Therefore it speaks loudly that it is in all of your best interests that mastery of your thinking be something that is foremost in your ways of life. I hope this has not been too complex for you. Always I have said that thought is indeed a deep subject, but I have tried to bring it to you in simple words for your understanding. It is now open to all of you that you take these words and that you make use of them. If you are to grow, if you are to let your lives become as it should be, then think about these words carefully and take mastery of your thoughts.

Paul: That's very clear and beautifully put. (Affirmed)

When you can achieve this, your lives will feel complete, even with the situations of trouble, heartache, whatever comes to you—it will not matter, because you have full understanding of who you truly are.

Do you see? (Yes) I will leave it there this time and give you time to ponder my words and I know each one of you will find your thinking just that little lighter.

George: Could I just say sometimes despondency is due to feeling an inability to help others, but I think that part of what you are saying is that one should be strong, and in being strong, that in itself will help the world?

What I am saying my dear friend is that you must be yourself.

Paul: Almost not to try.

Yes. In being yourself you do not need that emotion of strength, you do not need the emotions of weakness, you need only to be yourself. It sounds simple, does it not? But you need to think about it more deeply. You need to rise above emotion if you are to be truly yourselves. You are yourselves, but you do not recognize it, because of the conditionings that have been placed upon each one of you, but now is the time to free yourselves and to truly be free in Spirit. That, my dear friends, is what I bring to you and wish for each one of you. I could not offer you more than to be yourselves. (Thanks expressed)

Paul: I think you can be a bit scared that if we don't process our thoughts, we'll get ourselves into trouble or something.

Yes. Again it comes down to the way each one of you has been conditioned. It is no 'fault' as such, that is not a word to be used, but it is the way that you are in this world. But what I say to you my dear friends is that you have the power and ability to rekindle what you truly are. And may I say that if you master this in any lifetime, it curtails the amount of earthly lives that you have. Can you see that also?

Sara: You won't need to return (Yes) if you can master it, (Yes) because then everything that you think and say and do is true, is one.

Yes, you are an expression of truth, therefore you are in those stages of regrowth, renewal and you have lived each experience to what you are.

Paul: A genuine vehicle of Spirit, (Yes) not a robot.

Yes, perhaps that is a good way for you to understand it, because basically you are puppets when you live the lives in the manner that you do. It is not your thoughts, it is the conditioning of many, and if you have that understanding, then you have the ability to change. I will leave you now with my blessing and I know that each one of you has accepted and will digest the information given to you. My love for you as ever grows stronger.

Lilian: As ours does with you. (Affirmed)

If only I could express to you how much you have evolved since we have come together, I am sure you would be surprised, but it is of no surprise to me, because I feel we have chosen wisely with you.

George: It's a joy to travel that road with you. (Affirmed)

You cannot feel it more than I do. I will leave you this time and until we come together once more, as always there are many who come so close to you and as time continues, those beings grow more and more, because they are attracted to your light. Give thanks my dear friends for those who come to you, because their purpose is your purpose, their joy is your joy, their love is your love. (Thanks + farewells)

~18TH August 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

I thank you for dimming the light my dear friend; it has made my entry a little more comfortable.

Lilian: Does it?

You are surprised that our thoughts were connected.

Lilian: My eyes were shut and I hadn't realized that the light was fairly bright.

I am happy to be with you once more my dear friends.

Lilian: We're happy to have you.

I also would like to extend a welcome to the one who has joined us this evening. (Jean—Graham's mum)

How strong your energies are this time. Are you aware?

Lilian: I just felt very happy that we're together again. Does that have something to do with it?

George: I was aware of a slight difference—it was more constant energy to me this time.

Have you been trying to be aware of your energies? I know that when you are together that you feel the connection between you, (Agreed) but have you tried to connect with that energy when you are apart?

You may be amazed by what you feel. I would like to say to you this evening a little about the evolution of your planet. We are reaching a point upon this planet when all are being released from the dogmatic thinking which has been in place for the past 2000 years. We are approaching a time when each one will be aware of the new light energy, which you all are trying to captivate with your own evolvment. For too long has mankind suffered, whether it be through your many religions, whether it has been enslavement, man of man—it matters not. But I am here to tell you my dear friends that all of this is now being exposed and the souls of mankind will shine forth in order that the Spirit may be free. Many of us who have come to this planet to help humankind evolve, to free the Spirit—and remember my words: that all has retained the knowledge which you have come from. Therefore to be free to express the true self is indeed a wonderful thing. Of course I do not speak of tomorrow or next week or next year. You are all well aware of how time is irrelevant on this planet in comparison with time in Spirit, but I can assure you my dear friends as Spirit, that time which is coming is indeed but a speck in time. No matter the strife and the trouble which abounds in your world at this present time, no matter the suffering and all of what you call negative aspects which are happening on this planet, look to the wider picture and you will see how this planet is evolving and growing. As I said, many of us who have come to this planet to help humankind are now beginning to move a little further away, not because our tasks are done, but because mankind is opening to all that is. Mankind is growing in awareness and in the knowledge of who he is. Therefore do you see how mankind is allowing those of us who come to grow also? Can you understand these words? (Affirmed)

Lilian: It's a two-way thing.

Always that has been so, but mankind at times has misunderstood our purpose and indeed it is a two-way mission. Would anyone wish to ask questions at this point?

George: I would observe that very recently the established church and the established religions have been meeting a number of problems, which have been publicised in the press and I imagine this would be a part of this swing or disenchantment with dogma in the established religions.

Yes. Of course, as I have said, religion is but one aspect, but for too long in the name of many religions, mankind has used religion to take people and keep them downtrodden, with fear mainly. And remember, I have told you, if there is not love, the only other aspect of your lives is fear. We have spoken about this recently, so I know you understand my words without any more elaboration. Mankind has lived in fear for too long. Now the time is approaching when all of these things must be stripped away to allow the Spirit to be free, to allow this your planet to exist as it was meant to be, for mankind to be what he was meant to be, without the restraints of these earthly chains that man has caused upon his fellow human being. Mankind at this point in his evolution has reached a state of acknowledgement, acknowledgement of himself as Spirit. I believe if you were to go forth and speak with many, you would find that deep within they are dissatisfied with what has been taught to them. Mankind is now finding himself and that has happened, my dear friend, not only by those of us who come to teach you, but by people like yourselves who are shining beacons of Truth and who are prepared to stand and speak the truth as you know and understand it to be. Therefore it is a concerted effort by all those who stand in the light of love and who will acknowledge that they are more than flesh. Therefore I do not feel that it is wrong of me to say a big thank you to each one of you, because you play your part each day of your lives, not only by your spoken word, but by your actions and by the light that shines from you.

Sara: We try very hard, but it's thank you to you Salumet, because I would be very unrefined in my behaviour if it weren't for what I have learned from you. I often feel I don't live up to the words, but I do try and I'm so grateful for all that I have learned.

You are too harsh upon yourself—your qualities indeed are many. Remember that the positive thinking only increases more positive thought. After all, I have told you on many occasions that you are human and you do have failings, but that is part of the reason why you are inhabiting this planet. But that is nothing to be ashamed of, the progression of the Spirit is what you should focus upon. You understand?

Sara: Yes I do.

Your qualities are many my dear friend. Focus on them. (Yes, thank you.)

George: We are indeed fortunate in having such as yourself as our teacher and it has been on my mind quite a lot recently for some reason, but a communicator who came through from Spirit did say that the one who teaches you will go down in history and I am sure that communicator was correct. I just have that feeling and I think that these teachings have to become widely known. It takes time as you have told us many times, but I'm sure that will come to fruition eventually.

I am humbled by your words. You know I do not come for thanks, I have been brought here by each one of you. I told you that my journey to you took many, many of your years, because conditions had to be right, but without your light and your love and the welcome that always you have extended towards me, without these things my mission would be impossible. I told you when I first came that the words that I give to you would be reiterated throughout your world. I do believe that you have found this to be so, and again I will say, this is a two-way passage; that without you, I could not work and I hope that you find also that my words to you create within you that seeking of knowledge which is yet to come.

George: Yes and you have talked to us in the past about improving communications and we do have what we call the internet now and websites on that internet, which people can access and it will undoubtedly be our aim to have such a website for your words, so that they will be accessed by many through that method.

It has always been known my dear friend that you above all others, would be instrumental in passing along the teachings which I have given you—that has been your great purpose within this group. All of you in your individual ways—and you are all so diverse in your tastes and your lifestyles, but each one of you possesses that element of love which belongs to Spirit, which has been known would uplift and uphold this group; and the love which each one of you has, has kept alive the teachings which I have brought to you. Each of you has provided in your own inimitable style, words and upliftment to many who are connected with you. I do not need to individually name these qualities that you possess. I am sure if we were to speak individually, each one could tell another what is their best assets for spreading the word of Spirit.

George: Yes and I should add that where books are concerned, all within the group do contribute to the final printing of any word, (Yes) because much happens before these things get into print.

Yes, and that my dear friend is why that work has been entrusted to you, because of your fair-mindedness. There is much to say to you and to thank you for, but in thanking you, there is no one that is less than another. The connection is so strong now that I fear you are not even yet aware of it, but the light which emanates from this group is a beacon of light and it cannot and will not be extinguished. Even as people come and go, the strength of the light that has been built by you, will grow stronger and stronger as time continues. Now, perhaps we will have, because of our dear lady friend (Jean) who is here with us, if you would like to ask general questions this time, I will save my words for another time.

Lilian: Anyone a question?

George: You gave us your thoughts on alcohol recently. Another problem area, health-wise, is smoking and it would be very good to have your thoughts on this. Now I've noticed that many who smoke tobacco heavily—the smoking is linked to cancer, but many who smoke heavily do not get cancer and many who smoke heavily do get lung cancer. I suspect that some people are smoking for pleasure while others are smoking in order to relieve stress and it maybe not so much the smoking itself which causes cancer—which you have said is a disease of the mind—so I am wondering if it is more the stress or the reason for smoking, which leads to disease? If you have any words which might clarify this area, they would be much appreciated.

I am always happy to give a few words to your questions. It is well known that within the physical body it houses the Spirit. It is for each one of you important that that vessel, which you call the body, be maintained in good order. I have told you that illness is responsibility of yourselves and yes, as I said of alcohol, I say of cigarettes that mankind does not need these crutches. But to answer your question simply, I say the difference between two people, one who will have disease of the body—and what is disease but dis-ease of the mind; that is the all-important factor: how each individual thinks; that is the key. You may have someone who smokes what you call cigarettes for a lifetime and may pass from this life, what you might call healthily; it is because that person's mind has retained some degree of positivity. Does that help you?

George: Yes, I think that does.

So whether you call it stress that causes the disease, then yes you are right, because the stress is fear. Again we return to either love or fear.

George: So what we call in medical terms ‘stress’, is another word for disease of the mind.

Yes. I cannot place it before you any more clearly than that. All of your existence depends upon the state of the mind, which as you know, is part of the Spirit. That is why it is possible for healing to take place only when the Spirit is touched. It does not matter my dear friends what you do to the physical body, if the mind is strong, if the mind is pure and the mind is full of love.

George: Yes, I was just thinking of the American Indians who smoked the pipe of peace (Yes) and that would be a good mindful thing to have done—although it was smoking, there was good purpose behind it.

And they always gave thanks to the Great Creator of all life, so their minds were filled with love—that is the difference always. So many times you will see abuse of the physical body, but you cannot see the light which shines from within, you cannot see what is in the mind of another human being, unless you are sensitive enough to understand that human being. It is part of your soul’s growth that all of life’s problems placed before you be dealt with love. It is such a powerful emotion my dear friends, that I wish that you would say the word daily and feel the vibration that comes from that word. Remember when I said that words have vibrations, words have colour? Perhaps this time that is something for you to do, that when you go within, you use the word love and see what you find from it. Does that make sense to you? (Affirmed) Are you happy with that answer my dear friend?

George: Yes indeed, that’s most helpful. I’m sure that will be a great interest to a lot of people.

Graham: Many of the higher animals like mammals and such like have been diagnosed with similar diseases that humans get. I was wondering why they get disease in the same way that we do, when they don’t have the same capacity for thought that we do, or perhaps I am wrong in thinking that?

No, but they do have a form of thought, and after all, they are exposed to this life in the same way as humankind, and although the thought process is slightly different in the way that you would understand, yes they do suffer to a degree in the same way as humankind.

Graham: Yes that’s interesting. Thank you for that.

Are there any more questions before I leave you?

Sarah: It’s not really a question, but I was thinking about this disease thing: I know two people, two young people with depression and I have said to one of them that it’s the anger within that’s creating this depression and I think I’m right in saying that?

It is not the anger it is the fear, the fear that produces the anger; it is always fear which creates disease. They need to go and find what that fear is and confront it to transmute it into love. It sounds simple, but to those who are young, it seems a mountain to climb, and to those who do not have the understanding that you have, it is doubly difficult, but the answers are within; for all of you, all of life’s answers are there within you.

George: I have one very short one—at least there may be a very simple answer to this: You’ve talked to us recently about the Earth elementals. (Yes) The four elements—you have talked about Earth ether and water ether and fire ether and air ether. What about space ether? (Yes) Would there be any elements connected with that or do the elementals just relate to planets and possibly suns?

Yes, we do not have elementals as I have described them to you. We do have keepers of space, but they are not elementals in the sense that I have described to you. Perhaps one time I will go a little deeper for you. I am beginning to find many subjects that we have to discuss with you, but we must return. But that answer is a very good one, but it is not the elementals of the planet in the same way.

George: Connected with that again there are the suns—would they have Salamanders or similar?

Similar, yes—yes, all planets, but when you speak of space, I presume you mean between the planets.

George: Yes, what we call empty space.

Yes, remember also the archangels who are keepers of all things. So perhaps that gives you a little clue as to what I will talk about, but not this time. (Yes, thank you.)

Sara: Could I ask one more question? (Yes) You mentioned once to Graham that he did have the ability to heal himself completely (Yes) and I am sure that this still stands. He said to me recently that he thought there was a karmic debt connected to his illness. Could you comment on that?

Whether he has karmic debt?

Sara: Karmic debt still linked to the illness, the condition.

If you want a simple answer, then it is no, he does not. There is no need to waste words upon that one. He does not owe a debt with this illness. He has the ability to change and I have to say that process has already started.

Sara: That's what I thought. Thank you very much.

Would our visitor wish to speak before I leave?

Jean: I am sorry I haven't any questions.

No, but you will leave this room with many. (Laughter)

Jean: I'm afraid I don't understand an awful lot of what you've said. (No) I'm probably too thick! (Laughter)

No, no. It is always difficult when visitors come, because it has taken many years of time to reach the understanding which these dear friends have reached, but it is always good when someone comes, because they have been touched and you will feel it when you leave us this time. (Thanks expressed)

I will leave it in your dear hands my dear friends. There are many around you this time, so be open with love for them. (Thanks + farewells)

This evening was devoted to individual development, as numbers were small. We were also delighted to have a visit from our dear from Leslie, channelled through Eileen:

Lilian: Welcome to you.

You don't have to welcome me Lilian.

Lilian: It's lovely to have you here anyway.

As you can see, I'm still being taught that dratted patience issue. (Laughter)

Lilian: It's lovely to hear from you.

Yes, it's good to be with you all. I've worked hard on the emotion and on this dratted breathing, which always caused me a problem as you know full well.

Lilian: You sound fine now.

I'm well. (Good.) You wouldn't believe how well—of course you do, of course you know how well I am!

(Yes) I took this opportunity, because I don't feel that I thanked everybody for all of their good work and I know it still continues and I don't come back as often as I thought I might, because—you'll enjoy this George—there's plenty to do, plenty to read—I'm always in the halls of learning.

George: We all thank you of course, we're all very much indebted to you, for the work which you initiated here. (Affirmed)

Sarah: Yes, I was only thinking the other day, if it hadn't been for you Leslie, none of us would be sitting here now.

Not at all, without all of you, the work wouldn't have continued, remember that, it's the work that's important. We're just individuals, so remember that friends, that every opportunity you're doing good work.

Lilian: Do you have a chance to listen to people like Salumet, where you are now?

There's great teachers here, who come every so often. I unfortunately haven't had that pleasure yet, but I'm sure the day will come. I'm so involved in these halls of learning, that it takes all of my time. Yes, and as you can imagine, there was many people to talk to, to greet and remember old times; it was a wonderful experience and still is.

George: And these would all be friends and acquaintances from the past?

Exactly, and more—and all the helpers and the people that we spoke about at the meetings. All those people are available, if you so desire, and knowing me, I so desired! (Laughter) I've been and watched you all for little whiles at a time, I don't know if you've been aware of me around, but it's been good to see how your lives have been progressing.

George: Your name comes up from time to time.

Yes and I'm aware of it, each thought of a name is collected, so we are aware. There's no need to tell me, or tell you rather—you see my words still get confused at times. I don't need to tell you that all these thoughts get collected and we know what's going on.

George: Speaking for myself, I get along better with the hearing aids now; there was quite a serious problem with my hearing at one time and I was missing some things. But it's improved.

I could offer you the solution George, but I don't think you're ready yet. (Laughter) I don't think you would appreciate the suggestion.

George: It's nice to be reminded, there is the long-term solution. (Yes)

Sarah: It's good you started the typing back of the scripts Leslie, because that's been a boon for all of us. Yes, it was a good idea, wasn't it?

Sarah: A very good idea yes.

Lilian: It's amazing, I was going through some earlier ones tonight, gosh!

It's strange when tapes are played and you're listening to yourself talking; it's quite strange I can tell you, but at the same time it's very touching that these memories can be brought to mind.

Lilian: Do you ever drop in on the Wednesday Group, Iris's group?

I have done, but as I say, I haven't returned too often, because there's too much for me to be doing.

George: And have you awareness that another book is in preparation?

Well, let me say this to you George, I know more than you probably think! (Laughter) And if I might say, there's been the odd tap on the shoulder, just to help you along.

Sarah: I was wondering if you'd had a little input Leslie.

George: I'm getting help I know, from a number...

From a number of sources yes, you'd be right, yes. It's not down to one, this word here goes on and on and it's a joint effort.

George: I thought you would be very aware, because there are no flies on Leslie. (Laughter)

I'll accept that as a complement George, thank you very much, yes.

Lilian: Could you give my love to Ruth and Roy and Graham?

They're aware of you all, don't you worry, yes you don't forget old friends, yes. Oh I'm so pleased that I've managed this time without the emotion.

Sarah: So it's easier to come through this time, is it?

I've been working hard, it's not easy. I understand now exactly why there are difficulties in communication.

George: Well, it's wonderful to have a cosy chat, yes I've no idea how easy or difficult it is for you, but it seems to be a cosy chat to us.

Yes, we always assumed that having a bit of knowledge would make things easier; let me tell you that's not the case. There's much that goes on behind the scenes and of course it helps when the energy is good and people are open and of course to come back to friends, makes it much, much easier. But what blocked me last time, was the emotion, which I was feeling. But I know you knew it was me, and I tried hard this time, not to give the breathing problem.

Sarah: You sound fine. (Yes)

Margaret: It's lovely to hear your voice.

It's the result of hard work, I assure you. Anyway, I won't keep talking, I'm sure you've heard my voice often enough.

George: We don't hear it often enough these days. (Affirmed)

Margaret: No, come again.

Lilian: But we do think about you.

I know you do and I do as well. You were all a great part of my later years, for which I was really, really grateful to you all. (Thanks expressed)

George: The feeling's mutual. (Affirmed)

Well, I won't take up much more of your time, because there might be others wishing to come, and as I've said, I'm the one who's (isn't?) patient with people yet.

Margaret: You've made my life a lot happier, I must admit.

Sarah: Do you want us to pass any messages on to anybody Leslie?

No, all I can say is, I'm around my own family quite often, which is natural. And unfortunately I now see that I was quite harsh at times, in my words, in my thinking. That may surprise you? It was a surprise to me. But I feel that I've helped since I've come, in many ways, to make things right.

George: We're all human, we have our little changes here and there.

Yes, that was one of my favourite sayings wasn't it George, 'We're all human.' And I still stand by those words. (Laughter)

George: Yes, that's the saying that Salumet once said, I don't want to hear that you're only human!

Yes, I know.

Lilian: I was talking to Vic, you know your old neighbour, and he said did we hear from you, so now I can say yes, we've had a good long chat.

You can tell him I'm still Leslie, still haven't changed too much; but improving.

George: And do you look in on your daughter in Canada?

Yes, my family are well looked-after by me. It's one of the things that I'm able to do from here that I wasn't able to do when I was with you, because she was too far away.

George: Yes, it's an easier journey for you these days.

Easier? It's a click of a finger George.

George: Wonderful.

Yes, I won't even begin to describe what it's like, because it's almost impossible. All your imaginings, all your thinking—under-rated! You have to come, to discover what it really is, it's a wonderful life.

George: We will, we will!

Lilian: And you can help show us the right way to go. (Yes)

Sarah then asked Les about some tapes, which were missing and Les said he'd try to help locate them.

Now, although I'd like to stay and share a cup of tea—at least I don't have to make it anymore, so that's a consolation if nothing else. (Laughter)

George: One question which comes to mind, are you aware of the politics in the world and the problems in Iraq, or has that all become more dimmed?

We have an awareness, if you really are interested, then of course you have much more detail, but of course you have to be interested in what's happening and do you know, lots of people just want to move forward. So always remember that all of the information is available, but not necessarily known. So that would explain sometimes, why people who come through to you, seem vague on all of these issues.

George: Ah yes thank you. So that which is not interesting (to the person), is conversely almost boring and becomes dimmed? (Yes) Thank you, that's nice to know.

But we have awareness of all things, if you wish. I wish I could take you George to these books, you would have a whale of a time.

George: Yes, I'm sure. I guess it will happen, eventually.

Sarah: So I suppose as you don't need any sleep, you are there all the time are you Leslie?

No, not all of the time. I'm involved in healing on this side, I'm involved in many things, but now I'm being shown the clock. (Laughter) I've been told I've spoken enough for one time, so that information might come next time.

General: Lovely to have you here and do come again! (Affirmed)

I'm sure the opportunity will come, I am aware of you all and ever-grateful. And again I want to say thanks and love to you all. (Thanks + farewells) Oh and I don't like what they've done to my bungalow! (Laughter)

George: Now that's a very 'Leslie' remark.

Leslie then withdrew and we chatted excitedly for some time.

~8TH September 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

(There was a short delay whilst the tape recorder was set in motion and Lilian apologized for this.)

I know and understand how important these words have become to you so that they can be distributed on what you call your tapes.

Lilian: Yes, we do read them again and again and find them interesting time after time.

Therefore no apology is needed, I am only too happy to wait for you. (Thanks expressed) It has been most interesting to us to see how you have reacted in many ways to my words spoken previously. We have watched you re-read and, might I say, understand with more vision the words that have been given to you. This evening we will have some questions, but before we do so might I speak with you briefly about what you call 'karma'. There are so many different viewpoints in your world, as there are on so many of your topics about spirituality. So much is written, so much has been spoken, that I feel that you for you my dear friends we need to discuss it but briefly. Would anyone wish to say how they feel karma presents itself to you?

Lilian: An understanding of things that we should've done and haven't or gone wrong, then we suddenly understand where we've gone wrong. Would that be right?

I feel that you know and understand that the laws of all existence are fair. Therefore what you term karma is but the result of your thoughts, your words or actions.

Sara: Is it like a consequence of wrong thinking?

It is the result of wrong thinking.

Lilian: It could be either good or bad—it is everything.

This is something we will discuss. I believe that few of you would understand if the Spirit comes to this planet, this world of education, with karmic credit. Not much is spoken about that, because it does not happen so often, but it exists. I am sure that some of you will be aware of people in this world, and oftentimes you hear the words: 'they are too good for this world'. You understand where I am taking you? (Affirmed) There are very few individuals on this planet who have karmic credit, but it has been their choice to reincarnate into physical life, in order that they continue to bring love and grace to many more people.

Sarah: So those people who have come back with karmic credit have come maybe not to help themselves but just to help others.

Yes, their journey to this planet is unselfish. There would be no need for them to return to have another lifetime here, but it is their choice.

Lilian: Would that apply to children as well if they go early, you know if they don't get to be adults?

It can do, but I would say mainly the choice would be to have some degree of living on this planet.

Lilian: It's just that I'd heard someone who had a child who died at 3½ years of age and they said that she was almost too good to stay—this was coming from the parents.

Yes, we hear this earthly expression so often, but remember it is clouded by the emotions of those around and may not necessarily be the case. Let us speak a little about karma as you probably know and understand it to be. Do you assume that karmic debt always follows a previous lifetime? What is your understanding of that?

Sara: I think we can accumulate karma in this lifetime as well.

Sarah: If we had a karmic debt from a previous life, we're living a different life now, so I would think we could pay it back in a different way.

Yes, let me say this to you my dear friends. The life that you lead on this Earth shows no indication of any karmic debt that you may have accrued. Someone who would seem to have a perfect life, could indeed owe karmic debt, but it is not always the case that those debts need to be repaid in this lifetime. Therefore I say to you, and this is one of the misconceptions that you human beings have: karmic debt must be balanced, but it does not necessarily follow that it is in the next reincarnation. As long as the debt, as you call it, is repaid—and I use these words because they are words of understanding for you all—I would prefer to say ‘rebalance the Spirit’, that is a much kinder way to describe it, but we will use the word debt for the purpose of understanding.

Graham: Is it possible to not need a future lifetime?

That is what we have just spoken of.

Graham: To not need a future lifetime, you must be balanced?

Yes, yes. What I would say to you my dear friends is this: That karmic debt which is created in the life that you lead now, can also be repaid if you like in this lifetime. But that is not always the way, because those people who attract karma to them, immediately attract that debt and they must repay almost immediately, are Spirit who have evolved over many lifetime.

Sara: Is that the term ‘instant karma’.

Yes, yes it is attracted to you, but the more you are evolved, the more and the sooner the karmic debt must be repaid. It is something for you to think about. We have not thought deeply enough about this imbalance. It is possible that karmic debt is repaid early in the life and it is possible that you are then able to continue on your life’s pathway and to go forward without karmic debt that has to be rebalanced at another time. Do you understand my friends that that is why it is difficult to call it a debt? It is not really.

Sara: How can we know if we are up-to-date or not with our balance?

You can by knowing yourself. When life begins to go forward, when life—I will not say becomes easy, that is not the purpose of your learning—but when your thinking is balanced, when your words are kind and your actions are good, then you walk the pathway that is free from karma. You cannot generalize, because some people that come to their lifetime with karmic debt and they will leave with that same debt. Others will free themselves from that karmic debt easily at the beginning of a lifetime, while others will partly lose that karmic debt, but will evolve at the same time. There is not one generalization about karmic debt. Are you clear in your thinking about this? (Affirmed)

Sarah: You did say Salumet about the September 11th happening, that that was karmic debt. Now was that a collective debt?

Yes. That is also something that you must take into account. Not only is there individual karmic debt, but there is collective karmic debt, such as in your continents of, say, India and Africa where many people have suffered. All over your planet there is suffering which is owed to karmic debt. This is when karma becomes difficult to understand in terms of individual wrongdoing. You understand? (Affirmed) I know it is not always easy to discuss these issues, but as we approach them slowly then I know your understanding becomes greater.

Paul: So when the spiritual imbalance is rectified, presumably you don’t have your karmic debt any more, but do you always need to do something to release the karma, or can it be achieved internally?

That is the way to dispel your karmic debt by knowing, by letting go of all that has been wrong. Your negative thought can be replaced by one of purity and love, which would balance out the negative thinking. You understand? (Affirmed) The word that has been given in anger can be changed, can be transmuted by the word of forgiveness and love. The action must be replaced by one of goodness, it must be replaced by being sorry for that action and understanding within oneself what the soul or the Spirit has done. Therefore karma can be released in many ways. Let us give you an example, let us take a karmic debt through illness. That person will be attracted to groups like this, or a healer, or many people who will listen and understand. Those people who offer love and support are giving out to that person in need. In that way they help the person understand whatever fear or negativity that they are holding. Therefore that love begins to transmute those karmic debts, because the person recognizes within himself what is wrong. Do you begin to understand? (Affirmed) When you think about it, it makes sense, does it not? (Agreed)

Sara: They see their own imbalance.

Yes, and once that is recognized then there is redressing the imbalance within themselves, because all karma has been created by the Spirit itself. No one creates your karma, only you can do that; so always we return to self-responsibility.

Sarah: So with the collective karma, everybody has to work at releasing that debt. Is that right?
Not everyone. It can be a debt of a country, which in some way will involve all of the Spirit involved, but it is slightly different. It would as a whole have to rebalance the karmic debt in a different way that an individual would. That is another subject which we will touch upon at a later date.

Sarah: I was thinking it would be very difficult for the people...

Yes, it would not be sensible in that way. It would be hard to understand for you I feel, if it was individual in that sense. I hope that it has thrown a little light onto the subject. (Yes)

Sara: Can I ask a question about karma?

Yes, my dear friend.

Sara: Once I read in a book many years ago that certain birth dates carried a heavier karma with them, so presumably that would not necessarily be true, or would it?

Only inasmuch as the soul chooses to reincarnate, the soul chooses the parents as you know, so therefore they would choose a time and a place. Only in that way would there be any kind of connection.

Sara: More to do with time than place.

Yes. I don't feel that we can say that particular times carry more karma. It is down to the individual Spirit—that cannot be changed. Whether you are born at the beginning or the end will not change what you have to bring with you.

Paul: I suppose going back to these people with karma credit, they can still live here and suffer I suppose, is that truth? They can still suffer and grow and learn through it, can they?

I would not use the word 'suffer', but I would use the words 'grow' and 'evolve'. They obviously would have to live life as it is on this Earth, but if they are free of karmic debt, then there is goodness and light within their heart and soul.

Sara: They would be very happy people.

Yes, they would be true beacons of light. But as I have said, they are few and far between.

Sarah: The Masters that come back to this Earth...

Are karmic-free. They come because they have the desire to serve humankind. They come to help those in need and it also helps with their evolution also. But they have no karmic debt.

Sarah: I was only thinking when Paul said about suffering, you said Jesus was a Master, but he suffered in the end on the cross.

That was his choice of learning.

Paul: I expect maybe he didn't suffer as much, because he would have had such control of his mind and the pain.

We speak of something we have spoken of previously. We spoke of Jesus the Christ. Let me tell you Jesus the Christ was one part, one part of a small existence, where it was decided part of that unity should return to Earth to teach, but in making that choice it was also decided that he had to learn, if you like, the ways of the world. He knew before he came that that is what would happen; the choice was his alone. Have you more questions or shall we open the questions up generally?

Graham: I'm not quite sure, going back to karma—it's probably a lack of my understanding here—how a region, a geographical area, can have bad karmic debt associated with it. Is this due to the people in that area or is this where people with bad karma go to go through their difficult lives to help repay their karma? Karma is not always brought with you. As our dear lady friend has said, karma can be accrued in any lifetime. Sometimes what happens is that a country, shall we say, abuses the nature of the land, shall we say that, which in effect creates the suffering for all of the country and that imbalance in some way has to be repaid. Therefore you may have, which you already have on this planet, trees which have been cut down, which have affected weather patterns, which have affected the people of those lands. Do you understand? (Affirmed) That is but a small example, but you cannot alter the pattern of all life, without the results of those happenings. Debt is not a good word I feel: it is imbalance at all times. I think it would be more understandable if you would use those words. Does that make sense to you? (Affirmed)

Paul: Whenever we are in judgement, I suppose that's when we are imbalanced.

That is why you must always be careful with your thinking. Remember, thought is retained in the ether: you cannot destroy that thought, so always be careful. I have said before that humankind at times can seem so 'fickle', to use one of your words. The smile can be placed upon the face, whilst deep within the heart there is anger and hatred and so many negatives and fears. So be careful always my dear friends with your thinking. I have said this on many occasions and I do not apologize for repeating these words.

Sarah: I was thinking a lot of the karma-imbalance is caused through greed, isn't it?

Mankind—let me say this to you my dear friends: there are so many ways to evolve and you have had to evolve to some degree before you decide to come to this planet. I would say that to choose to come to this planet is probably one of the highest mountains for you to climb. There are so many emotions, so much for the Spirit to learn that I would say to you that to choose to reincarnate on this Earth, is quite an achievement in itself. So, do not be too harsh about humankind. There is a purpose to this planet and it is indeed a learning curve for the Spirit. But you know, as I have always told you, the knowledge is within, the power is within you, therefore my dear friends make use of it. After all, when you are connected to Source, do you not have all the answers to living? That is what you must keep in mind. You have the map of living before you, you know what has gone, you are not sure of your futures, because you have not asked, you have not sought; but I tell you, and I tell you here, that all of your questions when you go within would be answered.

Sarah: Could I ask one more question—it's actually from my daughter? You said to us that your first thought was from Spirit and she said that what if your first thought you had was a negative thought?

It is not from Spirit. When I say the first thought, I mean the first thought of light. Any negative thought comes from fear. Remember I have told you there are two sources: there is love and there is fear. That is, I hope, answer enough for her.

Sarah: Yes it is, thank you.

Are there more questions this time? I hear your questions when I am not with you and yet when we come together there is silence. (Laughter)

Lilian: I was thinking: we were talking about fear and love not long ago and I thought about my mother and she gets a lot of pain and anxiety and all the rest. That is caused through her fear. Am I right? (Yes) I know she is an old person but...

But let me say this to you my dear friend that in these last years of her life, that has been her learning, that has been the time that she has come closest to us, because of her pain.

Lilian: That's comforting to know.

Pain creates within the Spirit a knowledge which was lacking beforehand and although most humans would say, 'but we do not wish pain', I would say to them this: that the pain which they experience has been an opening of their Spirit.

Lilian: It's really comforting to know, because I find it quite difficult to cope for myself with her pain, but in turn I guess it helps me as well.

You also are learning as all of you are in your own ways. Yes, I did not promise you that life would be an easy pathway, but each difficult step helps to create that Spirit which you become, which you will take with you when you return home. When you see the wider picture of your life, you will realize that each one of you had something to learn. For you my dear friend it has taught you much tolerance, tolerance which you would not have accepted from another direction. That is true, is it not?

Lilian: Yes, very, very true.

Yes, so when you are feeling low in Spirit, then you also must go within, you must grow and be replenished for your own sake and for that loved one on whom you are giving so much love, because that is what you are doing. Although you probably would say to me that is not always the way I feel, I say to you it is done with love.

Lilian: Yes, humanly one feels rather drained at times.

Yes, that is being human, but if you could see your Spirit then you would see how it grows.

Lilian: I had sort of guessed it was helping me as well.

Yes, again I say to you my dear friend: go within. (Thank you.)

Sara: Salumet, is it true that the clearer our vision and the more we attune to Spirit, the easier our passage in life? Although it will never be easy all the time, is it true to say that it's a lot easier to bear and it may not be so painful as perhaps it has been with a more limited view?

Yes. Let us say, you are all but as children. Would you send a child away from you without saying to them that they must have daily contact with you in order that you may guide them, that you can inform them? (Yes) What is so different from the Spirit being connected to the Source of all life?

Sara: Yes, that makes perfect sense.

You need to have daily contact if you wish to have direction in your lives.

Sara: Yes, that's really clear, thank you.

They are simple words my dear friends, but if only each one of you would devote that time each day, then no matter what troubles, no matter what pitfalls in life you may encounter, you will always have that love and that ability to cope. That is the secret of life, that connection to that Creative Force. After all you are part of it, therefore all knowledge is available to you.

Lilian: Thank you very much—a very interesting evening.

I will leave you this time. I hope my words to you have brought anew to you, a little more discussion for you about a subject which we have touched upon before, but I feel that each time we return to some topic that your understanding is much greater. As always I leave you my dear friends with my heart filled full of love for you all. I am always close by and I will always endeavour to help you whenever possible.

(Thanks + farewells)

~22ND September 2003~

Before Salumet spoke, one through Sue talked a bit about our prayers for those who are ill and how sometimes illness and pain can help the Spirit to soar. Therefore can be part of our learning. They then took us through the following 'healing' exercise:

Picture and visualise what you perhaps would call a crystal ball, but it is the colour blue. Visualise this orb resting upon your knees. Feel the power emanating from its sides—a healing power, the warmth and the vibrations and the music coming slowly from it—the music of healing. Imagine you have lifted this orb, so that it is in front of your eye—your psychic eye. Look deeply into this blue. You should see the colour moving—it should not be static. Allow yourself to permeate this colour, until you feel the orb expanding, until you feel the orb envelope all of your physical body. Feel the colour, hear the healing music flow down and across and through. Now when you feel that you are surrounded by this power, I ask you to think of someone close to you, or possibly just an acquaintance you requires some spiritual comfort or healing, help or guidance. Take a few moments to ask mentally for this person or peoples to be visited this night. Now imagine the cloak you are enveloped in, is being lifted slowly, slowly from your human body, until finally you no longer feel its presence around you. Now push, push the orb towards the centre of your room, until you can imagine each one reaches the centre and becomes one enormous moving spiritual orb of healing energy. Release your orb, let it become one with the others and feel it vibrating throughout this room.

This orb contains love, forgiveness, precious thoughts—it cannot now be divided—all here in this room are of one healing mind. You have each given to all those named mentally this time, your thoughts of love. Those among you, who help our world through healing, have given more than you could imagine. This orb I repeat, can never, never be destroyed, altered, fractured or disposed of in any way. This orb will remain as a monument to everything you have given this night. From the very bottom of our hearts, our minds, our Spirit, we thank you. May each and every one of you be touched with glory of love, be protected, guided, revered and may each day of your physical life until you reach our realms, have an inner core of deep happiness. Never don't believe that deep inside of yourselves, is a glowing warm deep core of utter joy, which will one day envelope you and remain with you always. I thank you for allowing me into your home and into your hearts. (Thanks expressed)

Salumet then spoke:

Good evening. (Greetings)

I hope my dear friends that the healing words that you have listened to, has helped you in your understanding. It has taken a little while this time for me to speak with you, because the physical voice of this instrument was disturbed and was picking up that there was a little unrest with one amongst you. I will endeavour to help. I will say to you this time my dear friends: so many times we hear from your world: 'What can we do to be of service to Spirit?' So many times in this, your past year, I have discussed with you self-development and what it is you need to achieve, and my dear friends you have achieved much. But I would like to place the question back to you: How best may you serve Spirit? Do we have any replies?

Sarah: By giving time to Spirit, that's one thing.

George: I would say by going forward, by not being static, by seeking, by helping, by loving.

So we are saying: time, action. Do we have more?

Paul: I would say by being ourselves, knowing ourselves, and being.

Yes. There is but one word which I believe my friends will cover all of these things: Simplicity.

I have spoken to you about honesty and what is honesty but being yourselves. Simplicity covers many areas, but it covers just being. It covers quiet times given to yourself in order that the Spirit within can grow. Simplicity is acceptable to all forms of action and words and deeds. Simplicity within your lives—and by that my dear friends I do not mean that your lives should be poverty stricken—in no way is that what my words mean. So many people in your world feel that to serve Spirit they must be without. That is not what Spirit is about. You deserve abundance in all things my dear friends; abundance of love, abundance of joy, abundance of all that the Great Creator can provide. You are Spirit and in being Spirit you are part of that abundance. Do you understand my words? (Affirmed) It sounds like a contradiction once more, but it is not. Too often my dear friends you human beings are tied by fear, tied to money or shall I say the lack of it. Have I not told you that especially in healing, you should ask and then you should know it will be provided. In the same way, in all areas of your life, does this occur. For example if you give with love and from your heart you will receive back many times, because that is given with unconditional love. Do you see where I am coming from? (Yes) Do you understand my words that there is nothing wrong with having possessions, because it means it is a return of the love that you have given out to others. In the same way, you are bound by fear in relationships, and we have spoken of this recently where you must allow your fellow human being to be free to decide what is best for them; and this is where honesty comes into play. So, in all areas of your life, think of the word 'simplicity'. Would anyone like to comment on what I have said?

Sara: I would agree and since I've had children I have returned to the simplicity of the child more—more simple now than I was 20 years ago and it's definitely the best way to be. I know I've much to learn but I do feel that the simpler approach to life is the happiest.

Yes. And of course as I have said in past times, children are great teachers of life. If you will observe children, they are open about what they desire, they give love freely, and of course I hear some say, 'but children can be cruel'. Children will re-enact what they have learned, but the purity of the child within is what you should try to achieve. Think about this word 'simplicity'. As in all things that I have brought to you in these last few months of this earthly year, it has been mainly for your own self-development, because only when you understand yourself will you be able to help others. Are there any questions please?

Sarah: Yes, you were saying there's no harm in having possessions. Some people have an awful lot of possessions and they don't need half of them and they are not always—I feel sometimes with some people that all of their possessions are greed. They're probably having more things round them because they're fearful, but surely they haven't received all of those possessions because they have given of love?

I understand. Try not to be too judgmental, but yes, of course, there are people within your world who have a love of material things. Of course there are and we understand this fully, but you must not judge all people in that way. There are those within your world, and after all there have been many great teachers who have trodden this earthly pathway in positions of wealth and power, because they have been able to help the masses rather than the minority. Do you understand? (Affirmed) So look again at the wider spiritual viewpoint. I say this to you repeatedly my dear friends, not because I feel you need to be constantly reminded, but because these things are of importance.

Sarah: So even some of the—I can think of some of the leaders who I might have thought were being greedy and taking from the poor of their countries, maybe in some sort of way they actually are helping people.

Yes, yes, it is not for you to judge.

George: Perhaps I could mention Andrew Carnegie, (Yes) who became extremely rich, but he used that richness to good effect. He established many libraries, he established foundations and the Carnegie Hall in America, where many performances are given in culture. So perhaps if you have great wealth it perhaps matters what you do with it (Yes) and there have been very wealthy people who have created a better circumstance on the Earth as a result of it.

Yes, you will find if you think upon it, that these people who give unconditionally, will always receive. There is nothing wrong with abundance, it is the love of these things which is wrong—the love of material goods for self—that is another subject, but what I wish you to know and understand is that the thought should be ever present that whatever you need in life is available to you. If your heart is open, your love is given unconditionally, then wealth of many types, not only material things, will be yours, and that is what you are entitled to by the very fact that your love is given from the heart. All that is spiritual is simple, all that comes from the ego is difficult; perhaps that is a way to remember.

Sarah: So you're saying, what you need and not what you want...

Yes, always give thanks to that Creative Force for all that you are and all that you have and have that knowing that all can be yours. Do you understand what I am trying to tell you? If you do not, let us discuss it now. Is anyone unsure of my words?

Sara: It is the attitude that matters, that we have one of grace and humility (Yes) and gratitude and still a simple approach to life.

Simplicity inasmuch as you think as a child.

Sara: Yes, we do what we love with as much joy (Yes) as we can.

And always with thanks. (Yes) Yes. Remember that all that you have, all that you have attained comes not only from yourself, but from that outer Creative Force which encompasses you all.

George: I think I can see that there has to be wealth in the world and that wealth can help in the good way forward.

Yes. In all of the ways that everything that has been given to this world, even shall we say nuclear power, which has been misused, it also has its purpose in life when used properly. I believe you are beginning to see its usage within your medical fields. (Agreed) Yes, that is the way and the purpose that it should have been used when it became known to mankind, but we will not go into the abuses that mankind has created, because this we have spoken of on many occasions. But this my friends has been a time for all of you, for knowledge and I hope upliftment in some of your lives, in a way that has not been available to you before. I know that most of you feel that you have come and travelled a pathway of Spirit which has taken you forward; a pathway which none of you will now be able to leave.

Sara: Yes I think that's true! (Agreement + chuckles)

As always I give thanks to you all for listening to my words and I know that when I leave you by saying that you are simple people that will not be offensive to you. (Laughter) I leave you as always in my love, in the knowledge that always I am close by, although mostly I am unaware to most of you, but always the light of love shines brightly on each one. (Thanks + farewells)

~13TH October 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

I was most interested to listen to your words before this meeting, words spoken about heaven upon this Earth. Your conversations my dear friends are always of interest to us, because it shows how much knowledge that you yourselves have retained. I would say this to you my dear friends: Always since the existence of this planet has there been a little of what you call 'heaven' upon this Earth. In many ways has this existed, mainly through those souls who have incarnated, who have brought the joys of Spirit to this world. Those human beings who are looked upon, who exude love and knowledge and understanding, they are heaven upon your Earth. Also there are the words of what you term ‘the ancients’ which have come to light over many eons of time and of which you humankind are so fond of rewriting. The spoken word as well as the written word has always been a powerful tool of communication for mankind. I would say this to you my dear friends: What do you suppose would be your heaven upon Earth within your present time? Would someone care to answer?

George: We are very fortunate to have your teaching on this and it was during the first few months when you came to us that one asked the question: ‘Is it possible to have heaven on Earth?’ Your answer was simple and apt and in the affirmative. Much later, quite recently, the subject came up again and I think it was about the time you were talking to us about Moses and the idea was then elaborated upon and yes, heaven is to do with our stronger soul connection. I think the implication was that the stronger that connection becomes, the more ‘heaven-aware’ we are. I could also say that it is such a wonderful Earth and one can always look to the wonderful aspects of it and see it as heaven, or heavenly.

Yes. Heaven comes from within—this you know. To those of you with some degree of spiritual knowledge, it is easy for you to see around you many aspects of this Earth which is endowed with heavenly creation, but to the majority of Earth-kind, they are still focussed in this time of your evolution upon the disputes of mankind, the greed within your world, the many ‘disasters’ as you call them, and in doing so they overlook how much mankind has grown—they overlook the beauty and the joy of existence. The beauty and the joy of existence belongs to each individual, it is an individual attribute which each one of you carries within. Each one of you my dear friends, I have told you before, is like a beacon of light; so each individual one is a little part of heaven upon this Earth. Do you see what I am telling you? (Yes) If each individual light was to join together to make one, then indeed that vision of heaven upon this Earth would indeed be much brighter than at any time of earthly existence. Many would dispute these words, many would say, ‘but there is so much hatred, so much greed, so much violence’. But as you do my dear friends, they will reach a point when all of those things become insignificant. What is important is that the light shines from within, in order that that sea of light can flow further and further upon your Earth. Do you agree? (Agreed)

George: We are so fortunate and yes, one always has the feeling these days that we are in a position to help others to be as fortunate as we are, and share in that.

As indeed you do my dear friends. Each one of you, as I have told you before, has a task and a pathway upon this earthly plane at this particular time, wherefore you are giving out spiritual light to many, and indeed that is your heaven upon this Earth. It is an odd word to have, to use the word ‘heaven’. What is heaven? It is not a separate place; again I repeat: it is within.

George: As with everything else, I think I am probably right to say that it has a strong connection with perception.

Yes, indeed. Mankind is good at perceiving all kinds of issues, all kinds and manner of things, which he feels to be the Truth, but mankind must almost always recognize that his perceptions at times are not always the true ones. Would you agree? (Agreed)

Sarah: As you’ve said on many occasions, we can’t see the full picture, so we can’t perceive the whole. Exactly. You are limited in what you can see, but that does not prevent you from extending the knowledge that you give and the knowledge that you are trying to obtain. We are but a small number this time my dear friends (5 sitters)

George: Yes, sorry about that.

No, if but one is to listen to these words, then my task as always is taking place, because I know each one will continue to give out these words.

George: Yes, I’m sure our transcripts and recordings will continue to be made available to many.

You, I know dear friend, are aware of how many people that these words are reaching to; with your machinery today words travel in an instant.

George: Yes, so hopefully the small numbers here will not detract from the ultimate mission.

No, of course not, but I will give you the opportunity this time, if you so desire, to ask any questions of me. (Thank you!)

Sarah: I was going to say, when you said can you think of heaven on Earth, I was going to say, whilst we are here and I think that's probably because we join together and become—how can I say it?

Light beings.

Sarah: Yes, perhaps that's a good way.

Yes, I thank you for those words.

Lilian: I always feel uplifted after our Mondays.

But you do not need my presence to feel that.

Sarah: It's always nice! (Eileen then coughed)

Forgive the noise, I will try to deal with it. Have you more questions?

George: Could I refer back again to the question of genetic crops, genetic modification. (Yes) You have talked about this before, time has now moved on and I think mankind has been dabbling, shall we say, and it is beginning to be realized that there are all sorts of disadvantages: certain types of insect are being killed off by crops and there are many disadvantages being realized. People tend to be taking sides in this two-sided issue and fortunately for us the big supermarkets seem to be not accepting genetically-modified foodstuffs or foodstuffs prepared from genetically-modified crops. Their attitude is being influence by customers, so perhaps there is a little people-power here showing itself. But it's become a complicated situation and now that we are a little further down that road, I was wondering if you had any further words for us. And the other thing is we are in danger of altering the pathway of evolution, I think, if we seriously take this road. Have you any further comments?

Yes, I thank you for your words my dear friend. Be careful that you are not making judgement.

Remember that all of mankind has been endowed with this freewill. I have returned to this on many occasions, but whatever mankind chooses to do that is the pathway that each individual has chosen. You know that our world is constantly trying to influence for the better, but we cannot interfere in a life—that is for the human being to judge and follow what he feels within his heart, whether you judge it to be right or wrong. So firstly I would say this to you my dear friend: Refrain from judgement, because what you feel to be right or wrong, creates within you a tension of conflict, conflict within your own heart. What you must do is to stand to one side and allow these issues—whether you consider them to be grave or not, you must allow each human being their own trail of conscience. You understand?

Lilian: Yes, that's quite a point.

Since this Earth has existed, mankind has made many errors, shall we call them, but also in that scope of error ultimately has come some good. You understand? (Affirmed) Therefore you must be wary of judging, because when there is conflict, ultimately there will come resolution. Does this make sense to you my dear friend?

George: Yes.

So I would suggest that if ever something goes against your grain of thinking, that you go inward and see the solution from within.

George: Yes and I imagine it's satisfactory to express our thoughts without getting upset.

Yes, you must always be true to yourself—that is your pathway, that is your true pathway, but what you must never do is to pass judgement on another, because you do not see their thinking, you do not see their emotion and what you may consider to be wrong, in their eyes it may be right. I know it is difficult and with your knowledge you can see that mankind has made many mistakes along the way, but that is not for you to judge. Again you need to see the wider scheme of life.

George: In some place people have destroyed crops which are being grown experimentally by others...

Yes, but what you sow you must reap. Remember whether they feel right or wrong, the time will come when they face their own decisions, when they must face themselves as to whether their judgement was right or wrong. Remember I have taught you there that there is always two sides: white/ black, fear/love; always there is the two-sided face to all of existence. That is why you must not judge.

George: I think destroying crops has to stem from the feeling of fear.

It is fear. Remember it is simple: all of existence stems from fear or love. That is why when people upon your Earth are disturbed and create disharmony, it is from an inner fear. Therefore what you must do is to send them love, surround them with love and in so doing, their thinking will change and then you have created that harmony upon this Earth, which will ultimately bring a little more of heaven.

George: Yes, you've brought us back to that very important motivation by fear or love (Yes) statement again. Do I see a third motivation here, one of greed?

You could call it greed, I prefer to say it is but an offspring of fear. You understand? (Yes) All of what I know you would term 'negative emotions' stems from fear.

George: Greed would be fear of poverty, yes I see.

Yes, you understand? (Yes) If you can keep those two thoughts within you, fear and love, you will see the purpose of all of mankind's actions upon this Earth. Does it not become more simple for you to look at it in that way?

George: It does indeed. You've brought us back to that very important balance. Thank you.

Sarah: Also, going back to the genetic crops, you told us Salumet that new things are influenced from Spirit, so more than likely the genetic modification—we haven't got it quite right—somewhere along the line it will be used for something, but we're not quite using it in the right way.

Yes, as in all things that mankind has abused, it has been because of the power of his thought that has prevented good within the world; but that is his right because he has been endowed with freewill that these things happen. We try to influence and we are mostly successful as your time of evolution goes along, but as in all things, mankind is still learning many things. After all, that is why you have agreed to come to this planet, that you may experience these two opposites of fear and love; that is basically what is happening.

Lilian: Talking of the crops that we grow, I was listening to a discussion the other day on our televisions and this farmer was into growing or planting crops or reaping them at a certain time, maybe when the moon was in a certain position and it was bright in the moonlight and so on. Would that help our crops, to sow them at a certain time? And would it also perhaps help the Nature Spirits?

This my dear friend—thank you for your question—this knowledge has been known in ancient times and mostly forgotten.

Lilian: And it's now coming back.

Always mankind in earlier times revered what they called 'Gods of Nature', which in effect is exactly what you have said, that they planted at particular times and they reaped at particular times in accordance with what they believed.

Lilian: They also spoke of the energy and I thought they seemed quite knowledgeable.

And of course your Earth energy in ancient times was much purer. There was not—how shall we say, spoilt Earth that mankind has reaped upon your planet. In those ancient times the Earth was more pure, because mankind had not abused it.

George: Yes and I rather fancy that the stone temples, like the Avebury Temple that I think has been in place for perhaps 5,000 years, (Longer.) longer, ah yes—I stand corrected. I think places like that were deliberately built into the countryside, because they had that powerful link with the Earth, with nature, with the Earth Spirits probably.

There are and always have been areas of Earth energy which are stronger than in other places—this is part of the Earth's creation. And yes, you are correct when you say that mankind at those times were much more aware of the Earth energy—they were much more aware of their own energy than they were today; it is a combination of factors. But there is nothing that mankind can do today that has not already been known to him. It is not new knowledge it is knowledge that is being renewed. You understand?

George: Yes and this does really take us to another question, but it links. Recently I was in Thailand and it's very much a Buddhist country and I was very much impressed with the gentleness of people and the strong respect for life and living things, which I think comes out of the Buddhist teaching. (Yes) It struck me just how much that one culture on the Earth today can learn from another.

That is how it should be. Mankind originally was not meant to be separated in these ways. Mankind has many cultures, mankind has many religions, but what mankind had in those ancient times was a respect for life, which has been lacking as time continues. That is one of the reasons that at this time in the earthly evolution, that many of us have returned to your planet, to bring mankind back to the roots of knowledge that he once possessed.

George: Yes, we haven't mentioned very much the Buddha and Buddhism, but...

It matters not what the title is, but the people have remained, if I may say so, close to what is within.

George: Yes, it occurs to me that that is a very important culture on our planet at the moment.

Yes, there are many areas where people are returning to far roots that have been neglected or forgotten, but which will now resurface with the influence that is coming from our world. Many cultures are being impressed with what has been lost to them in the past, but which is never lost, because you cannot lose that innate sense of life. You understand?

George: Yes indeed.

Well, my dear friends I hope that you have gained from our small discussion this time.

George: Yes, it's good that you make the point that all cultures are being influenced.

Yes. Names, countries, religions do not matter—it is what lies within; that is the part that we influence.

So I say to you this as I leave you all, my dear friends: do not fear for your future, do not be afraid of what you see as disruptive influences within your world, but be strong within the knowledge that you have, that the love that you feel can conquer all.

George: Yes, I think we're all much endowed with that feeling these days, thanks to you.

No, I say thank you to each and every one of you, because without your time and your dedication, these words could never go forward and for this I am eternally grateful to each one of you. I leave you now surrounded with my love—know that I hear your words, know that you are always safe within my heart.

(Thanks + farewells)

One followed through Sarah, explaining that they were sharing group energies with other groups at this time. This subject had come up in previous years and it seemed that occasionally energies from our group could be gathered and put to good use in other groups—it was explained that these energies were quickly replenished by us. One then followed through Eileen, who was a trainee 'gatekeeper'.

~3rd November 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

This time, although we lack in numbers, there is with you such an energy that completely fills this space. I hope that you can feel it too.

George: Yes.

Lilian: I can feel the peacefulness.

Margaret: Tranquillity. (Yes)

Paul: A stillness.

Yes, whatever word we use, at least you feel the energy.

George: Yes, it doesn't feel the same each time for me. Sometimes—I find it difficult to describe, but it always seems a little different each time.

That is part of your awareness growing. When first I came to you it was necessary that we had numbers to produce energy in order that my coming to you was a little easier, but now I think that you should know that no longer are numbers quite so necessary, that the energy that each one of you emits is enough for me to feel comfortable with.

George: Good to hear.

It is always good to join with you at these times. Of course, all of those others are within my thoughts, so although their physical presence may not be with us, indeed they are in Spirit. I would like this time my dear friends to say to you that as time continues—and you know that time to our way of thinking is not the same as your thinking—so my time spent with you is but a blink of the eye as far as time goes. But I have seen many changes, not only with you, but within your world and many of those issues we have discussed. But what I wish to say to you this time is that we are approaching a time within your world when there will be many challenges, there will be many challenges within the scientific fields, the medical world, but what will be the most challenging of all will be the changes within all of your religious groups. I mention those three groups only because they are a large part of your world, but there are many challenges in all areas of your living; but what will come with these challenges and new knowledge will also be the awareness of the spiritual that goes along with these changes. It will be but one small step, but I can tell you that from the next one of your earthly years, there will be the beginnings of change. I know that with your own thinking and feeling from Spirit that you will become aware, as all of your world will become aware of these many changes. But mankind, my dear friends, I will repeat to you, is progressing along the pathway that has been intended for you all. Not since your many ancient civilizations when they were keepers of much knowledge, will there be as much knowledge in the times to come; it will be on a parallel with those civilizations. You understand what I am telling you? (Affirmed) The knowledge that has been lost to humankind in those what you would call ancient times, is being reawakened, very slowly, but we will make sure this time that mankind will not destroy this knowledge again. But of course mankind has greater intellect in these ages. Mankind, as individuals, has more thinking power for himself, therefore he has in a way become a little more feeling than those in past times—those of knowledge allowed so many negative feelings and thoughts to interfere. But it will not happen again no matter how often you are told that mankind will destroy himself. That time is passing; mankind's spirituality must go forward. So my dear friends heed my words this time, because you are to the forefront of having this knowledge given.

George: It's a great privilege.

Lilian: And perhaps by passing on the knowledge you've given to us, in our own small way, this will help.

Of course—you are emissaries of Spirit, you have always been in your own way. You have chosen particularly this time to give of yourselves in order that Spirit may shine forth. You are beacons of light, even if at times some of you may doubt this, but of course you are still human with human problems and frailties, but that is not so important as that which comes from within. I hope and I know that you would agree with me. (Yes)

George: Yes, there's a feeling of strength within, there's a feeling that that has grown and is continuing to grow.

Yes and that feeling which you now accept so readily is what is awaiting mankind on this planet. When all of humankind can accept their true selves, then there will be change, and we see it happening now. Put to one side earthly troubles—there always has been and there will be for some considerable time many difficulties in your world, but like a cancer that is known to you in your world, knowledge will grow. Mankind will accept and mankind will become free from the bondages of earthly life. But it is a slow progress, there is much for us to do, but it is being done. Have you any questions this time?

Paul: I was just thinking, these challenges you mentioned coming to the doctors and the scientists and the people—will these challenges be there partly to encourage all this new rediscovering of the knowledge that's been lost?

Yes, the challenges that they will face will make them stop and think. Not only will they feel challenged, but the realization will come to them that the purpose of life has more to offer than at first they have accepted. The spiritual aspect of life will not be denied; that is their purpose in trying to deal with the challenges that will be faced.

Paul: Yes, because I think I'm getting a much better understanding of challenges really, because these challenges are very, very lovingly given, I think, to encourage us to grow.

Yes. I think in your world as it is now, that the word 'challenge' to many would mean difficulties and troubles, but yes my dear friend, challenge is there in order for the Spirit to grow. You already know that many of the troubled times that each one of you have encountered have been those times when the Spirit has shown itself and become much stronger. (Thank you.)

Lilian: I think we have seen challenges already in our Christian religion.

Always in your world of religions there has been many troubles, always there have been challenges there. But the time will come—it only takes one mind, one thought for that goodness to make itself known. And as I have said, it is coming and mankind thinks for himself—he is no longer down-trodden in the same way, to the same degree as he was in times gone by. You understand? (Affirmed)

George: I think you have indicated along the way, that in addition to your teachings which has been wonderful, there have been other influences which are all contributing to this road to a better planet. Would I be right in thinking that the 'bible code' of which we know a little more about now, would I be right in thinking that our understanding of that, will also make a contribution to the way forward?

Yes, why my dear friend, do you suppose that these things surface at a particular time? It is not by accident.

George: Yes, that one indeed has surfaced at a particular time—as was prophesised.

All I would say to you, all things of knowledge have their time. It has not been by accident that these things have been made known. I could sit here with you, I could look forward, I could tell you many things, but always since I have come to you my intention has been to try to teach you to find yourselves, to help you in your understanding of my words and to make you look within to find those answers for yourselves, because all lies within you. I have told you many times, in fact sometimes I understand the word in your language which says 'repetitious'—I begin to feel that I know that word well. (Chuckles) But I do not apologize for it, because each time I have repeated my words for you, I have seen your light grow and I am sure that you would agree with me that since we first met you are different human beings? (Agreed) It always gladdens me when I come to you, how much warmth and love is extended towards me because although so much is known, when those of us come to your world come to speak to many, always when we enter this denseness I might call it, there always is that little uncertainty. That may sound strange to you my dear friends, but when we come from our world to this denseness, we are also embroiled within that atmosphere. Can you understand? (Silence) No you do not, so we will leave it there—but I can see how much brighter you are.

Lilian: Would it be that the welcome that we feel for you, helps you through that density?

Of course. Like I said when I came first this evening that it is now much easier, that the numbers of people within the room to create the energy that is needed, it is now not quite as necessary, because my transition in coming here is so much easier. It is now very comfortable for me to use this one as an instrument, because, and again you will not fully understand the process of using a human being as a voice from our world—there were many things to be adjusted from our side and also to make sure that any instrument used was kept safely and comfortable throughout their usage. But that is not something that we need to discuss, only that you know that always I have felt your love, but never as strongly as I do these days and as always that love energy makes it so much (more) comfortable. Are there any questions this time?

George: I wonder if I could pursue a little further the bible code and rightly or wrongly I have written to Michael Drosnin who has written two books on the subject and hopefully we might liaise/communicate with him. He is very knowledgeable amongst people who know something of this. The code itself indicates that there is a key to further unlock the book that's sealed within the book (Yes) and this key seems to be in the form of a stone obelisk now submerged beneath the land. Also there's mention of a steel container and this is on the shores of the Dead Sea near a village called Mazra. He was talking in his latest book about using scientific equipment to locate this key. I suggested it might be better to endeavour to locate it through either Spirit communication or dousing. (Yes) I wonder if I have given him a reasonable suggestion?

I will say this to you my dear friend: There will be communication between you—that is for sure. There is a purpose in not finding the key that you speak of. Again I will say there is a time for all things. It will happen, but I tell you not yet. I would say to you that your suggestion to him, those would have been my words. (Thank you.) If he needs the answer then he must approach it from the spiritual aspect. You can spend much time, much energy, much money in your world, but until the time is right for you and from us in Spirit, it will not happen. But I would say that he is being influenced.

George: He says in his book that he does not believe in a God or something to that effect, but I rather think he's making an unfair assessment of himself. He seems to be very well motivated so far as I can make out.

Do not judge him my dear friend. Although he feels he does not believe, that makes no difference to us in the world of Spirit. We choose those instruments who can best serve our purpose. Whether they believe or not, it is down to the spiritual energy within, as with all instruments, and I am sure you have read of many, who have resisted the work that they were meant to do.

George: This particular one seems to me very well motivated to help the world as much as he possibly can. He has a good heart, but sometimes the thinking interferes—but he is being influenced, because these things must be known, but at the time that is right for all people.

George: Could I also mention the scientist Eliahu Rips who has worked out the computer programme for seeking out the code. I'm sure he has been very much influenced from Spirit.

That is almost like the challenges I speak of. Do you understand? These challenges although it is of the Earth, it also comes from Spirit. You understand? (Silence) No, you do not, but we will leave it there, because all who are chosen to bring forth the wonders of our world to mankind, are being influenced in many ways. That is what matters, that what they do—that is why so often they seem committed individuals, because they are being influenced from our world to do the work that they feel is of the Earth, but indeed is of spiritual nature—because these thoughts are necessary for humankind to understand what is about to take place. It is a knowledge that has been kept from you for very good reasons, because mankind, to put it simply, has not been ready for these revelations.

George: Yes, I appreciate that we must be able to handle whatever knowledge comes to us.

Yes. If it comes too soon, then mankind of course would deny or ridicule, because those feelings are also within the human nature. So, the time must be right for them to be acceptable. You understand?

George: Yes, yes, I see that.

But it matters not whether the individual believes or does not believe, as long as the purpose of the work is taken up and done with dedication and that the wider knowledge be given to all; and that is what is happening here. But I commend you for your words to him.

George: Thank you. Could I mention one other whom I met recently? A lady known as Vincentai who lives at Ventor on the Isle of Wight and I understand she had a past life as a priestess of Atlantis and her high priest comes to her in Spirit. She is a clairvoyant and clairaudient and has managed to draw a picture of her high priest. I rather felt this was—well you've told us before that meetings are never by chance—but I had a very strong feeling that this meeting was meant.

Yes, always the pathway you tread will bring you encounters with those people who you should meet at that particular time. There is a purpose for you in that meeting. There is a purpose for you my dear friend in all of the communications that you have made. After all, you are the keeper of many words. You need to have association with many and varied intelligences, and those that you have come across are not just human beings, but human beings who are also on the spiritual pathway. From now on in your lifetime, the people that you encounter will always have a purpose for you. It may not be recognizable to you what that purpose is, but it will be there.

George: Yes thank you. Yes, I really have a strong feeling with that one.

Yes, that lady can supply you with quite a lot of knowledge if that association were to continue.

George: We have spoken of exchanging knowledge.

That lady can supply you with quite a lot of knowledge, if the association were to continue.

George: We have spoken of exchanging knowledge.

Yes, that is the purpose behind it all, that words be given, but she can give to you knowledge that you have yet to begin to wonder about. Although you are widely read, she can give to you more than you already know.

George: Our sources on the subject of Atlantis are very limited (Yes) and she would appear to be a possible source.

Yes, she will bring to you a new aspect of living in those times.

George: Thank you, that's exciting news.

Because your knowledge and the need for knowledge is great, that is why you are being given, and make no mistake my dear friend that you are being lead in all of these directions.

George: Thank you. It's nice to have confirmed that.

Now I feel that I have spoken enough words for you this time and I feel that as I leave you with our dear lady friend that a little time be given to sit and feel those who wish to come close to you. And once again I say, whatever you feel, share with the others, but I ask only that as you speak that your voices remain quiet until this instrument...

Salumet stopped speaking before finishing that sentence, so we said our thanks and farewells. After sometime there was a rescue through Eileen, before we closed as usual.

~10TH November 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

I hope that you can feel how much peace surrounds you this time. (Affirmed) I have refrained from speaking in order that this peace should encompass you, each and every one. I feel that some are in need of this. We will, if you like, begin this time with any questions that you may have and then, my dear friends, it would benefit you all that you go on an inward journey to discover what each of you has to offer in this group. So, if you have questions this time I will endeavour to answer them for you.

Sarah: Last week you wetted my appetite Salumet. You asked us if we understood the fact that you were embroiled in our denseness when you came to us and we said that we didn't understand. Did you not tell us because we wouldn't understand or because you felt it just wasn't necessary to discuss that?

We have discussed briefly about entering the atmosphere of your earthly planet. You know that the vibration of both the instrument and those who come to you must be attuned. The density I speak of is indeed quite dense as far as our own vibrations go, but I believe that you all know a little about the conditions which we encompass when we use an instrument upon the Earth. Sometimes it can be quite uncomfortable, but that is why from our side of life many adjustments must be made.

George: So it is an uncertainty of attunement—would that be true?

Yes. Always you might say it is experimental. So many factors are there to be overcome at times. It depends sometimes upon the instrument and how well we can use them. There are so many factors that I do not believe at this particular time you would fully understand, but only to say to you that many more adjustments are made from our side of life.

George: We are just so grateful that this is all encompassed.

That is why my dear friend, it is of the utmost importance that each one who comes together is in attunement. That is why at times when you sit within this Temple of Love that you feel as one. You have all experienced that not-knowing of self when you are within this room: you become part of a whole, each one as important as the other. That is why I will be eternally grateful to you all for your love and your devotion which allows me to come to you. Without that love it would be much more difficult—still possible of course, but not quite so comfortable. You understand? (Affirmed) I hope that answers your question.

Sarah: Yes, thank you. It's just when you didn't say anything last week, I just wondered.

You under-estimate your own power of understanding, but that is a human frailty that mankind always doubts, but that is part of his makeup.

George: There was something else you said in relation to the air beings: I think you said they were rather concerned about the way we are disturbing the atmosphere or something to that effect. A number has been bugging me for more than a year now: the number 747. The Boeing 747 is a much used passenger jet airliner, which disturbs the air and I just wonder if I'm being prompted to ask a question about the ways we disturb the air and adversely affect the air beings?

Yes, of course, all who look after this planet have had so many concerns, not only the air beings, but the Earth beings, the water beings—all forms of life. This planet has for so long been one of unrest, of disturbance, of mankind being lost in the darkness of time—but all of that is changing, as I have told you previously. But what we have not spoken of yet is about the vibration of letters and numbers. Do you recall that some time past, we began to speak of the vibration that each name holds? (Affirmed) Yes. This is part of the answer, but it is not yet something that we will discuss fully, but it is a subject which in a little more of your time, we will discuss in order that your understanding is greater. You would be correct in feeling that these numbers do have some affect upon the air, as do many other of your numbers. I am sure that you are aware that there are people in your world who hold much to each individual number that is known to you—in the same way that the name that has been chosen for you has some meaning in your vibrational field.

George: So there's no real connection between that particular number and our jet turbine airliners which are clearly disturbing the atmosphere very much.

I would not say that one particular number, but numbers do have effect.

Sarah: So going back to our names, you say we choose our own names...

You influence them.

Sarah: ...and that is because of the vibration: it is the vibration that helps us to choose these names. Is that right?

It is the vibration which you wish to enter into, in the same way that you choose the parents, not because of the people that they are, but because they can provide the situation that the Spirit needs.

Lilian: Would that be the why in some cases the name is handed down through generations?

Yes, because the Spirit is an aspect of the same Spirit, but it is a subject which we will go more fully into with more detail when I feel that your understanding is a little greater. You must know and understand that all energy has an effect upon the rest of the energy field in some way. In the same way as that each one of you enters this room which is full of spiritual energy as you come to it; as each one enters, that energy is changed. Can you understand?

Sarah: Yes, because different vibrations change it.

Lilian: Stronger?

Yes, that is why it is important that each one of you is attuned to the other, that the vibration may be raised and be a vibration that can be used for good. I am sure you must be aware at times when one will enter and there is disharmony within a group. (Yes) It is the same kind of thing, but of course I am simplifying it for you. In the same way that the numbers, the energy of numbers, can displace the air spaces. I hope that is enough for you at this time, but, as I say, it is something that we shall enter into more fully.

George: Thank you. Can I go back to the Dr Bark flower remedies? It was eight years ago that you spoke to us about that and at that time I think you intimated that Dr Bark was not fully aware of the particular energies that he was successfully using. Now, it has taken me a long time and I think we are talking about the two energies that come from the sun: the physical energy and the spiritual energy and I suspect that it is the absorption of the spiritual energy of the sun which is being so effective in Dr Bark's remedies. (Yes) Would you be able to confirm that?

I congratulate you on your willingness to dissect my words about that. Eight years may seem a long time to you, but my friend it is not. That is why it is important that we go slowly with all of our information; that you collate the information, that you digest the information and that ultimately you can make sense of what I am telling you. That is part of your growth and your awareness. That is what I am trying to cultivate within you that your own awareness should grow to such a point that anything I tell you can be taken and dissected and understood. So my friend, I think you should say to yourself, 'well done'.

(Chuckles)

George: That also brings us something else. This places flowers in a rather special category and the gift of flowers from one to another.

Not special my dear friend, natural. There is not one thing upon this Earth that is special: all things are meant to be. You understand what I say to you?

George: Yes, my meaning was that the gift of flowers from one to another is also a gift of spiritual energy. Yes, as too is your breath, as too is your sun, as too is your Earth and water, and all things are spiritual gifts to you.

George: Yes, yes, I see.

Paul: Neither of them are special, I suppose, they are all special.

Mankind only feels things are special when he understands, but what mankind needs to understand is that all of these come from Spirit for mankind to use to the very best of his abilities, and in order that the Spirit may grow in understanding as did this gentleman who was influenced from Spirit. Remember he was influenced to do what he had to do in order to help others. Always my friends look to the wider picture of life, look inwards for your answers and you will find that anything that you do not understand will become so much clearer to you. (Pause) Now I feel this time that we have a little self-awareness to discover, that for each one of you, and I will leave this with our dear lady friend, that I would like you to go inwards and to look at each other person within this room and I would like you to feel what these other people have brought to this room, not only in this evening, but in all of the times that you have come together. Can you recognize the quality of Spirit that has travelled with you down the ages?

Sarah: When you say 'look' Salumet, you mean look spiritually.

Yes, always I speak spiritually. It may not be as easy as you think, but it is an exercise for your awareness and I say to you, there stands by you those who are trying to impress you. So not only are you looking inwards, but you have an outer impression as well. So my dear lady friend, (Lilian) I will leave it with you and for the rest of this time I will continue to work with this instrument. (Thanks + farewells)

We discussed our impressions. Several sitters got words associated with another, while others got more detail. One through Sarah then came through, giving a further exercise whereby we each had to sense who was with us from Spirit. We each had playful children and some could sense them tickling us or placing garments upon us. Finally another through Sarah came through explaining that when they were on Earth, they worked on people's feet and that they still liked to pop back and work on feet at times, in groups such as ours. We were all grateful to hear that our feet sometimes got free treatments!

Good evening. (Greetings)

As we come together this time I embrace each one into the love and light which is with you at all times. (Thanks expressed) As you are approaching another of your earthly years, I would like to put before you a question for you all to answer: There is something my dear friends that each one of you has grown to learn in this past year of your time. I wonder if you can tell each other what that is. Would anyone wish to begin this conversation this time?

Sarah: Did you say, 'what each one has learned this past year?'

Yes, about each individual self.

Lilian: Yes. Do you mean from your teachings or just in our everyday life something that we might have learned?

It comes from your living, but also from the words I have spoken to you.

Lilian: For myself, I can remember you said I would learn tolerance and I can see that and remember what you said which helps as well. Thank you for that.

But that is an individual lesson for you. What I wish you to think about is what each one of you has gained in this past year.

Graham: I think as a group we're beginning to look upon problems more from a spiritual point of view and we are looking for spiritual explanations more than we have in the past.

Margaret: I have learned a lot of patience.

Yes. So if I say to you my dear friends that each one of you and those also who are not present, each one of you has learned self-discipline. You would agree? (Agreed) Now I pose the question to you: In what way do you feel this self-discipline has taken shape within your own lives?

Sarah: Not so quick to judge anymore so I hold back in my negative thoughts. (Yes)

Margaret: Thinking of others and not yourself. (Yes)

Paul: I think it is in the arena of thoughts: carefully monitoring your own thoughts and trying to gain more control over them. (Yes)

Sara: Knowing when we need to go within. Knowing when it's important to control our thoughts. I think we have greater awareness of when they're not good, when the thoughts are going not so well.

But in that recognition you have done well, but do you see my dear friends how your self-discipline radiates throughout your living? In many aspects of your life this self-discipline shows itself to you in the way that you speak to others, as you say in recognition of thoughts that should be changed—all of these things in many, many areas of your lives; and remembers how different each one of your lives are, but still this self-discipline has been gained. I would say to you my dear friends that that is a step forward, which you should all be most grateful for, because those who come close to you have helped you to achieve this state of being. (Thanks expressed) Would you like to discuss any more about your own self-discipline with each other, or are you all perfectly happy to recognize that this is the achievement that has come to you?

Lilian: It is easy to see, for myself, where I have made a mistake.

Sarah: It also helps when you are speaking to others and you can see them perhaps going off on the wrong tack—if you say something and make them aware as well of the different view point, that is very encouraging.

Yes, always I have told you if you can touch but one other human being, then you have done well, and I can say to you my dear friends that each one of you have touched many people, many, many people, not only individually, but by the words that you have spread to others.

Graham: It brings a lot of pleasure to talk about these matters as well. It makes you feel as though you have something to contribute, whereas before you wouldn't have known what to say or wouldn't have been able to work out things in the same way that we can now. (Yes) And that I do get a lot of satisfaction from, since I feel I can say something from my greater understanding that can help somebody.

You have always contributed. Remember that even those who do not walk this pathway of light are still progressing, but it is the awareness that you speak of—when you are aware of the goodness that surrounds you, then it reflects back to you within your own lives. It is a mirror image of what you give.

Sara: I've learned a lot about the power of gratitude this year and I've noticed when I am thankful for more then obviously that does reflect—I have noticed that.

Yes, my dear friend, I have waited for those words from you for some time, because I would say this to you that of all of those within this room you are the one who has realized the benefits of gratitude, as you put it. All of you give thanks, but for you this has been the biggest step forward. Do you have any questions this time?

Graham: I was going to ask a question about retrospective prayer. I was reading a book about the Irish famine two centuries ago and we don't really understand time. I was wondering that if awful things have happened in the past, whether a prayer for those people in this age would help people in previous ages or whether the prayer that we have already given has already gone through and the situation would have been improved by that?

Yes, I understand your question. Of course you cannot alter time as you know it upon this Earth, but those people who have suffered because of times past, would benefit from prayer now. You know full well there are many within our world who still suffer from the effects of earthly life, so in that way the answer is both yes and no. You cannot alter what has gone, but you can help those people who still exist from that time. Do you understand?

Graham: I didn't know what you were going to say—that's a wonderful answer. I understand what you're saying, yes, so I will continue to try to do that. (Yes)

Sarah: For those who've gone on further who are not obviously still suffering, because they realize they need not suffer any more, (Yes) the prayers really wouldn't make much difference to them?

There is no need to give the prayers for them, because they have the self-knowledge and they will have moved forward in whatever way is best for them and of course once you have become more accepting, then those from our world are able to help more. But of course, all prayer as you call it, and after all prayer is but thought, is always registered and used in the correct way for those in need. So, even if you are not aware of what your prayer is achieving, you must understand that those thoughts are being utilized for the very best purpose that there is.

Lilian: A story that was in our news this last week: a group of people on one of our tropical islands on this planet and a group of people from this country—quite a few years ago, one of the ancestors of a missionary had gone to the island, the island people had killed and eaten this man, but now the ancestors of those people got together to say sorry and meet one another. Would that help the people who had gone on into Spirit?

It would help only those who give the prayers. You cannot erase what another has done. You must accept responsibility for your own lives. This you all know and understand. You cannot, how shall we say, you cannot be responsible for what others have created or what others have done. You can help with your prayers, as I have just said, but you cannot change what has passed; and those who created the situation are the only ones who can change it. You understand?

Lilian: Yes I do—just that the ancestors thought that if they said sorry for past deeds, it would help them. It would help them, because in what they are doing is done for good. So, the thinking behind the deed is good for them. You understand? If you are not clear my dear friends let us speak of this more, because although your prayers and your thoughts go for good, there is only so much help that you can give to a Spirit who is in need. The Spirit must recognize for himself what past deeds need to be seen and understood, before that pattern can be changed. You understand?

Sarah: I do understand, but if when something bad has happened or not perhaps as it should be...

May I stop you my dear friend?

Sarah: Yes please.

Let me just kindly remind you that you are prejudging a situation.

Sarah: I know what you are going to say, yes! What I'm trying to say is: you're saying that the situation cannot be changed—you can change a situation when the Spirit has recognized what's been done, then that can be changed, but surely, what has been done, has been done.

It cannot be changed what has happened in the past. All that can be changed is the thinking of the people involved.

Sarah: Ah, right, yes okay.

Is that clearer?

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

Always my dear friends, this is the difficulty of life that humankind is all too quick to condemn and to judge others. I do not say sorry to you for reminding you frequently about judging others, because you never can see the full picture of that life. You cannot make judgement upon another, unless—and here I will use one of your earthly expressions, 'you walk in that person's shoes'. Are there any more questions?

Sarah: I was thinking about the air Spirits and flower Spirits and all the rest of them. Why is it that they actually need to be seen, because if they are Spirit beings, why do we need to see them? Is that just we're getting into the right vibration that we can see them? (Yes) And if that is the case, there must be other energies that are about that we also can't see that we could see if we were in the right vibration. Is that right?

What my dear friend do you suppose that I am?

Sarah: You are energy.

And can you see me?

Sarah: No.

No. Let me go to the beginning of your questions and there are more than one. Those light beings that you speak of have no need to be seen, but the people of this Earth oftentimes desire to see and oftentimes those who have no knowledge see these light beings, because, as you say, they are tuned into that world of light at that particular time of existence; in the same way there are many within your world who see and hear those from our world whilst the majority of human beings do not. There are many factors involved here: It is whether the light beings wish to be seen, it is whether the human being is in the right energy field and, thirdly, what would be the purpose of the seeing. Do you understand? (Yes) Does it make it a little clear for you? (Yes) The light beings have no need to be seen—they just exist, they are, they are Spirit. It is up to humankind whether they desire or wish to see them, but as you well know, that would be almost impossible unless that energy of the human being was raised enough for this to happen. I would like you my dear friend if you would, to concentrate a little about the question that you have just asked of me. I think in your quiet moments, fuller answer will come to you.

Sarah: I think I was thinking that you said that everything was energy, (It is.) and therefore Spirit was energy and therefore I was thinking that the other things that there must be to see, because it is all energy.

Can you see your electricity?

Sarah: Not the electricity as such, but you sometimes see blue lights from electricity.

Yes, but mankind for thousands of years was unaware of electricity. So do you see what I am trying to tell you, that all of energy has always existed, it is mankind's awareness which is changing.

Sarah: Yes that's what I was thinking—there must be more things that we could see—perhaps it's more be aware of than see.

When your awareness is raised, indeed you can see and feel much, much more, but that my friend is down to each individual. How much they desire, how far they want to progress in their awareness. And after all, I could come to you for many, many of your earthly years and still you would be at the same stage of development. Without your participation, I could not make you become more aware. So, do you see that the responsibility lies within each one of you? (Agreed) How much you wish to see, to become aware of, is entirely belonging to you and your freewill.

Paul: We have to take the steps.

Yes. I can encourage you, I can try to uplift you, I can speak many words to you, but I cannot make you more aware than you wish to be.

Sara: And we have noticed this when we are parenting too. We can encourage our children (Yes) and we can show them the way but they make the decision.

Yes. Even as a young child you can see that freewill abounds. Yes, you are quite right. But what happens as the child grows older and comes to adulthood, they lose that intense quality of investigation. That is what happens with most people, that the eagerness of the small child slowly diminishes, until other aspects of living overtake that freedom of thinking that unspoilt energy which all small children possess. Do you understand what I am trying to say to you? (Affirmed)

Paul: Is it almost like when they reach adulthood they begin to think: 'well, maybe I've explored everything now—there's not that much else'—when in fact there's much, much more.

Unfortunately, the materialistic side of life begins to show itself and unfortunately for many, many people that is a way that takes you downhill, rather than up to an awareness, a growth of awareness. Unless within that child there is a strong link with Spirit, most children go on through, how can I say, influences of everyday life, to become less spiritual, which saddens us from our side of life, but at this moment in time of the Earth's evolution, that is the way of life; but slowly, slowly it will change.

Sarah: So some poor people, perhaps nomads or whatever, that is possibly why they retain more of their spirituality, because they have not been influenced by all of the commercial side of life.

Yes, they still understand that by going within they have many answers to their lives. You are quite correct in that assumption. I will leave you this time my dear friends. I hope that you will ponder my words this time, as I know you always do, but again it is something to recapture and to think about. Think of yourselves as that individual energy which belongs to a group energy, but if you wish to become more aware, then take your responsibility seriously. The more that you put yourselves forward, the more help we can give you from our side of life. I will leave you with our dear lady (Lilian) and let you feel or see or sense those or whatever is around you. Until we come together once more, I leave you with my love. (Thanks + farewells)

We sat quietly for some time, before Eileen brought clairvoyant messages for Sara and Paul from their Granddad.

~1st December 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

It is good to join with you again, to feel the peace which is with you all. As you approach your time of goodwill, I do not need to remind you of the love and support that you give to others. That my dear friends, comes to each one of you naturally, but I would like to kindly remind you, of all those people who are in need, not only in your world but in ours, particularly at these times, when families gather together and there is so much joy within your hearts. Remember those in our world, who are lost souls and who are constantly pulled back to your earthly conditions. Remember them my dear friends in your thoughts, because as you well know, it sometimes is easier for you to reach them, than it is for those in our world to come close, until they are ready to accept.

Lilian: Yes, it will be a privilege for us to be able to do that. Thank you for reminding us.

I know you do not take my reminder as any kind of reprimand—it is not meant to be that way, but sometimes on your planet, you can be absorbed by the suffering in your own world and sometimes forgetful that there are so many in need in ours.

George: Yes, we sometimes forget that suffering extends into Spirit.

Yes, if only you could be more aware of those lost souls, I am sure that you would understand our difficulty in helping them. They are constantly drawn back to the love of families, friends and all such conditions that attract them to others.

George: So these lost souls by being drawn, they would be very close to us, so to speak?

Yes, they are closer to your conditions than to our world. That is why it is so necessary for both sides to work together that these lost souls may be helped to go forward. It is not something that can be shown to others, but indeed my friends, it is a great effort on your part, when you help another lost in our world, who will and cannot recognise that the mists surrounding them can be cleared. It is important work, but not so many of your groups can understand or even can help. Therefore, because I know you so well by now, I know you will find it within your hearts, to extend the love that is your right. I feel it is time my dear friends if you have any questions, I will be most happy to answer them for you.

Lilian: Questions anyone? Paul, before you go on your travels?

Paul: I was just thinking about those lost souls. I suppose as we don't know them, we can't communicate with them directly really. Would one just try and generate general love and put it in the hands of those who then can direct it towards them?

Yes, in the same way as you need no emotion to sit in your circles and to whom we bring what you term, 'rescues.' It is the feeling and the giving of love and each one of you are quite capable of giving love to many.

George: And that love or prayer, that can help clear that mist around these souls?

Yes, they are emotionally tied to the conditions of this Earth, especially as I have said, at the times of gatherings, when families come together. There are so many in our world, who at this time, as you approach your holiday season, are crying for help; they are lost and they need help. That is why I feel it is appropriate for me at this time, to gently remind you. (Thank you.)

Sarah: Salumet, those who come back to us through rescues, how are they chosen? Some are still in quite a bad way when they come back—why do some come and some don't?

We know by their light, that they are ready to receive help. Therefore it is appropriate for us to bring them to you, even although they may still be in denial, their light shows that they are open to help. And of course, as you also know, there are those lost souls who are crying out for help, but they cannot free themselves. They need the understanding, not only of our world, but to hear the human voice of your world. You understand? (Affirmed)

George: There is one small query I would like to make with you in setting down a book of your teachings. I have made 2 small adjustments: Occasionally I have interred an extra word in brackets, to show that it has been added, to make a sentence run or read more smoothly and occasionally I have changed the word 'which,' to 'that.' The way our computer programmes are arranged these days into very modern English, seems to be the general format, which does not change the instruction/meaning of anything, but helps the flow of the sentence. I hope you have no objections to those small adjustments in presenting your words?

My good friend, let me say, I trust you completely that my words be known. It matters not that there are slight adjustments, provided the content of the truth be known.

George: Yes, that's what I felt, thank you for confirming that. In tapping the keys of my computer, I felt no little taps on my knuckles, while I've been doing that, so I was hopeful that all was well. (Chuckles)

But there has been breath upon your shoulder. It is well known what you have written and as I have said in the past, we are pleased with what you are achieving. It is part of your purpose, because you give the words readily, you tell the story as it is told, you do not embroider what has been taught to you. For this we will be always grateful to you.

George: Thank you, I can only say I do my best.

Lilian: You do very well!

George: I was searching for another question. Yes, you once said you bring us words from a source—I notice you didn't use the expression, from the source. I took that to mean that the Cosmos is a very large place—infinite, (Yes) and it would be inappropriate to see a single source—but one can only see aspects of an extended source in that. Perhaps I have worded that clumsily. Perhaps you have a better way of explaining that?

Yes, to speak of words of course, of course all words come from the Source, but to say the source, indicates that there is but one source, when in fact there are many areas within our world, within the Cosmos, which are quite apt for teaching. Remember when first I came to you, I told you that I was a conglomeration of beings? (Yes) That conglomeration of beings belongs to all of the source of all life and from many sources, come the words that I speak to you. Therefore I feel that it would have been inappropriate to use the term, 'the' source. Do you understand that?

George: Yes, I think I follow that.

All of existence—(Pause—voice changes)—we speak of very deep matters when we speak of infinity. It is an aspect of teaching, which is not available to you just yet. What we bring to you is what you need at this moment in time. Therefore when we speak of the source, we are using words freely, which at this time is not understandable to you. I am but one voice. I bring to you the words from many sources of Truth. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

George: I think we do yes. Thank you very much for explaining that.

Lilian: So there's much, much more that we shall learn as we go along?

As you go along, I will bring to you that which I know you are ready to accept. Of course there is always truth and all truth is already known to you, but sometimes you will not know that truth until you return home. So, never, never will you have full understanding of our world, but I hope that has clarified a little for you. (Affirmed)

Sarah: In speaking then Salumet, your voice changed quite considerably. Would that be because, although you are a conglomerate, and you say that you come from many sources, this is another source that's helping?

Yes, remember it is not only my words—I am but the voice. Therefore sometimes when deep questions are asked, there is an extra input of energy. If the voice seems to change, that is the only reason.

George: Yes, I imagine it was an extra input (Yes) and I think it has happened on several occasions in the past. It's nice to have that confirmation.

We are not always aware of the sound that you hear, because as I have told you, it is not the easiest of things to use a human voice, but we are always happy with what we have achieved with you; but it is most interesting to hear your feedback about such matters.

Sarah: It is always very clear your voice. It's excellent.

George: We're very pleased to hear every word.

Again, you say kind words, but there is no need. I am always overjoyed when I join with you at these meetings.

Sarah: The feeling's mutual! (Affirmed)

George: Can I also say, Graham here was sitting at his computer recently and he did a search on the word 'Salumet,' and a number of entries came up. Some we know about—one was connected with Michael Cocks in New Zealand with whom we have communicated, one was connected to Paul Bura, but there were several entries in European languages—Danish, German, in an Eastern European language. It's very nice that your name is getting around on the internet—we wondered if it's all coming from this source, or perhaps you now have another group somewhere, whom you teach. Either way, it's very good news.

Do you remember when first I came to you I told you that whatever words I told you of, would be confirmed in many other places? (Affirmed) Yes, the name really does not matter. What is important is the teaching and I know my dear friend, you have wondered why that particular name was chosen, have you not?

George: Yes, but you indicated to us that it was a salutation.

Yes, but also, if you sound the name—remember what I have told you that letters and words have energy—if you break the name into syllables, you will get an energy pattern, which is greater than the Earth itself. For example: Sah-ah-ah-oooh-eh. All of these letters have energy, which you will not be aware of at this time. It is something for you to consider this time.

Sarah: Those words are our vowels and they are in use all the time.

It is not the language or the letter, but the sound. The sound is worldwide in your language. You understand? (Affirmed) Sound it for yourselves and feel that energy, which is released within you.

Sarah: And is it stronger because those 3 are together?

They were chosen because they are recognised all over your planet. Not for one language, one nation, but for all.

George: Yes, I feel the Tibetan monks might well have knowledge of the significance of this, because they use such sounds very much in their ceremonies.

Yes, many sounds are used in your world, but these sounds have much energy. I know each one of you will try these sounds when you are alone, but to have the full effect, you should try it together. If you so wish, try it my dear friends and see how different you feel. Perhaps this time as I withdraw, perhaps you could try to see for yourselves what each one feels.

Lilian: Say it slowly?

Shout it from the world, not so much with the physical voice, but know that the sound reaches to the Cosmos, to all that exists, and see what you feel within yourselves. So my dear friends, with that I will leave you this time; I will leave you with our dear lady, who as always, gives of her time and support to these meetings. As always know that I am close by. (Thanks + farewells)

We then softly chanted the sounds as suggested and discussed what we felt.

~8th December 2003~

Good evening. (Greetings)

As I come to you this time, I hope that you are aware of those who join with me this time.

Lilian: Is anyone aware?

George: I think I usually feel the presence, the energy.

Sarah: I did feel a little extra energy, but I didn't relate it to others here, but maybe that's what it was.

No matter if your awareness is not raised this time, because it matters not that the effort has been made by those from our world, who wish to stand close to you. (Thanks expressed) They have been attracted to your love and your energy, which allows me to come to you. I am happy to allow them to share this time with you.

George: We are certainly happy—very happy. (Agreed)

Last time we ended with sounds that I hoped you would find most interesting. I have been most interested in your thoughts about this in these past days. What I wish to say to you this time is brief, because as you are aware, we have reached that time of your yearly calendar, when I usually withdraw for a little time.

George: Yes, well it's been a wonderful year.

Lilian: Hasn't it just! (Affirmed)

George: So we look forward to your return.

I can say that it will not be a long absence this time, but it is important that I return to where I belong, in order that we may evaluate all that has happened in this year of your time. (Thanks expressed) I can only say to you my dear friends, that I have felt nothing but love and joy within your presence. But it is important that we move forward in your new year and go forward with the teaching and the awareness that you have started upon.

Lilian: Yes, I don't think we can find words to say how much we appreciate it all.

Again my dear friends, I do not look for any thanks, because without you, I would not be here.

George: You are probably aware of our joy, in any event.

Yes, I would like to thank you for your thoughts this time, for all of those who are seeking help in our world. Your words have been taken and I can assure you my dear friends that help will be given where necessary.

Lilian: Can I just ask one question? (Yes) Does it matter—the way I did it was that I gave out thoughts, but would it be better to actually use the voice?

My dear friend, have you not realised again my words, that your thought is your most powerful ally?

Lilian: Yes, but I wondered if it would help those lost souls, as we call them, to hear a voice.

They are aware of your thought pattern. (Good.) It matters not really, which way you give your help, but your thoughts travel upon that energy pattern, which will be recognised more easily. Although those souls are lost, they are after all, still part of our world. Whichever way feels more comfortable to you, then I would say to each one of you, that is the way that you must help. You understand? (Affirmed)

Before I leave you my dear friends, I wish to say that next time you meet, there will come to you those to whom your earthly Christmas time, has some powerful meaning. Within that group there will also be some children. Therefore my dear lady friend, I will leave them in your gentleness, to give some help where necessary. (Yes) Before I wish you all much love this time, are there any questions that you feel that you must ask?

George: You're happy to take questions from us this time?

Just one or two, because those who come with me are waiting to impress you.

Sarah: Salumet, you said you are growing the same as we are growing during this teaching time. Will you always be doing this? I know you don't have 'time', but are you destined to do something else after you have learned what you need to learn?

That will be part of me. That learning time with you has been a choice made by many. At this moment of your time, all I can tell you is that this choice of being with you to teach, is indeed a growing time for me also; but when I say 'me', remember that I am not me, but many. Therefore it is not that I can use the 'I' to tell you what will happen, but what I will say is that my work upon this planet will indeed be ended when I leave you.

Sarah: Well, thank you for choosing us!

But the words that I have brought to you, will never end, but the actual physical use of an instrument will come to an end, when this instrument comes to our world.

Sara: I hope not for a long time! (Gentle laughter)

George: We have to observe that this is the general pattern of the past that this happens.

Yes. There has been a purpose, and remember my friends, that when first I came, I told you that we had waited a long, long time; in fact much longer than before even this soul who sits here was born. So you see—and again when we speak of time, it seems so long to you, but in fact it is not.

George: I think we are beginning to get a feeling for this. (Yes) In fact I wanted to ask a question about our concept of past civilisations (Yes) and we think of them as past civilisations, but that aspect really perhaps only relates to the physical Earth. (Yes) I imagine there are groups in Spirit who continue those past civilisations, and some reincarnate into later cultures for further learning and all that knowledge is still there in Spirit, it is not lost at all. I was going to ask you, is that a fair picture of how things are?

Yes, your words are admirable, but just let me simplify it for the others. Past, present, future are but one—this we have discussed briefly, but time as you know it, is but energy and energy cannot be destroyed. Therefore when you speak as you do, of course it is never lost. You of course think of time within your own earthly planet, but it is but a small, small part of all that is. Energy cannot be destroyed, therefore what has gone in your minds, indeed has not.

George: So it is almost an erroneous thought form to think of them as past civilisations.

Yes, but it is acceptable, because mankind's thinking is so limited, you understand? (Affirmed) But my answer to your question would be 'yes', in your thinking. I will leave it with you this time. I feel when these moments come and I have to leave you for a little while, I feel somehow your earthly emotion sometimes and I wish to say to each one of you, that although I may not use this instrument to speak with you, I am indeed with each one of you (Thanks expressed) at all times and know always as you call my name in need, I will be with you. (More thanks) So my friends, until we meet next time, I wish you all much love and happiness in your daily lives, and no matter what troubles you, know that I stand by your side. (Thanks + farewells)

Sarah: And we wish you well back where you belong.

Thank you.

Lilian: And we could say we wish you a happy Christmas. (Chuckles)

George: Yes and you've left us with so much richness, we hope that we can return some of that to you.

One followed through Eileen, giving personal messages to each sitter. She gave the name of Emma, stating that while on Earth she had also dedicated her life to spiritual work. We later deduced that this was the first of many visits of Emma Hardinge Britten: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8Uhx6zSqDU>

~12TH January 2004~

Good evening. (Greetings)

How good it is to join with you once again my dear friends. Although we have not joined together, always I have been with you. I would like to say to you this at the beginning of another of your earthly years that we have much to discuss, but also there is much time to be given to each one of you, in order that you may expand your awareness of all things spiritual. But for this time I would say, let us have just a small time in discussion and next time we come together I hope to bring you some words of upliftment and comfort. (Thanks expressed) So, you people of true trust and faith in all that is good, shall we begin? Are there any questions this time?

Lilian: Before we've questions, the lady, Sue who sits next to you sometimes, would like to say 'thank you'. She was telling me that she's called on you quite a lot and she would like to say 'thank you' for any help you've given her.

My love always surrounds all of you. Therefore my dear friends I do not need thanks. It gives me great joy when I see an individual who is struggling, when they know that I have been around and have tried to uplift and uphold them. That is all of the thanks that is needed.

Lilian: She does hope to come next time, maybe.

Bonds may not be broken once the connection is made. Although you may not physically be in this room, there is still the bond of love. As with some of you, that dear one has trials and problems—as you all have at times, but she will survive them. As each one of you knows, you have gained an inner strength which will support you in your times of need.

George: Yes, I think we feel that.

Yes, and it is becoming stronger within each one of you.

Lilian: And certainly the words that you've said to me from time to time have helped me, and thank you.

Yes, you are a kindly soul, who has harboured much hurt at times, but yes, you are growing stronger.

George: Could I refer back to a welcomed communicator who came through to us last month and she gave her name as Emma. She also reminded us that names are not important. Sometimes when they connect with our recorded history I feel it helps with those who might read these transcripts—help to focus their belief perhaps sometimes. From several things that were said, I rather felt that she might be the one who had a life as Emma Hardinge Britten, who promoted the world of Spirit in the early part of the last century. I was wondering if you'd be able to confirm that it was indeed she, or perhaps I ask an inappropriate question?

My dear friend, I am always happy to help you when I can, and yes, you know I do not come to you to give trivial words, but inspiration, philosophy I hope and many other things. But on this occasion I will tell you that indeed you are correct. That dear lady works tirelessly still for what you call Spirit.

George: That's nice to know. I'm sure that will be noted by a number of people.

Yes, she is always attracted by dedication to the work and that is possibly why she was attracted to speak with you here.

George: Yes, thank you for confirming that.

She speaks many eloquent words, does she not?

George: She spoke extremely well, we felt.

She captures her audience.

George: Yes, she gave the impression of being a public speaker.

As she still is. I hope that satisfies you my dear friends.

George: It does indeed. Thank you very much. I'd like to ask—it really stems from the commandments or commitments given to Moses and the one in particular: 'Thou shalt not kill.' The various countries of the world have had their forms of capital punishment which is obviously quite wrong. A number of countries have dispensed with that, some still have it because they feel it is protecting others on the planet and it's acting as a deterrent, but clearly one can see it, with the teaching that we now have, as transposing the problem from the physical world to the world of Spirit. I just wondered if you have any words for us about capital punishment?

Yes, I understand your question. Of course when that commitment was given, it was given on the understanding that mankind should always love his fellow man but of course, as you know full well, throughout your history on this planet, there has been much killing; killing in the name of religion, of war, of, as you say, justice—how then can we deal with such an issue? I would say this to you my dear friend: killing another human being cannot be justified. But we have to then think that for some upon this planet, they feel that what they are doing is for the betterment and the safety of others, so again we have to look at the motive for such killings. I would say to you, for everyone who has raised their hand against their brother, their fellow man, that it will be a source of regret when they come to our world. And of course, you are quite correct in your assumption that these problems do not end on your planets, but indeed come into our world, where many have these problems. Let us give you an example of one who is legally killed—and I use 'legally' lightly—by your institutions, by your governments, because they feel that they are protecting the majority of the people. Imagine the anger and the hatred of the one who is being killed and then think of the one who uses his hand to do such an act. That soul will come to our world still engaged with anger and hatred, which then has to be seen and recognized within our world. That soul will be lost in anger and hatred for some time. You full well know, you have had many rescues in this group, you understand the problems that people bring with them to our world. So, yes you are correct, killing can never be right, but we do take account of the motive behind these things.

George: From what you are saying, I think I understand that capital punishment can increase the problem (Yes) through generating more anger.

Yes, there is no question about that.

Sarah: And for those people who are forced to kill—regimes who make boy soldiers and people who don't really want to fight but are made to fight—account will be given to them too, because they have done the killing unwillingly or been forced into it, brainwashed into it.

That is why, my dear friend, there is never a clear answer to these questions. You cannot judge one human being against another, because you know not what is in that thinking—that being you do not know what they carry within. And yes, there is much injustice in your world, but all must be accountable for whatever deed is been done by their own hand—yes.

Lilian: Can I just mention the animals we have as pets—dogs, cats and so on. When they become ill, we can ask the vet to end the life of that animal when they are in pain and so on. Is that the right thing to do?

Every soul, every being upon this planet is here for a purpose. I would say to you only this, that the animals in your world who come within the scope of your love—and there are many, you would agree—are dependent upon you human beings for their lives here. They are apart from the animals of the wild, who look after themselves. They need the love-bond from the human being. I know what you speak of when human emotions come into play and they do not want their beloved animal to suffer. And for them they are doing it for love, but I would say to you, all energy has its time and its place upon this planet and no man should take any decision which curtails the lifetime of that energy.

Lilian: Even though the animal may be in pain?

There are many who are in pain, but again it is motive. You understand? (Yes) Because it is done from love, then the human being sees it as being right, but when you come to our world, you will see the fuller picture.

Sarah: Salumet, on the subject of death, a friend of mine, her son married an Iranian and all her family was lost in the earthquake and they were only together as a whole family, because they were mourning the death of another member of the family who had died in a car accident the month before. I feel that maybe all these souls are meant to be together. The earthquake I know was an act—you've talked to us about these things that happen, volcanoes and earthquakes, but am I right in thinking that they were a group of spirits that needed to be together.

When these problems within your world create what you would call 'disaster', then the majority of the thinking would say it was not meant to be. Again I would say to you my dear friends that you do not see the full picture of life. And yes, I would say to you that as a group of people, their time was right. Therefore, conditions exist which will help this to happen. Do you understand?

Sarah: I do. I felt that that they were all meant to be together.

Yes. They agreed as a group that their life upon this planet would end at a particular time; so conditions existed in order that this may happen. You understand?

Sarah: I do understand, thank you. The other question I had was, when souls come onto this planet as brothers and sisters, do all spirits know each other before they come or do they sometimes meet on this planet?

Lilian: For the first time?

Sarah: For the first time.

Let me say this to you that I have told you that you choose your parents—you make, shall we say, contracts for the lifetimes with others. But occasionally there are those souls who slip into life for whatever reason before their time, which therefore sets up a situation where those two souls have not made an agreement—it is possible but rare. Most of you upon this planet have chosen your time and your place and those with whom you will be in contact.

Sarah: I just wondered because sometimes there is such unease within some families.

But that is meant to be. They have chosen that situation.

Sarah: Yes, so you choose your parents for the opportunities that they give.

Yes, not because of the people so much as the situations which can help you along.

Sarah: Yes. And the parents, they are also aware that these spirits are going to join with them?

Yes. As I say, you must remember although years of earthly time seem such a long time, they are not, and souls have ways of coming together in a world to decide who and when and where. (Thank you.)

George: There is one topical question which might be good to ask. There is at the present time a mechanical probe on the surface of Mars and scientists are endeavouring to discover if there's evidence of any past life there. I think you've already told us on one occasion that there is no life on that planet, but now that we've the benefit of your further teaching, we are realizing that there are all kinds of life (Yes) in the cosmos and you probably meant at that time that there was no physical life.

No human life, yes.

George: I imagine that there would be the angels and the planetary guiding beings (Yes) associated with Mars and there may be other spirit life on Mars. Would you care to say anything on that?

Let me just simplify it a little for you. No matter what planet, no matter from which universe, no matter: all energy exists; there is not one space that is without energy. I think you will understand my meaning my dear friend. We have not gone this far before, but I would say to you that energy exists in all places and I think that would suffice for the moment. Would you agree?

George: Yes, energy equates to spirit, (Yes) spirit equates in turn to spirit form.

Yes, you understand. Is that helpful for you? (Yes thank you.) We have many areas to tread that is outside of your own planet, but again I say to you, we must tread slowly.

George: And the development of physical life from spirit would be a much more particular happening.

And remember I have told you that there is life outside of this planet, maybe not in the same form as you are, but nevertheless life of a certain type—life which you are mostly unaware of at this particular time in your evolution.

Sarah: When the astronauts went onto the moon, we were made aware that they knew something that wasn't released to the general public and I can only think that they were made aware of spirit whilst they were on that trip.

Yes, there is much more known on your planet than the ordinary man and woman is allowed to know, but the time is fast approaching when mankind's thinking will not be stifled.

Lilian: Yes, I did actually see a programme on our televisions about the knowledge of UFOs coming out. The governments are going to allow the people to know.

In no matter what form, you cannot keep truth in, it will always 'out', yes, but as in all things, it takes time.

Graham: Could I ask a question about the Bible and we were talking before about capital punishment and one of the most famous executions was that of Jesus. Are the facts in the Bible concerning the death of Jesus correct? I was reading some work by another spiritual teacher called Seth. (Yes) If I understood that right, in fact the circumstances behind Jesus' death were quite different than that said in the Bible. Is there anything you can say about that?

We have discussed the Bible on many occasions and I have told you that many of the words written there are not factual. Therefore I would say to you, do not believe every word, but that the commitments given, which we have discussed, they were the words truly given. I would say to you, the rest of the Bible has been—I nearly said 'fabricated' but that is not true—much has been changed, much has been omitted and much has been added. I would say to you, listen to what comes from our world to have the truer picture. Do you understand?

Graham: Yes, you've said this before that we are not very good at recording information and certainly in times gone by there must have been an awful lot of information was given by word of mouth—things weren't written and recorded in the way they are now and I find it staggering that the Bible was put together at all.

I think that mankind of today has many doubts about the written word, and as you said, there were very few scholars in those days and we have spoken briefly about why these things were written. If you would like to recapture my words, then please do as we have already spoken much about the Bible.

(Thank you.) Not only your Bible but many holy books throughout your world have many errors within them, but of course each religion feels that it is the true one and of course my dear friends you know this not to be true.

Graham: I think people are beginning to have more tolerance towards other religions these days. (Yes) People in this country are becoming Buddhists and other things and these days eyebrows aren't raised in the same way as times gone by. The people are seeking truth now more from an open mind than they have in the past. (Eileen began coughing at this point and Salumet decided for the sake of the instrument, to withdraw)

Yes, I will say I will close for the sake of this instrument. (Thanks + farewells)

One followed through Sarah explaining for those people who arrived in Spirit realm with no beliefs about the afterlife, our meetings were sometimes shown to help them cope with the transition from physical Earth to Spirit. They thanked us for this—we were only too pleased that our meetings were of help in this way.

2ND February 2004

Good evening. (Greetings)

I am happy to join with you once more my dear friends. There is much that we must discuss in the coming time, but also I would like you to understand that your individual awareness and development are of the utmost in this your coming year. No matter what your earthly condition, each one of you will find that you grow not only in awareness of our world, but of awareness of those people who are around you in your daily lives. This awareness does not belong solely to yourselves; the awareness of our world is taking place amongst you human beings at long last and I wish to say to you my dear friends that this awareness will be enriched not only by self-knowledge, but by the evidence given from our world. By the end of this your earthly year, each one of you will be aware of your own inner strengths, and as individuals you will know in which way that strength has helped you. There is much upliftment for you in this earthly year, but remember that self-will will no doubt be in evidence on many occasions, but the opportunity lies before each one of you that you may become more enlightened as human beings—as Spirit beings. You will find that the Spirit being within will surface and help to create within each one of you a strength, which you have not encountered before. Your planet as a whole in this coming year is reaching out for more knowledge and it is being give—make no mistake about that. There are many who are with you now who are willing to give of themselves in order that mankind at last can begin on the spiritual journey of knowledge. I can hear you say, ‘but how can this be so when there are so many problems in our world?’ But if you look at your world honestly you will see that individual knowledge has grown so much in the past twenty of your years. I am sure you are aware of this. (Agreed)

George: Yes, we’ve always been very much a mixture but within that mixture I think we see some very good people.

Yes, and do not dismiss my dear friend the part that each one of you plays in giving of the truth. It is most important for you as individuals to carry on the search for knowledge and truth, but the connection to you is strong. But you must be there for those individuals who fall by the wayside, who deny the knowledge they have gained and are spiritually lost. That is part of your purpose for this coming year. And my words to you my dear friends are that you have that inner strength, you now have more knowledge and you are much stronger individuals than you will ever understand. I say to you again, as I have done on several occasions that you cannot see your own light, but let me assure you that it shines brightly.

George: It’s nice to know. We are certainly well aware that the steadily increasing knowledge, that it has been increasing steadily over the past ten years, and I’m sure we are very much aware of that.

Yes, you are aware, but this year of your time will bring even greater awareness to you. Each one of you has your own mountain to climb and I do not say to you that you are near to the top of the mountain, but what I do say to you my dear friends is that the effort that you make, that the knowledge you have attained, already sees you standing on the top of that mountain. Do you understand what I am saying to you?

Lilian: Yes, thank you for those words.

You have a long way to go, but as far as your awareness and effort go, you have climbed mountains. Are there any questions this time?

George: Yes, I’m sure there are! Perhaps this one connects. It has been said from time to time that an induced fever can heal disease. I’ve been thinking about that and it’s possibly similar to what happens in a sweat lodge, in that a high temperature works against the physical nature of the body, so that the Spirit can come more to the fore and I imagine healing can then take place more easily when the Spirit is to the fore. Would you agree with that?

I understand your question, and yes, I would say this to you: in the state of fever, as in all cases of shock to the physical body, the Spirit indeed does come to the fore, but rather I would say that the Spirit stands to one side. Therefore the Spirit is aware of the physical problems more readily and in such circumstances healing can therefore take place much more than if the Spirit was encompassed within the body. Do you understand?

George: Yes, I thought it must be something like that. It's nice to know.

You could relate fear with fever, or you may relate it to some kind of shock or accident, which sends the Spirit from the body. Do you understand what I am saying?

George: Yes, I think this connects again to the Shamanic principle (Yes) when accidents and fevers occur.

Yes, if only I could take you with me I could show you in front of your spiritual eyes just how simple it is when the Spirit stands aside from the body, how things become much clearer. Do you understand? (Yes) The spiritual eyes are then much more in command of any situation.

George: Yes—thank you, that's very nice to know. I've one more, much more specific question where illness is concerned. There's a condition known as polycystic ovary syndrome, when girls sometimes fail to release the eggs and this has the effect of upsetting hormones, they generally grow very fat and develop male hair and it's a very unpleasant condition for a young girl to have. I just felt non-release of eggs, would there be a spiritual factor that connects there? Are you able to help with that one?

I thank you for your question. I will answer it for you with one word: 'fear'. The Spirit is in fear, therefore the body takes on conditions to—remember what I have told you that the thought becomes reality, and this is what happens when there is fear that the body must react in some way. And I would say to you simply my dear friend that that particular condition is a fear of children.

George: A fear of having children?

Yes, but the fear comes from the spiritual side. It of course can be helped, as you may well know, but it is a mission for the Spirit to undertake for itself.

George: Yes, I think the only help that the doctors are able to give at the present time is to suggest taking a contraceptive pill, which seems to have the effect of regulating egg release, which takes about a year to really work I think, but perhaps this in turn connects with the alleviation of fear?

Yes, it will only help when the Spirit recognizes that there is no need for fear. So many conditions within your world are based on fear. We have spoken much about fear and I have told you that there are only two relevant words: love or fear, and fear is a creator of many, many dark things in your world. If only mankind could look inwards and truly see himself and be honest with that spiritual part of his being, then there would be so much less fear in your world.

Sarah: When you talk about fear, you are talking about spiritual fear, but can physical fear have the same effect as spiritual fear?

It is not quite the same. Physical fear comes from the emotional body; that is the difference.

Sarah: Yes. I was just thinking about Alzheimer's disease in old people and I was wondering if that partly isn't brought on by fear.

Yes, it is a fear of what lies ahead.

Sarah: Yes, that is what I thought. I was actually just thinking about my mother who really wants to pass into Spirit but maybe she is afraid of that as well. I don't think the spiritual side would be afraid of passing back to Spirit, would it?

No, Spirit recognizes its home and would rejoice to join once more with all of those loved ones, but the physical part is afraid—that is the fear, the fear of what they call the unknown. That is why my dear friends your work is so important. Again I say, and I do not apologize for my words, but if you can help but one person, indeed you have done your work.

Lilian: Would my mother be a prime example of this fear and it causing her so much discomfort and pain?

If only they could recognize that they are creating their own discomfort and pain—they could release themselves to Spirit a little sooner if only they would look inwards and to let go of all fear. I feel that if you were to discuss or look into many of your earthly diseases, you would find the fear factor behind so much of it, (Agreed) but I am sure that if you were to approach another human being and tell them that fear was the basis of their illness, they would be amazed and probably not believe you, because their understanding is like that of a child.

George: I think fear can be pretty closely allied to stress?

And what causes stress?

George: The fear causes stress.

A form of fear.

George: At least stress is mentioned in the medical world, (Yes) if not fear.

Yes. The medical world are now beginning to listen to what we bring to them. It is slow, but I can tell you my dear friends that great progress is being made in that direction. There are many of your doctors upon this Earth now who could verify for you that their spiritual knowledge is much greater than they would care to admit.

Sarah: And of course going with this disease again, positive and negative thinking have a lot to play in this, doesn't it?

It has everything to do—your thoughts become reality if they are strong enough. That is why my dear friends I have always cautioned you about your thinking. You can create for yourself dark fears which then manifest into illness.

George: Could I ask a question about developing knowledge. It concerns three scientists and some curious relationships. All three have worked towards the same seeking—seeking the workings of the universe. Galileo who died in the year 1642, Isaac Newton was born later that same year and he became Professor of Mathematics at Cambridge University, and in our present time there is Stephen Hawking who was born on the anniversary of Galileo's death and has also become Professor of Mathematics at Cambridge. So they all seem curiously linked (Yes) across the span of time.

Indeed they are.

George: I was wondering if there was a spiritual connection.

Yes, I was about to say to you that they are part of the same energy. Do you understand what I say to you? They are aspects of the same energy.

George: Yes, of the same soul or similar souls?

Of the same soul.

George: That then explains the curious connections.

Yes. Although they have existed at different times, they are aspects of the same soul who wish to continue with what they have started, and that has been their choice.

George: And Stephen Hawking, he seems to have achieved much despite being very much handicapped by Motor Neuron Disease.

But that has been his choice, because as each aspect has been reincarnated they have gained more knowledge and more understanding and when someone returns to this world as handicapped at that person, it is from their choice, because they are part of an old soul.

George: So they feel that the physical side of life is not so important.

It is not important, it is the spiritual aspect which they wish to express through their work and through their own demeanour.

George: Yes, it is a spiritual direction that is very much allied to new knowledge or rediscovering knowledge.

Yes and after all, has this handicapped, has it held him back in his quest for knowledge? It has not, it has—I almost said 'helped' him.

George: Yes, through lack of diversion perhaps.

Yes, yes, of course. That would be one consideration, I might say to you that would have been considered before he reincarnated into this life.

George: He does seem to be much admired for having achieved so much despite that handicap.

To overcome such difficulties with dignity and pride in their achievements can only come from a Spirit who has grown much. I hope that is helpful to you? (Affirmed) I hope my words to you this time have brought you some cheer and some upliftment into your lives. (Affirmed) May I suggest perhaps this time that our dear lady (Sara) take you through a journey of peace and tranquillity to end this session. As always, I will leave you knowing that always you are within my love and my light. (Thanks + farewells)

Sara then took us on a meditative journey as suggested, which you can find on the website:
www.salumetandfriends.org

~9TH February 2004~

Good evening. (Greetings)

As we join together once more I feel the love from you. I hope my words last time gave you some upliftment.

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

Sarah: We always feel good when we've heard from you anyway, Salumet. (Thank you.)

George: I think we should apologize for our small numbers this time; some have not been able to get here unfortunately.

It matters not but they are with us in Spirit—that is what is important. My words to you this time my dear friends are these: that as time continues, not only have you grown, but your spiritual awareness is becoming greater than it has ever been. Some of you will experience much more than ever you have before. This is because as your awareness grows, so too the inner Spirit comes forward to meet that awareness. Therefore my dear friends do not be surprised that if in this coming year of your earthly life, you have some type of spiritual experience. My heart feels full as I speak these words to you, because my dear friends you deserve to have knowledge, you deserve wisdom and most of all you deserve our love. (Thanks expressed) Because our numbers are few, I do not feel it would be appropriate to speak on matters new, therefore we shall continue this evening and we will have what you on this planet call 'a quiet communication', quiet talk amongst ourselves. Would this be agreeable to you? (Affirmed)

Lilian: You mean you will take questions at all? (Yes) I think George has some questions.

George: Yes, indeed. Something has been recently published and has been reported in our press today about analysis of vegetables and those vegetables grown on farms in 1940 were very much more nutritious than those grown today and on their element contents they are on average 40% down. I think this is a firm illustration of issues of non-respect of soil and nature and bad farming method. I think this should jolt people into being more aware of the value of soil and agriculture and how we should do better. I was just wondering if you would have any comment on this?

Yes, I understand. As time has continued on this planet, mankind has abused the Earth, the creatures upon this Earth and so forth. Sometimes it takes what you would call a catalyst before understanding takes place. I would say this to you my dear friend, that for many, many, many of your earthly years, mankind in his ignorance has been abusing the soil and your planet; but I hasten to add, not in any negative form, because the knowledge was not there. Therefore I would say to you that it has taken this long in your earthly time, before people have reached the understanding of what they have been doing. But let me assure you that the tide is turning. I am sure that you are aware of the many who are trying to change what you call 'farming methods'.

George: Yes, we have a few farms that have become organic (Yes) and I felt for many years now that the methods used 60 or 70 years ago, were very close to what we recognize today as an organic system.

Yes, it will return to more natural growing of your food stock. It is happening and many are being inspired from our world to take care of your planet. Our elementals and Earth Spirits have had much to contend with for many, many years, but they will never stop trying to influence what is happening in your Earth. So I hope my dear friend that this brings a degree of hopefulness about your question. (Yes) It is slowly, slowly improving.

Sarah: And GM products, I'm fearful that some of them have crept into our food chain without us knowing. Yes, I understand your fears, but let me reassure you that the knowledge of natural growing of foodstuff is being impressed upon many, many people, not only ordinary folk, but governments. It will almost be a revolution in time when people will understand what they must do.

George: Yes, we need to revolutionize our farming methods, I'm sure.

But of course in your timescale it does not seem quickly or fast enough for you, but let me say again that things are progressing in the correct way.

Sarah: They're really returning to how they should be more than revolution. We say revolutionize our methods, but it will just be returning back to how it used to be.

Yes and to bring this about as in many instances of your history, where there will be people power, in order that governments listen to what the people need. People of your world today have great understanding: they will not be told what to do or how to live their lives as in past times. Therefore the all-powerful collective voice will be heard. You understand?

Lilian: Yes, we can already see this happening with the groups that have formed and protests and so on.

Yes. I hope that is helpful to you.

George: Yes, yes indeed. I wonder if I could recap and extend on the teaching you have given before. Where humans are concerned, we're happy with knowledge of the soul structure that we return to. Where animals are concerned, you told us about the 'spirit pool' that they return to. I couldn't help but wonder about lower forms of life—perhaps that isn't a very good description—but I was thinking of such classes as insects and then bacteria. Do they fit into this pool system?

Yes, I understand your question. Let me just begin by saying one word, and that is the evolution, not only of your planet, but of yourselves, and this goes down through the chain, as you say, to insects and bacteria, because as you may well know, there is existence of energy everywhere. There are planets within your system which house only bacteria. Now, let me continue to your question. The human species upon this planet, has evolved in order that they may understand Spirit that has always been. You understand this and you accept this, you also accept the condition of the animal kingdom, which is close to mankind. (Yes) Because the insect and bacteria kingdoms are not so, shall we say, 'advanced' as humankind, but evolved just as much, their return to energy is slightly different than humankind. Perhaps to simplify this matter I will explain it thus.

George: Yes, so it is more of a return to spirit energy than a spirit pool?

Yes. If you think of energy then perhaps it will make more sense to you. The insects in your world have a much shorter lifespan to begin with. Therefore what happens when they are extinguished from this planet life is that they return to the energy and therefore return to the Earth again more quickly.

George: I see, yes. And we can think of basic energy as becoming more complicated as a spirit pool for some life and as soul system for human life.

I would rather say, 'more simplified' than 'complicated' for the insects of the world. They have no knowledge, but it is a natural progression that they exist and return to the Earth. Do you understand? In the same way as bacteria exists, it will return to the same form very quickly, but it is more of an energy pool.

Sarah: I am a little confused. When you say 'return to the Earth', the energy goes back into the Earth? Let us for an example take an insect. When the insect dies, it will almost immediately return to the Earth energy, whereas humankind is aware of passing to Spirit and awareness is much greater.

George: There would be a molecular energy as well as a more general and unmodified energy.

Yes, you have to understand the difference, because of evolution. Remember evolution goes hand in hand as your planet progresses. Is that clear to you?

George: Could I just add onto that the plant kingdom. That would be an entirely planetary system and supported by the elementals?

Yes. All energy has its function upon this planet, but I would say to try to keep matters simple that you must first and foremost think of energy.

George: Yes. There is just one further question that adds onto that and we appreciate the dinosaurs have gone from physical existence and will not return, but would they or their Spirit energy still continue in Spirit?

Energy never dies my dear friend. This I know you understand.

George: Yes, but it can transmute.

Yes, you have taken my words! As you progress in our world, you understand that our world is one of thought and all energy can be transmuted into any thought pattern that you wish, but that would take some time within our world for this to be achieved, but you know that when mankind returns home to our world that any thought becomes reality. Therefore if one should wish to see a dinosaur then that is entirely possible, because the energy still exists. Do you understand?

George: Yes, so the energy of the dinosaurs does indeed still exist in Spirit.

All energy exists, yes.

George: And it has not been transmuted.

Not in the sense that you mean. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes it is. It was just a little point that arose in my mind and it's nice to have the answer, (Yes) thank you. Another question that is entirely different, concerns people on different pathways. You've talked to us several times about different pathways. My wife Ann, and myself are in fact on different pathways. We don't find this a disadvantage, we can compare notes and we are fortunate in that both our respective pathways recommend meditations, as the developed ways of Spirit do. I was just wondering if there's anything you would like to say about the interaction of different pathways?

Yes. You are a little puzzled by this I know, but let me say that both you and your dear lady wife are conjoined in effort to reach the same goal.

George: Yes, I felt that.

Yes. It matters not which pathway you take when the end of the pathway is reached you will be joined in one footstep together, and the separateness of knowledge will be of no avail. (Thank you.) It matters not which route you take, because all will return home in their own time. I would say to you that it is better for you both that there is this slight difference, because is it not of interest to you both?

George: Yes indeed, (Yes) we can learn from each other.

You bounce from one another with your knowledge. (Yes!) Yes, provided each has an open mind and an open heart—that is what is important. Never say to another, 'I am right, you are wrong', because provided you are reaching for the same ultimate goal, then it matters not. After all are not the atheists and the disbelievers in your world, are they not also heading home?

George: Yes, it's a very different journey they take.

Yes, but it is a journey and it may well be that it is a journey that they have decided to take for whatever reason the Spirit knows why. So therefore, always accept the pathways of others, even if it seems to you that they are falling down. Let them, that is their way.

George: I can see that an atheist journey could lead to debate and analysis, which might be useful.

Yes and for another, that may be the point where they gain their own knowledge. Can you see? (Yes) So, always my dear friends, always look at the wider picture, always look within your hearts, before you come to any conclusions.

George: And on my wife's pathway I was going to mention Joel Goldsmith, who seems to have had a great inspiration and although much of his teaching springs from the Christian Bible, I feel he has picked out the more mystical and appropriate parts of it.

Yes, you see my dear friend that some people in your world are afraid to let go of traditional teachings. In a way it is holding on and almost—what is the expression, yes people do 'hedge their bets'—is that the correct saying? (Affirmed + chuckles)—when the inner voice is a little afraid, can you understand? (Yes) They are afraid to free themselves completely. But no matter who leads the way for many, providing that individual feels that that is their pathway, then let it be.

George: Yes, I think that expression comes from the racecourse when people back more than one horse.

Yes, I understand but—

George: It seems very appropriate!

—but I do not know that the animals would agree, (Chuckles) but I will leave that one with you! I sometimes listen to these earthly expressions and ponder upon them, and I have to say this in our world, causes much amusement!

George: That's rather nice perhaps.

Yes, we are not devoid of amusement. Do not feel that all is serious, because laughter and love are very much entwined. I hope that this is helpful to you.

George: Yes indeed. There was a question I've had on my mind—it isn't about Egyptian pyramids but it is about people in ancient Egypt. If you would rather delay that question until a more appropriate time, then I quite understand.

We have to return to that question I know, and I know that you are anxious that I do so, but I will pick an appropriate time when I feel my answers will be absorbed and understood.

George: Yes. If I wanted to ask a question about Osiris, you'd rather me hold it for that time?

Yes, I know your anxiety, I feel it often.

George: I quite understand.

Again I will repeat one of my words that I have used to you often

George: Patience!

Yes! Now you read my words—yes. (Chuckles)

George: Yes, I still have a little of that to learn.

Sarah: I often try and tell my mother little bits from your teachings and she says to me that she doesn't want to meet her mother again when she goes over and I tell her that she doesn't have to if she doesn't want to. But it lead me to think that if you don't get on with somebody in this world—you have told us that we are probably not on the same spiritual level—but can it be that because you don't get on with someone in a physical life it is perhaps a teaching and that when you get over into Spirit, you can in fact get on; I mean in Spirit I'm sure you can get on with anyone you want to get on with, but does it necessarily mean that you are not on the same spiritual level if you don't get on with someone in the physical world?

The difficulty lies when we use the world 'level'. It suggests that people are up or down and that is not quite true.

Sarah: It's vibration.

Yes. Let me say this: when two people do not, as you say, 'get on' in this lifetime, that may have been their choice or it may not—that is not important and that is not your question. As you pass to our world, your emotions do not immediately change; your thoughts, your actions and your deeds remain with you, as you full well know by your rescue work. But there comes a time when in Spirit, when all of these disagreements, shall we call them, fall away, because the realization comes that they are futile and oftentimes people will come together who at one time refused to see or acknowledge each other. But it is entirely dependent on the emotional state of the Spirit at that time. You do not suddenly become an angel as you might say; you are the same as you are upon this Earth. Therefore if there is fear, if there is hatred, if there is great love, then all of these emotions you will take with you, until such time as the recognition comes that these feelings and emotions are not necessary.

Sarah: Does that mean that the vibrations are becoming more...

..refined.

Sarah: Yes, and more equal I am trying to say as well. They are becoming more refined, but...

It takes a long time for vibrations to vibrate as one. It does not happen immediately and knowledge and awareness takes time and it may be that they will never meet as the two people that they recognize each to be.

Sarah: They could meet?

They could if the awareness comes.

Sarah: But they could meet once they've dropped the physical aspect.

If they so desire, but you may find that one will reincarnate and that aspect of the soul will never meet the other as it once existed. Do you understand?

Sarah: Yes I do, thank you.

Yes, but let me say that most people when they have been in our world for some time, recognize within themselves all that is negative. But do not be under the illusion that when you go to our world that all is well, otherwise why would there be so many people who need your help in this world? Do not feel it is something so terrible. After all, you know full well that the individuals that you are now, is only but one aspect of the soul. It is but a little blink of your eye—there is so much more to you.

Lilian: It's sort of a continuous learning.

Yes, so if two people do not join well in this lifetime, it may be that they agree to return to change those aspects of themselves; that is another way of changing how they feel.

Sarah: But that could take a long time before they decide to do that.

It could do or it may be quite quick, but it would depend upon the choice and the knowledge and the understanding of Spirit. Is that helpful? (Yes, thank you.)

George: Yes, in connection with that, could I recap on something about soul? Soul contains the knowledge of all those past lives, (Yes) and it would be primarily this which filters through to the current Earth life as conscience and inspiration, (Yes) and guiding influence?

That is always available to anyone who reincarnates here. That knowledge is always available to you.

George: Yes, so we can think of it as the knowledge within soul, (Yes) which is the driving force behind what filters through in the way of our feelings.

What filters through, and of your very existence here.

George: And when we return to Soul, when we return to Spirit, all that is felt more strongly.

Much more strongly.

George: And seen with greater clarity.

Yes, because you have left behind the overcoat, the heaviness of humanity of the human being and in Spirit all becomes much clearer, although, as I have said to our dear lady friend, it is not an instantaneous happening, but it is there for all to use. The Soul knowledge is available to all who come to this planet.

George: Yes, I think we are beginning to get a grasp and feel a picture of an individual soul, but then that soul is interconnected to many other souls.

Yes, you must not think of the soul as individualized, it is part of a much greater soul structure, but that is something that you are not ready for yet.

George: Yes. There is something I found rather puzzling. (Yes) Eventually, can I use the term that the returning Spirit eventually gets, shall we say, 'bonded into' that soul system. Is there a period before that happens when that Spirit is moving around quite freely and is still working? I was thinking about the Victorian lady who came through to us quite recently. She seems to be still working and visiting groups. Would she eventually become a more permanent part within soul structure and would that then phase out?

Yes. Her aspect of Spirit decided to return to this Earth, in order that she could continue the work that she started. That has been the Spirit's choice. That has been influenced by the aspect of the soul to which she belongs. Many, many lifetimes can be given to the Spirit, before that aspect of the soul eventually joins the soul energy. Do you understand?

George: Yes, I see, yes. I felt there must be a period of greater freedom, which then blends into a period of less freedom, shall we say?

Yes, there comes a time when Spirit feels it unnecessary to return to this planet to help or to learn or to expand. And therefore when such time happens, then that aspect of Spirit will depart and join the energy of the Soul. But what you must remember and be clear about, is that aspect of the Soul can exist for much, much of your earthly time, because, as you know, time has not the same meaning in our world. So always remember—I feel again that you are limited by the understanding of yourselves as a human being, as Spirit and not as the wider picture. I know it is always difficult, but that is what you must always try to achieve. (The tape ran out here and was quickly turned over. Sarah asked what the purpose was of being shown a 'recording' of your life's events when you return to Spirit realm.)

If that happening was not to take place, how would they have the knowledge of what they have achieved or what they have left undone? That is the purpose—people see themselves as they truly are. You can when you are clothed in this human garb, deceive yourselves as to your true purpose, but in Spirit all is exposed, not only for you to see, but everyone is aware of the true nature of your Spirit. Is that helpful?

Sarah: Yes, thank you very much.

I have been happy to answer your questions this time. It is always pleasing that I am able to at least help to clarify for you any little detail.

George: As ever you've been most patient with our questioning and we do appreciate that.

I thank you my dear friend for your kind words again, but of course there is no need. I will take with me this time each one of you with my love, and I will try to impress upon each one of you, more understanding, more love and above all, I try to give to you each time a little more understanding. I will withdraw from you now in the anticipation of our next meeting.

Lilian: Yes, we look forward to that and perhaps more people with us. I'd just like to say thank you for sometimes listening to me—calling out to you just lately—thank you.

Lilian: Good evening Salumet. We are very short in numbers, but this is the way it seems to be going at the moment.

Good evening. I am always happy to be with you.

Lilian: And we are very happy to have you with us—more than we can say.

Although numbers help with this energy, it matters not, because we make adjustments for it, but of course it is useful that more should hear these words.

Lilian: Yes; although they will eventually.

Yes. What we will do, I will answer any questions that you wish to ask me and then I will work quietly with this one. There are many journeys that I have to take with her.

Lilian: That's interesting. Could you explain a little more?

It is partly development for her, but to enable us to bring much more to you all. It is early days, but when first I came to you, I believe I told you that there is much that we can achieve, but all of these things take time and cannot be rushed.

Lilian: We do admire her, because she does have some family difficulties at the moment.

We help where we can with all of you, but as you know we are limited in what we can do, not because we cannot do it, but because it would be interfering in a life. I know you understand this fully, but yes, we are aware of this instrument's earthly duties as we do each one of you. Remember my words that when the soul is tested, that is when growth takes place.

Lilian: Yes, I remember it, but it's hard sometimes to see the reason.

Yes, it is because you do not have that wider vision, but let me say this to you my dear friend, each day that you give of yourself for the good of another is never forgotten; it is part of your life's work—this you know. So, look upon it as a gift, a gift of opportunity, a gift that you should cherish, because as you help those other people, you are also growing much. Now, are there any questions this time?

Sarah: It's about the cloning, the cloning that they are doing for use on humans. The Korean person, he is very anti his work producing a human being, but what he's doing at the moment, is there a Spirit involved in any of the cloning that he's doing?

As in all scientific work, you can never be sure that what they are attempting to do is for the right reasons. Always there is the possibility of abuse. The knowledge which these people have is part of the evolution of your planet and although they will attempt to clone other human beings, there will be many problems ahead for them, not only physically, but spiritually.

Sarah: What I was wondering is what this Korean man is doing, he is only cloning parts for health reasons to help heal. (Yes) In that case, is there any Spirit involved?

Yes, I understand your question. At this stage, of course there is no Spirit involved. That knowledge has been given to them to use for good of mankind, but what you must be aware of, that there are unscrupulous people in your world who will wish to take it further. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, I understand that, but I was thinking that what this Korean man was doing was probably for good, (Yes) but I wanted to be clear in my mind.

Remember that whatever questions you may have, you must always put forward the motive behind the deed and I know of that which you speak and it is to help their fellow human man that this is being developed, but once they begin to interfere with the very essence of union where Spirit becomes involved, that cannot be right. I know that you are agreeing with my words.

Sarah: I do indeed yes.

I feel it from you all and this is good my dear friends, because it shows—and I hope that you can see it for yourselves, that your understanding is such that you can now make wise judgement about these matters—although it is not a judgement in the sense that I am always telling you of, it is just the feeling from the heart. You understand?

Sarah: Yes I do indeed. But I think there are many, many people who feel that it's going too far—cloning a complete human is not right—many people feel that.

There will always be two sides and there will always be a section who do not wish to take either side.

That is the nature of humankind, but I would say no matter how uncomfortable it feels, when you sense when something is not quite as it should be, then your words should be voiced. Is that helpful to you?

Sarah: Yes it is, thank you. And the other thing I was thinking about and I haven't really thought this through, but I will just mention it. You were saying that small animals—small insects go back into the Earth energy and that bigger animals go into a 'pool' and that humans are on a different level. I was just thinking, why is this so? Can you just explain a little bit why we should have these different levels, as it were, these different energies?

For such a little word, it has a huge meaning this word 'why'. I am not the creator of all things, I do not always understand 'why' myself, although 'why' mainly belongs to humankind. In our world we see the creative laws as perfect, that there can be no mistakes. Therefore all of these energies create a balance, which perhaps to you my dear friend does not make full understanding, but all I can say to you is that it is the natural law.

Sarah: Right, yes, I think we don't see the full picture we don't understand things.

Yes, you are looking at it with physical eyes, with physical understanding, when in fact to us in our world it is the most perfect, natural happening.

Sarah: That's nice to hear, because I was sort of in my mind thinking that humans were perhaps being slightly favoured (Yes) and I didn't really think that could be true.

You were thinking, 'how unfair'.

Sarah: Yes, in a way.

But you were giving to the insect world intelligence that humankind on your planet does not have, so as you go through the whole of Creation you would be finding that many things would be unfair, but I assure you my dear friend that the natural law is perfect. Your understanding will come about these matters, but now is not quite the time for you to take them 'on board', I think you would say.

Sarah: Yes, I ought to know that whatever happens would be the right thing, but I was just curious in my mind as to why.

It is just a slight division of the same energy, but there is no unfairness, of that I can assure you. But yes, mankind does not sit upon a higher plane than any other creature on this planet. All has its purpose...

Sarah: ...and its place—

...it's place and together in unison this is what you have created, to make a world that survives without too many problems, until mankind begins to interfere.

Lilian: Yes, we can see that.

Only then are there problems, as you might say.

Sarah: Now we as humans go on to one vibration, what about these other beings on other planets? Do they go on to the same sort of vibration as us, or again another vibration?

You are speaking of deep matters, but of course all of Spirit belongs to one vibration, but it takes many eons of your time for this integration to take place. We have not touched upon this I feel, but there are many spiritual worlds. Now this will give you something to think about. Each planet has its own spiritual counterpart. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, I understand that, yes.

Although we all belong to the great universal energy, it is a subject which is for now much too complex for you to understand, but any being on any planet will eventually cease in the state that is known to them and all energy merges together to create a total energy.

Sarah: It must be a very long time ahead?

Yes, that is why it is not possible for me to explain it to you in simple terms. But yes, I appreciate your question, because it shows that you are thinking outside of yourself.

Sarah: So when we get this total energy, it will still keep developing because energy never ceases?

Yes, at that point you would not even be aware of any differentiation, but as I say that is something that you could not possibly imagine at this stage of your development.

Sarah: No, but it does make sense to me, because there has to be a working towards...

A point of unison.

Sarah: Yes, and we are all working towards something.

That is correct, yes. But each energy must take one step forward, one step forward, one step forward—as if you take parallel lines that are going towards one point, eventually the two will merge. Perhaps that comparison will help you to realize that all energy lines focus towards the one point. You understand? (Yes)

Lilian: It gives us a lot to think about.

Sarah: It makes even more sense you saying that, because there's a lot of racial prejudice on this planet and it just goes to prove that everybody is of one energy, is the same and this physical overcoat means nothing.

Look behind the physicality, look at the Spirit: Spirit has no colour, energy has no colour, love has no colour. Colour within your world is but a situation. You understand? (Affirmed) It is a situation mankind has been given—another gift, if you will, to overcome all of the problems on your Earth.

Lilian: I was just thinking in our hospitals, there are so many different nationalities all working together, the doctors, the nurses, black and white—all together to help people.

Yes, and does not the sick man appreciate the love and helping hand of his fellow man, not matter who or where they come from? (Agreed)

Sarah: Although I did hear on the television a little while ago, there were some white people saying they definitely wouldn't have a black person helping them. So I think they've got a long way to go yet. (Chuckles)

They are poor souls. You must not judge too harshly, they are misguided. Give them your love of understanding—that is what they lack. It is easy to condemn my friends, but to you it should be easy to express your love to all of your fellow man. I hope that has helped you. (Affirmed) Are there any more questions? (Pause) I think possibly what I have said to you this time will give you another avenue of thought. And do you find that each avenue leads to a larger one, as it should be? (Agreed)

Sarah: Each little bit of information you give us gives us a much wider vision. (Agreed)

You realize that these human eyes are so limited—limited as to their understanding of what they see, but the eyes of the Spirit sees much, much more. Now I feel this is the time for me to work closely with this instrument and to allow the others who would wish to come to you, allow them to come close. I ask only my dear friend that any talking be done quietly, but please do speak out about what you feel or what you see. It is helpful for those who come close to know of what you feel. As always, my love is with you. (Thanks + farewells)

After some time one through Sarah came through, giving a message many have gathered to be here, working together with our group for the purpose of individual growth. Another followed also through Sarah, describing life of a group like ours operating in times past, when meetings such as this were risky, during the time of the inquisition:

—My purpose in coming tonight is to let you know that your work is being monitored by many in our side and that group that I came to previously are most interested to listen to what goes on in this group. when you have been told that there are many around you, many who are there to help you, some of this group are those who are there, together with others. They have gained knowledge on this Earth and are eager to help with the knowledge that they have had and of course, with the knowledge from Spirit, which they wish to impart to you. (Thanks expressed) All those who are helping you on this planet, will be available if you so wish, when you come also back to Spirit, but the desire must be there first.

George then asked a question about the group operated on Earth, but precise dates/times were not easy to establish. Nevertheless, our discussion continued:

There were many who gave up their lives on this planet, because of their belief and because of those who did not wish a particular person to be there. There were many who knew what they should have been doing and they were prepared to give up their lives on this Earth for that belief. And yes, many came solely for this purpose, but there were those who also gave up their lives at an earlier time than originally had been planned for them on this planet.

George: We are so grateful that they have all helped to pave the way forward for those who are here today.

Paul: They kept the spark alive in dark times.

Yes, but could I just remind you that the Truth will never die. And with that I will take my leave and thank you for your time that you have given me and those with me for this talk with you. (Thanks expressed)

George: Yes, we very much appreciate you telling us all this and we appreciate all the work that has gone before. Wonderful!

Paul: Nice to know a little of the background of some of the helpers who are working with us, who we can't see. (Agreed) We are all on the same crusade.

Yes. Thank you for that.

Lilian: Yes, we tend to forget that we're doing the same sort of thing.

Paul: Yes, we have the freedom to speak the Truth now, which they didn't have. There is still the old establishment, but—

George: There are those who listen, there are those who turn away, but at least one is free now to attempt to make known the Truth.

Lilian: Churches might still frown on it, but that doesn't matter does it.

Paul: No, you can live with a frown, it's when they...

Lilian: We can put up with a frown. (Chuckles)

Sarah: There are some countries still that are too strict.

Paul: Yeah, we forget about that, don't we?

Sarah: But I got the feeling it was this country he was talking about.

Paul: There were a lot of movements like the Knights Templars, who were underground.

Lilian: It shows how things have improved.

Paul: Yes, it really dawns on you, back in those days you'd have been burned for what we're doing...Now they just think of you as a crackpot or something. (Chuckles)

Lilian: It also was nice to be reminded that that's what they had come for. That's what they had chosen to do...

Paul: In a sense these are true heroes of mankind. One day in historical terms these people may possibly be viewed as true heroes of history.

Our discussion had become rather heavy and as sometimes happens, one came through to lighten the atmosphere before we closed. This was another through Sarah, who talked about her life in the countryside in times past. She had a dog who was very good at catching rabbits, which she was able to cook. She talked very fondly of this dog, and after a light, cheerful discussion, we closed as usual.

~8TH March 2004~

Good evening. (Greetings)

As I draw close to you this time, let me say a fond welcome to our dear lady friend. (Sue)

Lilian: Yes it's nice to have her back again.

As I join with you this time, I can see that within you all, in all of the growth that you have made, that there lies within each one of you some doubt.

Lilian: As to how we've grown, you mean?

Not about the work, because my words are accepted with much love, but my dear friends there is personal doubt with each one of you at times, doubt about your own abilities.

Sara: Yes, I think that is true. I'd agree with that.

Yes, I see it with you all. Therefore, this time I want to say to you this: with human beings doubt seems to be part of the makeup with which you come to this life, and although in your spiritual unfoldment and growth, many of these doubts and fears disappear, still there remains within you self-doubt, which creates within you fear. I want to say to you my dear friends, you have no need of such fear. Each one of you has blossomed and is shining and is a shining example to many others. Therefore any fear and doubt that you hold close to your heart, they are unfounded. I hear you say, 'How can we dispel these doubts?' My words to you would be: time and experience of all matters spiritual. The doubts will fall away from you all in time. Sometimes when I am close to you I see you falter with your words. Should I, should I not?

Lilian: Or should I have said that?

Yes, but again it is because you are clothed in human clothing, but I would like to say to you there will be such time to come when many of your doubts will disappear, because you will not be able to defy what you experience and therefore will come to you great joy of understanding. I know that when you are faced with these doubts, you feel sometimes that you may not be worthy, and this, my dear friends I would say indeed you are most worthy. (Thank you.)

Sara: Do you mean when I thoughts become negative and we don't express ourselves in the best way, we feel unworthy because of these moments. (Yes) Yes, I understand.

Yes, but you should not.

Sara: We should take a broader view, (Yes) and realize that these are just moments.

Yes, they are but moments in time, and time will replace those moments with the joy of understanding.

Sara: Thank you, that's very helpful.

Yes, I want you all to know that at these moments in time, there stands with you many who are willing to guide you and uplift you and to inspire within you the words that you need to use.

Sara: So we must remember to ask for the help.

Always ask and you will receive. I know that this has been a long lesson for you all over many years, but it is a lesson that is well worth sticking to, because as you take each step, then you feel more worthy, because you see, that feeling of unworthiness is not humility but fear, and always you must try to dispel these fears. My dear friends you are shining lights for this work and if you were never to utter another single word, each of you has achieved much and for this we will always be grateful to you. Do you have any questions for me this time?

Lilian: Could I ask about hurt within? You said to me a few weeks back that I harboured hurt. (Yes) Does that mean I don't let go of the hurt, or is it because the thought is within me? Could you explain a little more please?

Yes. When I speak of hurt within, it is entirely for you who retains these hurts, it is for you to find the understanding to let go, and to forgive yourself. That is what many of you do not quite understand: you create your own hurt, you create your own fears, you create your own misunderstanding.

Lilian: It is also maybe a lack of seeing the other person's point of view.

It is a lack of understanding yourself—that is always the problem. We have spoken on previous occasions when I have said to you that you must be true and honest with yourselves. If a human being harbours any form of hurt, it is because they have allowed it to be. Do you understand? (Yes) You, my dear friend, have harboured hurt, because of your sweet nature, your kindness in not wanting to hurt others. Therefore in that respect you have been kind, but unkind to yourself. Do you understand?

Lilian: I see, yes.

There is so much hurt and fear and resentment within so many people. I would suggest to you all, not only you my dear friend, (Lilian) that you must allow full expression for your emotions, not in any negative sense, but to be honest with yourselves you must look at yourself first and foremost. You understand?

Sara: And sometimes when you need to communicate your feelings with others maybe sometimes too, rather than keeping it inside. (Yes) Sometimes it's better to air something with others.

Yes but always to air these feelings with love. With anger...

Sara: That will never work.

No—that is the way it must be done, always with love. It is possible, but I know within humankind it is so easy for the fire of anger to take over but again that is something to be looked upon and worked upon with love.

Lilian: Did you've another question, Sara?

Sara: I think when we feel disappointment at the way others treat us, for myself it is to do with having expectations that are too high. I think that is one of my problems; I sometimes have too high an expectation of other people and so I sometimes feel disappointed and rather than speak about it, I'd prefer often to withdraw, because I find it difficult to speak about it.

Yes, if only you could use your language to express the words of how you feel in a gentle way, then by uttering those words aloud, you would begin to sense within yourself an understanding of the other person. Life my dear friends was never set to be easy, but in all of these difficulties with which you find yourselves, you will find that is time of your spiritual growth. So, do not despair, and that is not the purpose of my words to make you feel disheartened, but rather to give you an insight into your own beings, an understanding which is there if you would but look.

Sara: Sometimes I wonder whether because I find it quite easy and natural to give to others, simply because I know this and understand this, perhaps it is my wrong to give to certain people in this life and not expect necessarily to receive from them. I don't know if it is wrong thinking. Sometimes I doubt whether I'm seeing it clearly or not but because I've done it for such a long time, I feel reluctant to change my ways with people even if they don't return. I'm not sure if I'm doing the right thing.

You, my dear friend are one of life's givers, as you say, but remember that you are entitled to good things in return. There is no need to feel some guilt about that being so, in fact it is all of your rights to receive the best that the universe can bring to you, but if these things are done because of the knowledge you have, then that is not the purpose of giving, but you know and understand this well.

Sara: Sometimes I feel that I give—originally it has been a joy and a pleasure, but sometimes I feel that it might be a good idea to withdraw because it is not being returned and I'm not sure if it is being appreciated, and it is a habit.

But you do not give to receive.

Sara: No exactly, so it is probably better to bring something to an end if it doesn't bring pleasure anymore.

If it brings to you feelings of discontent, then I would agree with you that it would be better not to do so.

Sara: Thank you, that's very helpful as I'm a creature of habit sometimes and I find it difficult to stop something that I've done for a long time, but lately I feel I should with some.

But how interesting that you have come upon this thinking all by yourself.

Sara: Yes, I think it is probably...

With a little help! (Laughter)

Sara: With some help! But also because my energies are going in other directions, possibly it's helped to bring this to a head, it's helped me to see it clearly. (Yes) I have to prioritize more.

And remember also my dear friend that you can give from your thought. You do not always have to give openly, you can give much with your thinking.

Sara: And Paul is very good at that. (Yes) He has worked that one out, I think.

He is a quiet jewel when it comes to spiritual matters—yes, I would agree with you.

Now I feel for this time I will take my leave and see who wish to come to you, to sit closely with you and allow our dear lady here (Lilian) to take charge of this evening. I know that upliftment has been felt by you in the past days, it will continue. (Thanks + farewells)

~22ND March 2004~

The previous meeting had been taken up with rescue work mainly, which Salumet refers to here:

Good evening. (Greetings)

Before we begin this time I would like to say to you my dear friends that many wish to give their thanks to you for the help given last time. We know that it has been some time since you have been occupied with such work, but I can reassure you that it was not taken lightly that we offered you the work last time.

Lilian: And we were able to help, were we?

Help was given. (Good.) I would wish you to remember that not only are you here to listen to my words, but also for your own self-developments, and this was but an opportunity and a thank you to each one, in order that you may come together and work thus. Now, as we continue on this another of your earthly years, I have told you my dear friends that it would be a time of self-development for you. There is much that will be given this one of your earthly years. I hope that already you have become aware of the discovery in your world of another planet. (Affirmed)

Lilian: I remember you said this would happen.

This is but one example of what you have been told, but the importance of this coming year my dear friends, is that each one of you undergo some form of metamorphosis within yourselves. You, my dear gentle lady (Lilian), that journey for you has already begun, but I would wish that each one of you become aware of the changes within and around you. You will become aware as time progresses. Has anyone anything to ask about what I have spoken of?

George: I did have the feeling at the time that the rescues last time were as much for our own development as for the progression of others.

Yes, that was partly our purpose that you should be aware, not only of those souls in need, but of your own capabilities in dealing within them as one group, and remember, all of you take part in these rescues. It is a joint effort for which you all need to be thanked.

George: I think we feel rewarded at the time that we were able to help.

But now you must become aware of your own unfoldment. It is important for each one of you that you become aware of the Spirit coming forth into your daily lives. I am sure if you were to think for just one moment, you would discover how much you have changed even within this last year of your time.

Lilian: I think we are all much more aware of the spiritual side of ourselves.

That is the purpose of growth and unfoldment that you recognize for yourselves what is happening. Have you any questions this time?

Lilian: Can I just say the few words that maybe I said to my mother has helped her now she has passed into Spirit?

My dear, all words used in the name of Spirit are helpful. Even if the receiver declines the offer of those words, it does eventually sink in with them and they do take on board much of what is said to them. I can assure you that that person, your mother, may have seemed as if there was some barrier, but now she is prepared to listen to much. (Good.) So, yes of course your help was needed and it has been gratefully and truthfully accepted by her.

George: It might be an apt time to put a planetary question: I think you said recently that one of the planets in the solar system had bacteria life and a few years back one of our scientists, Fred Hoyle, had put forward the theory that to explain how epidemics of illness occur in different parts of the world simultaneously, the theory that bacteria sometimes come from space, and if there are planets in the solar system that have bacteria, I was wondering if his theory might be a true one?

Yes. I know of this question, yes. Firstly my dear friend let me say that there is much of course that mankind knows nothing about as yet. There are those of vision who would in their time adhere to those notions which they gain from their own experiences of life. Of those people I will say only this: that oft times those individuals are the ones who are indeed influenced from our world. This planet is not one unit as we have discussed before, but is part of a much larger whole. (Pause—breathing changed/deeper) Forgive us my dear friend for that input of extra energy as there are those who would be eager to speak with you, but now is not the time. Therefore let me continue on the vein that I was using. This planet is one small part of a greater vision. Bacteria as you know it belongs only to this earthly planet. Your scientists are limited in their visions. Let me say that there are many life forms of bacteria, forms which to the human is as yet unknown. I will say of the gentleman of whom you have spoken that his 'quest', shall I say, should not go unheeded, because there is much that should be taken from it. This is a subject which is young in years for your planet.

George: Yes, I felt inclined to view it as a possibility.

Yes, but it will not be readily accepted at this moment in time. As with all things that appear to be different from the mass thinking, then it is rejected.

George: Yes, I think we know from our history that to be true.

Yes, but I would say this to you that he is being guided in his thinking and the day will come when it will be recognized that this earthly planet is not a closed door. Do you understand?

George: Yes, I follow. Thank you very much for that information.

It is too young in its history to make any impact on the scientific community, but as with all things, you need time and patience.

George: Yes. Could I go back to last time to recap on a question that Sarah put? I think I understand that it is satisfactory that we utilize human eggs as a means of cultivating what we call 'stem cells' such that these can be used for therapeutic healing purposes. There is no Spirit involvement in this procedure and I think I understand that that is therefore satisfactory.

We have difficulty when we use your earthly words, but I would say, yes, 'satisfactory' is the word that we may use. Of course, once Spirit is involved we are speaking of an entirely different matter.

George: Yes, so if this technology was to develop...

...is being inspired for good use.

George: Yes—inspired again.

Yes, all things that are for good cannot be wrong. If you take any matter which involves the good of another human being without interference or hurt to another, then this is good for mankind and you may rest assured that our world is closely standing by, because as you know, so many times has mankind misused the information that has been passed to him.

George: Indeed, yes. It certainly seems an efficient way of re-growing areas of cells on the body.

Yes. It is a way to utilize and to help, but once Spirit is involved, or Spirit is used in any way, then it is, how shall we say, it is upsetting the balance of life and it is interference.

George: This would be interfering with creation.

Yes, and this can never be.

George: If this were to happen, then I could see that the possibility would be to have several biologically identical humans, but the Spirits within would not be identical, so we would not really have identical beings anyway.

No, there would always be differences and it is not a good pathway to follow and everything will be done from our world to help those who have this knowledge to use it only for good.

George: That's very good to know, thank you.

Mankind has misused so many, many things that have been given to him so many times—because of his evolution and knowledge he feels that he can interfere with all that is perfect; and this he cannot do.

George: Yes, that's reassuring to know that this area is being watched—this area of our development.

I hope that has helped you just a little. (Thank you, yes.) It is a concern to many people we know. Do you have more questions?

Graham: Yes, I was going to ask—through our days I understand the importance of positive thinking and I'm aware of the fact that quite often when we feel tired, particularly when we get fatigued, I think we often or can become more prone to becoming negative and I was wondering if this was just really part of the human condition that we need to go through as part of our development. Is this just something we need to learn to cope with or is it something that we create ourselves and it isn't really necessary.

You can stop that way of thinking, but of course it is practise, as in all things, but you, my dear friend, are a prime example of good, positive thinking for yourself, are you not?

Graham: I try to!

Yes, we note your every effort in this way and there are many who stand close by you to help and to uplift you in those moments of negativity. But it is part of the human (Yes) and I believe I would not be wrong in saying that the majority of human beings do feel at times, some degree of negativity—but it is not necessary.

Graham: I often wake up the next day feeling very different.

Yes. Do you know why?

Graham: Because in our sleep state we are in closer contact to Spirit world.

Yes, therefore does it not show you how, when you are in tune with that spiritual self, all things work for the better? (Yes) Yes. But you my dear friend are taking great strides now and I urge you to continue along that pathway.

Graham: Yes, thank you. It's something to think there's all this help surrounds us; it's something that most people are not aware of and it's very sad. I find myself now trying to talk to people about these matters—I don't think they believe me, but as you said, it's sowing seed in people's lives.

And it is a matter of asking for help for yourself—for some reason lots of people feel that they do not have the right to ask for help for themselves. If only they could but realize that each one of you is guarded and uplifted as soon as you ask—but you must ask for the help. We cannot step forward and interfere in your lives—you must come closer to us and then we can take every opportunity that is available to us.

Graham: Yes, thank you, I shall remember those words.

George: Could I mention the subject of Earth-bound Spirits? I think I understand that the Spirit can develop a firm attachment to places and to things, like to alcohol or to houses. It is said by some that there are several American presidents inhabiting the White House. Perhaps that's slightly humorous, but this is perhaps something which we should understand better that perhaps we should not form overly strong attachments during our Earth lives.

Yes, we have spoken about this before, but I am happy to remind you, my dear friend, of my words. You know that as you leave this earthly life behind, you do not suddenly change—you are the same when you come to Spirit as you are at this moment. All that is changed is the clothing that you wear—the body. But the mind belongs to the Spirit and if there are addictions, some of which you have mentioned, those addictions will still be strong within you and those addictions will draw you closer back to this Earth than any other thing.

George: Yes, and I think you mentioned around Christmas time this can happen.

Yes, therefore I would suggest to each one of you my dear friends that whatever your strongest need might be, that you relinquish it whilst you are here. You are correct, many of your houses of drink are inhabited by those who cannot leave it and cannot pull themselves from this life and become 'earthbound' as you call it—not only drink, but people, many forms of what you would call depravity in the way of killing and such like. You understand. (Yes) But not all earthbound Spirits are drawn back because of addictions, but because of the lack of spiritual knowledge—they will not let go of earthly life.

George: Ah, so there's a kind of balance between feeling of Spirit/element of Spirit and the likings developed on Earth?

Yes, yes. If your knowledge of Spirit was greater, there would be no attachment needed. You understand? (Yes I see.) Yes, but of course that is what your rescue work is about—those people who do not believe they have passed, but are not bound here by any strong addiction, only that they are afraid or do not wish to listen to another.

George: Yes, I think our experience is that theirs is more a lack of spiritual knowledge/spiritual development, (Yes) than earthly attachment.

So do you now see how important that it is, that those seeds of knowledge be sown?

George: Yes, that really puts it into perspective.

Yes. It is important work my dear friends. Do not underestimate what you do in your daily lives by writing words or speaking words or giving comfort to another. These are acts of Spirit, which will take hold eventually and may very well help one individual to go forward when their time is here. Is that helpful to you? (Affirmed)

George: It is indeed, yes. That expands what was in memory quite considerably.

It is fruitful sometimes to go over old ground, because sometimes the same words can give you a new perspective on it. I am sure you would agree? (Agreed) That is why my dear friends I will never apologize for repetition of words, because in doing so your understanding becomes greater. And remember that each one of you is developing at a different rate, therefore what one may take the first time, it may take another just a little longer.

Lilian: Yes, I think we appreciate that (Yes).

George: Would anyone else like to ask a question? I do have another one. (Pause)

Lilian: Yes, carry on George.

George: You've talked to us about psychic surgery I know, but there is a point that would be nice to expand on there. Perhaps I could mention Stephen Turoff—a Dr Kahn who died in 1912 works through Stephen Turoff. But Dr Kahn has a team of helpers in Spirit: there's a Nurse Grace and there's an Italian Dr Gino and there's a Dr. Kahn junior, his son. The number 17 has been mentioned of the numbers in the team and it follows I think that Dr Kahn is able to do a number of medical manipulations and surgery. I'm not quite sure how the rest of the team fit into the picture. I can understand Dr Kahn working through Stephen Turoff, but others seem to be able to come through and assist him at times. Could you explain that a little?

Yes. I understand your question. May I try to simplify it for you? At the moment I am using the voice of one person, but in this room there are many others who are not speaking from Spirit. But with each one of you there is a spiritual counterpart who brings to this meeting energy. Are you beginning to form a picture? (Pause) No—Let us take the gentleman who is being used for psychic surgery, as you call it. The surgery is being performed by one of us in Spirit. Yes? (Yes) He is using the body of a human being here upon the Earth. When those good people come to our side of life, who have been doctors, who have been nurses, who have dedicated their lives to other people, they often times wish to continue to help. Therefore you know like is attracted to like in our world. Those of medical nature would congregate together to work as best they could. They would join together at the time when surgery is needed and it is not surgery as you understand it, but is surgery of the Spirit. But as in this room, the energy comes from a group of people—so spiritual energy comes from a group from our side of life. Do you understand? (Yes) They are there, but they may not necessarily be seen by the Spirit.

George: Yes, they can assist in manipulation work?

They can, but most times it is to help with the energy. There is more energy needed for trance work and for work of that nature, and of course they would be much interested in how he would be using a physical body. They may well be there to learn how to do it. There are many reasons why there may be a group of them.

George: So it only necessary for the one to use a physical body (Yes) and the others can be present also and be an influence.

Yes, we need the physical presence to show what is happening, but the work is of a spiritual nature and those around are Spirit and can be of use only in a spiritual manner. Do you understand or do you need more help?

George: No, I think that clarifies. There is one point that I don't understand too well. Working on Spirit, I think there's the Spirit and there's the energy body (Yes) and I think I understand that either can be worked on, but they are intermingled anyway.

Yes, all parts are part of the same energy structure, but the physical being cannot be repaired until that—call it energy body, call it Spirit, call it what you will—until that is touched, there will be no healing. You understand?

George: Yes, because I cannot separate the two in my own mind, (Yes) I tend to talk of Spirit/energy body as if they are lumped together.

Yes, this is always the problem too, when we speak of physical being and spiritual being. People separate the two when in fact we are one. You cannot be Spirit separately from the body whilst on this Earth. You can be Spirit entirely in our world, but not in yours. You understand?

George: Yes, we can see the aura under particular conditions, which perhaps tempts us to think of the energy body as separate, because part of it is separate.

Yes, it is confusing I know, but you think of energy as a whole, as a unit that blends together. Can you think perhaps of coffee in a cup and cream in a cup—two separate items, but when blended together they become as one, although they are still two units, two separate units of food. Think of that when you think of Spirit—and it is a blending. I hope that is helpful to you.

George: Yes, thank you for that.

Graham: You said spiritual surgery earlier in your explanation. I'm not quite sure what that means. Is this where upliftment, help and guidance or getting rid of hurts? What form does that take spiritually?

It is working on the hurt of the Spirit. Until the Spirit is 'touched', the physical being cannot be healed. As in all, not only in surgery, but any form of healing.

Graham: Spiritual hurt—that's the bit that has to be touched. (Yes) That is fascinating.

Yes, always the Spirit—that is the purpose of all healing that the Spirit be 'touched' and the physical healing will then follow.

Graham: And of course the person by being there is asking for help by turning up to Stephen Turoff or whoever, they are asking and this where that can be given.

Yes, of course. (Thank you.) Well, I hope I have helped with your questions this time and I will leave you quietly in order for you to think about those words we have used this evening and to allow yourselves time to see that those who stand close by you, if they are ready to impress upon you anything of importance. (Thanks + farewells) There was then a difficult rescue through Eileen, before we closed.

Eileen was away this week, which meant no Salumet this time. The first communication came through Sarah, who communicated that there were 3 nuns from a silent order, who wished to come and speak and experience the human voice for a short time, which of course had been 'silenced' during that lifetime—Audio link: http://www.salumetandfriends.org/resources/2004_03_29+rescuesnr21.mp3

First nun: Hello!

Lilian: Hello, nice to have you visit us.

Thank you for letting me come. I have been waiting for some time for this opportunity to speak again and now that I know that it is quite in order to speak, I wish to say a few words and I was told this group would be ideal for the opportunity.

Lilian: It must have been quite difficult. (In the silent order)

It was extremely difficult and even at the end I often had wishes I could just say one or two words.

George: But of course you thought a lot.

I thought very much about all sorts and I did wish that we could just say a few words. But now I am happy that I have again opened my mouth! (Laughter) And I thank you for your time.

Margaret: You're very welcome.

Second nun: My time has at last come. (Greetings) I have so wished to speak and I am so grateful to you all for this opportunity.

George: We feel very honoured that you've come to this group.

I have watched you in session on many, many occasions and I have longed to come and be part of you and to speak with you. (Thanks expressed) This time is so joyful for me and I give you my greatest love for this wonderful opportunity.

Lilian: Will it help you to move forward?

I am ready to move forward, but I had this overwhelming desire to speak one more time, before I moved away from the time when I could come back. Once I move forward, I will not have this same opportunity.

George: I can see that after being silent for a long period, it must be a great joy to just find expression in voice.

I has I have to say, been most painful not to speak and although I have communicated in Spirit and know that I AM in Spirit, I still had this overwhelming desire to speak.

George: We can understand that. (Affirmed)

So for this I am most grateful and thankful to you.

Margaret: We're very pleased to be able to do it.

(We then chatted quietly amongst ourselves, before the 3rd guest arrived.)

Third nun: My choice was not to speak, and when I hear you speak, especially of things that I would have liked to have said myself, I realise now that not speaking was quite unnecessary. These trials that I put myself through, did indeed help me to focus on many things that I most probably would not have focussed on. But I have to say, had I spoken, there would have been many things I could have passed on to others that I was of course unable to do. My thoughts were strong and many things I know I passed on through Thought, but there were indeed many things that I was unable to pass on and this I found most difficult. One thing I was unable to say and which I had a longing to say, was: why did I choose that particular profession? Why did I choose to go into an order that was so strict that there was no joy in living? The joy that I got was minimal.

Lilian: Have you not questioned the reasons, since you've been in Spirit?

The learning I received was great and I know this was my reason for choosing, but whilst I was in that order, I wanted to ask the others, 'why did YOU choose this? Why did we all choose this?' But we could not discuss, we could not answer each other's questions, we could not ask ANY questions.

Lilian: Were you allowed pen and paper?

This was so difficult. We did not communicate at all.

Margaret: It's very sad.

Sara: Amazing.

This was a most severe order.

Lilian: Do they still exist today, in our time?

I am not totally aware of ALL that goes on, but I do know that there are areas where the regime is most strict.

George: It's a joy for us to realise that your thinking is preserved and you've obviously had much thought development at that time.

When you cannot speak, you can only think. This has to be in some ways good, but in others, there is no one to guide you, if your thinking is not quite correct. You can of course get much from Spirit, but when you are in human clothes, you tend to go astray and without communication, it is very difficult to stay on the right path.

George: Yes indeed. Might I ask if you meditated in your order?

We spend long, long hours praying and this was our form of meditation. Of course there were times of great enlightenment, but there were many times of darkness and to have been able to speak in these times, would have been an advantage.

George: Yes, and a shared enlightenment, would have been very nice.

That also would have been a good time to speak, but of course if you are happy you can cope with things, but when you are not, it is very difficult to not say anything. This was my reason for wishing to come back, so that I could just express a few words.

George: Yes, it must have been a burning desire to do that.

Oh! I have longed to be able to open my mouth to speak and sometimes I tried to catch the eye of another, but at a glimpse, the eyes were lowered—we did not make contact. This was a very long period and if I were to choose to come back, I most certainly would not go into this order again.

Sara: How many years were you in the order?

I was taken in when I was 23 and I passed away when I was 84. (Expressing awe) This was a very long and I have to say at times, painful time in my earthly existence.

Lilian: Very interesting to hear. (Affirmed)

And for your kindness, we—us who have come to you this evening, will stay by you for some short time, to give what we can to you, as our thanks for your patience with us all. (Thanks + farewells)

Another then came through Sarah to give thanks and request that Sara take us on a short meditative journey, which would help us receive our gifts.

Eileen was away again, so no speech from Salumet. The first communication came through Sarah to explain the plans for the evening. Jette, a friend from Denmark was to be used. She was relatively inexperienced as a medium for speech, but had many years experience as a healer, which of course can involve a different kind of channelling. Towards the end of the meeting another came through Sarah, speaking a language which we could not recognise and George queries this with Salumet during the following meeting. There were no new teachings/information as such and was not transcribed, but the audio recording can be listened to here: http://www.salumetandfriends.org/resources/2004_04_05+jette+eveningnr21.output.mp3

Good evening. (Greetings)

I thank you for your welcome this time. Of course it brings gladness when we join as one on these evenings.

Lilian: Yes. I know you're with us at other times, but at times like this we can actually talk to one another.

I would like to welcome back into our little fold our dear gentleman friend.

Paul: Thank you very much. It's lovely to be back.

This evening there are so many who wish to stand by you all. I would say to you that as time continues, they come even closer to you.

George: That's nice to know.

Your awareness of those who come may not be strong, but I can tell you that each one of you this evening has by them a soul of much strength and upliftment. (Thanks expressed) As always it will help you with your daily lives. We have spoken recently about many things, but in particular about the state of your food crops. You remember? (Yes) I would like to bring to you this time another thought for your consumption, shall I say! We have spoken much of the civilizations of long ago. Perhaps my dear friends you are not aware that those ancients called upon angelic realms for the nurturing of food crops. Might I say to you that perhaps with knowledge growing as it is today, and the wave of thought of going back to growing more natural food stuffs, should I say that perhaps man might take a leaf from the book of the ancients. (Yes) There remains even to this present day a part of what was. After all, even in your churches this day, do they not bless the food and ask for heavenly help? It is a remnant of ancient times.

George: Yes, I think you refer to what we know as 'harvest festival' in the churches.

Yes, but it is similar also to those people who love to be with the Earth and the growing of all foodstuff. They have a love that attracts to them the elementals of the Earth, but they are slightly different from the angelic realms who are waiting for the whole of your planet to ask for help in this way.

Sarah: I think there are still some tribes today who ask for help from what they would term probably 'gods'.

Yes, there are people still upon your planet, but they become fewer and fewer. I hope my friends that you will think upon this matter and perhaps we may be able to discuss next time what you feel or perhaps even you could create your own little experiments and use your thoughts to those in the angelic realms. Yes? (Affirmed)

Sarah: It's come at just the right time for me too, because I've just made a vegetable garden, so I shall certainly call upon them!

Yes, try my friends. I am sure you would be amazed at how healthy these plants would be.

Paul: I'd imagine you could also use them to control what we term 'pests'—I know that's a bad word really—the parts of nature that damage the food that we grow.

With help from the angelic realms, there would be no disease—the plants would be naturally healthy.

George: Yes, I think there is a certain amount of relearning from ourselves, (Yes) in working with nature instead of against.

You must not allow any negative thinking such as our dear friend has broached about 'pests'. You must believe in that power and I can assure you all of your plants will be most healthy.

George: Yes, that's very profound and interesting thought. (Affirmed)

Help my dear friends is always available if you would but ask.

Sara: Presumably any type of work, whether we work with nature or whether we work in other fields, communication or anything—it's a silly question, but we can all ask for angelic help with whatever we are doing?

Yes. It will not come to you, they will not help unless you ask. They will not encroach upon your lives, but always they stand close waiting for that thought and the more those thoughts are used, the stronger the connection with that realm; then it becomes more natural for you.

Sara: Whatever it is you are doing? (Yes) It gives extra inspiration to whatever's being done.

Remember that the angels are many—and many who work with them. We have spoken of this before, but I would like you now my dear friends to use your own thinking to make the connections with them. It is their desire always to help those of you on the earthly planet. Have you any questions?

Sarah: If ever I've asked for help, I either have asked you or the Great Creator. So when do we ask the angels and when do we ask the Creator and when do we ask you?

If you go to the Source of all life, there can be nothing more. People go straight to the Creative Force when they feel and know and understand a little more about their own souls. The angels have been accepted in your world through many types of what you call religion. They are more acceptable to people, even through drawings within your literature. They have become known, therefore they are more acceptable to people. The Creative Force as you speak of it, is not available to that many people, because they do not have that awareness or understanding.

George: Yes, perhaps imagination or visualization comes into it, because, as you say, there is mention and there are illustrations in the literature and it is easier for many to visualize an angel than it is the Creative Force.

Yes. If you were to ask someone who was spiritually deficient, shall we say, they would not understand 'Creative Force'—it would be too much for their thinking. But of course, to ask for help—but may I remind you my dear friends, you do not ask for help, you place yourself to that Creative Force—you know that the help is there, you do not need to ask. That is when your understanding has grown to the point of knowing. Do you understand? (Affirmed) But until that time, I would suggest that you use all other forms of energy and power that are available to you each day of your existence.

George: The times when people sometimes do appeal to the Creative Force are in times of great distress. Yes, almost when they feel that all is lost (Yes). Yes.

George: Does that belittle or change in any way their request for help?

A cry for help is always listened to.

George: Whatever the situation? (Yes)

Sarah: Would it not be that they've got into that situation in order that they can ask for help, that they are beginning to turn their thoughts in the right direction?

There can never be one answer to that. Of course it depends upon each individual and their life's situation—but yes, I see what you say. The Great Creative Force is what we all belong to; we can never be separated from it in the sense that we all belong. There may be differences for a short time, especially when you come to the earthly planet for a small period of time; then you are burdened by the physical overcoats, the physical body which demands much from you—food, understanding, clothes, every day living. But when the soul is stripped of these things, then it is exposed to its natural force and a cry for help from those exposed, will always be listened to. (Thanks expressed)

Sara: Salumet, if I become aware that, for example when I'm working, I feel that I'm in the presence of angels or light beings, because there's much joy and laughter—for example today when I was teaching I felt there was much laughter in the class, it was very happy and lots of fun and it was very lively. I felt there was something—is it appropriate then if you feel the presence just to say 'thank you' for being with us and please join with us again?

Always I would say give thanks for those who help. In that way a connection is made and they are always available to your next word. The more you connect, the stronger the connection becomes.

Sara: Yes, I often give thanks for my students and my job and I'm sure it must help, but yes, today I felt very much that there was an extra ingredient and there was more light.

If only more people could understand by giving thanks for all situations, bad as well as good, then you become empowered within your own lives, and in giving thanks you are then open to receive more. You understand? (Yes) But yes, you my dear lady friend, have always had connection with the angelic realms, although I have to say, you have not always been aware of those around you.

Sara: Yes, that's true, not until I listened to you and your words. I enjoyed it, but I wasn't aware of it.

Yes, but the more the connection is made, the more your awareness will grow. I might say, of all within our room here this night, you are the one who could make the strongest connection to the angelic realms, but it is up to each individual as to which pathway of thought they take.

Sara: Actually I had an interesting experience today, because something happened which in the past I'd have possibly hung onto negatively for longer. I felt a little bit short-changed by something that happened, but I thought about what you'd said a few weeks ago, trying to see it from the other person's point of view and also expressing—I didn't say it to the lady, I wrote it in a letter on the computer my feelings, and then I became aware that I didn't want the connection anyway and I was actually very happy and just now I've said thank you for that—in my mind I said thank you for that experience, because in fact I didn't want the connection to continue really and I don't think she did (Yes). In the past I'd have been cross about it for longer (Yes), but it was a very short-lived experience.

That shows to you your own spiritual development, when you can allow these life situations which do not sit comfortably with you, when you can allow them to pass over you (Yes).

George: Might I ask if it's appropriate for me to ask a question about what happened in our last meeting when your instrument was not with us? Is that a silly question?

My dear friend, I always await your question! (Laughter)

George: The point about the last meeting, a Danish lady whom we know as Jette, who normally lives in Denmark, but she was in this country and she had been with us before about 10 years ago, but she sat with us and she channelled and it was a lovely channelling, but at the end of the session one came through Sarah and spoke to us very clearly in a foreign language, possibly a foreign ancient language, and we've no idea what that language was. It might have been a prayer or a blessing and I was just wondering if it's possible that you could help us in reflect of what the language is so that we can get a translation.

Yes, I feel that you should look towards the Inca language.

George: Yes, well, we ruled out quite a number of languages but yes, Inca feels right.

You may find that some of what was said is of the ancient language and may not be as easily available to you as you might hope. But let me say this to you my dear friend: when those who channel come to you with strange tongues for you, where your understanding is not great of what they say, might I say to you, accept, accept what they bring to you, because the energy has been provided for them to come to you and it gives you the opportunity to think about something that does not make sense to you; it encourages you to look further afield.

George: Yes, it seemed a significant meeting and we would dearly like to find out more about what was said. Thank you for putting us in that direction. I'll see what I can find out about Inca words.

I have no doubt that you will find out what was meant to be. It puzzles so many on your planet when those in Spirit use another of a different language. Let me say this to you, they only use Spirit who are in some way connected in past times with that same language.

Sarah: So are you trying to say that I was connected with the Incas?

That is what I am saying, that in some way there had to be a time when that language would have been available to you.

Sarah: Well, actually, Salumet you say it puzzles us, I'm actually surprised that we don't get more foreign languages through, because I know English is our language, but there must be many, many people who want to come through who aren't English speakers and haven't got the translation that you have. So it actually does surprise me that we don't have more.

But my dear friend there are many who have many languages through them, but it is usually those who are giving evidence to others who understand the language. Those Spirit people who work for us to give evidence to those of you on this planet, there are many tongues used through mediums who do not understand what they are saying. It does not occur here, because that is not our purpose with you. You understand?

Sarah: Yes I do. On this occasion when this Spirit came through me, I have to say I did think it would be nice—it was not exactly a test, but I had in my mind, because we had this Danish woman—I do believe that the Spirits that come through me, are coming through me—I thought it would be a nice proof if a Spirit came through me and I didn't understand the language, then it would be real proof that it is coming from Spirit. So I was sort of expecting to have somebody come through me, but I certainly wasn't expecting to have an Inca language through me!

George: You were talking of proof as a scientist would see proof?

Sarah: It was just for my own...

Might I say to you, this word I repeat to you so often 'the power of your THOUGHT'. Do you not see the interaction between your thought and what was said through you?

Sarah: I do now, yes—it hadn't occurred to me at the time.

No. Again, it is always a problem with you that your memories seem to be so, how do you say, 'short'. (Chuckles)

Sarah: Yes! I'm very aware of the power of thought (Yes) and I often tell other people that, but that particular moment I hadn't—well I didn't know what the language was and I certainly didn't know it was one that I had perhaps used in the past, but I was very grateful for that experience and very interested too, so thank you very much.

Do not thank me. Give thanks to those who used you. Give thanks to these people who listened to you and give thanks to yourself for allowing it to happen. Yes?

Sarah: Yes. And I now thank you for those words! (Chuckles)

Paul: When I was on my travels I met a German lady who does rescue work quite similar to the rescue work we do or have done, but she does it on her own often, using a pendulum or just her own intuition and I did a couple with her whilst I was in Pai. (Pai is a small town in Northern Thailand) I just wondered if you are working on your own, sometimes rescues can be very difficult (Yes) and I wondered if it could be dangerous for her doing it alone, or if that is all taken care of?

It would depend upon the degree of spiritual development, but on the whole I would say to you that it is not wise to rescue an individual by yourself. When you complete a rescue, there is usually more than one medium, because of the impact of their energy as opposed to the one who is being rescued (Yes). You understand? Because I know that you would agree that many who need to be rescued are not always quiet, gentle people. And yes, of course there are those beings who would wish to be troublesome and it can be that unless the medium is spiritually developed to a high degree, that those entities could cause many problems. Therefore, I would say there should always be more than one.

Paul: Would you recommend that she had others with her?

I would say that would be the ideal, but she must at best always ask for protection from those in Spirit, who work with her; but sometimes you see, if the Spirit being is to overshadow, you need another to help—that is the problem. I am sure she must be aware of this, but I would say it is much better to have another with you.

Paul: Can I ask another one? (Yes) A couple of my friends have moved to France and from what they say it sounds like maybe their house could do with a rescue, but I've never visited it. The man looked into the history of the place and he found reference to a 'hobgoblin' in one of the rooms. I wondered if you could say whether there is anything that needs to be done there?

There was quite a long pause.

I will look to this one for you to see what the problem is there. I will ask those who work in that way to take it upon themselves to see if there is any problem which we can help with. I would suggest to you in the meantime that you instruct your friends to always remain positive whilst around that property.

Paul: Yes, I understand, yes, thank you.

Water! Is there water by this property?

Paul: I don't know. I will have to ask.

But they must remain positive and I will ensure that we will help, if it is necessary.

Paul: Thank you very much. I've got just one more question if there's time.

Yes, I will take one more.

Paul: When I was travelling we started playing this game whereby you try and guess the colour someone else is thinking and I thought that seemed a very good way to develop psychic power or something, by guessing colours or what is in someone else's head. I wondered if this sort of game was used in places like Atlantis by children and whether you've any knowledge of games like that that can also develop gifts—whether it's a useful tool.

I would say anything which helps with your own individual development and which feels comfortable to you must be good. Let me say, it may be that you could try when I withdraw from you this time, amongst yourselves within this powerful energy here, to see what is in each other's minds, and colour is a very good basis for doing such a thing as trying to sense, because that is what you are picking up on. Why not try it my dear friends as I withdraw from you? It will give you a little light relief. And after all, I have told you that this year of your time, much time will be given to your individual developments. So my dear lady friend, (Lilian), ay I say to you that you take charge of this little game, (Chuckles) as my dear friend has called it and see what you can achieve.

Lilian: Yes that'll be interesting. (Thanks + farewells)

We then played the game, beaming colours to each other to guess at. We didn't do very well, but it did provide much laughter.

~3rd May 2004~

Good evening. (Greetings)

How strong is your connection this time to us—I am sure that you must feel the power of connection this time. (Some agreement)

Lilian: It happens more when we are all together.

Yes, more energy is available, but not always. Tonight you almost can feel the strong connection between you. As you progress along your own pathways of evolution you, my dear friends, are becoming much more aware of your own individual connections, not only to us in this world, but to those who are part of your everyday living. There is within you all a strong light which is now visible to many upon this Earth; they are drawn to that strong connection which each one of you has with our world. Whether they know or you know of that connection, no matter, it exists, but I know that each one of you is now aware of what you give to others and that also is part of your life plan. Not one of you can avoid this pathway, because it is there is for all to see. Would you agree?

George: Yes, that feels right.

Lilian: This would be one of our chosen things to do in this lifetime?

At this stage of your development that this part of your life's plan yes. I have told you that you have come together this time for a purpose and that is part of your purpose; that your knowledge not be retained only by yourselves, but that knowledge be given to many others with whom you come into contact. This my dear friends I know you have achieved for many of your years. Since first I came to you, you have willingly and lovingly given of yourselves, not only your words, but your time to many, many others, in order that the truth may become more widely known.

Lilian: Of course we gain a lot from that as well.

You are evolving each step of the way. You must, because when the Spirit is to the fore then there can be no other way. When you recognize the true self, the Spirit within, then all becomes freedom; freedom from fear and anxieties of this Earth—you become free to be the Spirit with. You understand? (Affirmed)
Do you have any questions about this? Have you any doubts about your own developments?

George: I think we are beginning to understand simply following our pathway forward is connected so strongly with our own spiritual evolution. I think we are beginning to see that as a powerful connection now.

Yes. You see with the spiritual eyes. It has taken you much time my dear friends to realize that when you see with spiritual eyes, all of life changes, and some of you have experienced these changes we know.

All powerful is your thinking, all powerful are your words, all powerful is your connection to our world.

George: I think it was Aristotle who said of our psychic connection: 'It is not so much to learn something as to experience.'

Yes, we have discussed this my dear friend, it is the experience which is uppermost for you. Yes, how else do you learn without the experience?

George: Yes and I've a question in mind that is about intellectual thinking as opposed to spiritual thinking (Yes) and while the spiritual thinking or experience seems so simple in its way forward, by comparison the intellectual thinking is so much more complicated and cluttered, especially when it connects to science and politics. Perhaps this is why you've said on occasions that one can become too intellectual, which is a danger, or something to that effect, (Yes) and I was wondering if it is simply that the intellectual complexity crowds out the possibility of spiritual enhancement?

Yes, of course. Let me—have I not always said to you my dear friend, when first I came to you to speak, did I not tell you that always my words would be simple because you see my dear friends the truth is simple. But, yes, I agree with you, mankind has initiated a pattern of intellectual thinking, which has grounded his mind into confusion. So I say to you, always to think simply and the answer to any question you may have will also be simple.

George: This does suggest that some of our scientific methods, which involve incredible complexity in order to seek proof of some small point, I feel perhaps this is overdone and it's not quite the right pathway. I'm not sure where I'm going here, but perhaps one should either not seek ultimate proof of things spiritual, but more head towards the inner feeling of what is correct.

Yes. It is the feeling which is the most important. It matters not about proof, but mankind today relies heavily on what you term 'proof'. The only proof that you need, lies within, lies within without words, but with feeling, with that inner knowledge of what and who you are; that is all the proof that any individual needs. But your scientists do have complex thoughts, not always wrongly, because they have achieved much.

Sara: One thing I've learned is that when we are open to Spirit and we recognize the power, what we actually do becomes easier. (Yes) That is one thing I've noticed. Life doesn't need to be particularly hard work; we need dedication, but with dedication to Spirit as well as the task, the actual task itself is not so difficult.

It is the inner feeling of the problem which will help you in all of life's everyday happenings. I am afraid my dear friends that many times you are the creator of your own problems, when all so often there is no need for fear or worry. Remember what we have spoken about, about love and fear, and your everyday problems stem mainly from fear of some kind.

George: I'm happy that scientific reason has produced wonders of understanding of the physical laws of the universe, but it's when that reason tries to probe the details of spiritual connection that it doesn't seem to work.

It does not and will not work whilst they use physical thinking; that is the problem.

George: Yes, physical thinking is for physical matters.

Yes, we have agreed about this before. Until such times as your scientific minds are able to put to one side all that intellectual thinking of a physical sense, they will never fully find their answers.

George: And past civilizations that have worked wonders from what you've termed 'spiritual attribute', that arises more from spiritual thinking or spiritual awareness and not from physical thinking progression. Would I be correct?

Yes. In returning to your ancient peoples, the people of power within those communities, was always the individuals who had the strongest spiritual connections with our world. They guided the others along the pathway of spiritual knowledge, but unfortunately mankind—how shall we say, became greedy for the fruits of the Earth, and that spiritual knowledge soon became obsolete in many civilizations. You understand my words?

George: Yes, because that spiritual attribute could not be maintained as a result.

Yes, but we have approached a time as I have already told you, when mankind this time cannot, cannot deny his true spiritual self, and I am sure each one of you is aware of how much more open it is for people to speak about spiritual matters. (Agreed) There has become more freedom of speech, freedom of thinking and of course much influence from our world. I know you are all aware of this. Have you any more questions?

George: Could we say more about the period of terrorism, which the world is with at the present time? I believe the seer Nostradamus mentioned the date of July 1999 when the 'great king of terror' as he put it, would come from the skies'. I feel he is connecting with Osama Bin Laden and probably his flying to some location, where an important meeting took place to set up the cell network of terrorists we know exists, and this has led to September 11th and many other atrocities. Nostradamus also indicated that the period of terrorism or terrorist war, would continue both before and after the date given and I think he has rather cleverly put it thus. I'm thinking that the period is a very important period in which we are further developing spiritually and it's probably helping a number of people to live with fear and cope with that emotion. I'd be glad of any commentary you've on any of those points.

I understand what you are saying my dear friend. Always upon this earthly planet there has existed fear, whether it be on a small scale or a larger scale as you call 'terrorists' now, but fear has always existed. It is part of mankind's evolution that fear should be faced, no matter which way it is confronted. Much has been written about what you call terrorism today. May I just my dear friend again simplify this for you? What is the basis of what you call terrorism?

Lilian: Obviously fear.

Yes—let us simplify it: Those who commit what you call 'atrocities' are doing what they feel right. Whether it be right or wrong, black or white, remember what I told you my dear friend, there always is balance, there needs to be balance in your world for all to exist. Nostradamus indeed had foresight of many things as have many other people who have come to this world. But remember what I have told you that freewill has the ability to change what can happen tomorrow. Do you remember my words about this?

George: Yes, we accept that entirely.

Yes. Let me speak a little about what you call terrorism in your world today. Throughout your earthly history there have been many injustices by all of your nations in one way or another. There is no nation upon this planet who is free from that accusation, and we know that what seeds are sown then you must take the consequences.

George: So there is the karmic balance.

You must always look to that balance yes, before making any judgement.

George: So that might be said to be another—should I say 'useful' point about this period of terror, in being a period for balancing karma?

Yes, partly, but as you have said it is a time in your history for mankind to wake up, to what is important for him to know. Although there are many distressing things in your world—what is distressing that you may feel, but in our world we see the fuller picture. Mankind is now awakening to the realization that fear creates many things and to balance fear there has to be LOVE! Are you beginning to see where I am leading you? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, and you mentioned the principle of being able to see the fuller picture and this period is perhaps just doing that, helping us to see that fuller picture.

Yes, it is a time of adjustment for all of mankind. It is an important time in your earthly evolution for all of mankind, not only those nations who are in disharmony with each other. I say to you my dear friends, counteract all of this negativity by sending out your love, by helping others to understand what it is they need, in order to live peaceful lives—lives without fear, lives without harm. It is achievable, but it will not come tomorrow.

George: Yes, another point occurred to me that St John through his vision in Revelation, he indicated the important periods of history that humanity must go through, (Yes) period of conquest, period of war and so on, and this period of terrorism seems to be another important period.

It is the catalyst before the understanding of Peace.

George: Yes, wonderful—it's good to feel that it has an important point.

Yes, remember always there is never one level of fear or love. There is always many aspects to it and again we return to the way mankind thinks—that his intellectual thinking interferes with that spiritual thinking, and again I say to you my dear friends: that is the thinking which you must use if you are to be truly just. I hope those words have helped you a little in your understanding.

George: Yes, I'm sure those words will go out and help very large numbers of people, because this is a period of our history which needs to be understood.

Let me repeat some words to you that are well known within your world, 'love thy enemy'. And with those words I will withdraw this time, but...

George: 'Love thy enemy and do good to them that hate you.'

But what is hate but fear?

George: Yes, that's a nice connection. Wonderful!

As I leave you with our dear lady friend, perhaps you will sit and feel that close connection to those who stand by you once more. As always my dear friends I leave you cloaked in love, in understanding and with those who love you most. (Thanks + farewells)

Lilian mentioned to Salumet at the start of the meeting that it was thundering outside and wondered if it would affect the session as Eileen had a fear of thunderstorms:

Good evening. (Greetings)

I thank you for your concern, but let me reassure you that all is well.

Lilian: Good. Hopefully by the time she's back with us it will have blown over.

As always my dear friends it brings me much joy to join with you once more.

George: The joy is mutual.

I would like to speak with you this time a little about your thinking. As always I am sure you know by now that this topic is most important to you. You know and understand how important your thinking is and that your thoughts become reality, but I have to say this to you that perhaps you have not considered asking to be taken to the library of the mind. You are aware of the libraries in our world full of knowledge.

George: Yes, we are aware. Yes, it has not occurred to me, I must admit, to ask to be taken there.

Yes, it is possible and you my dear friends have reached a point in your own developments, where this may be possible for you, but firstly you must understand what you are asking. All knowledge is open to you, but let me say this to you that the knowledge that you gain will be on a spiritual level and may well be forgotten as you return to this earthly plain. This you understand, but it remains that it is possible for you to enter our libraries of the mind if that is what you so desire.

George: But this would be during meditation, would it?

During meditation, in your sleep state—no matter, provided that you have asked.

Sara: Would it possibly provide more insight at certain times, for instance when we are meditating in future, if we've asked to be taken? Although we may forget it physically when we return, is it possible that we might access some inspiration whilst meditating?

Yes. That would be the purpose for doing so. How many times have you pondered upon some question and you have not been given an answer or you feel you have not been given an answer—the answer is available to you all.

George: And if forgotten, I imagine there might nevertheless be an influential feeling lurking there.

Yes, of course, although it may not at once spring to your mind, there of course would be that spiritual influence upon you.

Sara: So in meditation or in sleep, we could ask for a particular matter to be revealed in the library. (Yes) That's wonderful!

Remember the library of the mind does not have any books, but all is available to you. I would like you to remember that all of this information can be sourced, and again my dear friends all you need to do is to ask, to be genuine and to ask in love. After all, our purpose in our world is to come and to help you in your progression. It may be that you feel your questions are irrelevant, but how can they be if they are already in your mind? You understand? (Affirmed)

George: That's a most interesting thought, thank you.

Always my dear friend that is the purpose of my visits to you that we expand your thinking, which in turn expands that spiritual progression, and although as I have said previously, you are not always aware of your own progression, let me reassure you that indeed each one of you is moving forward. Have you any questions?

George: Yes, curiously enough I've a question because there has recently been a programme on TV entitled 'What makes a genius?' During the programme several ideas were put forward regarding what does not make a genius—it does not seem to help to give extra tuition, a genius does not seem to be part of the main stream in school, he tends to be one who steers his own course/has his own thoughts, but I think from what you've previously told us that a genius results from spiritual connection. Would you care to add to that?

Yes. I think my dear friends that you would agree that many people have equal opportunities in life, (Yes) but there comes before you all throughout your history people that you on Earth would call geniuses.

George: Yes. An example would be Albert Einstein, who was actually expelled from school, (Yes) but he became a genius.

I believe I said to you that these people are influenced greatly from our world, (Yes) but more than that, they have experienced and felt much in previous lifetimes, which they have accumulated and have chosen lifetimes where that accumulation of knowledge is to be used.

George: Yes, and so their own soul connection would be most important?

Yes of course—without it they could not be as they are.

Sara: And does that also explain why certain gifts or talents suddenly blossom when triggered quite quickly at specific times? They may not show in the early life especially, but perhaps when the time is right something triggers (Yes) a past memory. Can that explain why?

When the Spirit is touched, then all of these gifts will come to the fore.

Sara: Yes, because I've notice some people are very able from a young age, but for others it can be a bit later—their gifts seem to flourish at different times.

All of you my dear friends have your own particular gifts. What is relevant is whether those gifts are necessary for this lifetime. Do you see, that all of you at some point in your evolution have been gifted? It is a word that I find a little odd, because 'gifts', as you mean, is something is given to you, when in fact all of these 'gifts' are innate within you. You understand?

Sara: Yes, I understand, but I see that everyone has many different gifts (Yes) or different—I don't know what to use—innate abilities.

Yes, but the important issue is whether those gifts are to be used within any one lifetime.

Sara: Yes, there needs to be a greater purpose attached to the bringing forth of them.

Yes, like the ones you call genius. They have agreed to reincarnate into this world in order that those 'gifts' make an impact. Does that make sense to you? (Yes)

George: Yes, so it would be largely their own soul connection. Might there also be influences from another Spirit, angelic for example?

Yes, Spirit is never alone whilst you inhabit these earthly garbs. Always there will be influence from our world as well as from the soul. You understand? (Yes) And that being also, can call upon us in our world for that help which they feel they need.

Sarah: A Spirit came through me in the Inca language the other week—you said it was Inca. My husband was taping this language to put on a disc and I was in another room and I thought to myself, I wonder if I can speak this language now being awake and to my surprise I could do it, I was speaking quite fluently. Now is this because I have an Incan Spirit with me closely, or was it my thought, or what was it?

Yes, it is exactly what we have been discussing, where your thought becomes the reality. It is that simple, and because you had the trigger of the words that thought was more easily used for the reality. Do you understand?

Sarah: Yes I do understand but...

But you are also confused.

Sarah: Slightly. So at any time if I wanted to I could come out with this language?

If you so desired, if the thought is powerful enough, but there would, I would say to you, need to be some trigger such as in meditation, or as in the instance you have recalled, where you were hearing the words. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

You are not yet at that station, where you can immediately create reality with a thought, unless you are in a state of meditation, which you were before. Again, it relates to what I have told you this time, that your thought is all-powerful, but you must have the willingness and the love behind the thought to make it reality.

Sara: Salumet, (Yes) if you're painting you are often channelling some inspiration from Spirit to help with a painting and with music I can channel when I play the piano sometimes. Is it similar with languages, you are channelling the language?

Yes, but what the difference is, is with painting and music you are providing the instrument by the hand, to be used or the voice to be used, but first you must have the thought pattern. You understand?

Sara: Yes, you have to have some understanding. (Yes) You have to have some connection with what it is you are doing.

It is slightly different from our dear lady friend, who has a connection from past times with this particular language. With music and painting it is available to all, but if it is chosen to be in this lifetime, then you will be influenced until such time as those gifts are used. Can you see the difference?

Sara: Yes, there is an influence until the time is right. (Yes) I wondered, because recently I was singing with somebody and he was playing music which I didn't know very well—jazzy music, and I was improvising, but I was very surprised by what I could do, not really knowing that type of music. That made me wonder—I know that someone was helping me, that someone must have been with me.

Yes, what you have done is provided the situation, so therefore the influence was able to come and to influence you, although you were not aware mainly of that kind of music.

Sara: Yes—it makes me feel that many things are possible.

Not many, all!

Sara: All things are possible—yes! It's very exciting! (Affirmed + chuckles)

It is a small word within your language, but it has a powerful meaning. Perhaps it is a word that you could all dwell upon.

Lilian: Any questions Paul?

Paul: Yes I did have a question. I was thinking that legends can be quite useful: They are something for lots of people to put their thoughts onto in a way and capture the imagination, in positive ways sometimes. One that captured my heart for many years was the King Arthur story. It's been embellished a lot over the centuries and in some ways that's helped in a way I guess—it's made it more colourful. I see it as one of those legends that's given people a lot of hope through a lot of dark centuries—they've had something to inspire them. (Yes) But I wondered if you could chisel out a little of the fact from the fiction.

Let me say this to you my dear friend. You are one who also thinks deeply on many things. Within your world from the time of its very existence to the present time, there have been many stories that mankind has taken to his heart. I am happy for your question and I do understand where you are leading to, but my purpose in coming to you my dear friends is not to take all of these things and give you more detail—this is a question you could find from the library of the mind if you so desired. But my purpose is to bring to you all that is true, not upon this planet, but in all matters spiritual. But what I will say to you is this: that any legends or stories, no matter how you name them, if it brings a purpose to the living of mankind, then so be it. Mankind has always strived to find fact from fiction—that is part of the human nature, and you, my dear friend, are no exception on that. I am sure if everyone within this room were to speak, they could find a tale or a legend or a story or some part of history, which brings them hope, which to them is an idealism for living. (Agreed) So you see I could spend many eons of time in trying to separate fact from fiction. I gently say to you my dear friend, we will leave that to you to allow your brain to function and remain healthy. It is not something I wish to embark upon, you understand? (Yes) I know I have in times past clarified situations for you, but that is not my purpose.

George: Could I just add that part of the King Arthur legend is searching for the Holy Grail and I think that symbolises 'seeking' (Yes) and part of your coming to us is to stimulate perhaps our seeking. (Yes) So there might be a symbolic connection there.

Yes, it does not harm mankind to seek the truth. Yes, all of these things—when the time is right, mankind will discover what is true and what is false. After all, can you all remember how long it took man to understand that he would not fall from this earthly planet when he sailed upon your seas? The information was not given straight away—mankind had to decide and seek for himself. (Agreed)

George: And get himself into all sorts of pickles on the way! (Chuckles) I was going to ask a medical question about asthma, which is one of the problems that we seem to be getting ourselves steadily deeper into, and especially young children seem to be more afflicted with that breathing problem in the world today. I feel there's possibly a multiplicity of reasons for that, which would include perhaps the use of vacuum cleaners putting fine particles of dust into the air, becoming allergic to various pollens, stress. But there may be spiritual implications as well. Could you help us to understand this increasing medical problem, which we seem to be developing?

Yes, I understand your question. Of course there is always a spiritual aspect to all that happens in your world—this you know by now. As this planet has progressed and mankind has created many abuses of this planet—this you all agree with I know. (Yes) There is a time when mankind has ignored many warning signs and you now have people come to this world, and because of the conditions of this world, there are many problems, one being asthma that you have named. I am going to, my dear friends, put back this question to each one of you before I give my answer. What do you suppose the spiritual nature is of this condition?

George: It might be losing our way spiritually?

Losing our way.

Sara: Not feeling relaxed—the breath is central to taking in life.

Yes, I will stop there, because our dear friend has hit upon the true problem. When one cannot breathe—breath is the very being of life. When one cannot breathe properly, it is a cry for help that life is not being sustained in the way that it should. Many who come to your world today know and recognize that they are coming to a lifetime where they cannot speak as they find freely, that the intake of the breath is not as pure as it should be. Those who come in this world at this time and suffer with this condition, have agreed to do so in order that mankind may see the error of his ways. Therefore, if there are so many, mankind has to stop and think, 'what are we doing wrong?' Therefore this almost epidemic proportion of what you call asthma and breathing conditions is a sign from our world that all is not well, and mankind has to address the problems of your world. And my dear friend has already quoted atmospheric conditions, pollution, all of these things.

George: Yes, and I note you said, 'problems' in the plural, (Yes) so there will be many factors that are wrong. Yes, yes, yes.

Sarah: In Mexico City where pollution is very high, there is very little asthma. Would this perhaps be because the people have decided not to come back with the condition, because there wouldn't be a chance of helping them there, because they are so poor?

There is always a reason for returning to a lifetime with any condition—that is between our world and the Spirit who wishes to reincarnate. Of course there is always reasoning behind all action and it is too diverse to go into in one meeting, but we can return another time and discuss it more fully. (Thank you.)

Sara: Do most souls have physical infirmity or imperfections?

Not at all, no; it depends on the reason for returning to another lifetime. You cannot generalize, unless, as we say, with those returning now who have agreed to return with this asthma problem—they have agreed as many to return at the same time—within 1,000 years of your time, of course—I do not mean they reincarnate together, and again, as we approach the time issue, we are getting into more complicated matters.

George: And the fact that more and more children are being affected by asthma, (Yes) would seem to connect with more people returning for this purpose at this time.

Yes, of course—that is why you are now finding that it is the young people who are displaying all of these conditions. I hope that has been a little helpful for you. (Affirmed)

George: That does explain the child aspect in this, which is very interesting.

Lilian: And also when it's children, we don't like to see them suffering so it's looked into even more I'd imagine. (Yes)

Sarah: That would perhaps be the same thing with depression. A lot of young people seem to be getting depression these days and that could be for the same reason.

It is an indication that life is not as it should be. (Agreed) All too often we listen to you in your world speak about progress, but it is not progress what you are doing to your world. For this time I will leave you to work a little with this instrument and allow you to continue with this evening and you should find that each one of you is given a little clairvoyance. So may I leave you as always with my love.

George: Thank you, and again you've given us much to think about. (Agreed)

I am always happy to hear those words and I thank you all my dear friends for that. (Thanks + farewells)

There then followed a message through Sarah, that George would be making an important discovery benefiting all those interested in Spirit realm. So the time was now right for him to be receiving this particular important inspiration from Spirit.

This was a development evening, where we all dedicated quiet time to going within, receiving individual clairvoyance and guidance and has not been transcribed.

~24TH May 2004~

I would like to thank you all for allowing me last time to work with this instrument. I hope that what you were given has been of some help to you. (Affirmed) This time I will answer any questions, but I would say to you my dear friends that there is an exercise for each one of you after I have spoken. I will explain it for you now, before we continue with any questions. It would be appropriate for you all to go back in time to some point in your childhood. There of course will be many points where you could reach back to, but we ask that each one of you use your freewill to choose which time, and to find within that time a point where some kind of realization came to you that has stayed with you throughout your life into adulthood. Do you understand? (Affirmed) I would say that you will know at which point you must begin. All of these exercises are not frivolous, but are happenings for your own development, as I promised you that this year of your time would be spent in your own self-developments. It is most important that as we continue, not only are my words important, but that each one of you feels that they are making progress as far as allowing the Spirit to come to the fore. I hope that you will agree with me. (Affirmed) Now if we have any questions this time, I will be happy to try to help you in your understanding.

Lilian: Yes, thank you. Could I ask one about when you work with your instrument and it's quiet, could you explain a little about what happens when you are working with your instrument, or is it too complicated for us to understand?

As last time you mean? (Yes) Yes, when I work with this instrument she is of course placed to one side, as I believe you well understand. But when I ask to work with the instrument quietly, then the opportunity is given to us to make adjustments and for the instrument to be taken much more deeply on a higher vibration.

Lilian: That would account for the fact that it's always very difficult for her to come back—it takes quite a while.

Yes, because I am working with her on different levels.

Lilian: She remembers nothing when she comes back.

Yes, that as may be—the time will come I can tell you, when she may recall at times what has been happening.

Lilian: That will be interesting for the rest of us and for herself of course.

But I have to say that will be quite some time yet. All things take time, all actions need patience.

George: I'm pleased to hear that in a way, because that also means that you'll be with us for quite some time! (Affirmed + some cheerful chuckles)

Always, my dear friends, your words always seem to be that of the wise one, but I hope that I can help each one of you to grow much whilst we continue with our acquaintance, and yes, I can tell you that the time is not ready for this instrument to leave.

George: Yes, that is nice to know.

Sarah: You have helped us all a tremendous amount and we would miss you greatly if you were to go too soon.

Lilian: Yes. Every problem that comes along we try to think of the spiritual side and the whys and the wherefores.

Yes, that is as it should be. Ask and you will be given—not only by me my dear friends—do not forget those who stand close by you at all times. Remember those dedicated souls who you may never know by name in your lifetime, but they are always with you. To them I say, give your daily thanks, because no matter what problems you encounter, they will help and uplift you.

George: We do appreciate their presence very much.

I of course am always with you, but as you know all of us cannot interfere in your lives, but we can help and we can uplift and we can guide you; but ultimately all choices are yours.

Margaret: Thank you for the help I get.

George: It's wonderful to feel that we are not alone in any way.

No-one is ever left alone, even those souls who feel that they are all alone, are never by themselves. It may be more difficult at times to uplift those who have gone deeply within themselves, who have no knowledge of Spirit; but they always have someone with them.

George: Certainly people sometimes are driven by various means to deep depression, (Yes) sometimes with very sad results, (Yes) but I cannot begin to imagine how those who stand close feel about that in those very depressed times.

Yes, of course they can become engulfed within the sadness that radiates from the human being, but they have the ability to withdraw and to find that peace to which they belong, in order to return to help those most in need. And remember, there are many, many, many who are willing to come to your earthly plane, to help those in despair and great need.

George: And those in despair really only have to ask...

Yes, if only they would use that one word, and to know that the help will always be there.

George: Could I ask a question about synchronicity, that we've talked about I know, but some further clarification might be possible at this stage. We talk of chance—that really links to mathematics and probability, as for example, throwing dice and there is a particular calculable chance of a particular number coming up on the die. Now I think I'd be right in assuming that what we call synchronicity always has its Spirit connection and even the numbers on dice could be influenced from Spirit, but not usually.

Yes, I understand your question, but let me put this simply for you: remember the power of thought? Do you not know those individuals whom some would term 'lucky'. Can you not see?

George: Yes, so good gambler can work the odds through his power of thought?

Yes. He may not be aware that that is what he is doing, but the mind can make many things happen, but it is the power, the force behind the thought that creates the reality. Always my dear friends we return to these same issues. All of life seems so simple to us in our world, but I have to say that you human beings complicate what is so simple. You use so many words when one would suffice.

George: Yes. The extraordinary synchronicities that come to us from Spirit, they would also connect with power of thought, I'd imagine?

I feel that we should differentiate just a little my dear friend. When you speak of dice and men who use these things to gamble, they of course have the freewill to use the power of their thought. When you speak of the mind and synchronicity connected to Spirit, we are speaking on a different level.

George: Yes. Could I give an example? We had the channelling in Inca language, which I understand is 'Quechua'. We are in touch with an Inca language expert and we are waiting to hear back from him. But in the meantime I received a postcard of Machu Picchu in Peru from an acquaintance—not a close friend, more an acquaintance, who was declaring that he had just completed the Inca trail. Now, it seems to me an example of an extraordinary synchronicity.

Yes. It is our way of saying to you that this—and I use your word 'trail' that you must follow up on, and we will help to supply all of these things to keep your interest.

George: Yes, I'll accept that entirely. I've had a number of such synchronicities and I've always had the feeling that they mean that we are on the right course. (Yes)

Sara: It's a sort of encouragement.

Yes. You might say as the human might be interfering in some way—that is our way from Spirit, to keep your interest going, to have all of these what you call 'co-incidences' when in fact they are placed before you, to keep the memory going, because we know how forgetful you can be. (Chuckles)

George: So that form of synchronicity would always come from those in Spirit?

Yes, that's why I said we must make some differentiation between actions. The one who wishes to gamble is using freewill to use the power of his thought.

George: But if we are throwing dice and not particularly thinking about it or wishing for a particular number, then the laws of mathematics will apply? (Yes) That's clarified things beautifully for me, thank you!

Yes, you must accept all of these things—you inhabit a human earthly plane, where all of earthly things apply, and of course we would not encourage any human being to gamble, when it can affect so many others in their lives. You understand?

George: Yes, what is a win for one is a loss for someone else.

Yes, you must again always look for the fuller picture. You understand? (Yes)

Sarah: That's also the balance, isn't it?

Yes, yes, but some human beings become so self-centred that they cannot see further than their ego.

George: That is a wonderful clarification. Thank you for that.

Sarah: Somebody who's very interested in this work and who I give all the transcripts to, he was telling me the other day that as a young man he had a personality and then he had a very bad accident and had a major operation. After the operation he became a different man—he was more aggressive and not willing to toe the line. Is this part of his freewill, or is this—I know you can't generalize with all things, but can you in your life suddenly decide that maybe you're not on the right course and you need to change, or is it just an accident—although you're going to tell me that accidents don't happen!

Yes, we will not talk of accidents. The laws are perfect and no matter how you define spiritual law, I can tell you dear friends that all are perfect. Do not forget what you decide before you come into these bodies. It may be that this gentleman decided that this would be the life—change of life that would suit him best for his own progress. So the opportunity came when he had to have the medical operation that would create the change within the physical body. You understand?

Sarah: Yes I do, thank you.

But of course, as you full well know my dear friends, the power of your thoughts can create much within your lives and you have to accept responsibility for all thoughts that you create, and I am sure by now you fully understand that some thoughts are more powerful than others. (Affirmed) You have to have the recognition of the power of your thinking. Each one of you my dear friends—and I have said this many times to you before, you create your own reality. No one else is responsible for your thinking. Never blame another for the thoughts that you have as an individual. So again I bring you to thinking about your thoughts.

Lilian: Any more questions?

Sarah: I just wanted to say I know Salumet that you never want any thanks, but this particular person, he keeps thanking me for all the help your words have given him, so I'm just passing that on to you. He is very grateful and it's changed his life and it's changed his daughter's life immensely. So he's very grateful.

That is why my dear friends I draw each one of you close each time we meet, because this group has done much to make the truth known—you cannot in your lifetime do more. You can improve your own lifestyles and your own thinking, but to spread the words of truth is what we are about. I have said to you previously, if you touch one human being in a lifetime, then you can feel that your work has been done. So I, my dear friend, return the thanks to you. (Thanks expressed)

Sara: I just wanted to ask on behalf of my neighbour. Two evenings ago he felt that he had a visit from a Spirit from the darker realms and he felt that he had been manhandled physically, because under his arms felt a bit sore the next morning. The incident frightened him and there were a number of not very pleasant messages. He was told that he (the Spirit) had been sent to show him that there are darker realms also. Anyway, because he was frightened, we suggested that he ask for protection in his dream state. I wonder if you could comment on the possibility of this happening to the physical and he was accurate in what he was feeling?

Yes. Do you remember what I have told you my dear friend: all experience is based on either love or fear? (Yes) This gentleman—I will speak briefly, because I do not like to personalize what I say too often, but I would suggest to you that this one has opened up too quickly to psychical things. He must learn to close down and, yes, we will help him if he should voice that concern.

Sara: Thank you. Yes, I felt that he has been through many changes recently.

Yes, too quickly, without proper guidance and help. He has opened himself not only to the love forces, but to the forces of fear. Do you understand? (Yes, I do.) You and your loved one can help him, if you so desire, but he must learn to close himself and bath himself in a cloak of love and protection. You are quite correct in that assumption.

Sara: Yes, thank you. I told him I thought that is what had happened, because I didn't want him to abandon the spiritual path which he has started to develop, because of fear.

There are so many people in your world who suffer, because they have not had guidance to open themselves more slowly in the act of love, (Yes...) but what you must not do my dear friends, is make him feel afraid. Love is there, but he needs to ask for it, with your help.

Sarah: When you say he has to close himself down Salumet, how would you begin to tell somebody who doesn't quite understand how to close himself down?

They must keep their feet upon the ground; they must visualize the cloak of light and love from our world, to encase them, to feel that powerful love. But he must visualize it first and call upon those who are close to help him. There are many ways that this can be done. Some people will use the visualization of a blind being pulled, a room divider, a cloak of love, pure light—there are many ways and it would be better for this one if he can find what suits himself.

Sara: When do you suggest he does this?

He must before he goes to sleep state ask for that protection—protection throughout his sleep state and upon waking he must give thanks for all the help that is given. (Thanks expressed) You may find that it does not come in an instant—because he has allowed that cloak of fear to enter, it may take your help for him to be free. Explain to him, all things are based on love or fear, and he has to negate the fear.

Sara: He is very intelligent, so I think he will be able to grasp.

Yes, I might even suggest that as he goes to sleep state that he clears his room with beautiful music with good vibrations that will cleanse the area where he is to sleep.

Sara: Yes, because he has received many good and beneficial messages in his sleep state of late, it was a big surprise to him to have something negative.

Yes, whether he recognizes it or not, it is only that he is too open. In all the cases of opening yourself psychically, there must be control, there must be discipline and there must always be love. No one should ever sit in anticipation of anything other than love.

Sara: Yes that's right, I understand that and spiritual development and service I'd imagine over time brings protection?

I would suggest to anyone opening themselves up, to sit with someone who has some experience, because this is what happens and there are many people within your world who are called insane, because they cannot deal with all of these psychic events.

Sara: Yes, I've come across this before.

Yes, but you can help.

Sara: Thank you, yes. And because I've started to sit myself for mediumship, the only protection that I'm doing is a prayer before and after, but the same would apply to me, would it?

You are already protected my dear friend—because you come here, you understand what is happening, you are automatically protected. But it does not—it does not matter if you don't, but it is always accepted gratefully to those who protect you, to hear your words, to ask for help and to thank them.

Sara: I'll do that yes, thank you.

You must always sit always in love and never in any place where there have been vibrations of anger or negative vibrations, you understand?

Sara: Yes I do see that, yes.

You should always choose one spot that is filled with love and as time continues then you build a barrier to all of these negative thoughts. I hope that has helped you. (Thanks expressed) Now my dear friends, I will leave you this time; I am sure you have much again to think about, (Agreed) and I will leave you with our dear lady to sit quietly and to discuss afterwards what points you find have been relevant from a young age. Each one of you will be helped with this, so I leave you all with my love and my protection. (Thanks + farewells)

Unfortunately, there were no further meetings for a number of weeks, but there is always good reason for these breaks and we certainly had much to think about and practice during the break.

~26TH July 2004~

Good evening.

Lilian: Lovely to be together again this evening.

Your welcome as always fills me with great joy and love. Always when we come together on these evenings, it is a great joy for me to see the love which shines forth from each one of you.

Lilian: It really is lovely to have you back—to be able to speak to you.

Yes, I was about to say, always I am with you, although I would say, mostly you seem to be unaware of my presence in your daily lives, but matter not, I always will be there for each one of you.

George: That's very nice to know. Perhaps we should work on this, becoming more aware? (Yes)

Sarah: I think we also know that you will always be there for us Salumet, so even if we've not recognized it, we know that you are around.

Yes. Remember my dear friends what I have told you in the past: I am the whisper in your ear, I am the smile upon your lips, I am the inspiration that you seek in those times of troubles in particular, when you feel that some upliftment is needed. Always I am there in some form.

Lilian: I'd like to say 'thank you' for listening to me in the last few weeks.

Yes, your words are never lost my dear child.

Lilian: It's just sometimes things don't happen as quickly as we hope or would wish.

Yes, again this is an earthly problem of patience of time, but our side of life does not see time in quite the same way as all of you. Again I will repeat to you: see the fuller and the wider picture, the fuller scheme of your lives. Each incident, each time of happiness of sadness, of worry of escapism, which some of you can relate to at some point—they are all the building blocks of your spiritual nature.

Sarah: I think sometimes though we feel that time is running out on us a bit, so that's why we get impatient.

But your time of physical life, is as you say, 'running out', but it is running out to a better time, to a time of returning home, where all who know and love you throughout many lifetimes will be there to greet you. So, try not to feel that physical time is all important, it is but a blink of your eye. One lifetime is but nothing in time in memoriam.

Lilian: Yes, I try to think of that as well.

George: Yes, that seems a very wide picture indeed.

Yes, it will be a difficult picture for you all to imagine, and truly whilst in these physical bodies you can never fulfil that vision. Only when you discard these physical clothes will all that is available to you make sense. I have told you that all knowledge is available to you now, but, my dear friends, each one of you still finds difficulty in erasing the physical blocks of your living; but that is the normal for most of mankind, so do not despair, but continue to work and to grow and to give love to your fellow man.

Always that is my message to you, not only to give love but to feel it, to be Love. You understand? (Yes) Love is a state of being and I know so often when you enter this room, that state of being is much easier to achieve.

Lilian: Yes! That's so truth.

George: Perhaps the first step in what we call spiritual realization is the recognition of that higher authority, but beyond earthly authority. And this is an area that we could hopefully one day go into a little more, because our picture of Soul structure and Spirit is rather vague at the moment. Would it at some stage help us to go into further details of Soul structure?

I would be willing to discuss that with you if it should help, but when we speak of Soul structure, we speak of the very essence of being. The heart of Soul structure is not something that you can clasp to your bosom so easily. It is an ever-learning process. It is, as you continue throughout the spiritual realms, something that changes with your spiritual being.

George: Yes, perhaps more to do with developing feelings than...

Yes, you are being, you are experiencing all of these feelings. It is not even what you call feeling, it is being. Do you understand the difference in what I am saying?

George: Yes, I think I'm grasping that it is not a geographical thing that we could set down on a page; it's more a development of feeling.

Yes, it is a state of being and to reach that state of being, you have to have experienced all manner of feelings. This is difficult for me to place into physical words, but when the point of feeling becomes being then you would know the difference—you just are. When you speak of feeling, it means that it is almost something tangible that you can reach to and touch, but a state of being is just that—it cannot be changed or altered, it just is. Do you understand my words?

George: I think so.

It is a complicated issue, but I am happy to discuss it with one who needs to understand.

George: What you've said does help, yes. Thank you.

Yes. We will develop it along those lines of course as we continue, but for the time being it is more relevant that you become aware of the spiritual being and all that is attached to it and to leave for another time the complete Soul structure to which the Spirit being belongs. Firstly we must move through the physical being and the understanding which physical being holds. Am I making sense to you my dear friends? If you are worried or do not understand then please allow yourselves to speak.

Lilian: I think it helps for myself when we read your words and we can read them slowly and maybe go back...

Sometimes my dear friends it takes some of your earthly years before understanding of words can be reached. That is what you find that sometimes words are spoken to you that you feel at the time make sense, but it is only in returning to those words does full and true meaning and understanding come to you after a period of time. It is because the Spirit within recognizes and becomes aware of what is being said and in unison with the physical brain, understanding becomes greater. You understand? (Yes)

George: Yes, in the past you've talked to us about soul aspects (Yes) and how the soul aspect continues to have identity for a time after returning to Soul, (Yes) after returning to Spirit. Eventually I think that aspect and many aspects merge and in one sense lose identity and yet you've wonderfully demonstrated to us that an aspect of Soul may be retrieved (Yes) and presented yet the Soul is not really segregated into parts like that in its non existence by the ...

Can I perhaps simplify this for you? (Thank you.) Let us take something as simple as an egg. Within the egg you have the nucleus, which is the yolk, you have the white of your egg, but both parts belong to the whole. At some stage both the nucleus and the outer part, if blended together become as one. (Yes) Yes, so there is some non-identity of both and yet both still contain the same identity. If you were to remove part of that blended egg, does the remainder look any different? (No) And if that separated portion be returned, does it change the whole? (No) Does that help you to understand a little more clearly?

George: Yes, thank you.

Lilian: It blends back together.

Yes. So if you try to think about these simple matters in explanation of something so complex, it gives you a better understanding I feel. Too many words are used in your world, too many complicated issues are uttered, too much is said which remains unconvincing to many, many people. I say to you this, my dear friends, as my words to you come as simply simple words, look always to a simple analogy to all questions and the answers will become clear.

George: And it's probably not quite right of us to think of Soul as a unity, (Yes) given that you have indicated that...

...it is fluid.

George: ...there is much connectedness.

Yes. It is not something that we can give one word to describe it. It is far more complex and far beyond your understanding at this time.

George: Yes, using your analogy of the egg, I'm tempted to think of many Souls as a sort of frogspawn—many eggs are joined together.

Yes, that is a very good analogy—that is what I mean: find your own simple explanations, explanations which you can understand, both spiritually and physically, because until the two are united in thought, you will not understand. I could explain in complicated detail what I feel you would like to hear, but is it not best that you find your own explanation of my words and that I give you guidance in your understanding? Would you agree with me my friends? (Agreed)

George: I'd not dare to criticise your teaching method! (Laughter) I'm amazed that you manage to convey so many ideas/thoughts to us in such a way that we can grasp them.

I feel that for all to understand, I came to you with the understanding that my teachings would be simple. They would be teachings that you eventually could come to understand and I can say to you that by the way each one of you has grown spiritually, then those simple words indeed work. (Agreed)

Paul: I sort of understand it, it's like teaching, you can lecture people, (Yes) but that is not the same as teaching.

No, I would agree with you my dear friend and of course you see it always with the teaching of the young people. If you can keep their attention, they become interested and they wish to continue to learn. If your words are complicated and not understandable to them, they become easily bored. Would you agree? (Yes) Yes, I hasten to add that I do not consider you to be as children, but I can say to you the choice I made before I came to you, was that spiritually you would be alert to any teaching that I was able to bring. Therefore I would say to you, physically you may not always understand, but spiritually you are all beacons of light.

Lilian: Talking of children, are we going in the right direction to help my granddaughter?

I think my dear friend that you know the answer to that question—yes. (Yes) I know there is concern, but give the problem up to that Creative Force and all will come right. (Thank you.) Still you have to learn that when life troubles you, you must let it go; you must place yourself within that spiritual light and trust that all things will work for the better. But I know and I understand how human you are and how often how many tears are shed unnecessarily, but still I understand those feelings. I say to you my dear friend, do not fret. (Thank you.)

I feel for this time in consideration of the instrument which I use that I finish speaking with you this time.

Lilian: We understand. She will be very pleased that you've returned to use her voice.

Yes, there is much work to do, but I need to be a little patient also with this instrument, because she too, is human. So my dear friends, I leave you with much joy, with a little more to consider I hope.

George: It's so nice that this side of our togetherness is now re-established.

Yes. There may be breaks, there may be times when there are few of us, but that connection wherever you are in this physical world can never be broken. It is a spiritual connection, which, as I told you, took many of your earthly years to establish and the light of Spirit will not be extinguished. Therefore my dear friends I will take my leave, leave the light of my love with you all and those whom you love, and let you continue with some self-development this time. (Thanks + farewells)

No Salumet this time as Eileen was away. Nevertheless Sarah was able to channel much information of interest. It should be mentioned that at the subsequent meeting with Salumet, Sarah raised the issue of giving money, presented here and Salumet gave further guidance to that given here:

Good evening. (Greetings)

This time we hope to bring to you a few of those who have been waiting to come and this is the opportunity that has arisen for them to bring word to you. They come with much knowledge and are ever hopeful that they can impart a little of this knowledge to you, but the time has until now not been right. They are all working alongside those in your world and they hope that the messages they can bring to you will help to bring out a little of the secrets that you believe are available to you but you have as not as yet been able to unravel the code that is there waiting for you. So, those who come tonight hope to give you perhaps not the full knowledge, but a little, shall we say 'key' to the knowledge that is available to you. I have come to unlock the door for them and now that I have unlocked this door, I shall return and make the gateway wide for them to come to you.

There then followed another through Sarah:

We bring to you this knowledge with much love. We have been waiting for this opportunity to tell you that we are not only here by you to guide you but to help you to find the knowledge that is available to you. Sometimes this knowledge is staring you in the face but you are not able to see it. We have been trying to get you to see some of the things that are available to you but as yet from Spirit we've not been able to get you to see the picture. What I'm trying to tell you is that when you see one who is in some state of trouble, your immediate thought is to go to the aid of that one and to give what you can on a personal basis. This is a natural reaction from Spirit—from the human form, but from Spirit the action should be somewhat different. Take for example one who has come upon hard times—your reaction would be: give this one some money—but in fact this is not the right approach. We are trying to get you to see that this one who has fallen upon hard times has fallen because his or her spiritual growth has declined and this one is falling upon hard times in order that the Spirit should awaken and in this way the Spirit will grow. Therefore, your reaction to give to this one in monetary terms is not in fact helping this one; all you are doing is putting this one back on the same level as it was before it fell upon hard times. What you should be doing is surrounding this one in light. You should be trying to give help through Spirit. You should, if you can, try to explain a little to this one that should he or she ask for a little help from Spirit, then this one would begin to realize that what is important is from the Spirit inside and not from the physical outside. There are, of course, some who are in desperate need and the monetary gifts that are given are essential, but we are then talking about those who have been put into situations, because mankind is slipping into decline spiritually and the effect of this spiritual decline in mankind is affecting those who otherwise would not be in this situation.

George: I think we are talking about certain famine situations due to our wayward politics. Would I be correct?

You have at this present time one of these situations, yes, that is created by man at this moment and this is in fact a different situation. What I'm talking about on the other level is on a personal basis, one that has been created by him or herself. One who has brought upon themselves the situation even though this person is not aware that it is in fact a spiritual decline. I wish to help you to understand that by not giving gifts in material form is a way of helping, even though perhaps it goes against your human nature. What we are trying to do is to help you to understand the importance of helping others spiritually when you are aware yourself. There are many who don't and will not understand this view, but to you who are aware of so much spiritually, I believe this is the time to let you know that the greatest gift you can give to these people is spiritual.

George: I think we appreciate that and I think that we also appreciate that a problem in our country today is that people are being encouraged in various ways to spend their money unwisely and a number of people are getting into debt as a result and I think you'd say that in that case that it is not money that they need, it is the spiritual help. I think I understand that from what you are saying would connect there.

There are many situations, but many of these situations where debt is incurred is because of the greed of that one in the first place.

George: And that is a decline in Spirit.

Greed is not healthy, so yes, the Spirit is indeed declining in situations such as these, but you are going to say to me, there are some who have spent because they are indeed in great financial need. There again the situation is marginally different, but the Spirit has been aware they would be in a poorer situation in this lifetime and this is what they need in order to fulfil the requirements of their Spirit in this lifetime.

So, can you see that each time there is a reason why these debts are incurred and if it is because they need to be in this situation, then giving is—giving monetary gifts is not of huge help and neither in the other case when greed is involved, because the Spirit needs to grow once more to make good the backward step it has taken in that instance. I hope that my message has been of some help to you.

(Agreed)

Finally one more spoke through Sarah:

This time we bring a little knowledge taken by those who are standing by. The gift that is given to you of reading the thoughts of others is paramount to the life that you have come from. This gift is available to each of you. You feel on many occasions that you know what one other is thinking and if you follow this through, your feeling will be correct. You are able to communicate with all via this thought. You are, I know, aware of the power of thought but you are not using it to its full potential. We have tried to give you this information in times when you are at your wit's end how to get one who is perhaps seeking to help them. Take a little time and talk to them, talk to them through your thoughts and wait for the reply. So many times you ask for help to help another and this you are doing through a third party, but you are able to communicate with others directly and receive replies directly, but you need a little time and a little patience and should I say perhaps, a little practice—but you just need to be aware that to speak to one other is an easy thing to do, but to wait for the reply you seem to lack the knowledge that you can have this conversation without any distance barrier. So, next time when there is some sort of communication barrier in the physical term, try working with Spirit and thought only; do not involve speech, just thought—then you will receive a reply. Now that you are aware of this situation, I think you will find that it is much easier to communicate in this way when there are physical barriers. I know that you have all tried to pass the message one way, but you have not been waiting for the reply. So, this is my message to you.

George: Could you give an example? If we wanted to influence a friend whom we feel is eating a bad diet and we wanted to suggest ways of improvements and perhaps give reasons, the telepathic approach might well work there. Is that the sort of thing you are saying?

You are able to influence others by your thought, but you must be careful that what you are trying to influence is indeed the correct thing for this person. It is much better not to tell this person that this or that is bad for them, but only to suggest and then to ask them what they think of this idea.

Get them to communicate, but do not...

George: ...impose?

...yes, or if I should be so bold as to say be careful what you tell them.

George: No, I will offer suggestions.

Yes, suggestion is much better and in the same case in the physical, it is always easier to get the person to agree to something when they feel it has come from them. So, be careful not to influence in a way that may be detrimental to them in the long term.

Lilian: Interfering with their life.

Yes, this is important not to think that what you believe is right, is in fact right. In some cases it may be, but in others it may not.

George: And in telepathic communication, material distance is no barrier. (No) But you'd have to know the person concerned. It wouldn't work with a stranger.

It would be possible, of course, if you had some idea of this person, but then if you did not know this person, you would not be able to give the information that is correct for that person only what you think is correct for that person.

George: I was thinking more along the lines of approaching a book publisher with details of the book. In some cases one finds there is some kind of block with the physical approach, but I was just wondering if it would be possible to present possibly useful information telepathically to that person.

All information can be passed and can be received, but you can only pass the information, because if you were to try and wheedle your way into this person, you may find that this person is perhaps not the right one to be dealing with your work and it could be if this person were to have your work, it could be detrimental to you.

George: I think you are suggesting if it doesn't work physically, then it's unlikely to work telepathically. Of course you can give the information, but this will only provide an earlier insight to your work. If the person you are giving the information to receives it telepathically, it will not make too much difference, because this person when he or she reads it physically, will be taken on board spiritually at the same time, so in the end the final decision will be the same, but you can pass the information on and what is needed from your words spiritually to this other Spirit will be accepted and may well help that person personally; but when we are talking about words you wish to pass on to others, the information given spiritually and the information given to the physical, the result on that person will be the same.

Lilian: I'm sure we shall all have a little go at this one way or the other, as long as we get it correct.

The most important is not to tell, but to make available the information and perhaps suggest that this information may be of use to this person.

George: I see the problems from a publisher's point of view: they are very busy people and they don't have time to read what people might send to them and this itself is a problem, so I was just thinking about the possibility of sending information telepathically instead of getting them to read something which they are very often reluctant to do.

I think you will find that the one who is prepared to publish your works will be the correct one, no matter which way you approach.

George: We have an expression from the Spanish: 'que sera sera', what will be will be, and I think that is what you are telling me.

I believe you understand my words.

George: Yes, they are very apt and profound words and yes, thank you for them.

And now those who are working with you all are looking forward to the results of these words this evening. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Greetings)

As I join with you this time, let me say to you all how much love comes to you. (Thanks expressed) As we speak my dear friends I would wish for you to see with those spiritual eyes how much is being achieved in your world at this present time. As the veils of knowledge are peeled away, there is within all of humankind the ability to collate, to digest and to express the words of truth which come from our world. There is coming the time when communications by means of your machines is growing and all will be made available through this form of communication. It is becoming known that these forms of communications now exist for all of mankind to make use of. I would like to say to you this time my dear friends that as time continues, as we grow closer together in Spirit, and yes, have no doubts that indeed we are, as we grow closer together that your own veils of knowledge will be peeled away in order for you to expose the Spirit within. Again I say to you as I have on many occasions, do not doubt that which comes from within you, because each one travels their own pathway, each one of you has your own unfoldment's to accept and so as a whole my dear friends you are the blossoming of the flower. This year of your earthly lives has seen gradual development of your own unfoldment, whether it be through many aspects of the spiritual works, or whether it be recognition of what your physical lives are about. There is no doubt that all of you have matured in some way. I do not hear acceptance of my words! (Affirmed + laughter) Yes. Always my dear friends you remain modest in your ways.

George: Looking back a few years, I can see that much progress was needed, I could put it like that—speaking for myself.

Sarah: In situations that arise I can feel myself thinking one way and can feel the people around me thinking in a completely different way, so yes, I know I have. (Yes)

Lilian: When problems come along we look at it from the spiritual point of view.

Yes. I pick only the purest of gems! (Soft laughter and thanks expressed)

George: I think earlier you were making reference to the further developments with computers and the internet and how that it becoming so worldwide in its application. (Yes) We were told some years ago that there would be a certain element of impressed truth in this system of communication.

Yes, it is a form of communication that will be available to all of mankind, not only to those who are involved in spiritual work. This is where the expansion of truth lies, that the wider field of people can be reached. And that is making great progress in your world at this time now and you will see in time to come that it will be the main form of communication for many.

George: Yes that's nice to know and have confirmed, because in spreading the word we are in a position to make use of this system and to know that this is the way to go. (Yes) So, thank you for your words.

You understand now the burst of technology and why it has become so important in your earthly lives. (Affirmed) It was not brought and given to you for earthly matters, but in order that its use could be used fully for spiritual gain. You understand?

George: Yes—and accepted, yes.

This time I speak to you generally and sometime this evening again will be given to each individual for development, but next time we come together I wish to speak to you on a particular subject. Therefore, if you have any questions, I will take them this time and then we will devote the rest of this evening to your own particular development.

Sarah: I know I shouldn't doubt, Salumet, and your instrument (Eileen) was just telling me before we came into this meeting that I mustn't doubt, but I'd just be grateful—there was one teaching that came through me and they said that people who haven't got any money shouldn't actually be given any money, they should be surrounded in light. I don't know if you are aware—well, I'm sure you are aware of that teaching, but can you just confirm, because I feel, although I know they weren't my words, but you did say that some people aren't as advanced as others and I just want to make sure that by not giving money to these people is actually the right thing, because it would be nice to think that we were doing the right thing for people in need. (Yes)

Lilian: They did say not the very hungry—they excluded them, didn't they.

Sarah: Yes, they said that those who hadn't got into the situation of their own accord, it was influenced by man, that was slightly different, but those who'd got into debt, into trouble on their own, they were the ones not to be given money to.

I understand your questions and your doubts my dear friends. Let me say this to you: Yes I have told you that those from our world teach only in as much as they know and understand themselves. The law could be no other way. Do not doubt the words given to you, but let me say to you as someone from a higher vantage point shall we say, that I would say to each one of you, to give with love can never be wrong. I would say to you, money is not evil, it is when there is great love for that money; therefore in the giving of money to one in need, how can that be wrong? But it does not mean that the communicator who was with you is wrong, it is their understanding of a situation, but again they have much to learn themselves.

Sarah: That's why I wanted to ask you, because I didn't doubt that what that person said was right, but I knew that from a higher vantage point...

Yes, you had already heard from my words that to give with love is never wrong. How can it be wrong my dear friends?

Sarah: Yes. He did say that just by giving money to these people it would not give them a chance to develop.

Yes, what I would say to you is that when you are dealing with your brothers on this earthly plane, sometimes harsh decisions or harsh decisions that you may call harsh, is sometimes the best for that person, but anything given or withdrawn with love can never be wrong.

Sara: Wanting money if you've a good purpose in mind is not wrong, (No) provided that the purpose is a good one that will benefit others—well—yourself perhaps and others.

Yes—money in your world has become a necessity for you to live your lives. We know and understand this perfectly.

Sara: I've discovered recently there are a lot of websites on our internet/information system about manifesting money/money manifestation. Thinking about what you've taught us about thought creating reality, it seems to make sense that if you start to focus on the idea of having money, then that must be what they mean—you attract perhaps situations where you can win or earn money. Is that right? I wanted to find out what you had to say about it.

May I simplify that for you? (Yes, of course) If you give, you will receive. Therefore, does it not make sense that if you are to give with love to someone in need, that act will be returned to you.

Sara: Yes, I do see that. So that is simply what it is really? (Yes) That is manifestation? (Yes) Yes it is much more simple to think of it like that.

Sarah: Then you have to be careful not just to give thinking that you will get back.

That should not be the reason for doing so.

Sara: No, but I've read some people believe in the idea of 'tithing', that is giving away for example 10% of your money that you make to others, simply because you don't need to have—often we can give more than we think. What do you feel about tithing as it's termed?

It is indeed a term. The basis of money within your world is that it supplies you with the food and the covering that you need to look after this house of the Spirit. There is nothing wrong in that. I would say whatever action is taken in regard to money you must look within to the reason why it is being done. If that reason is a good one then it cannot be wrong. If you feel that you can give without harbouring thoughts of resentment or such then that can only be good for yourself and for the receiver.

Sara: We enjoy giving and we thought for us the idea of tithing was in some way a little more organized for us—we can organize ourselves better to know how much we can afford to give, because we enjoy giving.

If that gives you pleasure and you wish to help, then that is a good motive. You use any title that you wish, it makes no difference.

George: I think one thing you're saying is that a very important part of this is that the giving should be in love.

Yes, that is a word that I would give to all matters as you well know. Any actions within your lives should always be given or received—do not forget that to receive is to receive with love. It is a two-way thing, yes.

Sara: I recently met an interesting man from Jordan. It's a different part of the world and they have a different relationship, a very protective relationship towards family on quite a large scale—they look after their family financially and I noticed that he was a very generous soul and equally he had no worry about money, because he said, 'because we all look after each other, nobody has to fear, no-one has concern'. I thought that was rather good.

That is being generous of Spirit.

Sara: —Just generous of Spirit...but I felt that many could learn from this cultural difference, I thought it was a nice difference, because they all looked after each other and therefore money was always available.

If only mankind could strip away all of their differences, if all of mankind were placed in the centre of your world and told to survive with one another, eventually all of these differences would be gone and mankind would learn that the importance of existence is in loving one another, in helping each other. I cannot my dear friends stress enough these words to you. It is the one word in your language that encompasses all nations, all people, and not only on this planet, but in the wider scheme of life. I will never cease in the repeating to you the word and the actions of Love. Without love I would not be here with you, without the love you show, I would not be able to be united here in Spirit with you. And so that must be taken from this room and you must express that love to all those people in whichever way it transforms, in order that all people feel the love that you have.

Sarah: And surely the love is extended to everything really, not just people—to the animals and...

To the whole of your planet, to all of existence and of course to yourselves—remember love begins from within.

Sarah: I remember you saying that if you don't love yourself, you can't love anyone else.

Now I feel for this time we will withdraw and allow you to sit quietly to give out what you see or feel or know and to allow that spiritual energy which is with you here, to manifest itself to you all. I look forward my dear friends to our next meeting. (Thanks + farewells)

After sitting quietly for some time, a delightful character came through Eileen, explaining an exercise, asking us to focus on one part of our body which needed healing and seeing if we could feel the warmth.

~23rd August 2004~

Good evening. (Greetings)

Please do forgive my silence as I come to you, but conditions this time are not perfect, but we will try to manage with it this time. I have spoken to you my dear friends on many occasions about thought and the power which it holds within not only your lives, but in all of existence. We have discussed briefly that there are degrees of thought. Can you remember our conversation?

George: Yes and the thought can be very, very deep and that comes from Spirit.

Yes. I have taught you well that your thought is the most powerful thing that you possess, not only in this world, but in ours and all of existence. Those small, everyday thoughts, you know well that they do not make a mark; they come and they go, although the energy will remain as residue within all of the energy of all things.

George: Yes, and we have talked about how the power of thought can affect a random number generator, so that the numbers produced are no longer random. I think that also would have to be a deep thought involved in Spirit.

It is a combination of thought. That subject we have not broached, but this evening I wish to expand upon the subject just a little more. To speak about thought would take so much of your time that I feel my dear friends that it is wise to tread carefully in order that your understanding be at its greatest. You know full well that those thoughts of love are always heard, are always used for good, but the point I would like to bring to you this evening is about 'rebounded thought'. Have you, my friends, thought about this?

Graham: If you've had a strong negative thought perhaps against another being, the Spirit world in some way reflects that thought back at the source of the energy of that thought, the person who gave that thought out in the first place.

Do not attach negative thought to our world. Does that give you a clue?

Lilian: It would affect the sender—ourselves.

Negative thought will reach out into the aether and what happens is that negative thought can be rebounded in many ways. Can you see? Not only to the people concerned with the thought, but also to many innocent beings, because that thought remains as residue within the aether and within your own atmosphere. Are you beginning to follow me just a little? (Affirmed by some) My dear friend is silent, I would wish to hear his voice also.

Lilian: I was thinking that's a bit worrying! (Chuckles)

Sarah: I know you've always told us we always have to be very careful with our thought.

Yes, thought given out with love will always reach its destination, also in some sense it is mirrored back to the sender; this you understand I know. But it is thoughts that are not strong enough or sent with love that remain to be used by others, without always their consent. This is where you must be careful with those thoughts.

Sarah: You did say to us once, Salumet, that there are people protecting—people who had just gone over to Spirit, if we were to give bad thoughts to them, there were people who protected those people (Yes) in Spirit to stop the thought going through.

If the thought is directed to one who is already in our world, then of course there are those whose work entails just such a job to do, to protect and to redirect that thinking.

Lilian: But not to people on the planet?

It can be dissipated a little at times, but no, we are speaking of thought that is almost in limbo if you like. Do you understand? (Yes)

Sarah: So, when you say it will be redirected, where will it be redirected to? The negative thought towards somebody in Spirit, you said it can be dissipated a little, but you said it can also be redirected; so where will they redirect a negative thought to?

Thought can be transmuted when it reaches our world. This is something I feel you are not quite ready to understand, but in our world all of these things can occur without too much or too many problems.

George: One thing you are saying is that we should be positive in our thinking and our approach to life.

(Yes) We should not be half-hearted with our thinking; this can lead to problems.

To be over-generous with thought, not only negative thought but all thought; if it is not directed correctly, you have many thoughts which exist—it is a residue of thought which can be tapped into. You understand—tapped into by those souls on your Earth who do not have the strength or belief that you do and are unable to protect themselves. Have you never my dear friends wondered, why it is that some of your fellow human beings would seem always to be, how do you say 'unlucky in life' or that life never treats them kindly? (Yes) Sometimes but not always—sometimes it is because their own energy is absorbing some of the residue of thoughts that exist. Do you begin to understand? (Affirmed)

Sara: Yes, because their protective armour isn't strong enough. (Yes) I understand!

George: Does this thought residue—is it part of or is it connected in any way with what we call the collective consciousness, or is that something quite separate?

That is separate from what we are discussing this time.

Sara: Can I say consensus thinking, the way a lot of people think, (Yes) perhaps materially and in a slightly unloving way—the way that many minds think, not always in the highest way. (Yes) There is such a thing as mass thinking/consensus thinking.

Yes. What I am trying to get you to realize this time is that thought is not as simple as I have put it to you in time past; it is a much more complicated force. It is a force that belongs to your world, to our world and to many other worlds within many universes. It is not for the Earth people only.

Sarah: So does that mean that not all existence has thought? You said some planets, not all. What happens to those—I say people but they are not all people—do they not have thought, do they not need thought?

All of existence has some form of thought. You cannot exclude—it may be that the energy would be called another thing rather than thought, but thought is the word for the energy that you human beings use. I can tell you that on this planet at this time, there are those of your scientists studying and trying to prove that thought exists.

Lilian: I think we can begin to see that it is a most powerful thing that exists, apart from love.

Yes, it is most powerful and this I have always tried to teach you.

Sara: But could we say that until we learn to master thought in ourselves, we can be to some extent vulnerable to the negative mass thinking?

All of you my dear child are open to thought which is around you. Not only the thoughts of your fellow man, but, as I have said, that residue of thought that has found no 'target' shall we say—perhaps that would describe it better for you.

Sarah: You say that once something has been created it never goes away. What is going to happen, because there're a lot of—I'm talking about people on this Earth at the moment who have negative thoughts that are being accumulated in the aether or wherever they are going. Can eventually—you said that eventually the world is going to be a loving place and the thoughts will be of love later on—what will happen to all these negative thoughts? Will it just be that because people are becoming more aware that they need to give out loving thoughts and not negative thoughts that they will then be protected? Otherwise I can just see that it will become a vicious circle.

My dear friend you are becoming, how do you say, 'bogged down' under your thinking. Do not forget that we have light workers whose job it is to try to transmute some of these thought patterns.

Sara: Can we do anything ourselves to try to directly transmute...

You can send love for any negative thoughts that you feel may be around. When you become sensitive enough, you feel within atmosphere that there is a residue of thinking, which has existed for many of your years. In that way you can send loving thoughts in order for these thoughts to become ones of love, and in that way you help those workers who are trying to change those thought patterns.

Lilian: I was just thinking that sometimes we go to visit someone and I'm sure we've all experienced it in this room, and they are depressed, I'll say 'moaning away', and you come away feeling down in the dumps yourself. That is basically just thoughts?

You are allowing yourself to be open to their way of thinking. You must always my dear friends know how to protect yourselves within those situations.

Lilian: So before you actually visit, ask for help before you visit?

Yes, if you feel you do not have the capacity to overpower those thoughts with love, then yes, I would suggest that each time, especially if it is somewhere that you are not familiar with, then protect yourself before entering.

Sarah: You said about the feeling. We have talked before about Spirits that remain close to the Earth and when we go into a house, we talk about a haunted house and we get those feelings. They are also just thought that you are picking up, is it?

Not always, it can be that the Spirit has remained and is Earth-bound and needs help by people like yourselves, who can help with rescue work; but sometimes there are places that, it is true, it is just the residue of thought that remains.

George: Yes, I've read accounts of people entering places with bad feelings and they go to curious ways of trying to improve this, using salt and holy water. Perhaps this is of no value at all, or perhaps it would help to focus one's loving thoughts in some way. Could you make a comment on that?

Yes. I believe I have told you on other occasions that all of these things are tools and if it focuses the mind on helping whatever is before you, then I say let it be. It is the love from within that is doing the work.

George: Yes. All else is purely a means of focus.

Yes, they are tools for helping you. So, that is fine by us if it helps you to focus well.

George: Thank you for making that clear.

Sarah: Could it also be some of our leaders who we feel have gone a bit astray, could it also be that they are picking up some negative thoughts?

If they are open to it, yes. Anyone can pick up a residue of thoughts, whether you be a statesman, whether you be a child, whether you be a man of good deeds—if you are open to such thoughts, then yes. That is why you need the Spirit within to be strong. That is why it is important for you my dear friends to cultivate the habit of going within each day, so that you link with that Spirit. So the physical body then shows and shines that Spirit within and you become protected at all times. Do you understand? (Affirmed) Anyway, I would say this to you: I would like you to perhaps if you will, to think about 'rebounded thought', 'residue of thought' and how you feel it may have entered your lives at some point and what the results of that might have been. I think you will see, my dear friends, how those moments in your life needed to be changed. It will give you something more to think about this time.

George: Yes, curiously enough there has been recently a scientific experiment concerning thought. (Yes) I wonder if I could mention this? It is to do with the random number generator machine, and if the output of the machine is recorded and then at some later stage the thought power is applied, and then after that the recorded numbers are examined, the result is found to be the same as if the thought power was applied at the time the machine was running. Now this, I think, is confusing a few scientists, but I wondered if the thought being applied is of Spirit, where time has oneness, but later, when the recorded numbers are examined, that happens in linear time. I just wondered if the duality of time here, might be the key to understanding this. The thought that is applied as it comes from Spirit, would it be in a sort of floating oneness...

May I interrupt? (Yes) The thought remains as a memory. The thought does not disappear, so however strongly that focus is, whether it be in linear time or from Spirit, again this is a subject that we have not travelled the path of knowledge, but I would say to you that there is memory involved in this practice that you mention, memory of thought.

George: The thought is applied...

It matters not when the thought is applied, it still exists. Do you understand? (Yes) Whether it is yesterday, tomorrow or now, that thought remains the same.

George: Yes, so it is in a sort of 'time oneness' situation?

Yes. I am trying to simplify it for you, but they will find when they have searched a little more, that they need to examine time in a different way. They have to involve thought, memory, time and their own focus.

George: This could lead to a very big step forward, I feel.

Well I will leave that with you. (Chuckles) Now I feel there has been enough this time for you to digest. I do hope that you will think upon my words and when next we come together I will be interested in hearing your replies. (Thanks expressed)

George: Yes we have much to think about.

I can also tell you that at this particular time in your developments that with your computers, will come many answers to your scientists about thought. They are very interested at this time of your development in your world about thought, about time and in general all things which you term spiritual.

George: Yes, that's a very good thought! (Chuckles)

I will leave you my dear friends to think and I would say to you as I depart from you this time, I also leave with you my strongest thought of love, in order that it helps you, protects you and uplifts you.

(Thanks expressed) For the rest of this evening there will be some around you who will try to use others of you not normally involved in speech, but they will attempt this time to use. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Greetings)

As we begin this time, can you my dear friends feel the harmony which connects each of you within this room? (Affirmed) It would be appropriate that at the beginning of each meeting that your awareness becomes more alive to what is happening amongst you. It will help each one of you in your individual development if you were to partake in this simple exercise.

Lilian: Yes, we will do that each time we sit—together I mean.

Even when you are not joined together as in this room, you can feel the connection to one another, if you so desire. Each one of you, as I have told you before, have many spiritual capabilities, but it is entirely open to each of you whether you develop these gifts or not. I can tell you that you are capable of many things, but if you do not use these things to your best advantage, there is nothing that we can do to change you. You understand my dear friends? (Affirmed)

Lilian: Our freewill again. (Yes)

Sara: We have to put the work in ourselves.

Yes, I believe there is a saying in your world that anything of great value needs to be worked for, and I would suggest that that is quite an apt saying for you.

George: Yes, it's up to each and everyone to rise to the challenge.

Yes. The abilities are there to be used, and remember that you must ask for our help. We always stand by you, but we will not interfere. It is just a gentle reminder my dear friends of what you can and should achieve.

George: It's nice to have that encouragement, thank you.

What we do not wish to do is to seem to bring to you instruction of what you must do, because the best development comes from within. There is so much love within this room this evening, I do hope that you can sense and feel what is round and about you. It is not always so, but this time there is much that is being given to you as well as your input to us. It always is a two-way—I almost said 'challenge', but that is not strictly true.

Lilian: We thank our friends for their love.

Yes, it is time for you to think about those words and for each of you to decide which of those spiritual gifts you will use for much better use than you already have. If only I could show you your colours and your light, then you would have a much wider picture.

George: I think we already consider ourselves very fortunate to be having so much connection, which seems to be increasing all the time. We do appreciate all who contribute.

We are always humbled by your words my dear friend, but may I remind you that without your dedication these meetings could not take place. You are emissaries of Spirit, this you know, but what I wish to bring to you now after our acquaintance of some time, is that now the time is ripe for each one of you to develop as individuals; but that decision is yours—but the help is there, the help is available to you. We will discuss a little, but I would like this time a little of the time available to work once again with this instrument and as always when I am working quietly, I will leave you all in the capable hands of our dear lady friend. (Lilian) So, this time, have we some discussion?

Lilian: Would you like us to go back to your last talk about 'thought'?

I have been waiting for you to bring it to the surface. Yes, whatever you wish to discuss, I am willing to answer and to listen.

Lilian: Well, yes, I'd say for myself, thoughts that rebounded back on myself, I could probably think of quite a few instances, where I'd had maybe not very good thoughts about someone and then felt quite miserable myself. So, I imagine that would be the thought affecting me, would it?

The very fact that you have come to that conclusion, shows that your thinking time has been devoted to something that instinctively you know to have been unkind. That is a good point, but we will hear what the others have to say before I make final comment.

George: I haven't any very firm ideas about this, but I think we were talking about what happens to the thoughts that, shall we say are not 'targeted'. I'm still not clear in my mind how those are finally processed. I'm very happy that the good thoughts have good effect generally as regards their targets and as regards the person thinking those good thoughts, and I think there's a general aura of the world becoming a better place as the result of thinking good thoughts—and the reverse can possibly happen.

May I interrupt you briefly? The opposite may not possibly happen, it does! Energy is positive and negative remember—so there is no possibility, it does happen.

George: Yes. So, as individuals we've the choice to feed good energy into the system or to feed bad energy into the system.

That indeed my dear friend is your responsibility and indeed it is a responsibility that needs to be recognized.

Lilian: What about you, Sarah?

Sarah: I haven't quite been with it, but in my life I've done things that I'm not desperately proud of, but I don't know how much that's been from rebounded thought and how much it's just a case of growing up, feeling guilty and trying to make good. Maybe the guilty feelings have been impressed upon me and made me do good, but I don't know if it was the rebounded thoughts that made me do things that perhaps I wouldn't do now—I don't know. But certainly since you've told us that we should never judge and we shouldn't have bad thoughts, I've tried not to and if any that have crept in, I've tried to quash them. So, from this point onwards, I hope I'm going on a better course than perhaps I've done in the past.

And with that understanding and that recognition, you should find that throughout the continuation of your physical living that less rebounded thought will have an effect on your life, but it is the recognition and the acceptance of responsibility which will make the difference.

George: Yes, we can have a mixture of thoughts in relation to 'bad' news received, and one comes to your teaching that one should not judge in that case. And that thought seems to be a wonderful salve for not being drawn into the trap of bad thinking. (Yes)

Sara: And interpreting news as bad news, (Yes) because it isn't always. We think it is and then often later we look back and realize that it wasn't necessarily, but we interpreted it as 'bad' news.

Yes my dear friend, it is indeed your interpretation of what is 'bad' and as I have told you often throughout our acquaintance, that you do not see the fuller scheme of life, you do not know or understand the workings of one Spirit, or are able to judge the happenings that go on within your world. It is not an easy thing for mankind to be able to detach from criticism; it is part of the human form, but I say to you, it is possible. Again, with recognition and acceptance of responsibility, it can take place, and in so doing you also become better human beings. The vessels which you are, begin to shine forth that light from within, and that is our purpose here on your planet, that each and every individual first shines forth with that light of great love and understanding. I cannot stress this to you all strongly enough.

Sara: In work situations it's quite common to feel more of an affinity with one or two members, but on days when I've consciously projected love towards all of my colleagues and maybe students as well, I have experienced a really elevated feeling of walking in love and light, and it's tremendous. I don't always remember to do it, but when I have done it, I know that it's possible to receive back good feelings from everybody, whether or not I normally experience such a natural affinity.

You are experiencing rebounded thought. You have said and explained the question which I have put to you all. If that thought is of love, you will feel the benefit of those rebounded thoughts, and in the same way that those thoughts of negative energy are discharged, so they will come back to you in some form—that is rebounded thought. Think carefully each time you send those energy thoughts out into the aether: Think carefully.

Paul: That's clarified it very much. I just had the thought it would have been wonderful to have been aware of this when I was at school. All these thoughts—I couldn't detach then, but detaching is one of the important keys I guess.

The important issue here is not what has gone by in time. The problems begin when you realize that negative energy exists and still you allow it to happen. You are human, but now my dear friends you also have knowledge of Spirit. Therefore your responsibility towards yourselves and all of humankind is much greater—that is what you must take on board and think about and dispel those negative thoughts at their source.

George: Could I say that there has been some disappointing news about Sai Baba, who has been revered as an avatar by many. The news was that his behaviour was disappointing to many, but I think the answer there is that he is human as well and simply we should not judge the matter. I think that connects with something we were saying earlier, but I think it is an example of where we simply should not judge, even if one hears something disappointing of one who has been revered as an avatar. Have you any comment there?

I am happy to make comment. You speak of one whose name has become well known in your world—we have spoken of this individual before, and yes, you do not have the wider picture. All of you my dear friends possess the gifts of Spirit, because, after all, you are Spirit. There are individuals in your world whose gifts are much greater, but being within the human frame presents many problems for some. I might, I feel, mention but a few: That is, the ego, which belongs to the human form, materialism, which belongs to the human form, false adulation, which belongs to the human form. But what you are not discussing is the amount of love that was given and shown towards this one human being that helped to change the lives of many. So, therefore again we are looking at the positive and negative of a situation, and yes, my answer to you all is: do not judge. The only one who is being fooled, is that one individual, who when he returns to our world, will face himself. But there has been a sea of love for many years that has built, wrongly you may say, but again that is judgement, but if you could see that pool of love, then you would have a different picture. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes, I was asked to ask the question of you and I'm sure that will clarify. Thank you.

Sarah: On the flip side of that, you have said to us that we shouldn't take a person's life, so those people who are taking the lives of others, you cannot help but think that that's wrong and they are creating a lot of negative, bad thought in those actions—apart from the fact that they are doing something that they shouldn't do. There are a lot of people who are thinking badly towards them, because of that. (Yes) It's very difficult not to think—you give them love, but it is very difficult not to think that they—I mean, I feel that they are doing wrong, because you said that no lives should be taken, so that's a difficult one.

But that is not for you to judge. You have not reached the point of forgiveness if you can make a statement that you have. That is not for you to make any kind of judgement. You do not know what lies within the hearts and minds of any individuals; you do not know the conditions which surround such things. But of course it is never right in the sense that we understand, of taking another's life. But again, I stress to you: that is not for us to judge. So always you must with your thoughts change them from one—

Sara: Isn't it unrealistic of us to expect perfection from anyone who walks this Earth?

Yes, this planet can never be perfection, as you know it at this time.

Sara: This is one thing I often say to people who are critical of spiritual pathways. I just say, why do you expect perfection from any one pathway or anyone who is advocating something—we don't have to.

You are here as individuals to learn of that great word ‘Love’.

Sarah: I do know that you’ve also said to us, I always bear in mind when things like killings happen, that you’ve said to us that if you believe strongly that what you’re doing is right, then how wrong is it?

You can never make judgement on a wide scale—that brings many difficulties, but each individual who comes to our world, has to face all decisions that have been made by them. They have to see that Spirit as it truly is. Only then will there be recognition of what has been done in love and what has been done with negative energy. That is what in traditional religions is called the Judgement Day.

Sara: We have an expression: don’t throw out the baby with the bathwater.

I am not aware of that one.

Sara: Don’t throw away what is good with what is not good.

Yes, I accept the meaning of the saying, but that is a new saying for me. Thank you, I will keep that.

(Chuckles)

Sara: It’s actually ludicrous really to take one error and say that a person’s life is worthless or meaningless.

Again, that is making judgement, is it not? (Yes) Yes. Are there more questions or shall we leave you with our dear lady friend to see what continues for this evening, whilst I continue to work with this instrument? (Agreed) I know my dear friends that when you leave here this evening there will be a feeling of great upliftment, because the love within this room this evening is of such a degree as I have not felt before.

Thanks and farewells + special thanks from Margaret for all the prayers that had helped her through a difficult patch.

There followed one through Eileen, and it was believed afterwards that this may well have been Joseph Merrick, which was later confirmed by Salumet. Communication was slow at first, but is fine after a short while—audio link: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EQeLuvu7658>

Not church...

Lilian: Your instrument did have a bit of a troubling cough, which is probably not helping.

...using voice...I been given opportunity to come to you—to come to you with all this disfigurements. I am being helped to come to you with a helper, but had to make this transition this time. Can you hear me? (Affirmed) I have been told this one will be looked after. If her voice or head is uncomfortable, she is to get some healing. (Agreed) I want to say thank you for allowing me to come with such terrible disfigurement. (Sitters stressed that it was a pleasure)

Lilian: You do know that you don’t have this disfigurement now in Spirit?

Yes, but it necessary one time—this time—and I had permission to use this one. I don’t know who allowed it, but I am eternally grateful.

Lilian: She’s a very kind soul, (Eileen) she won’t mind.

I was responsible for her voice.

Lilian: I see. When you go back, you will be able to move forward, will you?

I am going to help people like me, to come to people like you. (Thanks expressed)

Lilian: We will give disabled people our thoughts when we sit quietly.

I hope my condition have not distressed you too much.

Sarah: Not at all, we are pleased that you came to us. (Agreed)

Lilian: We’ll make sure the lady you’re using is fine when you’ve gone back to Spirit.

I’ve been told she’ll be well looked after, but just in case, because it can’t be comfortable for her.

Lilian: I see. Can you tell us your name?

I was called Joseph, but I was referred to as ‘it’ sometimes.

Sarah: That wasn’t nice.

But I’m not concerned about that now. I’ve got to go now, but I just feel that a big step has been taken for lots of people. (Appreciation expressed)

Lilian: We’re glad you came and said hello to us.

Yes, I don’t know your names do I, but it feels nice here.

Lilian: Thank you—come again.

I will never come back again like this. It served a purpose this time.

Sarah: But you don't need to.

No, and it's most uncomfortable.

Lilian: I'm sorry.

It's alright.

Lilian: Well, we will say goodbye and thank you for coming.

Sarah: And let you get rid of that body again.

Yes, I don't need it any more. (Agreed)

~4th October 2004~

Salumet did not speak this time. The evening began with one who has visited before through Eileen. The recording starts slightly late:

To the younger of the two gentlemen we wish to say: Have a very good journey! We will be with him all of the way.

Paul: Thank you!

But we wish to say: Be careful with your footing. If you are aware, then you will come to no harm.

George: Well, there are some mountains where he's going, I know.

We are aware, yes, but we wish you just to be a little more careful. But we will be with you on many steps of your journey.

Paul: Oh, I don't doubt it, thank you.

And we will also look forward to your return.

Paul: Yes, I will too. Nice to go and nice to come back. (Yes)

To the other gentleman, we wish to thank him, including all others within this group, for the work that they have done. We wish to say to the gentleman: Well done!

George: Thank you. Thank you, that's timely indeed, because I aim to get the book to the publishers on Thursday.

Yes, we would wish to say to you that the simplicity of the words within this narrative will do very well. But without you it would not have happened.

George: Well, we've all made our contribution, as you've said, (Yes) both from your side as well as our side. (Yes) And I certainly appreciate all the contributions that have happened.

Yes. Indeed, for us it is a great pleasure to see people who stay together for so long. The dedication that each of you give to this work is not forgotten, and in fact we help you in any way that we can, to come together at these meetings. We may not speak to you as often as we would like, but of course we know you understand the teaching that comes to you as a book.

George: Yes, that's very interesting.

I know that so many words are given from our world that so many books have been written. But I am happy to say, that those of us who have come to know well, accept that these words of wisdom will go far, as they already have done. But, within the written work, these simple words can spread the message of love and truth. That was always our aim, although not so fortunate as to have all the availability of spreading the word that you all have today.

George: We have the electronic media that does make a difference.

It is fascinating is it not? But I have to admit that I am not familiar with it. But I know that it exists and that so far there is much good that comes from it.

George: I have to say that during the last ten years, I've rather struggled with the details of it! It has not been straightforward!

Yes, all the more reason that we give our thanks to you. We do know and understand the struggles that you have sustained. But it makes our thanks even more so.

George: Your words are very much appreciated. It is very nice that you give us that encouragement.

And, of course, we cannot forget to thank your dear lady who allows these meetings to happen. (Lilian)
Without her generosity of Spirit, it would be much more difficult, would it not? (Agreed)

George: And we do realise the many on your side during these meetings. Might I ask if you are a frequent visitor here?

Since first I came to you I have observed many times, and of course, I too am still learning. But I always return to those who speak the simple word truthfully. I am always drawn to the simplicity of the word, because I feel that although it might seem, how shall I say, very appropriate at times to use the longer words of your language, always the simple word, as you well know, has sometimes has greater impact.

George: Yes indeed, I do agree with you. (Yes) I'm trying to write for some of us who are more scientific, as well, and I must admit I've put in just a few longer words. (Chuckles)

Well, we would not expect anything other than that from you! (More chuckles) But all I will say is that I, in particular am attracted to the simple words of truth, because I now realise that the simple word has greater impact sometimes and for the majority of your population, the simple word is more easily digested.

George: I'm sure that's very true, yes. (Yes)

Lilian: So do you listen in when our friend comes with his teaching?

I have been honoured at times to listen to teaching, not here with you, but in our world. I do inhabit, shall I say, the Halls of Learning at certain times. But do also like to return to your world at times, especially to dedicated groups such as yourselves.

George: You spend time in the Halls of Learning, as does Leslie who founded this group.

I believe that he does frequent at times, the Halls of Learning. I do not know too much about the gentleman, but I am aware of his existence and of how he came to form originally this group of people.

Lilian: We're very grateful to him.

Yes, he was a stepping stone, if that's how you would say, (Yes) to form what you now have today. I do believe that he felt, that the phenomenon would be slightly different from what you had. (Leslie had tried to develop 'Direct Voice' before Salumet's era began in 1994)

Lilian: That's true.

But I am sure he would certainly agree with me, that what you now receive is far greater, than what he had anticipated.

George: Yes, it's the message and the teaching that are so important, and not the method of delivery.

Yes. It is not the individuals, it is the word and the truth and the love that continues to exist. But always we need people such as yourselves who are prepared to sit and allow the Spirit to come forward—and of course, to develop your own spiritual being, which each one of you does. But there are few who would allow as you have done yourselves, to sit quietly to enable another to speak. Therefore, as I take my leave of you, I will once again give thanks to you all.

Lilian: We thank you.

George: We do appreciate your words. Thank you for coming to us.

Paul: Yes, thank you for your messages.

Yes, I will be with you again, but I cannot say of course when. We must always take the opportunities when they arrive and of course, we know that there are not many occasions within this meeting place, where those simple souls such as myself would be allowed to speak.

Lilian: We're very pleased to have you.

George: I think we all rate ourselves as simple souls. (Chuckles/agreement)

Yes! Simplicity without ego, is the greatest love of all. I will bid you goodnight and thank you for allowing me to speak with you. As always, I say to you thank you and until we meet once more, my love and hopefully what I leave with you, will continue. (Thanks + farewells)

Next, one who gave her name Jennifer came through Sarah to say, with our agreement, she and her colleagues, who did not have the opportunity to sit as we do whilst on Earth, would like to join with us. They wished to enjoy the feeling of our meeting and remain with us for the evening.

Next, a Chinese lady came through Sue to make known that one would be coming through Paul, who didn't normally get used for speech. This turned out to be the first of many visits from one from another planet, who became a friend, known to us a Bonniol. The communication was rather difficult at first, but with practice, this link has improved much over the years. The initial few minutes were rather fragile, so the dialogue here begins after a few minutes:

Lilian: This instrument you are using, (Paul) is going on a journey soon. Did you ever travel?

I am travelling now—this is an incredible journey to here!

Lilian: You've been going for quite a while, have you?

I think it's best to say, I am not from this place. I come from a different—I come from another planet—I think that's the word. I am testing the water, you might say, for possible future exchanges. Then we can teach each other things. At first we are meant to get to know each other.

Lilian: I think that the gentleman you are using will be thrilled to bits that you've used him. And we look forward to more visits.

Eileen: Will you tell us the name of your planet?

I will try to tell the way we say it in our language: It's 'Pre-an-this'?

Eileen: Thank you.

It's from a galaxy you will not know yet.

George: Can you say how far it is in light-years? (Pause) Perhaps that is too difficult.

I think it's probably further than you could imagine.

George: Yes, we can accept that. (Chuckles)

Eileen: Are you of the same form as humans, here on Earth?

George: ...or do you have a physical body?

We are very similar, very similar. Only a little bigger and perhaps more thicker, with longer hair and bigger eyes, but very similar in other ways.

Eileen: And are you more advanced than we are?

Yes and no. We have broken the spatial barriers that you are still working—behind in certain areas, but some—well it's for us to broaden our...

(Tape changed-end of side one)

Eileen: May I ask you one more question? (Yes) You've obviously learned to speak our language to communicate. What language do you use on your planet? Is it with words? (Pause)

Lilian: Or do you communicate by thought? ...on this planet we have many languages.

It's the language that ... has evolved on our planet. It is not like anything I have heard on yours.

Lilian: Have you been looking around our planet? This beautiful planet...

Yes. We have so much in common.

George: A simple question: Do you wear clothing as we do?

Yes, we have our own fashions. (Chuckles)

Sarah: Going back to your language, are you able to say how you speak?

It may be better to wait for this link to improve. Then I can try. I think it's time to go now.

Lilian: Thank you very, very much.

George: Very interesting! Thank you for making the effort to come to us!

Lilian: When you come again, will you use the same instrument as you are using?

Yes, I will be glad to.

Lilian: We shall look forward to next time.

~11th October 2004~

This was one of those very rare occasions when the tape recorder failed. These recollections were typed next day whilst still fresh in the memory.

Salumet began by commenting on how the linked/shared energy within the group was especially good this evening. Lilian asked if he could explain why there should be the variation from one evening to another. It seems that it is not entirely down to us and it is nothing to be concerned about. It does relate to our mind-state and it also relates to how things are in Spirit. It helps if we are able to experience some quietness of mind before entering the meeting room, but Salumet knows that our lives are sometimes busy.

Salumet next observed that our last meeting, at which he did not teach, had been interesting and invited any questions that we may have. Lilian placed two questions before him that Eileen had requested. These were: The communication through Paul was brought by Spirit. Is Spirit now bringing beings from outside our own galaxy for a reason? Secondly, can Salumet explain to us why this is happening, when it is already difficult for most people to accept space travellers from within our own galaxy?

Several points were made; firstly that Paul is inexperienced in the role of medium and indeed there is a general lack of familiarity where extragalactic communication is concerned! Paul it seems is the favoured instrument for this source/link. The method used is (spiritual) mind projection. This is the chosen method for the communication, having regard to the protection that this group has and safety in general. It seems that there is a choice when it comes to method and this one is favoured. This is a new connection that has been achieved and there will be further communication. Whilst the vast majority of Earth populations would not have ready acceptance of extragalactic communication, the group in Salumet's estimation is ready for this. I put it to Salumet that I felt that Paul had reflected upon the matter and felt it to be a 'real event' and something to be excited about. His reply was that Paul (now travelling in Tibet and China), now has much time to reflect and the timing of the event was not accidental! My own feeling on this is that it is another major step forward and another doorway has been opened that will eventually help with world-awareness as regards Earth's place within the vastness of the cosmos. We expressed our enthusiasm for the new venture.

Graham next placed a question relating to the previous meeting when a very much deformed one came through Eileen and gave his name as Joseph. Eileen had had impressions concerning head-shape and one arm being across the body. He seemed a compassionate soul and from the details observed, Graham made the connection to Joseph Merrick, known to some as the Elephant Man. He had lived through Victorian times and into the 20th century. Salumet stated as he has stated before, names are in reality unimportant and that he does not usually give personal data. He observed, however, that it can sometimes help to have links to accepted history and he confirmed for us that this had indeed been the one we know as Joseph Merrick. Salumet added that he is a progressing soul who does not wish to be remembered for the bad treatment he received. He currently does much good work in Spirit helping handicapped ones in their way forward. I ventured that there had been a wonderful energy connected to the visit and many had been gathered in Spirit on that occasion. Salumet confirmed that this had been so.

Graham's next question concerned a detail of meditation. Observing that there are two kinds of thought: those thoughts involving words and those that are just feelings. In meditation, the word-thoughts are lost as we go deeper within, but how does one handle the feelings? Salumet's answer indicated that they are best given freedom to enter and leave. If they are given that freedom, they will eventually leave and not return.

I then placed a question on a lighter note. Seeking a little more on the tricky subject of humour, I suggested there might be times when Salumet sees us as a 'very odd bunch'. We humans drinking the milk of other species, being embarrassed if we are caught wearing wrong clothes in public and denying our own smell by using floral scents. Does Salumet sometimes think us oddly humorous? His answer was serious, explaining that he understands our humour but that the humour relates to our physical living. He sees us as the points of light that we are spiritually. The details of our physical living with the attached elements of humour are not seen from (I assume advanced) Spirit. I said that we sometimes have to laugh at ourselves. That we were told is fine, but it is all part of the physical existence and is not really the concern of Spirit.

Salumet then departed leaving us with much love and leaving time for another to come through who would be known to us, yet has not been through a Spirit medium before. It would be a first time for that one and the process may take a little time.

One briefly came through Sue to collect some energy that had been given, because it was now needed in Spirit to assist the one coming. When this had been explained there was silence for just a few minutes. Then a voice through Eileen said: "It's Ruth!" Ruth had been Leslie's wife in the physical life and passed to Spirit 1990. Ruth, Lilian and Sue had been very good friends in the early, pre-Salumet days, and it might be said that it was Ruth and Leslie together, who established what we now think of as the Kingsclere Group. In those days, Lilian and Sue would sit either side of Ruth. On this occasion, they still sat either side of Ruth who now came through Eileen.

It was a grand reunion for the three. There was laughter. Ruth declared that she must take care to control emotion and it seemed that she managed this very well. I noticed the three held hands and smiled a lot. Lilian and Sue were addressed by name, but the rest of us were also no strangers, because Ruth looks in on our evenings from time to time. And she says what a nice room it is and it was easy for us all to exchange pleasantries. Ruth has seen Leslie, Roy and others and she keeps busy. She works helping those coming to Spirit to adjust and go forward. Eventually she said that she was told her time was up and we all felt delighted to have had such a chat. I said it had been a treat and a privilege and of course Lilian and Sue asked if she would come again. And what a shame that Ruth could not stay for tea!

Lilian: As always, machines are fine as long as they work! (Referring to tape recorder)

Firstly let me say to you my dear friends I am heartened that you take so much trouble to record my words, but let me reassure you, that as you know from past times, my words are often repeated. So, do not become too concerned about any failing of your earthly instruments.

George: But we will be getting a new machine, because quite obviously it is very important material that we are recording and we wish to do it justice.

Well, again my dear friend, I thank you most sincerely for those kind words. Yes, it helps if you can show to others the words of truth and for this from my world we are eternally grateful to those of you who have the desire to spread the words of truth.

George: We do realize that we are a very big team with those in your world as well as the few here.

One cannot function without the other—remember this always. Always we are given much in the way of gratitude from those in your world, but let me repeat that without your dedication and your love of life, these events could not take place. Therefore our need of you is as great as your need for us.

George: We do appreciate your reassuring words.

I hope that each one of you felt some upliftment from last time, because it was felt that each one of you in your own way was in need of some little upliftment. (Affirmed)

George: We have our periods of being busy and that happens from time to time.

Yes. I would like to say that it would seem that at this time of your year in this country that you inhabit, so many of you have energy levels which are depleted, in the same way as your plants and trees and animals become still for the winter of your years.

Sarah: I was going to say that not having the sun makes you feel a little low.

Yes, but what I would like you to try to understand at this point in your development, is that you have full control over your energy levels. The quietness is the time for rejuvenation, and it is important for you all, especially at this particular time of your quietening down, that you seek quietness in order for the Spirit to be uplifted and the energy patterns to maintain their levels of energy. So again I am saying to you my dear friends that I am giving responsibility back to each one of you. 'How much responsibility can one take?' I hear, but let me say—and if it seems a little harsh I do not wish it to be that way, but you are entirely responsible for your own well-being and your physical lives. When we can step in and help to uplift you, then of course we do. We will always try to support and help you in any way that we can, but as you know full well, we are limited in what we can do for you. We can, as I have said previously, we can guide and uplift you, but we cannot interfere with your own free wills. But I would like you to ponder on my words this time about responsibility for your own energy levels.

George: Yes, I think we do better in that regard as we learn more about energy and the energy of consciousness, and it seems to fit in well with my reading at the moment, but I feel the more we understand about energy and consciousness, the better we are able to handle it.

Yes. As consciousness expands so too must your new minute forms of energy—you also expand. The only difference is that as human beings you have a greater responsibility for that expansion of energy that you are. Do you understand?

George: Yes. So the responsibility is ever-increasing.

Yes. It does not become more simple, in fact I would say that life in the knowledge which you have becomes ever increasingly more difficult—because of the knowledge, you have the responsibility known to you. So you see, much of my time in the past months has been to guide you to ever-widening consciousness, to help you unfold spiritually, to help you to recognize that being within, that true self. After all, in that recognition of self there lies all knowledge. And that is what we are endeavouring to do with you all my friends.

George: Yes. Thank you, it's a wonderful and sobering thought.

I hope that your minds open and expand as time continues, because there is much for you to experience, provided that the love to experience comes from the heart and not from the thinking. Remember that we have spoken of this.

George: Yes there's always the danger of becoming too intellectual and too, shall I say, detached.

Yes. Now, because we are quite small in numbers, perhaps we could spend some time with any questions you wish to raise.

George: Yes, I know there are several. Several of us have read something by a Japanese gentleman, Masaru Emoto, and he has done some very interesting experiments with various different waters. He seems to have highlighted the fact that good thoughts change the energy within water—and you've told us about water having all this energy within, but the good thought and the word and good music all seem to have an effect on water, such that when moisture films are frozen—I think he would probably freeze them on glass slides, then the little snowflake ice crystal patterns have extreme beauty, but the reverse happens when water is subjected to bad thoughts and bad conditions—then there is no beauty in the crystallization, it just forms a mess. To begin with does this make sense in your thinking that the good influence has a good effect on water?

Let me say this to you. I have listened to your words quietly and what I wish to say to you is this: This has begun to reinforce all that I have taught you.

George: Yes, that is precisely my feeling.

Have I not told you my dear friends that the power of thought is the most powerful thing that you will ever possess in this human form? Firstly, that power of thought is crucial for all of mankind to survive this physical being. (Short pause) Forgive me for that lapse, but there was input from others who felt the need to speak to you. It took me just a moment to gently say that I must speak with you, because my words to you my dear friends are acceptable and may not be quite so acceptable from another person's voice. You understand? (Yes) But many wish to speak on this subject, because the power of thought is all things; all actions-deeds start from the thought. So the simple answer to you my dear friend is that the gentleman you have named is only reinforcing what I have already taught you.

George: At the same time he seems to be proving scientifically what has been said.

Yes, he is being influenced, he is being given help in that direction, that his word, because of his standing, will be accepted by many who would otherwise deny such a thing.

George: Yes, well he's written a very good book and I think that must have quite an impact.

And again, it is a very fine illustration of what rebounded thought can do. You understand?

George: Yes. And what he has done in relation to water seems to connect with so many other things. There is on record a priest who has fed 'holy' water to a Canna plant and that plant has grown four times the size of other plants in that locality that did not receive holy water, or blessed water.

Why do you not my dear friends take this information and also what I have told you and use it for yourselves for the betterment of your own health: use the thought for the water that you drink, for the food that you eat. And we have spoken of the plants in the fields, in the gardens—all these things respond to thought in the same way that healing thoughts are given to those in need.

George: Yes, and it is on record that plants grow faster when nice music is played to them. Conversely there is one type of music that has the reverse effect—it's called 'heavy metal' I believe.

It is to do with the vibrations—this we have touched upon also, but now you are seeing examples of my words. I did say when first I came to you that there would be other sources of conformation and this is what is now happening.

Lilian: I'd like to ask a question.

May I—I am sorry to interrupt my dear friend. My dear friend who has just spoken, I do not often speak on a personal level, but I want you to be aware that at times you are becoming over-tired. (George)

Please be aware that the physical body also needs rest, that the Spirit needs to be rested also and that you must always, at all times, be aware of the need of physical rest.

George: Yes thank you. I'm sure you are perfectly correct about that. I was beginning to have some feelings about that.

Yes, we know! (Chuckles) Now if you would like to ask your question. (Directed towards Lilian)

Lilian: Yes. We were lucky enough to have a visitor from another planet and we feel very privileged, but would I be correct in thinking that other groups such as ours would have had visitors from planets just the same, in the same way? We weren't just the only group that this has happened to?

Of course, as I have just said, there will be confirmation of all that occurs within this room. I am not the only one who has come at this time of your evolution to teach. I believe I have told you that many of us have gathered at this time, in order to come and teach the truth, the truth that at this time, as in the past it has been denied, it cannot be denied this time. If only I could tell you how much effort those of us in our world have put forward to help you human beings, you would, I am sure, be truly amazed. So, yes, whatever is being told here will be confirmed from elsewhere. There are groups such as yourselves throughout the world who are doing exactly what we are doing here.

Lilian: And are ready to accept a visitor from another planet and people like yourself.

Of course. It can only be given to those of you whose minds are open to such information. There are too many who would deny such a thing, whose minds are not open to that expansion of consciousness. After all, we have spoken for many of your earthly years now, but it is not the words that are important—although they are to many, it is that your understanding and your own developments be such that your way of life and your words are the truth and the pathways for others. It is your light that will attract others to accepting the truth. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Sarah: So would you say Salumet that all those who would be ready to accept your word, will in some way find themselves into a group?

Not always. Remember, it has taken many lifetimes for people such as we have here to come together once more. One individual who is open to truth will always find their own pathway, but those from my world who have come to teach, have taken a long time to find groups such as this who are dedicated, who are simple and open-minded—and by saying 'simple', please do not take that as you understand it in your world—when I use simple, I mean purity of Spirit. All of these attributes are not with everyone. So again, I say to you my dear friends that you may regard yourselves as chosen, in as much as we have waited a long time for you. (Thanks expressed)

Lilian: Any questions Margaret?

Margaret: Only that after I've been here I go home very, very happy knowing that someone's looking after me. I feel honoured to be able to come to this group.

Yes, you see there is the simplicity of your words: that you feel honoured—perhaps honoured is not the correct word, but that you are humbled and that is who we wish to teach the truth to—people who are humbled in their thinking, people who can show love to their fellow man, people who can join together as you do without envy or greed of another being. All of these attributes are with you my dear friends and once more I will say that we welcome the love that you give back to us.

George: Could I mention another scientific area which I think has become very important and may well connect with Mr Emoto's work and that is Kinesiology—the healing through Kinesiology, which is muscle testing. Now at first a chemical in a small phial, which would be harmful to the body, if that is merely held close to a person who is muscle-tested, that muscle will go weak, but if the phial contains a substance that is beneficial to the body that muscle will stay strong. This is the principle of muscle testing and it's called Kinesiology, but the good thought, of course, can also induce strength in muscle and the bad thought induces weakness in the muscle testing. It struck me that this is rather similar to the influence of good and bad thoughts on water that the other gentleman was experimenting with.

Yes. I am familiar with the word that you use. This action has been known of for a long time in your world.

George: Yes, in our world I think about 30 years.

Yes—no, much longer, much longer, but let me say this to you, that every single cell within the human form is almost as individual as each human being. Each cell within the muscle responds to whatever is happening without, as well as the workings of the body within. Are you following me? (Yes) Now, these individual cells have the ability to work with each other or against each other and that is the power of the thought that is coming to them. Again, it is to do with the thinking of the human being, whether it be muscles, whether it be skin, whether it be whatever part of the human frame you wish to mention—it has a reaction to what is good and what is negative. But of course, as you know, positive and negative are necessary for all of existence. But we are speaking of something different when we speak of negative thought. Let me say, with this type of treatment, and that is what it is called at this particular time, that the muscle tested will respond subconsciously to the thoughts of the person who is tested.

George: Yes it is a way of communicating with the body direct.

Yes and therefore that is the way the muscles will respond, but what I wish to say to you is this: that the human being instinctively knows what is good and what is bad for its own wellbeing—that knowledge lies within every cell, every atom of the physical makeup of the body. Are you beginning to follow me?

George: Yes, so one human being is rather like a huge colony.

Yes, and that physical being has the responsibility of listening to the small voice from within, and that is where the Spirit being comes to the fore. If this is ignored, then we have all kinds of problems. The body does not listen to what it is being told. Remember that I am simplifying all of these things for you. It is a little more complicated than my words, but I am endeavouring to tell you that ultimately all of these things stem from quietness and listening to that still, still voice from within, which is your own spiritual selves. The body instinctively should know what substances are right and which are wrong for that particular physical being.

George: Yes, so the principle involved in kinesiology is really very different from that involved in Mr Emoto's water experiments?

Slightly—there is an element of thought as I have said to you, but it is for the human physical being, it is a matter of knowing instinctively what is good and what is bad, whereas the water reacts instantaneously to either positive or negative thought. Water is pure energy after all. The human physical being is rather more complicated in its structure. You have to remember this when you are making comparisons. I hope that has been a little helpful to you.

George: Yes. You indicate that while Kinesiology has been published in book form for the last 30 years, it has been known for much longer.

Yes—all it does is highlights the fault of the human being in recognizing what its own faults are. The human form should recognize instantaneously what is right and what is wrong for its own wellbeing. But again this is a process which has been forgotten and which mankind needs to reintroduce into his own thinking.

George: Yes, I get the impression it is a very important area (Yes) for us and the principle seems to be extending into charting the development of consciousness, (Yes) which could perhaps make it, as far as our understanding goes, even more important.

Yes, I agree with you there entirely. Now I feel that for this time you have enough to think about. Again my words are being repeated, but on a different subject; but do you see my dear friends how all thoughts come back to the same thing?

George: Yes indeed, you've given us a very interesting evening again. (Agreed)

Well, I will leave you this time, of course as always with much love and support in your own lives, but let us finish this time with some self-development. I would suggest perhaps, my dear lady friend, that as you are small in numbers that perhaps each one would sit quietly and see what is given to them for another one within the room. Let us see how much they have grown in their own way in using that part of Spirit, which is mind. Let each of you see what can be picked up from another. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Lilian: Yes. We will do as you say, see what we can pick up. Many thanks again.

I am always pleased to join with you and always I leave you with much love. (Thanks + farewells)

The usual cassette recorder was faulty, so there was some disruption at the start of the meeting:

Good evening. (Greetings)

As I come to you this time I am touched by your consideration in trying to capture my words on your machines; it has occurred to me just how base your equipment is still on this planet, but nevertheless my gratitude goes out to all of you.

Lilian: The other machine which is not working belongs to Paul.

We would not wish to call him back from that which is educational for him. (Yes) This time my dear friends, I wish to speak with you about emotions, which in your world at this particular time—emotions are running high and all too often we hear about good or evil. My purpose this time is to remind you all of my teaching, that there are only two emotions within your world which are of importance: that is ‘love’ and ‘fear’. And when you humans speak of evil, let me remind you that ‘evil’ as you call it is based in fear. It is a little awareness of what is truth in the sense of knowing that Great Creative Force. In this I am not speaking of religion, but of that deep personal awareness which is within every individual: that is what is lacking at this time in your world. I wish to say to you again, there is no need for fear, because in allowing fear to enter your hearts, you are opening up to that non-awareness of all that is good. I wish just to remind you gently, that to live in love, to be aware of all that is good, brings you closer to that part of existence which we know to be truth. Do you understand my words this time? (Affirmed) I ask of you my dear friends to once again think of your brothers in this world who need your help, to send thoughts of love to all of those areas within your world who are spiritually in darkness. You are, as I have said many times, beacons of light, as are many within your world, and the light of the Spirit cannot be extinguished. Therefore I say to you my dear friends, use that love which you have to help your fellow man. I know that I ask these things of you on many occasions, but it does not hurt I feel to gently remind you occasionally of these things. Do you have any questions for me this time?

George: I was just thinking one of the words in our language is ‘disappointment’ and this perhaps is one of our emotions. We sometimes see our governments doing the opposite to what we feel would be good, and we are disappointed that it doesn’t happen. I just tell myself that I think it’s going to take a little while longer. Have you anything to say about disappointment?

Yes. Let me say this to you my dear friend. Disappointment is within yourself. You cannot judge other people on their actions, because you do not know what is within their hearts. But what you can do is to send love to all of those people who you feel are not aware of the goodness which surrounds you. We too, in our world at times, I will not say are disappointed—that is a word belonging to your Earth, but those in our world sometimes feel that our love is not touching those in your world. So, in some sense I suppose we have the same emotion, but on a slightly different level.

George: Yes, that’s interesting, thank you.

Sometimes those who work in our world and who have not reached a state of unity within themselves, can also feel that their work is not going as quickly as they would wish. But the difference between our world and yours is that we accept more readily that these things will happen, but in your world you feel that in some way you have let yourselves down.

George: Yes, it often takes us a little longer to accept.

Yes. What I would say to you, is dwell only in feelings of love and the emotions that you feel that come from the love source, will eventually work their magic in your world. But again I have to say my dear friends that patience is not something you human beings are good at. (Agreed)

Sarah: I suppose that in our world we cannot see the full picture and that's why we get impatient, (Yes) whereas in your world you do see the full picture and know that it going to happen.

You must know you have to know within your hearts that what you say and do will occur. Any doubts, any fears will create more negativity. This you know also, but it is something I do have to remind you of. So forgive me if it seems that I am always repeating those same words to you.

Sarah: It's good you do, because quite often I need to think more on them and I'm pleased to hear them again.

Yes, and time as you know it here is not as it is in our world, but at this moment in time there is so much talk about good and evil, I suggest you focus on the good. Good and evil is love and fear. Are there more questions?

Lilian: The visitor we had from another planet the other week, they are very much aware on that planet of their spiritual side, are they? Much more aware than perhaps we are here?

I know of whom you speak and yes, the particular individual who came to you is much more aware spiritually, yes.

Lilian: So, in the past you've told us that at some time in the life of this planet we were space travellers. Is that how you travel—travel with the mind? Did we travel in the same way?

You must remember that to space travel does not take you far from this planet. It does mean travel throughout all of the universes that exist. Yes, this planet did have space travellers in times past, but the traveller that we speak of now was of course travelling with the Spirit—the mind; there is a difference. In the same way as your spacecraft travel now, so too was there craft that left this planet in times past. You understand?

Lilian: Yes, it's interesting.

George: Our recent friend, it seems his travelling is in the nature of 'mind projection'.

Yes, it is different. (Yes) He could not possibly travel in a way you would understand if it was not by the mind.

Sarah: Has this traveller any connection with Paul or did he just choose him to use as a channel?

The gentleman used as a channel was chosen by the visitor from another place. That was entirely his choice.

Sarah: They are not connected in any way?

No, no. It was just that the channel has been primed for some time in order for this to occur.

George: I imagine that suitability of energies comes into it?

Yes, and it does not happen just like that, although I know sometimes as you sit within this room you feel that communication is an instant thing—it does not happen that way; there is much work on both sides.

Sarah: So even with the rescues, have the rescues already been worked on for some time?

No the channel has been worked on for some time, not the rescues. The channel and those in our world who will bring those rescues, have united on many occasions, in order that rescues may take place.

George: A further question I'd like to ask is about the work of the Japanese gentleman, Masaru Emoto, and his work on the configuration of water and how it is affected by our thoughts. (Yes) You mentioned the planetary etheric being altered at some stage and I was wondering if that altered etheric acts in a similar way?

Will you rephrase that question to me, please?

George: The planetary etheric, which has undergone a change, (Yes) would that have an effect on earthly things? Would it for example configure in any way the rain that falls, or would it behave like a thought input into...

Yes, I understand. You understand that the etheric part of your whole being is engaged, if you like—perhaps that is a good word to use—that the physical and the spiritual energy is engaged together, and one cannot work without the other, therefore is influenced by each other—in the same way is the etheric energy of the planet. In the same way as thought becomes reality, so too is the effect of the etheric on the planet used as waves of energy to alter all that is around. So, therefore, my answer to your question is: Yes that change within the etheric body can have an effect on the physical planet. It can influence in many directions.

George: Yes, it just occurred to me that it might be acting in a similar way.

Yes, it is very similar.

George: Thank you, that's interesting

Yes, you always have that interaction between the two. You cannot separate them and speak of them as separate things, because all things are interlinked. Therefore, as you have the wave in your seas which affects the further part of the water, so it works from the etheric energy down through the physical. You understand?

George: Yes, thank you! I've another question: It is about our language really. We understand and accept what you've told us about soul and how it is part of a larger soul or system...

May I interrupt? I would wish to say that the Spirit belongs to the Soul. The soul is the all-encompassing being. There are different parts of Spirit, not Soul. Soul is the all-encompassing, yes.

George: What I was going on to was there seem to be a number of other terms which are derived from our science and our thinking, which all sound rather similar. And from our further study of kinesiology, there is the expression 'attractor energy field' which is described as being part of a larger attractor energy field, which is also part of a much larger attractor energy field extending across the universe. (Yes) And there is David Bohm's 'implicate order' underpinning the physical order of things and there's Carl Jung's term 'collective consciousness'. These all seem to be somewhat similar and I get the impression that our science is striving from various sides, but perhaps not quite getting there. Would you care to comment on that?

Yes. Your science at this time of your evolution is indeed making progress. When first I came to you, I told you that much influence was being placed not only upon your world leaders, but also your scientists. Science is beginning to realize that what has been said for much of your earthly time is indeed correct, but having logical minds, they insist that they must have proof as you full well know. But they are beginning to understand that what they cannot see does exist and those in our world are at this time giving much influence to them, so their understanding is greater. And we are not far away from some of your scientists within this planet who are willing to stand forward and to say that life does exist on another energy level. And they will—I will not say 'be happy to say that', because it will put forward new ideas that have for so long been denied. But yes, many of your scientists know about 'soul-connection energies' that have not been discussed before and many other things, which come from our world. They will stand tall and tell the truth as it is. But many names are given to these energies and I would like just to say to you this: that it matters not what words are used, what names are given, but if you stand still and imagine reverberation of sound that goes further and further out into your atmosphere, then you begin to get the idea of what it is about. Think of the echo. How long does the echo continue? Yes—think about it. Has that helped you?

George: Indeed, thank you for clarifying what was becoming a confusing area. And we must get out of the habit of wanting to devise physical proof for spiritual things.

You never will have all proof, but there will be events and happenings which they will find hard to deny.

George: And when all the pieces of spiritual information all fit together beautifully, like a huge jigsaw puzzle, then that in itself is a proof I believe.

Yes. Truth cannot be denied—it has been denied for too long and many have denied what they know to be true, but the time will come when spirituality of man cannot be denied. It is growing within your world, although you feel, as I have said to you when I came, that so much talk of good and evil exists in your world, but there are so many voices now that come out and speak of the truth and that is what we are inspiring to do from our world.

George: Yes, that is a joy to see and hear.

Yes, again have I not told you that truth would be given through many mediums and it is beginning to happen. Now my dear friends I will leave you this time and allow another to speak and I hope that you will find it to be of interest to you.

Lilian: Thank you. It has been a very enjoyable evening. (Agreed)

I am always happy my dear friend to try and enlighten you in the most simplest of ways, in order that our words are acceptable to you and that you can go forward in your own thinking. Until we come together once more, I will leave you ever clothed in the light of love.

(This change in the etheric is referred to in the teaching of 10 March 1997, an extract of which is in Appendix III of George's book: 'A Smudge in Time'.)

One through Sarah followed, giving further information that so many were helping from Spirit, to encourage those on Earth to move a little closer to truth. World leaders were also being influenced more at this time to bring them nearer to truth than they are at present. It was explained that they could not interfere, but help was certainly being given in every way possible. A 'Pool of Love' had been created around the world, which would help to pacify the anger of some. This was not interfering, but was merely a tool to help it was explained. There were of course many still angry and sending out many negative thoughts, but as much was done as possible to reduce the effects of the rebounded thoughts—again not to interfere, but as a help where possible.

~22nd November 2004~

Good evening. (Greetings)

As we have joined together this time I have felt that union of your light; it grows stronger as time continues. As we are nearing another end to one of your earthly years I would just like to remind you my dear friends, of what we have tried to achieve in this year of your time. Perhaps you remember my words—the words that I told you were that this time much of it would be devoted to individual self-development. A number of you have gone through a transitional time in these past months, mainly connected to your earthly families. But let me say this to you my dear friends that all happenings have a purpose and by now you must recognize that these happenings are for the growth of your Spirit selves. I know, as those come close to you also know, that this awareness has grown much within you. You must also recognize that not only have you learned many of life's lessons, but that family in Spirit—and in using the word 'family' I mean your spiritual family—those you are not aware of consciously, but who nevertheless are family—they also have played a part in your development. Therefore my dear friends I ask also that you remember them when you give thanks for all that you have attained.

Lilian: Would it be that they help us with their problems?

They help you in your problems, not in their problems. But they come close to you in times of need, in order that the Spirit may be uplifted when needed; and each of you have had times when this has been necessary.

Lilian: This has certainly been quite a year for some of us.

Yes, I did tell you that it was a year for growth. You now accept readily the words that I bring to you and for this my dear friends, I will remain ever grateful. My love extends to you all at all times, but we are fast approaching the time when it is becoming necessary that each one of you now recognizes the spiritual gifts that you each have. I would say that the greatest gift since first we met has been that of great humility in the knowledge that you have accepted, together with the love which you have given out, not only to those of us in our world, but also to each other. When we come together in another of your earthly years, there will be occasions when there will be for at least one within this room, help with your own gifts. I know that you are not fully aware of what gifts you have, but it is time my dear friends that the fullness of your gifts must be explored.

Lilian: Would the biggest gift we have be the knowledge that you've brought to us?

You have readily accepted my words for so long and there is much more that I wish to bring to you, but the time has come when individual development must go forward; it must go hand in hand with the information which I have given to you. And again I will say these words to you: that as much as we wish to help you, the responsibility for the use of your spiritual gifts mainly lies with each individual. Therefore the responsibility remains in great part with you, but we will endeavour to bring to you many who will try to help as they have done for many of your years, but for many they still feel that they are not being recognized.

Lilian: We will try to give more time to become aware of them.

Yes, as I have said, the greater responsibility lies with you. We cannot make you do what you do not wish, but we would wish to encourage in any way that we can. (Thanks expressed) You all have many gifts between you and although I would say although you do not seek phenomenon, it is part of you that these gifts be used. That is why we will endeavour to help you all we can. Do we have any questions this time?

Graham: Yes, I was reading a book and it was talking about karma and the subject of manifestation came up. There's a lot of books at the moment talking about manifesting all that you desire and the book was actually urging caution against this, because if, for instance, you try to manifest £100, then in doing that you may well be successful, but it may well be at someone else's misfortune. It was saying that you have to be very careful about the karmic consequences of manifestation. Is the book really giving a true account of how things really are?

I will reply to you my dear friend in just a few of the words that I have given to you before: be careful of what you wish for. Always be cautious with your thoughts, be careful that what you think is for the very best of reasons for everyone who is attached to you. (Yes) Again, responsibility lies with each one and of course these gifts or 'karma' as you may wish to call it, is available to all, but not necessarily for the best. So I say only be careful of each thought. Remember the power which lies behind thinking and remember of course my words about rebounded thoughts, which could then encompass what you call karma. You understand? (Yes) There is no harm in desiring many things, but it is the reason behind the wish that you must analyse. (Affirmed) You see you know already my words, because it is there within your own thinking.

Graham: In the past I've taken the explanation, but with time the understanding of it is deeper. Sometimes you have to go over the subjects over and over and over again until it goes much deeper and the true understanding comes to the surface.

Yes, that is why my dear friend I never apologize too often to you for repeating my words, because we know that as human beings you need to hear words often before the understanding becomes fuller within you consciousness. But I would say this to you that if you have any doubts about anything, then you can say that it is not that right thing for you. Always listen to that quiet voice. That is the easiest way I can put it to you. I hope that is acceptable. (Thanks expressed)

Sarah: This isn't really a question, but I was thinking how difficult it must be for leaders of countries who are not perhaps going in the right direction, and I know you are going to say that I must not judge, but there are many who are giving bad thoughts to these people and some who are giving good thoughts to these people. I was just wondering how much the loving thoughts override the bad thoughts from the people. In this case, public figures are probably being bombarded all the time.

Yes, I understand your words. Of course it does not happen in an instant of your time, but love will always override any negative thoughts eventually.

Sarah: Even though there may be more negative thoughts than positive ones?

But loving thoughts will grow. Negative energy has to be transmuted and changed—that is what you must try to understand. Loving energy can never be destroyed or changed, it just grows. Negative energy can be transmuted into good. Think along those lines and the understanding will come. (Yes, thank you.)

Sarah: I was just thinking that sometimes people behave in ways that disappoint us. Merely telling someone about the experience or what happened, that is not negative is it—if you just observe the behaviour and then if you send them love and you don't really bear them any ill will, you are just observing their interaction. What I was wondering was that it's not negative to tell somebody about what has actually happened or occurred—we can't control how people behave towards us sometimes, even if we are loving.

Whatever is done in a loving way cannot be negative, but let me once more my dear friend repeat to you words that I have used before: if words or actions from another human being does not sit right with you, look within yourself, because that discomfort, that unease lies somewhere within your own Spirit and has to be faced. But to speak truthfully with love is being true to yourself. Never, never use negative words to another.

Sara: Not to another, but if someone behaves...

The fault lies within your own Spirit.

Sara: Ah, interesting. I will have to think about that.

As if you were looking within the mirror. Look to the mirror image and you will find where the unease lies. You understand?

Sara: Yes I do understand, thank you.

Sarah: If you were, for example, at war and you feel angry at, for example, a Muslim killing a Christian because the Muslim does not believe that the Christian is behaving correctly. You can sort of understand it, but it is difficult to—if I were to look inside myself and think...

Why do you feel anger toward them? Why do you feel unrest?

Sarah: I don't feel anger towards them, because I know that I must just give them love, but it's very difficult to understand their actions, if I'm thinking that was not very good to do that just because they're Christian, do I still have to look within myself and see?

Because my dear friend you are being judgemental and why do you have the right to be judgemental for actions created by others? When the Spirit can look upon all negativity with loving eyes, there can be no unease within the Spirit. That is what you are trying to achieve.

Sarah: But when you say that nobody should take another's life...

I stand by those words.

Sarah: So if somebody takes somebody else's life, I know you mustn't judge, but you can't think that that is right—if they have taken another life when you say that we shouldn't take a life.

But you cannot pass judgement, because you do not know...

Sarah: ...the full picture.

Yes. Again, the person who has done the deed that you find sits uncomfortably with you, must, when he comes to our world, face his own reality and you do not, if we are speaking of right, do not have the right to place judgement upon another—only that Spirit has the right to make judgement upon himself. You understand? (Yes) I know that in general human beings find it most difficult not to look at war and other situations within your world that you feel to be not quite right, and of course there is much negative energy in your world. But, as we have said, you have to give of your love if you wish to dispel negative energy around you.

Sara: I recognize that when I do give loving thoughts I think always I can achieve the best from someone, I can achieve a good result in terms of good behaviour towards me, but of course sometimes if I don't perhaps do it so often or make an effort, I think possibly interactions can degenerate, because some relationships are easier than others. I recognize we have the power to change all this with loving thoughts.

(Yes) I think what I was asking before was, if someone behaves in a disappointing way then that's how I process things; I come home and I analyse, I think. Really the answer is just to give love—the thought.

Yes, it is your individual thought that has decided that it is disappointing. It's your own judgement, so therefore you must look inwards to yourself.

Sara: So in fact there was no offence intended anyway. (Yes) Of course, it is an interpretation of the behaviour.

Do you understand?

Sara: I do, I do. That makes it a lot clearer.

Sarah: So the whole war thing, countries going to war, we just have to give love and recognize that that's meant to be.

We have spoken of karmic debt earlier, partly when we speak I will use your earthly word of 'war'. When these things happen in your world, there is always reasoning behind it. You may not fully accept or understand it, but there always has and always will be negative and positive energy. Whichever way it is transformed, that is up to the human beings that inhabit this Earth.

Lilian: So no matter what situation, whether it be to do with children or adults...

That, my dear friend, is not for you to pass judgement. Because of your human nature, you feel that you must always focus your intelligence upon what others are doing, instead of unconditionally giving love to all, to all things. You have been given freewill, which at times does not serve you well, but that is why it is most important that the spiritual side of your being must stay to the fore throughout your human existence. Do you understand? (Yes)

Sarah: So if you see a situation where you think you perhaps ought to intervene...

That becomes part, my dear friend becomes, of your freewill, but you must fully accept the responsibility for your own actions. You understand?

Sarah: So if you let the Spirit come to the fore, the Spirit will let you know.

You will always do what is right for you, yes. You cannot become human beings of great purity—that is not why you are here, but always with you there is this struggle of what you consider to be right and wrong, when in fact you should be focussed on developing your spiritual gifts and awareness, in order that you can rise above many situations in your daily lives. (Agreed)

Sarah: So on the one hand you want to help and do the best you can for others and on the other hand you have to stand back and let the Spirit come to the fore and then you will know which one to go for.

If you are spiritually aware, that inner knowledge would be foremost in your thinking, in your realization, in your everyday living—that my dear friends is another reason why you should give more time to your quiet moments, in order for us to be able to influence and help you to the true natures of beings that you are.

Graham: We live in a society where there are courts and prisons and there are sentences and punishments that are given out to people. Many people feel that the system does not work and that prisons are ‘universities of crime’ and that when people go to prison, they actually come out more embittered, more angry and more knowledgeable about criminal activity than they did when they went in. I was just wondering, will it happen at some future time that this type of judgement—prisons and punishments will no longer be relevant, but society will have a natural justice?

Only when each individual recognizes what is right and what is positive energy, and I have to say my dear friends that your planet is quite some way from ever having that kind of situation. There is still so much learning that is taking place in your world, but in saying that there are so many from our world who come, who are here, who are helping now. Therefore I say to you, do not feel dejected in your thinking. Love will override negativity at all times.

Lilian: Yes, that’s encouraging to hear. (Agreed)

If only you could see that in each dwelling place such as this, where light is strong and pure, that as that grows within your world much love can be given. But also you need patience. (Agreed)

I feel that for this time I must withdraw from you. I will leave you as always cloaked within my love. I will leave you with my dear lady friend and see what the rest of your evening brings. (Thanks + farewells)

After some time, one followed through Sarah to explain new protection being given to this group, which would especially be of benefit to new mediums wishing to be used. It was described as a ‘wall’ built to keep those ‘forces’ out who they know should not come, allowing the group to be free from ‘unlawful’ spirits.

The cassette recorder was not yet fixed, so this recording was very bad quality and some responses were unclear, as stated in the text.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

This time I feel that with some there is depletion of energies, but as we join together this time you will begin to feel much upliftment. (Thanks expressed) Before we begin I would like to ask of you my dear friends, that before this earthly year is ended, if you would be prepared to give one evening to helping those in our world—in other words the work that you first began with us. (Agreed) If conditions are right then our next meeting those in need will be there. You are happy with this? (Affirmed) As always, we are indebted to you; without your help we could not go forward so quickly with those who are in need.

(Pause) Forgive the quietness, we are helping with vibrations. As I said, some of your energies are depleted this time. I will come to you only once after our next meeting before I leave you for that break which comes at this time of your year. But let us this time ask if you have questions about last time.

Lilian: You asked us to think about our spiritual gifts. (Yes) You mentioned our spiritual family. So is that people we have known in this lifetime, other than our family we know, and those on the other side we are unaware of and are they part of own soul?

All of those questions are correct, yes. There are those who you have known in this life, who have now become part of your spiritual family, but that is not to say that that is always the case. You know quite well, that the love bond is the most important thing, but yes, your spiritual family are those who are with you all of your lifetimes, who are part of your own soul; indeed that is your spiritual family.

George: I was not here last time unfortunately, but I'd imagine there to be some within our spiritual family whom we've never met physically?

Yes, I would say as human beings you will not remember the spiritual family until you come to us, you understand? (Yes) But the recognition will be instant when you join us. (Yes) Does that make it clearer? (Affirmed) Do we have more questions this time? You are all happy for us to move forward?

George: I've a general question if that's appropriate at this time?

If there are questions, we are always happy to try to give a satisfactory answer to you.

George: Prior to reading Courtney Brown's book: Cosmic Voyage I had no idea how American military surveillance has progressed. They have developed a 'mind projection' technique that they call 'scientific remote viewing' originally to find out how many rockets were being stored in distant silos. This took them into Spirit realm, that they call 'subspace' ... they have their own jargon. So they have STUMBLED into Spirit realm and time-oneness, meeting various entities, including a non-physical group that they call: 'The Galactic Federation'. I understand this group go about the galaxy doing good works where needed. Having set the scene so to speak, my first question is: Is there a Galactic Federation? Or should we know it by a different name? Or are they merely reporting on the work in Spirit Realm that we know of anyway?

I will answer your question my dear friend. Firstly, let me say this to you: the purpose of their work was to begin with not for good, as you have quoted to us, but they have discovered, much to their amazement, what many of you Earth people already know through mediumship. This is not new to those who have worked with our world for much of their human lives—that is the first point I wish to make. Let us now come to what you feel is a new concept, a new idea to you—nothing comes to you by accident.

George: This book was certainly no accident! It was quite literally put into my lap. I was sitting in the back of a car and it was in the seat-pouch in front of me! (Chuckles)

But my dear friend we had spoken, had we not, of mind projection, when our young gentleman friend was used for that very purpose?

George: Yes indeed, and this is a type of mind projection...

Yes, it is the beginning of letting you know, as I have told you on many previous occasions, that whatever I bring to you will be verified from many other sources. (Yes!) Yes, therefore I think your amazement is now a little dulled! (Laughter) Yes. There are many words—descriptions used by you human beings in your world. We have, as I told you previously, reached a point where you can now accept a fuller picture.

George: Yes, I feel I understand that concept.

Yes, and mind projection is nothing new; it has always existed, but it is only in your time, may I say, that all of this information is being gathered together and there are pockets of people on your planet, who are wishing to strive for evermore knowledge and that includes your scientific communities. The question about those beings who take care of the cosmos; that also is not new, but has a new title.

George: Yes indeed. Can you say a more appropriate title that we could use?

You may use whatever words you wish to help you, but to us they are spiritual beings working for the good of all planets.

George: Yes, that really says it all.

Yes, you may call them travellers, they call them galactic—that is a word used in your time.

George: Yes, and in their mind projection literature, they refer to encountering 'Midwayers' and point out they should not be confused with angels. I think they would be what we know as Spirit guides. (In an earlier teaching, Salumet had pointed out that some confused Spirit guides with 'lower' angels.)

Perhaps an apt question for them would be, 'midway to what?'

George: I think the implication was that they were midway between the physical Earth plains and deeper Spirit realms.

But they have a long way to travel. (Agreed)

George: A further question that arises from this, concerns Mars. I believe you once said there is no life on the planet Mars and I think your meaning was: no physical life on the physical planet now. Perhaps there was once, so that there are soul aspects in Spirit?

I will say to you once more, as all that is physical is recognized by you at this time, there are no Martians, but you are getting to a deeper subject when we speak of the soul aspects, and yes, as has happened to your earthly planet, so too has evolution taken place on all of the planets, within not only your cosmos, but to the wider picture of all life. When we speak of soul aspects, we are speaking of something much deeper than your understanding.

George: Yes, the reason I asked the question was that encounters with Martians are reported in the book and it is suggested that they have infiltrated into earthly life.

Let us say this, that there are beings who inhabit many planets that you are not aware of, such as the visitor who came to you through our young gentleman, through mind projection. You understand? (Yes) Why do you suppose that there are differences in these beings on different planets? Remember: think of your own earthly planet and the diversity of all the animals upon this planet. Those beings trying to infiltrate another planet's life force may very well succeed, but that does not make it the right way to be going. Are you beginning to realize where we are going with this? Because beings exist on other planets, does not necessarily make them spiritual beings; they have existence, in the same way as you beings on this Earth planet. So what I would wish you to think about my dear friends is that any infiltration—and it can happen, because there are beings so very much more advanced in their ways than you are, but it does not always make it the right action.

Sarah: When you say they are not necessarily spiritual beings...

Because they are beings from another planet, they are not spiritual beings.

Sarah: But they do have Spirit, because we all have Spirit...

Of course, you are Spirit, but you are not completely Spirit, because you are donned with physical garb and so too are many of these other planetary beings. You understand? (Yes, thank you.) They may be more advanced in their spiritual virtues, but having the knowledge does not make it always for good, because spiritual gifts can be misused, in the same way as the gentleman has said that they (US Military) have used knowledge that they accidentally came across, but the purpose behind that was not ultimately for good to begin with. So you must always differentiate—just because a gift is used, it is what is in the mind and what that gift is to be used for that is important.

Sarah: Yes, so can these space travellers influence, for example, leaders of countries?

Only in as much as the being would allow them to, in the same way as another human being can influence you, but that inner knowledge will always come to the fore.

George: It occurred to me that, just as the Atlantean civilisation lives on in time-oneness Spirit, so too might Martians and they might possibly get transmuted/transferred into earthly bodies. This would I believe be the only way that Martians could live on Earth?

You cannot destroy energy and anything which has existed will continue to exist—you can never destroy that energy. (Yes) As you say, it can be used, it can be transmuted or transformed, but it cannot be destroyed. Therefore you could say that all that has ever existed still exists, because there is a never-ending blend of energy that is left behind that is ever-changing and which is happening to all of the planets at the same time. We are getting into very deep waters here my friend and I feel that at this time your understanding might be adequate, but for the others, they are not quite ready.

George: It is indeed complex.

When we speak of Spirit you are speaking of a completely different dimension. There are degrees of Spirit, as I have told you.

George: Yes, in fairness to the author Courtney Brown, I should point out that he is no longer with the military, but continues his own research using the basic procedure initiated by the military.

Yes, and if he is looking for truth, then he will find the truth that he desires, but let me say just this one thing, that each one of you takes your own truth. For example, if I give some details, some knowledge, each one of you will decipher that knowledge to your own capabilities. So the understanding is quite diverse—so remember this also, when people are going further within themselves to seek greater knowledge that they are expanding into an unknown world that they perceive. You must always take this into account. It is too simple and too easy to say ‘x, y, z’, to clarify in your own minds something which is not quite so simple.

George: Yes. One of the motivations of this research is to try to explain the abductions... (Unclear on tape)

But I would disagree with you about this—non-physical beings—but my dear friends they are physical beings—they are not spiritual beings. They come from other planets, but they are not Spirit. They have physical garbs, which may be different from your own, but nevertheless they are people, of how you would term on this Earth, they are capable of dying and throwing off those garbs which they now possess. Do you understand? Do not be fooled into thinking that these visitors from other planets are spiritual beings—they are not. (George’s response is again unclear on recording.) They have spiritual attributes the same way as you do, because all life is spiritual energy, all life returns to that spiritual essence. But why do you think that you Earth beings are the only beings in the whole of existence?

George: We readily accept that there must be many planets through the cosmos supporting life that is similar to ours.

Their only difference is in their perceptions of what they can do... (Tape too faint) Many of these beings are curious as you are. They want to understand greater things in the same manner as you Earth beings wish to explore space that surrounds your planet. But because of their wider knowledge of travel and spiritual gifts, they are able to do what most of you beings here cannot. They are just more advanced in many ways in their abilities.

George: That helps put things into perspective. Thank you.

That is why I am always pleased for you when you suddenly begin to understand some of my simple words, because with simplicity comes assured knowledge that what is being said is correct. I hope that has helped you just a little.

George: Indeed it has and it all adds on nicely to our introduction to ‘mind projection’

Yes. It is somewhere that we will expand to, but for you finding the book is another stepping stone to what I had already placed to your mind.

George: Yes, I’ve had two important books placed before me recently!

Yes, and they will not be the last!

Sara: Sometimes when I have a quiet time I experience a ringing in the ears. I was reading a book by Doreen Virtue in which she explains that it is information being “downloaded” to use a modern term.

Could you please comment on this?

Firstly, let me say that all Spirit finds the use of vibration in your world much easier to use than materialization and words, and what is sensitive within your body beside what you see in your eyes, but the ability to hear, which has been lost over your earthly time. I will say to you that yes, I would say that you need to listen a little more closely. It is very often those from the angelic realms who use this method of communication.

Sara: That’s interesting.

You have to listen with the spiritual hearing and then it will become more clear to you what is being given to you. It will not come in an instant, but with practice you will suddenly feel that you will know what is being given to you. (Sara's response unclear on tape) And although you do not fully understand what is happening, the spiritual being that you are knows instinctively know what is the right thing.

Sara: Thank you. I did notice that after the last time I experienced it, I knew how best to help someone who was in need and I felt changed in some subtle way after the "ringing sound".

You may also find my dear friend that the vision that you have also has very subtle changes when you are still. This is part of your personal development. And now as we speak of personal development, I will withdraw this time and allow you all to try to blend with those who come close to you. I would say it is time that you become more confident in what you are feeling and in what you are seeing—in any small detail, you must give out so that those in our world know that you feel and received what they try to give. (Thanks + farewells)

The first meeting of the New Year began with more information concerning our group and previous past life connections. This first communication was through Sarah:

How nice it is to be back with my fellow followers. We have been together before. We have been in the same tribe together. I was the chief and we were in a community of many tribes. We were self-sufficient, but without the other tribes we would not have been able to cope. Each tribe contributed something to the overall welfare of us Indians and you may be somewhat interested to know that the main task of our community was clothing—we needed to hunt and use the skins and the feathers for our costumes.

The community was of course mixed in ages and this group was also of mixed ages. I was the oldest of you all by a big margin and the youngest of you all was the lady who has a problem with her eyes. (Margaret) She was but a baby and was very capable of letting us all know that she was there. The youngest of the men was a teenager and this was the other lady who leads this group. (Lilian) The youngest of the girls was a young lady and she still is. (Sara) The grandmother, if you like to call it that, although at this time this grandmother was very young in comparison to grandmothers today, was the tall gentleman. (Graham) And her husband was the other gentleman. (George) So, you see that you two gentlemen here this evening have been related before. This lady, (Sarah) was an important young man who was deemed to take my place in times to come, but this was not to be, because he was killed on a hunting expedition. So his life was taken a little sooner than we had expected. So, the lady, (Eileen) who is not speaking at the moment—but I would like just to tell you that she will be speaking in a short time—she was the one who communicated with Spirit. She was the one you all turned to in times of trouble and she was what perhaps you might call today, an agony aunt. So, you can see that you have all worked together and it is my pleasure to be back with you once more after so many of your earthly years.

We were known as 'Gor-rukka Tribe' and the overall group of the many tribes together was called 'Baa-Ba'.

I am trying to give you a time when we were on this Earth planet, but it was not something we talked of in that period. It was a time before your civilization and I would perhaps say it was around the time of what you might call your Christ.

There are many of us, what you term Indians who are still grouped together in Spirit. Many of us still work together and I know when you return you will be able to re-meet many of those who you have already known and I am one of those who now help any who wish to meet together, to act as an intermediary if there is any problem meeting together and if you, when your time comes, wish to meet together I am sure I will be there for you as a welcoming face. You will know me and the name will not be necessary, but if you wish for a name I can give you the 'Grand Mancha'. There will be instant recognition. And now I leave the other lady to bring to you one other.

One followed through Eileen:

Please to retreat a little further back. I come to you only because I have been asked to. Before you ask, I am Natashiwah. I also belong to Indian race but I have no name—I belong as a child of the Great Spirit. I embrace all of my fellow men; I am happy to embrace them all within this love with which I feel from that Great Spirit in the sky. My name was given to me from that Great Spirit. 'Nahashiwah' mean: small body, great Spirit. So, therefore, you can understand why I feel this great love for all of mankind. Even today I come within your realms to embrace and to bring comfort to those who are in need. I feel love which emanates from each one of you and let me say that I too enjoy the feeling of great love from another human being. It is almost tangible when I return to these realms. Therefore I, Natasha-Wa, will leave you and leave you with great love.

~24th January 2005~

Prayers were sent out at the beginning for those involved in the Sumatra–Andaman earthquake and the subsequent Boxing Day tsunami:

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I wish to say to you my dear friends how pleased I am that we have come together again this time. I was aware of much happiness when first we came together and it has enabled me to join with you quite quickly this time, because as you understand, great joy and happiness raises the vibrations which are necessary within this room. It is unfortunate I would say that you do not laugh as a race so much more. Even in your darkest moments, laughter will always raise the Spirit. Each one of you has achieved much in this past year of your time. That was our intention, if you remember, that each one of you should grow as individuals. I can say to you that each one of you has in some way moved forward, but that is not to say that you can leave it as it is, because there is so much more for you to achieve. I will always try to help and guide you in any way that we can, but as I told you, the responsibility of your own spiritual unfoldment largely remains with you as individuals. There is much that I hope to bring to you in the way of knowledge in this your coming year, but also there will be occasions for this individual development within this group. I hope my dear friends that by now you feel the great unity which exists between you, because awareness is part of growth; without the awareness going forward would mean little as individuals. Therefore, it is essential that each one of you is much more aware in this coming year.

George: I think we are very happy with that. I feel the awareness seems to have given rise to insights that we might not otherwise have had.

Yes and it will allow you to understand more fully what it is that I bring to you. I know that you have been pleased with the information brought to you, especially I have noted that each of you has been wondering about mind projection, and for this group that is a way forward when it can be fully accepted.

George: Yes. It is something to really look forward to and we have heard that Paul will be with us again next month.

He has been chosen as a channel if he will but allow it, but we are hopeful that he has the self-awareness to allow this type of communication to take place. He has been given this quiet time to ponder about what has occurred, but we have many avenues to travel yet. I feel the eagerness and the anticipation that each of you brings and of course must be tempered just a little for the time being. But, nevertheless, I am sure that I can say to you with much love that there will be many occasions when your desire for knowledge will be there. But we have so much time—we must never rush this kind of knowledge. It is for you to absorb, this knowledge that you are given, in order my dear friends that you may teach others, that you may teach others step by step in the same way that I have endeavoured to bring to you knowledge. It does not matter that words are repeated many times. If you but help one human being on their journey, you have done much my dear friends and I do feel at this time that our thanks must be shown to our dear gentleman friend (George) who has endeavoured to bring to your world many of the words which we have spoken to you.

George: The second proof copy of the book is now being checked through and I hope many copies will be sold through the usual channels—and I expect we shall give a number away as well.

You cannot keep the truth; the truth must always out in some form or another.

George: I can think of a number of outlets for the book and the book teachings and I imagine there may well be some guidance in spreading the written word.

Rest assured my dear friend that you have not come this far without some help.

George: I know I've been given so much help and I'm sure the guidance will continue in that direction—very happy for that to happen.

We will always help you, be assured of that. (Thank you.)

As you know my dear friends, the work in our world at this time has been great in dealing with many souls who have come to us. I would this time like just to say to you a few words about this. Of course loving thoughts are given to all those who are in need in our world and in yours. What I would like to say to you here is that when so many souls come to our world so quickly, thoughts have been given out as to how they all can all be dealt with. Let me say this to you: as so many come to our world together, so they are encompassed with love first and foremost, until such time as the Spirit recognizes that they have come and they are free. So many in your world feel that each individual needs to be helped, as one Spirit—as one entity, when in fact the work in our world includes hundreds at a time. I will not explain in detail at this particular moment, but only to let you know that not one Spirit is left on their own, without some form of help.

George: That's very good to know. In relation to the earthquake and tsunami I believe the number was in excess of 170,000 which seems an extraordinary large number to us, but as you say, you're able to deal with the numbers in, shall I say, a batch-wise method? (Later casualty figure revised to almost 300,000 as work continues)

Yes—it is hard for you, I know, to understand, but what I do wish you to understand is that all are helped, in many ways. But also let me just say to you, now that you have mentioned numbers—numbers mean little when it is part of your planet's evolution, and you must, of course, again my dear friends look to the bigger picture as we from my world do—you have to, otherwise it overtakes you in emotions.

George: Yes, we accept the planetary evolution—I sometimes wonder if—well it has to be sometimes perhaps a simplification, but recently we've become aware of what is termed 'Global dimming', which amounts to about a 20% loss of sun energy reaching the planet, and I can't help but wonder if that loss of sun energy due to our pollution has an effect in relation to the buckling of the planetary crust. Would you care to comment on that? What I'm asking really is if we contribute in this instance of evolutionary disaster?

As part of your planet and the way that each of you is responsible for how you live your lives, then yes, of course, I must reply that the very existence of human beings, and the way that the planet has been treated, must of course leave you with some responsibility. But of course the planet would evolve whether human life existed or not. And remember what I told you some while ago, my dear friends, that there is light and there is dark and neither one can exist without the other; therefore any happening upon your planet or disturbance of the effect upon your planet has to be relevant. Therefore it is not only responsibility for you human beings, but you are part of the existence of this planet and in the meantime evolution will still take place.

George: Yes, it's almost that we are part of that evolution—

Yes, you cannot exist apart. Do you understand?

(Affirmed)

So I do not want you to feel that mankind's deeds have been responsible for this part of evolution—it is a gradual process which takes place.

George: What I find difficult to come to terms with is that we have very good scientists who understand earthquakes and tsunamis and there was the time to give warning to coastal dwellers around the Indian Ocean, but there was no warning and perhaps this underlines the principle that knowledge by itself is not enough; we need to apply our knowledge and understanding of earthquakes more, to help the common good.

Mankind, my dear friend, will always try to master the elements of your planets—mankind will try and on many occasions will succeed. But mankind does not have that knowledge of the bigger picture of life, wherefor (whereby?) he can intervene at a time when what happens is meant to be. Do you understand?

George: Yes, I think we appreciate that the bigger picture of what is meant to be—what is ordained—yes, we can strive, but that's all we can do.

You will always (Voice becomes stronger, then begins to fade) my dear friend have problems if you try to make man far above that stronger picture of all existence. We need to discuss more for your understanding.

George: Yes, I think I understand that we can help ourselves in a small way, but we cannot turn back the bigger picture that is unfolding.

Sara: We can't control it. (Yes.)

Lilian: Which is probably just as well—

Sarah: Yes, because after all, this disaster, or whatever you like to call it, has brought people together and done so much good, that that in itself is maybe one of the reasons that we weren't supposed to put the warning signal out—

Those who survived—it was not their time. But my dear friends, always, always try—and this is most difficult for you, to look beyond your understanding.

Graham: I think that the events have shown this planet and the people on it, how much we actually love each other and there has been tremendous outpouring of love and sympathy towards that part of the world—groups of people who formally did not get on very well, have been helping each other.

Yes—as we have discussed about wars in your world, there is always light and dark, which coexists and always you must view life upon this planet in that way.

I think my dear friends that for the rest of our time it would be of benefit for you all if our dear lady friend (Sara) can take you on a spiritual journey and leave your hearts filled with peace and love. As always I will be close to you.

(Thanks expressed)

George's Notes:

Sara's inspired journey showed us the huge expanse of starry heavens that left me with the feeling that it was a continuation of the teaching and an encouragement to think beyond the Earthly scene, to imbibe the WIDER PICTURE—all these meditative journeys are freely available on meditation page of website:

~7TH February 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Last time we spoke about how important it is for you, my dear friends, to grow in awareness. I would like to say to you this time that we will endeavour to help each one of you with this awareness, for each one of you to become aware to such a degree that your spiritual eyes will be opened wide.

Lilian: You mean in our everyday lives?

Awareness of the soul—I would like this time my dear friends to place before you a little challenge before we come together next time. I ask that you, when you look with your physical eyes, to see what spiritual awareness lies within. I would like you when you feel love towards someone, to recognize the awareness you feel when this happens. I think that you will be surprised to find that you have not truly been aware as you may think. So that is our challenge to you this time.

George: I think I understand there will a number of depths to that extended awareness.

When we speak of awareness, we are speaking of many, many depths within the Spirit that you who are clothed in these human clothes are not aware of, but if you wish to grow and expand, that awareness has got to come to the surface.

George: An interesting challenge!

I do hope so, because I will be happy and also challenged to hear your replies.

Sara: We will be looking within others for...

No, you will be looking at your own Spirit in relation to how you feel about others. The awareness and the growth is belonging to you and that is part of our plan for you in this, your coming year, that each one of you of course develops at your own rate, but that together as a group your spiritual awareness becomes fuller.

George: Recently you were speaking to us about awareness of soul family and shortly after that Chief Grand Mancha came through to us talking of the time many years ago when we were part of the Gor-Rukka tribe of North American Indians, and you have told us that there is no such thing as co-incidence, but it is nice that that talk from the Indian Chief should follow your talk about soul family. Are we correct to see a connection there?

There is cohesion in all talk. Never will anything I bring to you be brought in isolation. Therefore you are correct that these, as you say, coincidences are part of the teaching. So, yes, you are correct in your assumptions. We do not waste the words and it is important that you see the connection between all the words that we bring to you and this is what you have done.

George: It is nice to know that we have had that past connection with soul family. Thank you for confirming that. They did not number the years as we do now, but it was implied that it would have been about 2000 years ago in our (Linear) time.

Yes, in your time and our time there is quite a difference. Time as you know it, and as we have discussed my dear friend, is almost irrelevant in these matters.

George: Yes, we are becoming more aware of that now.

Yes, it is one topic you will always have difficulty with, because your understanding will not reach its greatest point until you come to our world. So time will always remain a puzzlement for many.

Lilian: Could you explain—we were talking about love—it's quite a few years ago now and before you came with your teaching, definitely. I was sat quietly and I just felt a love for everyone I thought of, be it family or whoever. It was a strange feeling, I remember mentioning it to Leslie (Les Bone who used to lead this group) and he said to his wife, 'She's had that feeling.' Can you explain what it was?

I will say it to you in simple language that what you were feeling, the feeling of what you call 'love', became reality and you were 'love', the true essence of love.

Lilian: It was a beautiful feeling.

That is all it was, but for you human beings they are moments that you remember when your connection to all that is great and good is 'joined', if you like. To put it more simply, you actually are living that reality; then your own being shines as love. After all you are Spirit each one of you and Spirit is Love.

(Thanks expressed)

George: The book was mentioned last time and I have now had the chance to do the final proof-reading. And I can say that—even making allowance for your wonderful teaching, wisdom and all-knowledge—even allowing for all that, it is still a much better book than I could have put together. It just shows how many must have contributed from Spirit and from here. I would just like to say 'thank you' to everyone concerned and it is clearly much better than I thought it would be. I appreciate that many have been involved in it, not forgetting Leslie who came through and provided words that we have on tape, which have formed the final chapter of the book. So a big 'thank you' for all concerned.

Have we not always told you my dear friend that there have been many who stand close by you and bring to you their influence and thought, but you do yourself an injustice when you say of yourself how little you have done. Without you it could not have followed through to this conclusion, therefore those from our world ask that you be thanked and also that the one you mention was of course part of the whole from the beginning, although he (Leslie) was unaware at the time of his physical living that this group would be used for such a great conclusion of our wisdom.

George: And we are all most pleased that his photograph is in the book.

Yes, I am sure there will be words given to you at a later time when those thanks will be expressed directly to you.

George: We look forward to that.

We have told you that your work will always be full of words—that is part of your spiritual progress, that is part of your placement amongst this group of people. Therefore, again, we will thank you. But also let me say my dear friends that without each one of you in this room and others who are not in this room—we give much thanks, because without each one of you we could not have this group who are indeed shining with love, shining with love for the work of Spirit, and for this we will always be grateful to you.

George: We are very happy to be a part of this project and that we are as we are.

Yes, that it why it is imperative that you also grow as individuals and that your spiritual unfoldment continues to take place alongside that knowledge which I try to bring to you. It is important that each individual who brings love and spiritual light into this room should also bring forth that spiritual love and knowledge which is deep within and that is what, my dear friends, we will try to achieve in this coming year of your earthly lives. If you have any questions before I leave you, I will be happy to try to answer them for you and then to allow others to come.

George: I have one, but would anyone else like to ask one? (There was a pause while George stepped into the hall to check his notes.)

Whilst we await the gentleman's question, I would like just to say to our other gentleman friend—and you know that I rarely make personal references to anyone, but I wish to say to you my dear friend to be most careful with your knees. Do take care and if there is any slight problem, that it be attended to quickly. I do not say this to concern you but to forewarn you if this should occur.

Graham: I shall be careful, thank you.

George: There is another timely question. There has been a 60th anniversary of Auschwitz—it was a terrible time and many, many people of the Jewish faith were exterminated in Auschwitz and other camps designed for the purpose. It has received much media attention and I think a number are still finding it difficult to come to terms. I imagine this to be one of those much wider pictures that you have talked about. I imagine it would probably not be a freewill happening but have wider picture connections. Have you any words for us to improve our understanding?

Yes. Your introduction to that question indicates that you presuppose my words to you, which shows that already you are beginning to think along the lines of the wider picture of life. This I give you credit for and that is what we are trying to achieve. This has many times happened in your world, where you have considered it to be evil and disastrous with the loss of many human lives. It has occurred throughout your worldly history, you would agree, and still it is happening in your world now where man, as you put it, is evil towards his fellow man. There never can, my dear friend, be one answer to these questions. As I explained to you last time, this planet also has an evolutionary history, which includes the inhabitants of this Earth. There is always a wider picture to be viewed, but let me say and speak a little more personally about the subject you have brought to me. The world, or the place which you speak of at that time, your world, or part of your world, was in great crisis. I am sure that if you are aware of the history of that time, you will know that much was going on—many developments and many human beings whose thought patterns were not of love—many indeed did suffer as you would say.

George: I was a teenager at that time and was able to observe. (Via newsreels, people, press etc.)

Of course many human beings did suffer at the hands of the few who indeed were not driven by the light, but indeed by the darkness of their own minds. These people of course would have to face themselves when they have to return to our world, and those human beings who suffered much at their hands of course return to our world to a place of love surrounded by much that they had forgotten. What I have to say to you my dear friend is this, that again many of those souls would have chosen that pathway.

George: This is something that is not generally known about.

It would be foolish to try to explain to the non-believer that people choose to suffer whilst they live upon this Earth, but indeed as each one of you has grown to recognize, that indeed is the way of Spirit. It is a growing time for many, for many it is a time of great learning, but again that is difficult I know for many to understand.

George: For those who suffer it can be seen as a period of tremendous growth...

Yes. And also remember that for many they would have been souls who would have been able to bear such misery in their physical lives. We cannot generalize too much, because each individual soul has their own pathway, but when we have what you call destruction and evil, as you call it in your world, there is always a larger picture behind and that my dear friends is what you must always try to remember, because without that awareness and knowledge we will go round and round and round within those physical brains and arrive nowhere.

George: Can we say as part of the wider picture that particular event was 'required', or am I looking at it in the wrong way?

I would not use the word 'required'. That event was a happening that had to be, not necessarily 'required'—required means something rather different. It is a difficult topic, but throughout your history—and mankind as a whole are so horrified—I wish you my dear friends to try to go forward from that horror, to place yourselves outside of such things that happen in this world and to realize that life is not easy, and it has not been easy, but eventually we are moving in the right direction because of these events.

George: Because of the fact that Auschwitz is still in memory, the learning still continues?

It is very fresh in the memories of many. Of course it is something that will be remembered, especially by those who have survived such hardship in their lives. But again I say to you that many choose to come to life because of the hardships. It is a learning, it is a growth of the soul and that at the end of your physical lives is what is important: how much the Spirit has grown, how much you have learned in these few earthly years.

George: And does it follow that the spiritual growth ensuing from Auschwitz continues still?

Of course. There is a wave that extends from those circumstances which is still happening to this present time. Yes, and those who came to our world with that knowledge, who ended their earthly lives in that way, have great knowledge of the feeling of other human beings and they are therefore able to extend that knowledge and that help to the others. Always there is good from what you call evil. Do not dwell on the physical aspect of all of these disasters, because you will arrive at a place of confusion. Again I say to you my dear friends, look from within, see with your spiritual eyes and not your physical eyes, feel the deep knowledge and understanding which comes from within and only then will you be able to live your earthly lives as you should. I hope that has been helpful. And now, my dear friends as I leave you this time, remember my opening words to you: face the challenge which has been placed before you and we will, I hope, have much to discuss next time. I leave you always cloaked in my love and know that you are protected by many. (Farewells and thanks)

~14TH February 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As we come closer together at this time I want you to know my dear friends that many have been close to you since last we met. I hope that my words to you last time have been taken and dissected well.

George: I am sure that has given us all much thought.

Yes and more than thoughts—but this time we shall hear each one individually convey to the others what they have discovered about themselves. With your permission I will remain silent until all have spoken.

Lilian: I think what you mean is when you asked us to look with our non-physical eyes to someone we loved and see what we felt extra. Would that be one of the questions?

Yes, to discover yourselves more fully.

Lilian: How about you, George?

George: In going within and going with the love feeling, several things occurred to me: it was a 'swimmy' feeling and a detached-from-the-physical feeling. I got the impression that it doesn't have to relate to the present. There have been those meetings in the past when one has felt a wonderful, instantaneous bond with people and that feeling seems to be still there if one goes within; it is just as fresh as it was at the time. So this inner feeling I suspect is not time-bound and there is a comparison: when one is at the theatre—a musical with a good refrain—one can have that similar feeling. It's probably not the same but a similar feeling of detachment from the physical and a more general love bond comes into it. I just cited that as an interesting, similar feeling that one gets. Those are my comments.

Sarah: I didn't do it as much as I should have done, because I found that every time I was with somebody I could do this with, I was talking! But when I did do it I felt almost as if somebody was with me and then I got white and blue light. That's all I can tell you.

Graham: I have been with people all the time this week with people I love and I thought about my soul in their presence. I felt that perhaps one of the reasons I felt a deeper love for that person is because they were showing something to me about myself. We have been told in the past that your own faults in other people can irritate you and with this it seems it's the other way round—things about yourself you can see in other people—they are telling you something about yourself.

Sara: I felt a love-energy this week and I became aware of the tremendous variety in people and the many aspects of myself as well as in other people. Other people bring out different aspects of me and possibly I bring out different aspects of them, but I was aware of different vibrations in other people. Everyone has such different qualities and they can be quite different so I did become aware of that, but always there was a love energy. Today I was with someone I didn't know well at all, but I felt very a comfortable, seductive sort of love energy which was very relaxing even though it was the first time I had sat with him, and that could have been with someone that I knew quite well also.

Lilian: I sat with a friend up the road the other evening and she is having a bit of a tough time with her husband. Sometimes she irritates me, but I thought, no, she is a lovely person. That was the only thing I got on that theme.

Margaret: I have had a wonderful week, a happy week. I was walking along the road and I was going to talk to somebody and they told me to 'shut up, enjoy the day', so I enjoyed the day. I haven't talked too much, I have just thought, and this week has been really wonderful; it was so peaceful.

Lilian: It happened whilst I was waiting for the bus actually. It was a sunny morning and one of those windy days. The day before my mother died and the wind was quite strong and I was looking at this bare tree and the branches were just swinging in the wind. The light on the bare branches as the sun caught it was quite something. Then I noted the grass as I went along in the bus, it just shimmered and I thought that was lovely...but that is not quite what Salumet was talking about...

George: Perhaps it relates to the ones who have been with us this week?

Lilian: It was worth noticing...I think we have gone all round, Salumet.

Yes, now as you have listened to each other, I am sure that you must be aware of the diversity of explanation, but that is how it should be, after all you are individual, you are unique, therefore your experiences should be so that any awareness that comes from within belongs to you solely. I am happy that you have felt this awareness from within, but now I wish to say to you: now that this awareness is to the fore, I would now like you in this your coming week to focus upon an individual with whom you do not feel that love and contentment, in other words someone that you do not feel close to or particularly feel good vibrations for; and then to take that awareness that you have gained and try to utilize it for that individual. It will, I assure you, be much more difficult for you, but it will be interesting to see what you do with this kind of awareness. I would like to say to you my dear friends, have any of you learned from the awareness of any of the others who have spoken?

Lilian: I think it made me think about people more in a different way.

But have you learned from these people within this room? Have you learned from each individual's own awareness? (Affirmed)

George: There are different ways of approaching this...

Yes. Because you are unique, it would be expected, but the recognition of each individual awareness is necessary for each one of you. You understand? (Yes) Therefore I will leave you with this new challenge and I am sure that it will be most interesting for each one of you. I did like the word 'detachment' that was used, 'from the physical'—that was a good word to use. You have to detach yourself from the physical being to truly understand that spiritual being that you are. You have to understand what you can achieve from within. Remember my words that 'you are all-powerful if you so wish', but it is again, my dear friends, something that each of you must recognize and use for your own spiritual unfoldment.

George: I imagine that detachment taken to its full course can be described as a spiritual attribute?

Yes. All of your experiences are spiritual in nature, because to feel that love or kindness or that genuineness of feeling is, of course, part of your Spirit. It is the beginning my dear friends of truly recognising and knowing yourselves. That is what we are trying to achieve for you. There are many things that you can do to help that unfoldment to take place: firstly you must be happy to do so.

George: This feeling of going within is a little like meditation or perhaps the first stage of. Would that be fair comment?

What is meditation but going within and connecting with the Source of all creation?

George: So it is a bit like attempting meditation whilst with another...

... With consciousness—it is like a meditation but being aware consciously of what you are doing.

Perhaps I could compare communication with our world a little like you can be in trance and communicate, or you can communicate and still be consciously aware. It is two-folds of communication but slightly....

George: Being what we might call a partial trance. Would that be a fair name to put to it?

It is a raising of consciousness or vibration or whatever name you find suitable. Yes. I wish you to tone, shall I say, your own attributes, but to be conscious of them. Do you understand that when you experience spiritual emotion, shall we say, I want you to be aware that that is what you are doing. It is just to raise your awareness of all that is around you.

Sarah: It's interesting that you say that because when I said to you that I thought someone else was with me, what I actually was feeling was that same feeling I get when someone is about to come through me which I suppose actually is a raised consciousness.

Yes, words in your world can mean many things. It is not always easy to explain fully what we are trying to say to you, but yes, consciousness rises and falls with your daily lives. It is awareness that we are trying to achieve, because my dear friends we have reached a level that must be expanded. It is too easy to say, this is one of them and we accept, but what is not so easy is to say to oneself, 'I wish, I wish to go forward, I wish to be part of all things', and that is what raising your awareness entails.

George: It is like living that progression forward as opposed to recognizing it...

We are trying to take you out of the shadow and bring you more fully out into the light of all-knowledge. That is why in this year of your time much will be given to each individual in order that you have the opportunity to fully understand who and what you are.

George: It sounds wonderful.

It sounds simple, but it is not as you will find in this coming week. If you truly project yourself as I am asking you to, you will soon recognize the difficulties which inhibit your life here, but, my dear friends, it will bring to you greater understanding.

George: I suspect one aspect of this is leading us to break out of our single natures and to become more united.

Yes, we want you not to be the chrysalis but the butterfly. We want you to be free to be who you truly are and to achieve all that you can.

Sarah: Thinking about the people we don't particularly like, when you talk of detachment, it is only the physical that doesn't like the other people, if we were just Spirit-to-Spirit we probably wouldn't have that problem?

You would have less of a problem. Remember, just because you are Spirit does not automatically make you an angelic being with lights! (Chuckles) You understand? (Affirmed) Therefore I will leave you with that. If you have any questions this time, I will be pleased to try and answer them for you.

Graham: The person we don't feel comfortable with or don't like, for the challenge, is this somebody we are actually going to meet or is it somebody we know about?

You need only think of them. I would not put you to meeting them personally. Your thought becomes reality therefore to focus your thinking upon a person that you truly could not be too close to is sufficient.

Sara: And in doing so we will probably come to understand their particular struggles or difficulties that make them as they are. Would that be the ideal outcome if we were able to do that?

I will leave it with you to see what you discover. You may well be surprised or indeed even find that it is too difficult at this particular time, but I will say that each one of you should find it a great deal more difficult than this last challenge.

George: Could I ask—could we return to the subject of ‘the spiritual energy of the sun’? Could I ask questions on that? (Yes) Would I be right in thinking that all creation requires that spiritual energy for its continued existence?

All existence is spiritual energy so would you wish to elaborate on your question?

George: I was wondering if the spiritual output from the sun was needed by creation as a sort of ‘top-up’. Without the spiritual energy your suns would not exist. As a physical planet—all planets in all universes need spiritual energy to exist. There cannot be an existence of a planet or a sun without spiritual energy. All of life is spiritual energy. Do you understand?

George: So there is no inter-dependence; it just all is?

It is and always has been, but the time will come when the physical part which you call ‘sun’ will be ended in the same way as all that exists returns to the spiritual energy. All is involved in the evolution of the particular planet or sun, in the same way as in time to come your Earth will no longer exist. It is part of creation.

George: I was trying to work out if that general spiritual energy was like the deep thought and not in linear time.

Yes, I know where you are going and I feel that you would confuse the others if we should go more deeply into this matter.

George: I would probably confuse myself as well!

Yes, but always you are prepared to ask the questions and I fully understand your thirst for knowledge. It will come, but not at this particular time. All you need to know and understand at this time is that all existence is spiritual. Any physical existence does depend on spiritual energy for its existence. In the same way as you humankind will discard your overcoats, so too will your suns and your planets in time. Everything has its place and its time in all of existence.

Graham: Scientists are now aware that they can see the end of suns and they can predict the lifetime of stars and they can even predict the time into the future that the universe will exist and with this understanding more facts will become more widely known upon this planet...

Their knowledge is growing, but they cannot accurately predict as yet. But yes, their knowledge grows much as each year of time continues.

Graham: We certainly enjoy all their theories. They have come up with some really wonderful theories. Theories become popular, then they become unpopular and then they become popular again. It is great fun watching the unfoldment of this understanding.

It is part of the confusion of the human mind and I do not wish to sound as if I am putting down these human beings, because they are open to impressions from our world, but being human makes you fallible.

George: There is something in the media at the moment about how we handle our finances and I would observe that the prices of commodities have steadily gone up and up and the value of our money has gone down and down and this in itself says something of human nature. And coupled with this there are many firms that are advertising the lending of money and more and more people are getting into debt at a young age, so that they are unable to get out of it. The financial system that we have made for ourselves seems to be leading us into greater and greater difficulties, so that many people are getting into irretrievable debt. Have you any comment on this for us, or any observation that might be of value to people?

Yes. I understand your question. Let me say this to you: much of your world, although it has grown in acceptance of communication with our world, still remains very materialistic. There are many divides in your world: you have poverty, you have riches and you have greed—all of that remains. But let me say this to you, that at this time of your earthly development, especially in those countries who consider themselves to be wealthy, they have lost the basic truth of existence in believing that objects and things can bring them happiness. So often they feel that money or objects can bring happiness to them when in fact they should be finding themselves spiritually, and although much work continues from our side of life, this is a learning curve for many, many of your people on this planet. Sometimes you have to reach a peak and take a fall before realization comes that it is not what you wanted in the first place.

George: The 'realization'—that is a key word...

Realization is the key word. And many, many—in the same way as illness brings to many the realization of Spirit, so too in your world will the realization that the material things in your world is not what you need.

George: It occurs to me that the debt that people get into, especially young people, can cause stress and that again connects with the medical world and illness.

There are many aspects to life which take you on the right pathway, but there are many pathways in your world that lead to the downfall of the human being, but sometimes it is necessary for that to happen before the Spirit shows itself fully.

Sarah: We have all seen people who have had a lot of trouble and they've been changed people afterwards.

In every era of your existence upon this planet there has always been something or other to attract people to the wrong pathways, and again that is because you have freewill. Always you must consider how strong that freewill is when you consider these matters in your world. Every individual has freewill to use for good or for negative purposes.

Sara: And often human beings won't change until it becomes too uncomfortable not to do it.

Yes. The recognition has to be there. That is not to say that all things are negative. As we have discussed before, there is nothing wrong with being comfortable or having money, it is how you view and how you desire those things. I feel now that this time I must leave you with those words. I hope that, as I know you do, that you make something constructive from them and I look forward my dear friends to hearing of your struggles in this coming week. I feel to end this time we will ask our dear lady friend to take us on a short, spiritual journey. As always I leave you with much love.

George: Could I just say that on the previous occasion of the spiritual journey it did seem to connect with the wider picture that you had been talking about earlier. Clearly, it seemed to be a continuation.

That was our intention. (Thanks + farewells)

~21st February 2005~

No Salumet this week as Eileen was away. There were however three communications through Sarah:

We began with a develop exercise as we were informed that one standing next to each of us would endeavour to impress each with a message and we might perhaps help each other in discovering the message.

There then followed a gentle, sensitive one who urged us to pray for a reversal of the currently increasing incidence of personal abuse. The increase is causing much concern to those in Spirit. There is so much abuse happening and increasing in what we call the Third World. The term paedophile was also used in the communication and reference made to how more generally the electronic media are being misused in regard to child abuse. We added our own thoughts and concerns. But this was a most heartfelt plea for prayers to effect a reversal in what is a very bad increasing phenomenon.

Finally the one had had been before, known as Chief Gran Mancha of the Gor-rukka tribal days. On this occasion the chief told us how delighted they all are that the contact has been made and that he was so well received. We pointed out that Paul, currently travelling in the East was due back shortly and he would also be looking forward to renewing acquaintance. The chief continued that everyone was most pleased and that we would all be having a party!

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Firstly, let me say to you welcome back to our dear friend. (Paul) He returns to us as a student of truth, not as sheep to the flock. I am sure he will express himself to you and tell you of his many journeys, both physically and spiritually. As we come together this time, I feel amongst you a restlessness—a restlessness which is not always apparent. But for this time I ask that you feel that spiritual light enter from the top of your heads. It will bring you peace, it will bring you calm. I will not speak much to you this time, partly to save any discomfort to this instrument, (Eileen had a sore throat) but also in order that you may speak individually of the task that I set for you last time. I will stay with you to listen to your replies and next time we meet I will speak to you of what you have discovered.

Lilian: That will be interesting because I found that quite difficult.

Yes. It was meant to be a difficult task for you. But what I wish for you this time, my dear friends, is that each one of you once more takes on board what the others have experienced. You should as each one speaks, be aware of their Spirit coming to the fore. But I do not wish to say more, because I do not wish to place words into your mouths. Therefore my dear friends we will continue this time, and listen to each one of you.

George: Before we proceed, perhaps I could just apologise for not recognising the name of 'Nahashiwah' when she came through to us recently. On checking the records, it was ten years almost to the day, when that old friend came through, and it was explained to us on that occasion that she was a past life aspect of Eileen your instrument, and I imagine that was the same Nahashiwah—I do apologise for not recognising the name right away.

Your kindness in apologising is accepted, but there is no need. After all, you have been influenced to remember.

George: Yes. (Yes) I felt aware of the influence.

Yes, so therefore it is good that you have retraced our words so many of your years ago, although as you know, ten years in our world is but a blink of the eye. (Yes) But I do understand the human failing of memory. Now, I will listen intently to each one of you. And I will leave it with our dear lady friend to take charge of the rest of this evening. Discussion amongst yourselves would be appropriate, providing there is no sudden loud noise. But I will be here until the end of this session. (Thanks expressed) I look forward as always to our coming together again.

Lilian: We feel the same.

Yes. I know and feel the love that surrounds each one of you. (Thanks + farewells)

There followed our discussion in fairly muted tones. We had been set the task of thinking of those we do not particularly like or identify with as friends—to go within ourselves in love and see what we find.

Eileen was away and so there was no Salumet this week. We began with one through Sarah:

The time that was given for the one to come this evening has been altered. We have taken this time this evening to bring to you some of those who are waiting for another to influence them as well as to give information to you. The one who is to come to you will be the one who came to you before the gentleman went on his travels. We have organised those of us to be with you all this evening, so that we too can join with the information to be brought to you. This experience is not only something different for you, but it is also of interest to us in Spirit.

George: Very interesting, yes...

So, if you will permit this one to come, I will take my leave of you at this moment now.

Lilian: Thank you—we look forward to this visitor.

Following a pause of several minutes, the one began with some hesitation through Paul:

Find the connection—will be able to speak better...

Lilian: We can hear you...

Communications will take time, I am happy though, it's started.

George: Yes, we realise how difficult it is and you must obviously take your time and you are very, very welcome to our group.

Thank you... it's the wish of the whole creation that this is happening and with all the help—it's not that hard really—with all the help available.

Lilian: It's pretty amazing to us!

George: We're very pleased and I think what is happening is what we would call: mind projection. Does that sound right?

Yes. That is the way that we've been told and that is the way you have understood it. I will not say much more about the method at this time. The way it's done is far beyond your understanding at this time.

George: Yes. We can easily accept that!

Lilian: Yes. Thank you...

We will go into it more fully later on.

George: The last time you indicated that we could learn from each other. We can ask you questions or you can ask us questions or you may prefer just to speak at the moment.

At the moment it's good to acclimatise, with the host...and to enjoy the communication and we will get onto the more information areas later. But we should say something about the times to come. There is going to be arranged a series of talks about a number of...

George: I understand a series of talks about a number of subjects?

I am thinking of the arrangements for the coming year and I am allowed to come for other's visits...

(Struggling to find/express the words)

George: I imagine there has to be some more experience—feeling the way?

Yes, experiencing—

(There followed a break in transmission of several minutes. Then the visitor went on to explain that he was making adjustments in an attempt to improve communication.)

I will try to arrange a slightly different...will be much more...better for us than this first time ... both using the opportunities to experiment and find the best arrangement. I think we should continue with our discussion and if there is a problem we will leave it till next time. But let us continue now the line is clear.

George: We are very grateful. It is wonderful really that it is happening at all.

Lilian: And we have a small group this evening and probably the power is not as strong as normal.

Yes. Good things always take time, but every step brings us a little closer to finding the truth of life and our true natures. I come from the furthest reaches of your galaxy and there is so much life and pure energy in the furthest reaches. I can bring some of power...and its wisdom... (Thank you.)

George: Last time I think you mentioned the planet 'Erra'. Is that your planet Erra?

Yes...Aeer-rah. (A much more expressive pronunciation)

Lilian: Thank you. It sounds a little like 'Earth'.

She is our planet and our brother. She is conscious of all the life around her.

George: Your planet has consciousness...

As does your Earth. (Yes)

Sarah: When you say she is your brother. What do you mean by that?

We are all Brothers...like your Earth...your sky...we are all as one.

Lilian: Yes I do agree with you there. (Yes)

George: We that live on the planets...all brothers...

Lilian: Yes. I remember our friends in Spirit have asked us to think of our brothers on other planets...

Perhaps your master more than I can...

Lilian: You have done very well! Could you just remind us of your name again please?

The energy faded at this point. The communication was intermittent and transmitted slowly with gaps and some difficulty, but was nevertheless successful. We were reminded of the slowness and difficulty when Salumet first came to us. One cannot expect instant clarity when amazing pioneering channels first open. As has been said, it is wonderful that it happens at all and practice makes perfect.

Eileen was away again, so the evening began with one through Sarah:

Firstly let me let you know how much we appreciate your meeting together this time. We hoped to bring to you one from this group who will endeavour to join all physical Spirits and those from our world—Spirits together this time. The group I mention is part of the group that used to be the whole of this group whilst on this planet.

Lilian: Oh that's interesting.

They have been waiting for you so that they can join with you for a reunion. The leader of the group who was chief at that time will be the one who will lead those to join you this evening. He has many memories of the time we were all together, and in coming together once more, not only will he endeavour to bring back some, for you, interesting memories, but he will also try to give to you a little insight as to how life in Spirit now is. So this will be a combination for you of part experience and future encounters, mixed together.

George: Most interesting! (Agreed)

We will take a little time and then the one who is the leader will come to you to proceed with some joining together.

Lilian: Lovely! We look forward to that.

Chief Gran Mancha then began through Sarah, in a powerful voice, speaking the old language:

Har tor ta toah! God tor ta toah!

Lilian: Hello.

George: You are most welcome to our circle again.

Aah—let me say to you: welcome together again dear friends!

Lilian: Yes, it's nice to be together again.

George: How nice to have you with us again.

In the time we spent together, we would have greeted each other with a hand signal. Take your right hand and place it across your chest. Take the left hand and put it in front of you so that your thumb is facing you. We shall now all join for the greeting ceremony. (Pause while this was done) Now put your hands down. I would just like you to know that we have all been in one circle again together with the greeting to those who we knew as 'the God of Light'.

Lilian: I see. Can you tell us how many there are in the group on your side?

There are at least two 'squaws'.

Graham: Two 'scores' would be forty...

There are more than forty. I talk of 'squaws'.

George: Ah—your word 'squaws', not our word 'scores', which is rather similar!

(There was a loss of power / transmission for several minutes at this stage, during which Sarah afterwards said she felt temporary loss of a kind of tension that she has during trance work.)

Forgive the delay—the connection is not so easy as I had anticipated.

Lilian: That's a shame.

George: We do all realise it is sometimes difficult, very difficult, we appreciate that and we appreciate your efforts in coming to us.

The party is still waiting, so, let me just say that after the greeting to the God of Light, I can now tell you that those greetings were accepted most graciously by the one in Spirit. And you may like to know that all your good thoughts and intentions have been accepted and worked upon. Now that we are on the other side, as it were, we can see that much of what we achieved as a group in bygone times was equally important as the work that you are doing today. (Agreed) Although your knowledge is greater than some of ours was at the time, the bond that was between us all has never gone, and it is because of this bond that we are returning now.

George: Yes, I imagine the feelings are equally deep on both sides.

They are much joined together and have continued to strengthen over the time that we have been together. We are now working as a separate group in Spirit and await you to join us once more when you return. However, we feel that it is important that we join together at this time, because you have now an awareness that is at a point that you can accept us once more.

George: Yes. We can certainly accept and enjoy.

We are the ones who stand by you in your moments of explanation to others, of Spirit life.

Lilian: I see!

George: That's nice to know.

We have always had that knowledge of Spirit and in the past we worked together as a community for the good of Spirit. But now, you are able not only to work on your own Spirit, but have the knowledge to help many, many others outside your community. This was the difference between the group then and now. And this is why those in Spirit are standing by you when you give out information on Spirit, because of course, we have the realisation that not only ourselves have to go forward, but we can assist in the forward thinking of many, many others now. This is the selfless part of you that we are working on. So you see, the bond has not been broken and we are continually working together so that all can benefit.

George: Oh that's really wonderful. (Agreed)

Lilian: We shall remember that when we are speaking to others.

George: Chief, there's a question that I would very much like to ask. Over the years we have received visits from—the names that I recall are: Moon Feather, White Horse and Great Elk. Are these all part of the tribe can you tell me? And do they help to represent this bond? Do those names mean anything to you?

The names are of great significance to many. They are of a higher Spirit than we. We have all had contact with these names, but they were not part of our tribe.

George: I see.

They are the ones who come to teach on a higher level than we did at that time.

George: I see. That's interesting to know. Thank you for that.

The knowledge we now have is far superior to when we were on Earth. And these names you give—they are ones who have had the knowledge whilst on Earth. We have only the knowledge now that we are back in Spirit. So, you see they were of a higher level, if you can say that, than we were. But yes, the names are familiar to many of us.

George: Yes, thank you! That's nice to know and nice to know that there is that connection.

Sara: Could I ask you also is Grey Owl one of those names, Grey Owl?

This one is not of the same group as the previous names, but is still one of a higher group than we were. There are many who come to lead and this Grey Owl was one of those.

Sara: Thank you.

Lilian: The young man who sits next to you was not with us when you came before and explained our relationships to the group. Was he one of the group? Where did he fit in?

This gentleman has been an important member of the group. He has had much experience with these Indians, as you call them, and he has not only had the experience within our group, but he has been with many others as well. He has gone from one strength to another and was much regarded as a Spirit communicator in the time he was within our group.

Lilian: That's nice Paul.

Paul: Thank you. That's very interesting to know.

Lilian: Interesting!

He has had much experience of Spirit communication and continues in the same way still.

Paul: There is something happening with the communication at the moment.

Can I just say to you, there are many helping you and there is one from our group on Spirit side who is with you to help you with communication. The bond was strong and continues to be so. You need only ask for the helper guide and you will find communication much easier.

Paul: Helper guide, oh right—I'll remember that—my love goes to them.

Lilian: That should help our brother from another planet come through. When you were on this planet, were you aware of life on other planets? I know you are now...

The only planet we were aware of was the sun—for light, but we were not, when we were a group together, aware of communication with other Spirit beings on other planets, but we were aware that Spirit beings existed.

Lilian: I think it's taken us by surprise, in our group here.

The communication has come at a time when many have joined together and because of our connection with you and Spirit knowledge, this is why we have been able to take the opportunity of coming to you this time, so that you can be helped with all sources of knowledge in Spirit communication.

Lilian: Yes, we are very grateful for your help.

George: Yes, very much so. Those in Spirit now, and had physical life 2000 years ago, have they had physical life since, or have they remained in Spirit all the time?

The majority have experienced other forms of Earthly life, but not all. There has been a core that have stayed in Spirit so that there will always be a reunion of this group when their time comes to come back to Spirit.

George: That's nice to know.

You could almost call them 'the housekeepers'. (Chuckles)

George: So that has been their calling, to remain in Spirit and to take that role...

So that love bond will always be there and the part of you that needs to be reunited can home in.

George: Yes, that's very good to know. Thank you for that.

I think we will close by the traditional way. If you could put your feet together and part your knees very slightly, put your hands together and place them between your knees. Now, if you would bend forward and place your lips on your thumbs and give thanks for all that has come about. (Pause, while we did as suggested)

George: That's not at all difficult for us to do. We are most thankful and we do thank you for your wonderful words and the interesting facts that you've brought us.

Lilian: We hope you'll come again.

Paul: Yes, and may the tribe long continue. (Agreed)

Lilian: God bless you all.

George's Notes:

Chief Gran Mancha spoke loud and clear. He led/leads the Gor-rukka tribe. The nearest tribal name we could find on the Internet is: 'Karuk' (Their tradition up-kept in California.) During the séance, Paul had the impressions of a red ochre colour permeating the room and a large bird image—American bald eagle or similar.

~21ST March 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time, are you aware my dear friends of all those who come with me this time?

Lilian: No, I must confess I'm not.

Graham: I did feel very tired but now I feel as if I have lots of energy now.

Yes, thank you.

Sara: I think I feel more alert, too.

Yes. We are pleased that some of you can now begin to feel a change of energy that comes within this room. It always has been, but it is your own awareness that has grown. When last we came together, we discussed, did we not, about your reactions to the simple tasks that I set for you.

George: Yes, we had our discussion.

Yes. Have you since thought about what you have learned from that discussion?

George: I find difficulty with two I know who are of nervous disposition and do not socialise at all well. On going within I felt there was a fear of the outside world that could be helped with unspoken love. That was my learning.

I can tell you that all of you faced something that you had not previously thought about. The diversity between you was obvious to all I am sure. And again, my dear friends, it only reinforces how individual each one of you are. Now, as I have told you previously, much of this coming year will be for individual development. Therefore I set you one more task before we continue onto new ground and it is this my dear friends: how would you react both physically and spiritually if you were confronted by a Spirit of superior strength and motive? Do you understand?

George: I think we are encountering yourself quite regularly, Salumet! (Chuckles)

Yes, your humour grows my dear friend, yes, but let me say that myself must be excluded. Do not forget that I encompass you all; I do not come face to face with you individually in that manner, but I am speaking more of an earthly being.

Sara: I would imagine we would feel inspired to greater thought and...

Let me just say this to you my dear friend that superiority can also be negative.

Sara: Ah, it depends on the people...

Therefore I will leave this with you all to try to see what outcome you bring to it.

George: And of course we know you come to us in love and that love encompasses...

It does of course. I hope you are happy with this task and then we will move forward to your world.

Paul: Someone with superior strength and motive...

Sara: Physical and spiritual...

Yes. And you will of course, instantaneously feel this when you encounter this that each one of you has, at some point in your living.

Sara: But it depends upon the feelings within?

That is why it is an exercise for you. I look forward to the replies. I hope as we go through these little excursions of growth, shall we say, that each one of you is beginning to feel that individually that you are much greater beings, because in looking inwards you are allowing that Spirit to come forward more and more into your physical living; that is why it is important.

Sarah: It is when you see the reactions to other people in various situations and you wouldn't react in the same way that you know you have grown.

Yes and that is what all of us are trying to achieve. You cannot stand still, you have to grow, you have to expand that consciousness to greater things, but it is good that you all understand that you come from different angles and yet you respond the same. Have you any questions you wish to ask of me?

George: There are two friends who would like to come along and sit in with the group for the experience, one of whom I feel obliged to refer to yourself on account of her youth; my grand-daughter, Natalie I would describe as a robust 15½ year-old who meditates and has read transcripts and we talk about this work. She is expressing an interest and would like to sit with us, but I felt I should mention her, because of her 15½ years. Is that too young in her case?

Sometimes I have spoken and said that someone is not quite—it matters not, the number of years; it relies upon the growth of the Spirit. Therefore I say to you, if each one is happy, then I am happy to sit with this person of young years. Let me say this to you, she is not young in Spirit. If the others are happy—after all, it is not only I who has to give permission but it is also each one of you in order that this group remains compatible—I would be happy to sit with this one.

George: Thank you for that.

Sara: On that subject, could I ask permission to bring Ashley; she is 18?

She is a young soul who is growing much and, yes, I see no reason why she, too, should not join.

George: And Natalie and Ashley get along extremely well together!

(There then followed a personal question, which has been edited out.)

George: There is another question. You have spoken to us before about marriage and I have always felt myself that marriage is purely a state of two minds and it really doesn't matter about pieces of paper, certificates and things. There are within our society connections to the church and to the state and these are highlighted at the present time by the forthcoming marriage of our Prince Charles and Camilla Parker-Bowles. Theirs is a proposed marriage that has its connections to the state and church and it is a highly controversial matter within the realm and I was just wondering if you could help clarify by giving us your views on those connections in this particular matter that is very topical.

Yes, of course, each individual abides by the laws of their lands and that is part of earthly living that each one takes part and believes in the laws of the land. From a spiritual standpoint, the meeting of two hearts and minds will always unite people together and this happens in your world, whether it be male and female, two males or two females; you all know and recognize that these bonds take place. From the spiritual view, where there is love there can be no wrong, therefore if two individuals feel that their hearts and their minds can be unified, then they will surmount all problems facing them for this union to take place. You speak of a prince in your world, but to us he is one being. The lady is one being—two Spirits who wish to join with their hearts and minds whilst on this Earth. Therefore from our standpoint my dear friend, love will surpass all other emotions.

George: Including state connections no doubt!

All physical obstacles will not stop that reunion.

Sara: And in any case, forgiveness is important.

Forgiveness?

Sara: The reason why some of the approval is being withdrawn is related to the past that is not relevant now.

If only all people could rise above their physical thinking and look upon each event as a spiritual event, then the attitudes in all of your planet would be so much different. We know and understand but the majority of your population is yet to reach that point of understanding. Therefore, no matter what, these two people if they truly feel great love for one another, will come together and if it is their chosen pathway, then doubly so. I hope that answers your question.

George: Thank you, it's so refreshing to have a proper answer to that question compared to the newspaper headlines that leave much to be desired.

Sarah: This too, is a somewhat personal question. My sister-in-law has seen Spirits—I don't have a problem with that—I understand that, but she also sees and has done on several occasions, spiders on the ceiling. They are very real, as real as the Spirit beings she has seen. Can you help me with that, because I didn't know what to say to her when she mentioned it?

Why, my dear friend, do you find difficulty in accepting that?

Sarah: No, I don't have difficulty in accepting the spiders, but it seems a very strange thing for her to see—big spiders.

All life is energy, all energy continues, therefore not only do you see the Spirit of people, but of animals, of spiders, of trains, of cars, whatever. Once that avenue is opened up you can see much. Anything that has ever existed in a physical embodiment can then be seen spiritually.

Sarah: Would she have had any connection with these spiders in a previous life? (No) So it doesn't have any...

The energy or the residue or the existence of the spider would be enough.

Sarah: So it is not trying to tell her anything? (No)

Lilian: It is about my grandson who came as a visitor. He hears voices in his head that are there quite a lot. I did suggest that maybe they went to a good medium, that he switch off, and so on, but is there any advice I can give him?

All I can tell you is, yes, you could teach him how to ground himself and how to be in control of his thinking. He is opening up, but without the knowledge of how to deal with it.

Lilian: Would he be aware that he is offering himself up?

No, he is naturally opening up and is quite afraid of what he hears. You must teach him how to switch off and ground and protect himself. You, my dear friend are quite capable of doing this for him, or if our dear friends gathered here should wish to ask for healing help, that is another way.

George: Another question arises out of that: There has been quite a lot in the media about taking cannabis. One criticism about taking cannabis to excess is that it produces voices in the head. Is this a matter of the drug bringing the Spirit forward?

That is not Spirit, that is hallucination—that is the difference. Any chemical that distorts the mind and body is not Spirit, it is physical damage. You understand?

George: So the voices would arise out of physical damage...

Yes, in the same way as you have people in your world who are mentally disturbed, it is a problem with the body, not the Spirit. Always I feel it is difficult for people on your planet to understand the difference, but let me say my dear friends, there are indeed many difficulties in your world. That is why we always tell you to find out for yourselves whether something comes from Spirit or whether it is part of the physical makeup. You must always be conscious of these things.

Lilian: So, the voices in the head, would they come from Spirit? Is it Spirits that are around near to the Earth?

You are an open channel, you can see much if you are open, but there must be discipline. If you were to leave this room without closure and the love that surrounds you, you would also be constantly hearing and seeing with no control.

Sara: I feel that my vision is getting much clearer and I have got strong feelings about people that then without much delay get confirmed. Is it because I am getting help at the moment?

Because your awareness has grown so, at this particular time you have the opportunity to grow much, therefore accept what you are being given.

Sara: I am being given...

Yes, you are helped. There are many who stand behind you, but the more you accept the more you will be given.

Sara: I am very grateful, but I would like to have confirmation, because it's something I have noticed recently.

All of you, each one of you here now, should find in this coming year some new development in your spiritual growth. That is what we are aiming for.

Sarah: For quite a long time when I feel someone is with me or anything to do with Spirit, I feel behind my eyes a sort of stretching, almost a kind of ache behind my eyes. What would that be?

It is just the incoming of energy that those who are with you bring. It affects many people in different ways and that may be the way that you are receiving Spirit. That is why each one of you is unique. You receive Spirit in many different ways with many different feelings; that is why it is important that you judge carefully whether it is Spirit or whether it is physical. I cannot stress enough my dear friends this fact. And now I will leave you this time, because there are others who would wish to speak. I will remain and be quiet with this one, but until we come together again, I wish you well on your quest. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I feel great joy my dear friends in joining with you once more. I hope that you feel the love that encompasses you all this time. (Affirmed) We have many things to speak about in the coming weeks and although I mentioned last time that we would begin to speak on new ground of information, I would instead this week like to speak a little about the outpouring of the grief that is on your planet at this time. (Pope John Paul II died.) I would like to say to you how this grief affects those also in our world, because you see there are a great many who still hold fast to the same beliefs as they held upon your Earth. Therefore they also feel the grief that comes from your earthly plane. I am sure that each one of you has been in some way affected by this grief from all over your world for someone of great earthly status, but as we all know, he is but one man on your planet and although he has shown much love, he is also a human being with his own faults—although his own faults would not be viewed in the same way by the majority of people.

George: Yes, I think he has been hailed as—I'm not quite sure how to put it—as one of the more outstanding popes of the ones who have been in office.

In as much as he has done his job well. But of course, although he has done much, he has forgotten much, and if I may say to you my dear friends, his faults, if I may use that word to you, has been the denial of his own experiences in so much as his own spirituality has been involved. But he will recognize these omissions in our world. But I wanted to remind you that any event in your world also has some rebound effect in ours.

George: That is a timely reminder for us.

Yes, it bodes well that you remember these things. Would you like to place before me any questions on this matter?

George: Yes, there has been prophecy as regards the Vatican and as regards the number of popes that we shall have and according to Saint Malachy's prophecy, there should be two more in the list. According to something you said a while ago, the papacy is in decline (See transcript 28/07/97) and will not go on forever. I wondered if you have any further comments regarding that?

Yes, I remember well my words to you all about this matter. I believe I said that your earthly religions cannot last forever, because this time when so many of us, including myself—we come to bring Truth, and Truth and Love cannot fail this time. Therefore, earthly religions will have their day when people realize that there is but one Truth, one Creator, one who loves and nurtures all things, all experiences, all planets, all universes, all of life. Yes, this religion has limited time. The people within your world are now able to think and to feel and to see for themselves. This I gave to you previously when I told you that each successive generation will not take any form of religion at its face value. Each individual will decide as time continues, what is right for them.

George: Yes, I believe according to that prophecy by Saint Malachy, this particular Pope John Paul was described in terms of the 'olive', which seems to be fitting that he should have been in office during this period when the whole world I think is letting thoughts of peace more into consciousness and the olive equating to peace.

Yes. Nothing is left to chance. All is influenced from our world and, yes, the gentleman in question was the correct choice at the correct time.

George: Could I just correct myself on that? It is the coming pope, I think, that equates to the olive in the prophecy—yes I made a mistake there.

Yes, but really it matters not because...

George: ...we are coming into that period of peace.

Yes. Already that state is beginning to make itself known throughout your world.

George: Yes, and Pope John Paul was described as 'from the labours of the sun'. That is interesting because he came from Krakow in Poland, the same town of Copernicus, who thought much and laboured on the sun and motion of the planets around it, (Yes) and there seems to be a connection there.

Thank you. It always surprises me my dear friends when you seem so amazed by all of these happenings, when indeed I feel by now your understanding of all creation and how it works within your world—it should not surprise you as much as it does.

George: It is not entirely surprise. I think it's interest (Interest, yes...) and joy—Joy in seeing the validity of prophecy.

And while we speak of joy, before I used this voice I was aware of the great joy of you all in seeing your words, my dear friend, in print. (The Salumet book had just been published.) I also would like to say 'well done' to you.

George: Well I must use the expression that you have used several times: I am humbled.

As I too am humbled.

George: We all have our joy (Yes) of participation in that. Thank you!

Yes. If only more human beings could find that joy within their lives, how their lives would change.

Each one of you needs love, needs joy in their daily living—yes. But, yes, to answer your question more fully, the end is nearing for many, many earthly religions.

George: And this would be presumably largely due to the dogmatic approach, which they mostly share: a kind of non-flexibility allowed in mind...

It will come about as I have said, because each individual will use the love and the experiences that they feel, in recognizing that all of these dogmatic religions cannot be right for today's thinkers. People will take responsibility for themselves, rather than to become sheep and follow the flock and the thinking of some person, who dictates to them what is right and what is wrong. It applies to all religions, not just to the papal dominion, but to all religions who have held a great many of your people in almost, shall I say, 'chains' for so many centuries.

George: The other factor of course, would be the distortion of truth from the original teaching, (Yes) which I feel must happen when a divine teaching is given to people who are lesser-minded, if I could put it that way—there has to be a loss of perfection and that is bound to lead to difficulties.

Yes. Unfortunately, in many of your earthly religions the greed of power has taken the lead in so many, where the 'chaining' of the populations and the fear which has remained—it must be broken in order for people to be free-thinking. It has to be, and that is what, my dear friends, those from our world are trying to do this day.

Paul: Maybe another way of putting it is that we don't need the 'middle-man' any more. People can deal with creation directly. Instead of going through a religion, we can cut out the middle-man of religion.

Yes, what a wonderful way to describe it: 'middle man'. Yes, I like that. (Affirmed + chuckles) Yes, each individual is responsible for their lives on this planet as you know and now it is coming that each one will recognize that it is so, that you cannot put blame to another or to a church or a religion, but you must take individual responsibility for your lives and your deeds upon this planet.

Sarah: I think too that so much is being talked about spirituality without the 'middle-man' now that it is going to snowball. I was just thinking about the person I was talking about last week, who saw the spiders and she was quite afraid of seeing these things and I said to her how wonderful I thought it was that she was obviously beginning to open up, and then she began to see things in a different way. We need a little help along the way and more talk and more people will catch on, I think.

Yes, we cannot dismiss that religion has not brought some good—that is not what I am saying to you. Of course, for many, many of your people on this planet, religion has brought comfort and goodness to their hearts, even if they have been misled. But as always, when something is done for the right reason, then how can you dismiss it as being wrong? You cannot.

George: I think we have to observe that divine teaching is at the central core of each of the religions and that it why it has a modicum of success.

Let me say: divine teaching is at the very core of every individual. That is the way you should describe religion; it is an innermost thought, an innermost feeling, an innermost knowing; it is an all-knowing from within. And only when this is available and the understanding is available to all people on your Earth, will things truly begin to change.

George: Yes, so it is the recognition that it evolves from within (Yes) and not from within some building or some book for that matter.

That is what saddens me when I look upon you human beings and so many have experiences in their lives which should show them the way, and they deny it because of religion, when before them is the evidence of who and what they are—and still they are embroiled within religious scriptures. Do you understand?

Paul: Yes, they often block our progress. (Yes)

Graham: Many people who are involved in religion, say they suffer from the feeling of guilt through their lives, which is a great shame.

Yes, unfortunately, it is almost a form of what you on Earth call a 'brainwashing'. (Yes) Is that the correct term?

George: Yes, that fits well.

Yes, and unfortunately lots of people feel that way.

Sarah: I think our spiritual leaders who feel they have a calling to their work they must be feeling something spiritual that they actually want to lead. I think for some perhaps it may be a power-ego thing, but many feel they want to do good and that's their calling, so...

Yes, we will return to the one we began this conversation with. (The ex-Pope) He was a man who was meant to change the thinking in your world to some degree, but his pathway led him to the religion he chose and he has done great things to help many people, but as I have said to you this time, his downfall again is the refusal to accept what he knows to be the truth. Do you understand? (Yes)

Paul: I feel that if someone has a very strong connection with Spirit they probably wouldn't go through the big religions. Because if they had strong connections with Spirit they would see that they don't need to go through the big religions.

Yes, but that is what is so wrong, we feel, that especially someone like the Pope, who has just passed to our world, because so much time was spent in meditation—and remember that is what prayer is—he cannot have lived that life without some recognition of what spirituality really is. But because of his earthly position as head of a great religion in your world, he has denied what he truly knows—as being wrong, as being of the devil as he would say. That is what is wrong and that my dear friends, is what he will now regret. Even although he has brought much comfort to many, for himself he has denied the truth and knowledge of all love, as all religious leaders do. He was a good man, but as many who have passed before him, he has been misguided.

George: In many ways we humans have the failing that we resist change (Yes) or fail to take the step to break away on a different course.

Yes, might I add to that, that you suffer so much from doubt and fear. Remember my teaching to you that all events in your life are based on either love or fear, and it is fear that holds you from moving forward. Can you see that? (Yes) But again it is a failing—perhaps that is the wrong term, it is an occupation of the human being.

George: There is a certain fear (Yes) in breaking away from tradition. One sees it in a number of walks of life—one sees it in farming practices as well in keeping to the old ways instead of branching out into something better.

Yes. There is always the fear of being oneself, and if my dear friends you truly accept your own spiritual self, there is nothing that could harm you. Do you understand what I say? Have you any more questions before I leave you?

Sarah: When you say: 'can harm you'. You mean spiritually, not physically, don't you?

Yes, but of course, if you are strong spiritually, no harm should come to the physical being. (Pause) You sound surprised.

Sarah: No, not really, but I was just pondering, thinking of a few examples of how things could happen to you physically but then of course, if you've the right thinking, you'll go on the right tracks. So, no, I am not surprised, I am with it now, thank you. (Good.)

George: I promised to ask a question on behalf of a gentleman I met at the weekend. (Yes) You may be able to help us here. (Name edited for anonymity) He's a micro-biologist, a very intelligent scientist...he is somewhat aged and is rapidly losing his physical eyesight. He is becoming aware of what I think are many Spirit bodies around him and he describes a cylinder appearing within the room and a number of what seem to be translucent Spirit bodies emerging from it; he will sit in his room and look out of the window where there are trees and grass and he says he sees dozens of these translucent bodies amidst the trees. He is rather bemused and not understanding of this, and I think he would dearly like more understanding of what is happening in relation to himself and this accompaniment to his loss of physical eyesight. (Yes) If you could help us I can send a tape to him so that he can listen to it.

I understand. Yes, again we have the scientist with the logical mind, who always finds spiritual matters rather disturbing or confusing. Let me firstly say this to you: we have spoken some time ago about the loss of any senses and how the other senses become much more magnified. That is my first remark to you my dear friend. Let me say this to you, that this gentleman, if he applied himself and joined with the right people, is in fact a medium who can produce much ectoplasm to have materialisations before him. That is what he is beginning to see and if he so applied himself, this could be developed for not only his own good, but for the good of many others. These visions will not stop, because he has reached this point because of his failing eyesight, where he now cannot apply logic and he cannot deny the existence of what he is seeing. Whether he accepts this explanation or not, that is the fact of the matter. But I ask you please that he listens to my words and he may feel or he might feel a recognition of what is happening to him. I will try to help him in any way that I can. (Thanks expressed)

George: That is most interesting and I am sure he will be most grateful. So he needs to go within and think of this...

He needs to accept that what he is seeing is reality. He needs to recognise that what he is seeing comes from within himself—that there is no outside logical explanation. I hope my dear friend that it is helpful to him.

George: I'm sure that will be and I imagine that will then lead him to feeling more comfortable about his condition.

He will not feel comfortable about the loss of his sight, but it might bring some comfort that he is now entering a new phase of existence. Remember, I have told you that sometimes life has to be harsh for the recognition to show itself to you. I must take my leave of you this time and allow any others to come to you, but as always my dear friends, as I depart from you, my feeling of love for you grows stronger and stronger. (Thanks + farewells)

~11TH April 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come to you this time, I feel the power of love within the group. I feel the upliftment that is needed and will be brought to each one of you this time. (Thanks expressed)

I hope that the past weeks with self-development issues has been of use to each one of you.

George: Yes, I'm sure we shall keep returning our thoughts on that.

Yes, that would be of great use to you in the coming months, to remember how much you have learned and to see yourselves, not only as individuals, but as a collective group of energy—which brings me on this time to what I would like to discuss briefly with you. Many words have been spoken on energy, and as you know, I have always told you that it is a difficult topic of conversation for you, in as much as the understanding creates difficulty in using earthly words. But, as we have touched upon mind projection, it brings to us the equation between projection of the mind and the involvement of the energies. You know my dear friends that energy is ever-moving—it is the whole existence of life. Let me say this to you: energy as you know it can be used in many ways—it has been used to see what has passed in your Earth time and it can be used to see what is to come in what you call your future time. This you know and understand well, therefore I would say to you: what is the equation between energy and mind projection? After all, mind projection can be used here on your Earth, in your everyday world, by anyone who stands on this earthly plane.

George: In which case would we then call that: telepathy?

You may use that word if you will. It is an apt word for the way the mind is projected on this plane of existence. Let me give you an example: have you not seen the connection between man and his animal friends when thought has to be projected for the animal to understand? A simple thing, but it is the beginning of projecting the mind. You are now aware, my dear friends, of the one who comes to you from a great distance (The one who comes from another planet through Paul)

George: Yes, we consider ourselves very fortunate and privileged to receive him from such a distance. It is but another stepping-stone in your teaching. That is why we must at this point continue a little more about the knowledge of energy. I would hear you say: to project the mind, must you raise your consciousness, must you be so much more aware of what is happening within the Spirit? And my reply to you is this: That of course, mind projection as you wish to know it, and as our friend from afar has brought to you, that is the mind projection of which I wish to speak this time. How is it possible for the thoughts of another from so far, to travel through space to reach you here upon this planet? I say to you, it is simple when you know how it is done!

George: Yes, it doesn't seem to happen very often, so I suspect the 'knowing how' is rather complicated and difficult to grasp.

It is being aware of the Spirit self rather than the physical; you must let go of all things physical in order to use the energy, which after all, is Spirit. All energy belongs to Spirit. You agree? (Yes)

George: Yes. The energy that is under discussion is we agree belongs to Spirit. I'm not quite sure how that relates to the energy that we see as physical, such as the heat from the sun—perhaps we really need a different word for that? Perhaps you would comment for us?

Perhaps we could say the heat from the sun is being projected forward to other planets; it is of no difference from mind to mind. It is all the same energy which is being used, although you relate to it in physical terms. Without the spiritual energy, your sun could not exist, and neither could your earthly planet or any other galaxies.

George: That clarifies—so it is all spiritual energy, yet some of it overlaps into the physical domain so far as detection is concerned.

Yes, that is correct.

George: Thank you that does clarify.

Yes. You have to see again the wider picture to understand what is happening. Because you are locked in a planet that is so young in its existence, you do not have the capabilities of understanding that is attached to many other planets and many other peoples. But that is not to say it is not available to you, because remember that I have told you that anything you so desire is available if you wish to partake of it. You understand? (Affirmed) So therefore, although you are young spiritually, all is within you, all of existence lies before you, and it is up to each individual to go forward in whichever way they so determine for themselves. But let us return once more to this projection of the mind. How, I hear you say, can this projection come so far? Perhaps I should begin and say, when you return to Spirit, it is but a blink of the eye, is it not? (Yes) Yes, and in the blink of an eye, so too can thoughts be transferred from one to another. It is the clarity of the thought energy which makes it successful.

Paul: So distance is irrelevant...

...irrelevant—you took the word I was about to use—thank you.

George: We appreciate the distance so far as the physical world is concerned, but does that distance still exist in spiritual terms or...

No—this is the difficulty in the understanding.

George: If it all happens in the blink of an eye, yet the distance is there, or is it that the distance is not there?

The distance does not exist—the thought is instantaneous.

George: So the actual distance does not exist...

As the young gentleman has said, it is irrelevant. But this is the difficulty when you have physical ideas of distance. After all, let us assume that you wish to use your machine, your telephone as you call it. Along that energy you can hear someone as you speak, yes? (Affirmed) If you think along those lines, perhaps it will become a little clearer—if that is possible, then spiritually it must be equally as important when using the Spirit of the mind, and remember the mind is Spirit. But what you are trying to understand is your physical brains and there lies the problem.

Graham: When you think of great distances of course, our physical brain starts thinking of speeds and velocities. (Yes) Of course those terms are just not relevant, as you said. Thought is instantaneous—it's in any corner of the Universe—an amazing thought.

Yes, of course, in the same way as your healing thoughts come to us, they are taken immediately they are given. Therefore, what I wish you to try to understand is that when you have mind projection from other planets and someone giving you information, it is instantaneous in thought. Try not to think of the great distance within your universe, because you can only become confused.

George: Yes, we can think intellectually, but we can also feel (Yes) and of course the feeling is allied to Spirit.

Yes, of course. Always you must use your heart, you must feel, you must use what is given in a spiritual way, because once you begin to analyse, then you will lose your way; always you will lose your way.

Lilian: So he wouldn't be aware of travel?

No. It would be an impossibility to travel great distances; you must realize that because being as young a planet as you are, you have only so far succeeded in a very short distance in space travel. So it would not make sense, I do not think, to think along those lines.

George: Yes, I have been thinking about the instantaneous factor in this, because question and answer have no significant time interval between them. (Yes) It has to be seen as instantaneous.

Yes. I am so pleased that you are as accepting as you are in your understanding, because my dear friends, for many these questions and answers would seem so far-fetched in their understanding.

George: I am so pleased that you have organized these practical examples for us and I think I would be right in saying that you have organised all this?

I would not take such credit, but let me say that Spirit is responsible; I will accept that.

Paul: It's a little bit similar to the TIME thing in Spirit, because there as well, there's no time in Spirit, (Yes) and it seems like there's no space really either.

These are so difficult topics for you to understand, and, as I have said to you so many times, it is difficult to equate Spirit with the physicality of living.

George: Would it be true to say that, because there is no time in Spirit, it just has to be instantaneous?

Yes. There we get what I have told you so long ago: past, present and future are all as one. If you begin to think on those lines, then those words which seemed so confusing to you at that time, now begin to form and to make sense.

George: Yes, and we're talking about Spirit in the sense of beyond the near astral planes where there is still some consideration for time?

Of course. The plane of existence of which you speak, because you are still so close to the physical plane, there has to be some sense of time in order for the Spirit to adjust. But again it is a sense of time, it is not time as you know it, but it is a feeling and a sense of time.

Graham: Looking to the future as we grow as a planet and become more spiritually aware, will there come a time, when we'll be able to mind project to one another and no longer need our machines and telephones and things, in order to communicate to each other, will that time ever come?

I believe we have discussed previously that there is a nation upon your planet who already studies mind projection, but of course not for spiritual reasons. Therefore is that not an indication that it is possible?

George: Our friend who communicates from another planet, he told us that a proportion of their population are able to communicate in this way, but not all, so I imagine it goes with spiritual development?

Yes it comes with evolvement and each planet, as well as each individual, has its own evolutionary time.

And remember that the planet from whence he comes is still a planet of beings and not Spirit—please also keep this in mind. They may be different, they may have different ways, they may have different voices and speech, but they are still of existence and not Spirit as you would think of it. Does that make sense to you? (Affirmed) And there are many, many planets with life upon them.

Sarah: These visitors we get from other planets, they are physical are they, or are they Spiritual or a bit of both? I was thinking of the beings who make crop circles.

All of existence is spiritual, but of course they have as you do, form; so they are physical beings.

Although they look different from you, they are still of physical make-up. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, I was just thinking at the moment they're able to travel vast distances to see us, but maybe they're not travelling as we would understand it, because they're more spiritually advanced, or maybe not physical as well?

There are some beings who, within your own space-time, can travel—let us not misunderstand that, there are travellers who can space-travel.

George: This would be through dematerialization.

Yes, but still travel.

George: So there are really two types of being in the universe: There are physical beings with spiritual counterparts such as ourselves and there are beings who are entirely Spirit. Would that be a fair categorisation, to say that there are two types of beings in the universe?

If you are speaking of Spirit, then they are Spirit, they would have no ‘overcoats’ of flesh. Yes, as I am speaking now, I am a being from Spirit, but I come not to you by mind projection, although if we were to become more involved in this subject, then perhaps I could explain it to you. But for your own understanding I come to you using a human instrument, whose voice and body I borrow for such a short time.

George: Yes, we are so happy with that!

Well, I am so happy to be able to join with you and to help you in your understanding and your knowledge.

George: You certainly help us.

Lilian: Enormously.

Sarah: You have made a vast difference to all our lives, and not just us, but to the people we pass the message onto, who in turn are passing it onto their friends.

Yes, that is always the purpose of love and truth that truth will never fade, will never die whilst you continue to spread the word and you continue to be emissaries of truth. For this my dear friends we are eternally grateful that you have accepted us into your hearts and that you have in turn, developed slowly in your own individual ways, but at the same time you are spreading truth.

Sarah: You said to us when we were ready to accept the words we would and we were ready to accept your teachings at that time.

Of course I have to say that we would not have made an appearance until such time as you were ready to hear me.

Paul: I hope it continues for a long, long time. (Agreed)

Sarah: Can I just go back to one thing that you said at the beginning? You said that we were a very young planet and we were young Spirits—you have also said that certain people, such as some handicapped people, are older souls. Could you just clarify that please?

Because you are a planet of learning, that part of Spirit which returns here, we tend to call ‘young’, because the Spirit or the aspect of Spirit is still learning—that is all. But there are some who come to your world, such as you have mentioned, who are already old souls and that is why they return to this life with many problems, because they are able to cope with them and that is what they have chosen. Many of these old souls have no need to return to learn, but it is their own choice.

Sarah: Because there are always going to be some humans who are going to be born handicapped and they need a soul—that’s why they choose perhaps to come back?

It is the choice of the Spirit not the choice of the human being; the choice originates from Spirit. The Spirit sees the opportunity, sees the physiological aspects of both parents and takes that opportunity.

Sarah: So, if there were no old souls wanting to come back, are you trying to say that there would be no handicapped people?

I am indeed saying that, but in your world that is most unlikely, because you are a planet of learning.

Graham: I was reading a book talking about past lives and it said that we have 500 lifetimes. I have no idea if that is true or not. Is there anything you can say about that?

I will not be tied to a number, because each individual Spirit has its own destiny, if you like, so I would stay away from numbers, because each one of you is individual, each one of you comes to learn different things, each one of you has existed in all time and is evolving at different rates.

Graham: Yes, that feels much more comfortable, yes I can align to that.

Yes, and remember also my dear friend, you know that it is not one Spirit, but a Spirit with many aspects to it which involves a rather larger picture of it.

George: Would it be true to say that mostly this young planet receives younger souls. But the older souls, would they come from beyond the domain of young souls?

We are becoming a little confused I feel by using the terms 'young' and 'old'. Let us return to the different aspects of Spirit. Soul is the whole, Spirit is the lesser with the many aspects of Soul. Do you understand, because I feel that you are becoming a little confused? One aspect of Spirit returns to Earth to learn, because they have chosen that that is what they need to do—to evolve and to join forces with the other aspects of Spirit. Soul is a much different thing. We are speaking of Soul beyond many, many lives. Do you remember when we spoke of this before?

George: Yes, we spoke of Spirit not returning to one Soul...

I think perhaps next time I will return to the subject in order to clarify your many feelings and misconceptions about it. (Thanks expressed) I know that we have discussed it before, but I feel now it may be the appropriate time to return to it. Therefore, next time we meet, we will speak of Soul, Spirit and the aspects and what you term 'young' and 'old' Souls. Therefore if you have no more questions this time, I will take my leave and allow others to come. (Thanks + farewells)

~18TH April 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time I hope my dear friends that you feel how the energy is building within this room. You should be able to, at the beginnings of our meetings, to feel and sense the energy that surrounds you all.

Paul: I think I feel a lightening, or something like that.

You will all have your own feelings about this energy, but so long as you have that feeling deep within, that is all we ask. But each one of you should be aware. I would even go so far as to say to you that you should concentrate at the beginning of every meeting that we have in order for your sensitivity to be increased.

George: We must remember that. It is certainly a very good feeling in this room.

Lilian: Yes, sort of a closeness, isn't there.

Sara: I feel a love and peace and it is very comfortable.

Yes. It also should bring to you upliftment to you for your daily living. I do not intend to speak long this time, but we bring to you someone who you will find of much interest and with whom you will be able to converse. (Thanks expressed) We will need a little time for the one to come and they will come to you through this instrument, (Hand gestured towards Sue) but might I suggest to you that our dear lady friend, (Sara) takes us on a peaceful journey in order for conditions to be right for this one here—this lady of energy to come to you. I will remain this time although there will be no speech, because my dear friends, we wish to make some assessment with each one of you. Therefore I will sit quietly with this instrument and make observations of you all.

Lilian: May I just ask: there're two people I know who live in the village here and they would like to come as visitors. They do know quite a bit about the group and have read the transcripts and so on—just a one-off visit.

Yes, again provided each one is content, I am happy to receive. (Thanks expressed)

There followed Sara's guided meditation, then dialogue with Moon Feather through Sue, who last visited in September 1999, and then a lengthy session with Bonniol through Paul, transcribed separately:

Moon Feather!

Lilian: Lovely to have you.

Stand! (This was an instruction that Moon Feather wished to stand) Prepare for next time. We bring new man, never here before. Has taken much to bring him. Moon Feather has worked for this for many, many moons. (Thanks expressed) Next time—I have missed speaking here, but working hard for you all. Little one is not used to me this time. (This referred to Sue the medium) The clouds are racing by—time goes, never still. In blink of eye I will return with new person for you. (Thanks expressed) Please give thought to this new person, help to increase power for next time. In busy house, difficult to find time, but please I ask you spare a little meditative time a day previous to next meeting.

Sara: We will all remember this, Sunday, before the meeting.

Day not known in my world, but will leave it in your hands.

Sara: Yes, we won't forget—we will remember to do that.

Paul: Would it be possible to have a name for this new man?

Nothing that would mean anything to you, but I will give you a word: 'Gorm'—not a name but a presence, like master who comes to you here. I have to return to my realms, but will return before you realize it. Please to give little one help when I leave. (Affirmed)

Some words in a different language were said, something like the following: 'Tar-kioo-pushunka, mor-kabree-sharumka'. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come close to you this time I see within your light that there is some need of upliftment. This we will extend to each one of you. (Thanks expressed) What I would like to say to you this time my dear friends is that at this moment in time there is a great outpouring of love directed to your planet. Always within your planet there are many turbulent times, therefore it is necessary that we clothe you in much love which will be duly felt by many, many of its inhabitants. I can therefore say to you also that within five years of your earthly lives, there will be discoveries made within your medical fields, your scientific field and also facts of historical value to you. (Thanks expressed) There is much for you to look forward to in the gaining of knowledge and that knowledge is for the good of mankind.

George: I think we are aware that some historic knowledge that would be of value to our understanding—there has been some indication that this might concern Egypt's ancient past.

Yes, there is much still to be uncovered, but I would like you to remember that within your next five earthly years is when all of these things will have a greatness for you, especially within your medical fields. We are approaching the time upon this Earth where man has begun to recognize the need for nurturing of his own kind and the importance of that will take precedence within his thinking. I will take this opportunity my dear friends, whilst we speak of medical matters, to thank you, all of you, for the thoughts and love which you give to each other and to your fellow man. These thoughts that you give grow bigger each time you wish to give help to another human being. As I have said many times, the light from each one of you spiritually has grown so much and this you demonstrate each time we meet. So therefore I say my dear friends, thank you from all in Spirit who are involved in these words.

George: We are most grateful to all concerned. We realize that it's not just down to ourselves.

Yes. You recognize I know that now you are part of a whole, and not single entities as such, and when you agree to work for the good of mankind as a whole, so much more can be achieved, not only for yourselves, but for those who come from my world and who are ever anxious to come to help. Would you like to ask any questions this time?

Sarah: Something that came to mind as you said working as a group—our thoughts are magnified, and the same would be true of those who work as a group who are not doing good things and I suppose that would be magnified as well?

Yes, you cannot separate them. The power of the thought again, as you know, is all-powerful. Yes, therefore if thought is not for good, then collective thought in that way is magnified also. That is why I stress so often to you how important it is that you regulate and control your thinking. It is most important for you and also for those whom the thoughts are directed to or for.

George: Yes, could I just say that the mind projection that we are in receipt of has really brought home to us the fact that Spirit is without time or space.

Yes. Always this has been a difficult subject for you, but we do feel that by this example you are now ready to receive and to accept that there is much more than you at first recognized.

George: And could I just refer back to that distant time in the past when we mentioned ‘big bang theory’ and in relation to that, scientists came up with the idea of a ‘singularity’ and the singularity would be visualized as a point-without space-or time, and of course that is—the singularity as conceived was viewed in physical terms. (Yes) But if that singularity were viewed with spiritual eyes, without space or time, it might well be seen as Spirit. So perhaps scientist’s mistake was only to view the idea of absence of space and time with physical eyes instead of with spiritual eyes. It was a thought that came to me.

Yes, you are correct with your thinking. After all, many of what happens, many things that happen upon your planet have been because individuals have seen life through physical eyes, rather than seeking the spiritual explanation. That is true in many aspects of your living, even in the way that you view your own planet. For so long individuals could see nothing other than what stood before them, but all that is changing; gradually mankind has awoken to the spiritual aspect of all life. We no longer speak of planets or individuals, but of Spirit as it truly exists. And after all, remember that Spirit has always been, and whatever explanation mankind places before itself, it cannot change the ultimate truth.

George: The Spirit has always been, as you have told us, and...

Yes. No matter what words or discussions are used within your scientific community, it cannot be altered; no matter which words are used, which intelligences are embarked upon...

George: Yes, I am rather amused by the idea that scientists have said that it began with a singularity, and I see now that that singularity as envisaged, can simply be seen as Spirit—and Spirit has always been.

Yes, it seems so simple, does it not when you speak your words, but to many it has not appeared to be so simple.

George: No, because we’ve been so intellectual and so physical.

Yes. I would say to you, each one of you, my dear friends, think simply as does the small child. When they look for explanations, it comes from within, and that is where the truth lies, deep from within.

Graham: A few weeks ago we got onto a subject, which I think there was a little confusion over and you said you may be able to talk to us about it, and that’s concerning young and old souls. Young souls are still learning on this planet, but I think there was some confusion amongst us about this particular topic. Is there anything more you could say?

The confusion lies with you—yes, I understand. It is quite simple in as much as when we say ‘old souls’ that their experience of different incarnations has occurred. But ultimately, all is Spirit whether it is called ‘young’, ‘old’, whatever you wish to name it—you all come from the same energy. But in using those words it is only in the use for explanation purposes.

Sara: So if somebody was described as a young soul that would simply mean that they had less experience of other incarnations?

Yes, that is all. But it does not mean that when they return to our world, to Spirit, to soul, that there is any difference. You understand? (Yes) Firstly remember that there are many aspects that we speak of. Again you cannot think that there is only one individual, otherwise it all becomes complicated and a little messy with your thinking. Again, a simple explanation of understanding with spiritual eyes and not those of the human eye. (Thanks expressed)

Lilian: Any questions Paul?

Paul: I was just thinking—it may have been asked before actually, but leading on from that one: is the Earth the only planet that we’ve incarnated on or have we also had lives on other planets as well?

The Spirit chooses where to live a life and I would say that the human beings upon your planet have chosen to come here, because it is a planet of learning. It is a planet where much can be gained, but on the whole you do not jump from planet to planet, but in saying that, if the soul desires, then it can be so.

Paul: There might be other planets that could benefit...

If there is benefit to the Spirit, to the soul, then of course that...

Sara: It is possible, (Yes) but maybe not common.

It is not the ‘normal’ as you would say.

Sarah: So those on other planets perhaps don’t need to learn so much. Could that be true?

No, that it not true. They have different reasons for choosing the planets which they inhabit. They are of different form and makeup and that is why they would choose the particular planet that they have chosen. Each planet in all of existence is there for a reason, the reason being for the Spirit to grow in the best way that it knows how. But as you have found out my dear friends, communication through mind projection is possible throughout all of existence. That is what is important, not which planet, which form or how much you know; that is all irrelevant to the Spirit, what is important is the growth of the soul. I hope that makes sense to you.

George: Yes, and looking back over some of the dialogues, we have sometimes mentioned 'universes'.

(Yes) When that term is used, would that be seeing the physical universe with its spiritual counterpart as one universe, and would other universes be, shall we say, spiritual domains? Or have I got the wrong idea? Yes, I believe my dear friend you were beginning to become a little tongue-tied, (Chuckles) which is most unusual, but let me try to explain. You know that universes exist physically in your world. You understand? Your astronomers would confirm that there is only so far that they can see, but they believe there are other universes.

George: Other physical universes...

Yes, there are, but let us for a moment, speak spiritually. That as we sit here, Spirit is with us—you are Spirit, therefore you are in the domain of Spirit, therefore all of existence is together. But for those many planets which exist, there has to be a reasoning of what is beyond their own planets and their own universes. You would agree? (Yes) But spiritually, all of these universes are part of Spirit. (Yes) In the same way as within this room, as you sit here in physical garbs, there are so many Spirit forms that you cannot see, but Spirit is here. Therefore, for example, the distance between one person and another within the room could be comparable to universes in the physical sense, but when you look at the whole of the universes within this room, all is Spirit and can be seen with one eye. Do you understand what I try to say to you? (Affirmed) It is a complex subject when we speak of physicality and Spirit in the same breath. It is not always easy for you to understand, but if you take each individual as different universes, within each one there lies many planets, but at the same time it is a whole, as in Spirit. I hope that helps you a little. (Affirmed + thanks)

Graham: I don't think our scientists are yet aware of any proof that other universes exist. They know a little bit perhaps about our universe. Your words are really intriguing as to how utterly enormous what we belong to, truly is.

Yes, you cannot—unless you use your spiritual eyes, you will never know. You have been able to travel in space but a short, short distance, but I believe even within your own travel in space, that those men have been amazed by what they have felt and a knowledge deep within them that they are but one small dot in all of existence.

Now my dear friends I will leave you, but as I leave you, I hope you feel the upliftment that has been given to you, (Affirmed) because I tell you that it has been needed this time. Therefore, until we come together once more, I will leave you encompassed in my love and with those who wish to be here with you. (Thanks + farewells)

George's Notes:

Notes: The 'big bang' theory of creation was discussed on 1st August 1994. [The concept of 'big bang singularity', involves bestowing infinite curvature upon space-time (usually thought of as of nearly flat form). Salumet's words on that occasion were that Spirit has always been and 'I know of no beginning'. That the primal singularity can be seen simply as Spirit, could be seen as a 'breakthrough' that brings scientific reason and spiritual knowing together.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Salumet first referred to a minor adjustment of schedule that had become necessary and then addressed us on the subject of reincarnation:

To just retrace our steps a little—we have spoken much have we not, about reincarnation and the affects that that brings to your lives.

George: Yes, I think we have an approximate understanding, but I'm sure there are many details that we don't know.

So often within your world, there are contradictions about this topic, as you well know. (Yes) And I feel that I have given you a reasonable explanation why this should be so. (Yes) But I would like just, this time, to elaborate just a little more about this subject. As you know and understand full well, there are many planes of existence within our world. (Yes) And so often we hear: why is it not possible to go forward, once we reach the Spirit world, and of course, that is a genuine question to be asked—why do you not go forward and progress instead of returning to this dense world?

Sarah: We're not quite ready to go forward, we need to learn a little bit more? (Yes)

Lilian: Maybe we can't learn all the lessons in the Spirit world that we need to?

All lessons can be learned within our world, but...

Lilian: ...I see—maybe experience?

Yes, but what you have to understand, and again, I am returning to words I have used to you often: fear. Although there is much love surrounding the Spirit, that connection to this Earth plane is so strong, that Spirit chooses to return to learn what it feels it needs to know. But what I wish to embark upon this time, is when the Spirit reaches the point of knowing—of acceptance in feeling the love which surrounds its whole being, then will the Spirit accept that it does not need to reincarnate into human form, but that it must go forward.

George: I see, so it's entirely the choice of the Spirit. Would also a liking for the Earth life come into it as well?

Yes, as I have said, the attachment is strong and it is almost sometimes, how shall I say it to you, like the being is attached by 'elastic' to this Earthly plane. You understand? (Yes)

Sarah: The first time that we would have come onto this planet, there wouldn't have been that draw would there, because... (No)...no...

No. The purpose would have been to have become attuned to Earthly life and its existence. But, as you know, in this world and in the etheric plane, the attachment to all things human is so strong. But of course, although there are many in our world who are there to advise, to provide love, which is needed, we cannot, as you know, interfere with what is in the mind of the Spirit. As on this plane we must allow all to have their free will, but that is not to say they are not counselled in what would be best for them. (Agreed)

Sarah: So if we have the knowledge that we can learn what we need to learn in Spirit and we don't actually need to come back here anymore, if we take that with us—can we take that with us, so we needn't come back again, because we can learn it all in Spirit?

Yes, provided you have the knowledge, the love and the intent to go forward that is exactly what you could do.

Paul: Like Open University... (Chuckles)

I am not familiar with that I am sorry, yes, but obviously it is recognised by you all, because I could hear you chuckle. (More chuckles)

Paul: It's like studying and getting a degree from university, but we call it Open University, because you can do it through the post, so you don't have to go to university.

I see. That is a rather good explanation. So, I shall prepare your caps for you! (More laughter)

Lilian: So, our friends on other planets, they would be drawn back as are the Earth people, would they, depending on how advanced they were I suppose, spiritually?

There is no difference from planet to planet when each returns home to Spirit.

George: Some seem to take much longer to return to the Earth. Does that mean that they've taken longer to make up their minds or to receive the counselling? Sometimes it seems a quick decision and they're really keen to get back to Earth, but sometimes it is a more lengthy process.

Yes. It would depend on each individual as to whether they recognise that they have returned truly home in Spirit, or whether they realise that if they quickly return, they return to what sometimes they miss. There is not one clear answer to this question.

George: Yes, I imagine sometimes some will feel much more comfortable in Spirit than others. (Yes)

Sarah: In saying that—you say there is no time in Spirit, so therefore...

It is insignificant to the Spirit. (Yes) They are not governed by your Earthly clock; as long as it takes for that decision to be made, then so be it.

Sarah: So they're not actually—I supposed if you've just come from the Earth, or a planet, and you go back into Spirit, perhaps you're a little more aware of the speed to get back again, but if you've been there for some time, you wouldn't realise that you'd been over that length of time...

It depends on your knowledge, how much you have gained, how much you recognise that you have come home and that there is no need to return to this density, to this dark planet, as we say in our world. But for many, many people it is more comfortable to return to another life. They feel rightly or wrongly that it is their only choice.

George: Could one say, in the near planes, there is a memory of time?

Yes, of course, you must always consider what is there, what is within each individual Spirit.

Paul: That makes me think it's even more important to teach people properly here about reincarnation, so that they all go over, knowing the full facts.

Yes, that would be most helpful, but you would find even although they are given that information whilst in the human form, that when they return home, the pull to this Earth plane, is still very, very strong within many.

George: And I think it's true to say that some Earthly religions are much better at recognising the importance of reincarnation and the teaching of it, than others.

Yes. It is a subject, as I have said, that has created many diverse opinions, but in recognising that it has been a time of learning, but that you do not necessarily have to reincarnate, then that is the message that should be put forward in your world.

Lilian: Well I think with the wonderful teaching we've had from you, I think we probably won't want to come back—we shall have to see...

Sarah: There again the planet has still got life in it, so it still needs people that do come to it, so obviously there are going to be some who'll want to come back.

There will always be those souls who will return, yes. You cannot change the thinking of individual Spirits in a second of time, and after all, as we have said, time really is so insignificant. (Yes)

George: Of course occasionally, one will return to the Earth, out of compassion for the Earth.

Yes, and in the hope and desire of meeting once more, those they have loved and left—that is also a draw that pulls them towards the Earthly connection.

George: Yes, of course.

There are so many reasons, but there are those within our world who take counsel with them, to try to advise what is best for them, but as I have said, free will is a most important part of the whole making of Spirit.

George: And a group such as ourselves, we could desire to meet again on the Earth...

As you already have...

George: Yes, and equally I imagine we could be together in Spirit.

If you so desire and that is what is best for the Spirit, then of course, but remember that your options, if I may use that word, in Spirit, are far greater than anything you will recognise in this world. Your recognition of all people that you know and loved and have encountered—it is like opening a river to a sea—that is the difference. (Agreed) I hope you can understand those words.

Graham: I think you once said that the purpose of our life is to rediscover what we already know. (Yes) And this process presumably will carry on into Spirit world when we no longer incarnate on this planet?

Yes, it is the recognition, because within, you already know. But, as we have said, you come to this planet in order that you may regain that knowledge.

Sarah: In the case of somebody like Hitler, he too could learn all he needs to learn in Spirit, but would he need to come back to get it right the next time? I know we shouldn't judge, but can you understand what I'm trying to say? If you've done something that you know perhaps you shouldn't have done, would you have to come back from Spirit to sort it out?

Paul: The karma?

Yes—again, there is no one answer—it depends upon Spirit, and someone such as the one you have named, will eventually recognise that what he has done has been against the laws of love and light. But that may take many, many hundreds of your years before that recognition comes. But, in saying that, these lost souls are never left alone. There is always love ready to surround them, but again, free will intervenes and prevents that love and advice which is waiting for them. But, if the Spirit has recognised and is willing and has the intent to move forward, then there is no reason why someone such as Hitler cannot move forward in our world, without returning to the Earth plane.

George: It's amazing how that 'doctrine of fear' I think I could call it, went through the German nation and extended to other nations as well. But of course, that was not all down to Adolf Hitler, but that doctrine of fear was exacerbated by many others as well.

Yes, you cannot have conditions such as has existed, by one man alone. (Agreed) You are correct in saying this, but in so many people's minds this one name is spoken of as 'pure evil'. But remember, I have told you that each Spirit cannot be all-evil. There has to be the balance between Love and the darkness, if you like; it may be an imbalance, but always there is love and light there. And that is the part of the Spirit which is reached out to, to touch and hopefully to grow, and that that Spirit might recognise all that he has done.

George: Yes and he did have his good points as well. (Yes) He was vegetarian, he abstained from drinking alcohol and he set up the 'people's car factory'—he did a number of admirable things!

That is why I say: never judge another human being, because you do not have the whole picture. And only the whole picture will appear when that individual returns home to our world. But that is not to say he has got to remember many, many deeds of creating fear amongst his fellow man.

George: While on this subject could I put a question that I promised to place from another? We're familiar with what you have said about similarity of soul aspects, about for example, the reincarnations of the Dalai Lama being all different aspects of the same great teaching soul. (Yes) Someone came across the information that Saddam Hussein the Iraqi premier and the military commander Lord Kitchener and Nostradamus are aspects of the same soul. Is it possible to be that diverse from one soul?

Yes, there is no reason why that diversity should not exist, because each aspect of the soul would come here to learn something in that lifetime, and although it is not usual for aspects of the soul to reincarnate at the same time, it is possible, as I have told you previously. But yes, they can come from the same soul aspect, only in as much as the diversity is upon the Earth plane and not when they return to Spirit.

George: Would you be able to confirm that those three are of the same soul?

I would say not. My answer to that, my dear friend, is 'no'.

George: Yes, I must say I had my doubts myself.

Yes. I say no, but I wish you to know that there can be much diversity when incarnating into human form.

George: Yes, that's something else we have learned from you, thank you.

After all, what you must remember is that when you are within the human form, it is up to you how you live that life. The purity of Spirit is there for all to see, but it is the free will that creates the fear when in human form, which then creates many, many other complications for life. You understand?

George: Yes. We come back to this duality of love and fear again.

Yes, this you must always remember, all of existence is either based upon 'love' or 'fear'. I hope that is helpful to you.

George: Yes, yes indeed. Thank you!

Sarah: I was talking to a lady the other day and her daughter arrived at the door and as she stood there, her mother appeared instead of the daughter—her mother was sort of superimposed over as it were, on the daughter. Could it be that maybe the mother was once the daughter or the daughter was once the mother, or she just put herself there because it was convenient?

It was her opportunity—it was superimposed in order that the mother could see the mother, and what better vessel than one who was loved by the one from Spirit. (Yes) But it was superimposed upon the young lady.

Sarah: Yes, thank you for that.

It is the same as when those who connect with you here, or when you are in your quiet times and you feel, although you cannot see yourselves, you can feel that people superimpose themselves upon you. It is the connection—it is a way of connection.

Sarah: Yes. Thank you very much.

George: I have another question I would like to ask—I was with a group of forward-looking scientists yesterday...

And you did very well! (Laughter)

George: Well, chairman of the group has your book and so I expect that may have registered. (But on reflection it might possibly have been the several good one-to-one chats during the day that Salumet tuned into.) They have this idea that they'd like to prove the validity of out-of-body experience. And they are liaising with several hospitals that have resuscitation units. People temporarily 'die' sometimes—the heart stops and sometimes they can be resuscitated within four minutes and life begins again. Several have reported that they have been up near the ceiling somewhere and have been able to see the resuscitation team down below. But in order to convince the world and sceptics of this, they propose displaying an eye-catching sign at a high level that can only be seen from up above. Then if the people that recover and return to consciousness say: 'yes I saw the resuscitation team and I saw this sign,' they will indeed have irrevocable proof that the Spirit was out-of-body and above. I feel a little uneasy about this myself, but can you say if that procedure would work?

I have to say to you, my dear friend, firstly let us say to those who seek to find evidence: how glad we are that they have that vision at this moment in time. But for so many of your Earthly years have people been trying to prove that this does happen. So many times has good evidence, as you call it, been given and still your doctors and your scientists have tried to deny that this has happened. I will say only that as long as they try to continue to prove, then the time WILL come, when it will be more readily accepted. My only words on your scientific friends is: if the Spirit leaves the body and does not see what they are trying to place before them, does that mean that they have not left their bodies? Of course it does not it means only that they have seen what they want to see—it does not prove or disprove. But, I can say to you there will be a good proportion of those who leave the body, who will in fact see whatever symbols they attach to the room or wherever they wish to place it. There will be proof for them, but it will not categorically be every one, because, after all, the Spirit is still very close to the body and may well be absorbed in what is happening to their body, rather than what is placed upon the ceiling. You understand? (Yes) Or they may feel that they can travel outside of the room and listen to another conversation.

George: Yes, I think the idea is to have it just below the ceiling, so that there would be a good chance of it being seen if the Spirit were that high.

Yes, of course, anything which helps to provide what they call 'proof', can only further our cause. But if they expect that everyone who leaves the body should find the symbol, I fear they may be disappointed.

George: Yes, well, they do plan to carry out a large number of experiments.

Yes. In that case they will not be able to dispute their own findings. There have been many cases where they cannot find explanation for what has happened, but still with their negative thinking, they will always find some other answer.

George: Yes, I appreciate there is much of this.

But the time is coming when people are more ready to accept what is happening.

George: Yes, thank you very much for that. I shall send a copy of this transcript to the chairman of the group. (Yes) I'm sure he will be pleased to receive it.

Yes. We are always happy and we will try to influence what is happening, if they are genuinely open to the truth, which I feel they are.

George: Yes. Yes, I'm sure you are right on that. Thank you!

Now, my dear friends, this time I will take my leave of you. It brings much joy to be with you again. And I hope that our words rekindle within you a little more thinking on the matter that we have discussed.

George: There's certainly much joy with us.

Lilian: Our love goes with you. (Thanks + farewells)

One followed through Sarah, explaining another would be coming through Eileen shortly. The expected guest then arrived and it turned out to be our dear friend Leslie Bone:

Lilian, Lilian?

Lilian: Yes I'm here.

Drafted breathing.

Sarah: Ah Leslie! (General excitement and warm welcomes)

I thought I could control it this time, but...How lovely to be here.

(Side A of backup recorder ran out at this point and George went to change the cassette)

Lilian: George is just changing the tape. (Yes)

Sarah: Anyway you're coming through loud and clear Leslie. We can hear you very well.

I just hope it's not too uncomfortable for Eileen.

Sarah: Anyway she'll be pleased to have you through.

This is the opportunity to say thank you to George. I've looked at the book. Lo and behold, I have to say I felt some pride, even though I shouldn't be feeling that now, but I do and I'm most grateful that the teachings are carrying on.

Lilian: Yes it's absolutely wonderful.

George: Yes we're delighted that they continue.

Oh, I'd forgotten how uncomfortable these conditions can be. Ruth's here, but I'm the spokesman as I always was...

Lilian: I guess you are aware that we now have a visitor from another planet?

I'm aware of all that happens here. I often come and listen and I'm surprised you haven't been aware of some comments... (Laughter) But I want to say good luck and god bless you all. (Everyone voiced their gratitude to Leslie.)

George: We think of you often.

I know and you lot aren't easily forgotten. (Laughter) And on that note I'll leave you to it.

(Much thanks and suggestions to come again.)

George: Do come again, because the next book will require an epilogue as well. (Chuckles)

Ah, he wants to see me suffer! (More chuckles) Bless you all!

Sarah: You too Leslie.

Lilian: We're ready with a glass of water Les.

George's notes:

Re Leslie's visit: As we know but other readers may not, Leslie was troubled by breathing difficulty whilst on Earth. On return visits, it is natural for that difficulty to recur for a little while (although it is absent in the Spirit life). The glass of water was to refresh Eileen who would have been impressed with the breathing difficulty and the mention of it was to reassure Leslie that all would be well. The epilogue quip related to the fact that Leslie had been through to provide the final chapter of the book just published. As Leslie departed, we discussed ideas to help with the breathing next time.]

Re question placed to Salumet: This refers to a DERG/Network meeting held at Hampstead on Sunday May 8th chaired by Dr Peter Fenwick.

One came through Eileen at the beginning to explain the agenda for the evening. There were to be exercises for our various developments. They were going to try to super-impose faces onto our own and we were to see what we were given. After we had sat quietly for some time, we described various faces that we were impressed with. After some time, our friend from planet Aerah came through Paul, which has been transcribed elsewhere.

~23rd May 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

(Our aging tape recorder failed to respond to a kick-start.)

It is a trial sometimes for you. (Chuckles) But nevertheless, you cope very well.

George: We don't want to lose any words. We do in fact have two recording systems going, which does allow for one going wrong now.

Yes, I am aware. This time, after I have spoken with you, we would like to invite our young lady (Sara) and ask if she would be prepared to invite another through her.

Sara: Yes, of course. I would be very happy to try.

That is good, because the time is right for you.

Sara: Wonderful! I am very excited by that.

But of course it is always much better for you to be aware and to be prepared.

Sara: Thank you for that.

So, after I have spoken with you, I ask that you go into your silence.

Sara: Thank you very much for telling me. I am very pleased.

I will take questions this time, but before we do that I would like to speak a little about so many words that reach our world and we feel causes much confusion amongst you on your planet. Those words so often are: how can I be a medium? Well, let me clarify it for you: each and every one of you, whether you know or accept, is of course a medium, because you are Spirit after all. But, what we feel is being asked is: how can we make communication between the two worlds—which is a different matter. But you ARE all mediums in the sense that you are already in contact with Spirit. Do you understand?

(Affirmed)

George: I think we understand that we receive from Spirit in our various ways...

Yes. Therefore you are all Spirit, therefore all mediums. But the confusion lies when people want to communicate consciously, in the conscious state and provide what you term 'evidence'. That of course is not open to everyone in your world, only in so much as they do not wish to develop their own spiritual gifts—it is not because they are not able to. I think this needs to be made clear to all of you. Therefore, when you hear someone say: how can I communicate? Then you must tell them, they are already in communication, but on an unconscious level. (Affirmed) Now that I have clarified that small point, do you have questions this time? (Pause)

George: I'm sure we have—could I begin with one? Lilian recently came upon a book written in the year 1700, about Myddle in Shropshire. And there is within its pages, mention of one who remembered that there had been a small monastery near Myddle, and described its location. We all accept that we had a previous life at that location, but it's nice to have historic mention, written down, of that small monastery. But what caught my eye was a story about a nearby farmhouse, where six people had been taken ill at different times and died, and on each occasion, two pigeons came to the farmhouse and perched on the roof and remained around the garden until the deaths until 2 weeks prior to the deaths and then they departed. There's one other who fell ill and recovered and during that period, no pigeons were seen. There seems to have been an interaction between the birds and the deaths. Can you say anything about that?

Of course my dear friend, I will try to tell you why, on that occasion there should be birds present. The answer, also as always, is simple that on many occasions, but again, not always on a conscious level—remember our talks about angelic beings, (Yes) how their form can be changed at will? (Affirmed) It, I would say to you, was a form of an angelic being, being present and waiting for the Spirit to depart.

Lilian: That's interesting. (Agreed)

It can be a butterfly, a bird, an animal, a human being, but they belong to the angelic realms which help people to pass to Spirit.

George: Yes, thank you for that explanation. That had not occurred to me.

Yes. Of course, you must not assume that every bird you see perched upon your window ledge when someone is ill, is an angelic being. But remember that they can change form, because you see, the pigeons at that time, or any bird, is well accepted by most people. (Agreed)

George: Yes, and I have noted there is a very similar story written down by Carl Jung at a different time, so I felt it had to have some significance.

Yes. But it is a simple explanation.

Lilian: It's strange George mentions about a death, because there's a man up the road who is obviously near the end of his time here and he's talking about the strangest things, some of them not very pleasant and I also noticed it with my mother in the last few days of her life—hallucinations—would that be the drugs or is that something to do with when they're near?

Yes, it can be a combination of both. But, I would say hallucinations in the way that you say, is down to the chemicals given in their strong doses prior to passing. But it is known that certain human beings, because of their beliefs and their upbringing, see what they want to see, and therefore their so-called hallucinations may be their own thinking.

Lilian: Some things are quite distressing really, (Yes) for the listener

Yes of course—she must distance herself from this.

Lilian: Right—thank you.

If she can, she must stand back and allow it to flow over her. (Yes)

George: We have some very wonderful communications with the group on the planet Aerah. Last time they were talking about the energy that they utilise for their machines and things and it is supplied to them by the elementals, who obtain the energy from plants. They describe it as a sort of 'milking' process from the plants. And I couldn't help thinking, on reflection, of the work of one Wilhelm Reich, an Austrian gentleman of about 70 years ago and he researched an energy from plants—it's a universal energy in fact, which he called 'orgone'. This work was not accepted by the scientific community of the day, but I wonder if I'm right in seeing a connection between his research on 'orgone' and the energy that is used on the planet Aerah?

Let me just say this to you, my dear friend, that all energy belongs to us all, in so much as we are part of the whole. I believe I have told you in times past, that there are many forms of energy of which you would not be aware, and will be brought into your knowledge in future times as your scientific community delves a little further and is inspired more by people from Spirit. (Yes) But there are many forms of energy that is used throughout the cosmos. And although this is not a topic that I would wish to enter into at this present time, what I want you to focus upon is not so much the information that is being given to you about another planet, but to focus upon the mind projection that is being used—that is the important point. (Yes) The information remains secondary to that fact. It is the mind projection that you must focus upon, because it is something that later you could cultivate for yourselves. I am not saying, to the same extent as the one that comes to you, but definitely it is possible whilst upon this planet.

George: Certainly it is a very interesting and wonderful thing that is happening. (Yes) We do appreciate that.

Yes. There are many things that will be brought to you, but always focus on that inner spiritual knowledge and all that comes to you must remain on that spiritual level. (Yes) And although the information is exciting and is available to you, it is still only information. (Yes) It will not help with your spiritual growth, but in focusing on mind projection, then you will most certainly grow. Do you understand?

George: Oh yes, yes and thank you for your advice on that. Yes, I'm sure we all appreciate that.

You are so limited, my dear friends, by those human brains. If only I could expand them for you, I would gladly do so.

Sarah: We're willing to let you do it! (Chuckles)

I do wish I could, but of course that would be against all of our laws.

George: Yes, we do appreciate that there are laws—there are cosmic laws.

Yes—there has to be.

Lilian: Paul?

Paul: I was just going to speculate that I think mind projection—it's quite different to thought projection. Is it more like 'remote viewing', more like your whole consciousness is projected?

Mind projection belongs to the Spirit. Thought can be projected from the human being, from the conscious part of the thinking, but mind projection has to be done through the Spirit, if it is to work successfully; always remember that difference.

Paul: But thoughts are tied to the physical a bit?

Yes, when you are in human form, of course the thought is connected to the consciousness of the body, and to the spiritual mind. But mind projection—remember, the brain belongs to the physical, the mind is spiritual; always keep this in mind.

Paul: I'm trying to think whether it is more like an out-of-body experience—mind projection...

You could compare it in similarity, but it is not quite that, no. The mind is not something you can see or feel—it is what is part of your whole being; it is that greater part of your Spirit—the mind, the mind that will continue to grow and to exist all through levels of Spirit. It belongs to Soul. Is that helpful to you?

Paul: Yes, yeah...

I feel you are struggling with that answer.

Paul: I don't think I understand the...

This is why it is so difficult and this is why it has to be explained and used in simple terms for your understanding. In showing you that mind projection is working, we bring it to you with information of interest, but you have not focussed upon how the mind projection is working. You need to be more aware of the spiritual nature, before you can project the mind. You do not have to go into the silence to send out a thought. This you realise, because that every time we meet, you give thoughts for those who are in need (Affirmed) and although you are beginning to quieten down, it is not necessary, to send a thought for help. But mind projection entails rather more. I hope that is helpful. (Affirmed)

Sarah: I've been rather amused, because I saw a something in the paper that somebody had been given a large sum of money to investigate 'the mind'. So maybe I should send this person a transcript... (Laughs)

But again, my dear friends, you see the confusion which lies within your planet, because most human beings are accepting of the fact that the mind belongs to the human, when in fact you know full well that this is not so. That is where the confusion lies—the difference between the human brain and the spiritual mind. (Agreed)

George: Could I mention my old friend Cyril Martin, (Graham's father) who, 50 years ago, drove 400 miles to the town of Brighton. A clairvoyant was there, seated on a dais and surrounded by a crowd of people. He was at the back of the crowd and the clairvoyant's assistant went around the crowd, placing a hand on a shoulder here and there and the clairvoyant would say a few pointed words relating to that person. And my friend thought: ha! She's got a few people planted in the crowd that she knows about! And then the hand alighted on his shoulder and she said: 'Mr Martin, you haven't signed your driving licence!' He fished in his pocket for his driving licence and saw that he had indeed not signed it! Well, I met him recently and he was still puzzled about this. I suggested that there may have been a Spirit with him who was concerned about his driving licence and the clairvoyant lady would have picked up on this concern. Would you care to say anything about that?

I would not say that they were concerned, but it was the opportunity to show him that his sceptical thinking was not perhaps correct. (Agreed)

George: Yes, it was first and foremost a demonstration...

Always from our world we try to bring—again, it is the helpers who work with the clairvoyants and the mediums; they work together to bring the best 'evidence' for that individual. It may seem trivial, it may seem remarkable—it matters not, provided it sows the seed within that person.

George: Yes, so the Spirit would be with the clairvoyant lady—the Spirits concerned with the communication?

It would depend who was bringing the information, but of course the medium and the person who was placing the hand upon the shoulder, would have a spiritual connection, of course; it would have to be that way. I hope he is a little less sceptical now, but probably not. (Some chuckles)

Graham: He's been thinking about it, ever since I've been alive. (More chuckles)

George: Yes, I feel his mind is opening.

Yes. For some it takes all of their life's existence, for others it is much quicker. Of course that depends upon the human being and their own responsibility for what they accept.

George: I'm sure he'll be interested in this transcript.

Sara: Yes, he's certainly had some experiences—he's had other experiences too in his life, (Yes) that he has been unable to explain, such as—well, he called it a 'ghost car'...

George: Yes, he's had disappearing cars and rotating flowers...

Sara: And a lost engagement ring that was found on a huge common after months. I mean, a very unlikely happening. (Yes) So I think that was sent, I would imagine also...

As I say, it takes some people a long time to find acceptance of these things, where as another being would have one or two happenings and say: why is this happening? It is down to each individual.

Sara: And possibly other experience in other lives perhaps?

It could have an influence of course, yes. You are complex beings, you human beings. (Yes) Yes, but mostly, you are so negative until you open your minds and all begins to fall into place.

Sarah: And sometimes it only happens when there's a shock or something happens that leads to something else...

Yes, so often that is the trigger point. (Agreed)

Now, I feel for this time, I have spoken quite enough and we would like to give the young lady (Sara) an opportunity to open up to whoever wishes to try to use her, and our dear lady friend (Lilian) will be on hand to help. But do not try too hard my dear friends and the others will send their love out to you in order for you to open fully. (Thank you.) I will leave you as always, in the knowledge of my great love for you all; and remember, I hear your words. (Thanks + farewells)

There followed one through Sara, a 10-year old child who had at some time fallen from a ladder and was now helped by the opportunity to talk with us.

~13th June 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

How good it is to join with you all once again. (Pause) It would benefit many of you this time, to have upliftment and some healing.

Lilian: Thank you. You always bring upliftment—at the end of the evening we always feel better.

That is kind of you to say, but of course, that is our wish that any connection with our world should leave you in a state of upliftment.

George: It certainly does.

We know full well that within your busy lives, it takes much to remain dedicated to this work and as I have said to you on many occasions, that is why as a group you have been chosen, because of this great unity and love which is shared by you all. Therefore it is part of our purpose that we try to help you maintain an equilibrium of both spiritual and physical unity. (Thanks expressed) I would say therefore at the end of this evening that our gentle lady (Sara) take you all on a spiritual journey to end this meeting—if she so agrees to do so. (Yes) I feel for this evening that we should take any questions that you may have, because we feel my dear friends that this should be an evening of quietude and peacefulness that each one of you should be aware of. Therefore for this time, we will not disrupt your thinking too much.

Lilian: If I could just ask one question—a friend of mine has just had what we call a stroke, which must be quite distressing, and she lived opposite me and she read the transcripts and she has now got the book.

But when the stroke happened and she was obviously feeling very shaken, she called your name and I wondered if you were aware of this?

Always we are aware of any cry for help that is needed. Never would a cry for help be left; but I am aware of all who call to me, and I would say to you that because of her desperation and the situation which surrounded her at that particular time, we were able to help and therefore her stroke was not as serious as it might have been.

Lilian: Thank you very much. (Affirmed)

All those who are aware of the help that is available to them are never left alone. It may not always be what you desire, but it will always be acknowledged in some way, either by sign, by deed, by words from another human being, but always it comes from us in Spirit.

Lilian: I will tell her, she'll be very pleased and very grateful.

Sometimes, my dear friends, we feel that you are reluctant to ask for help, as if by doing so you are committing some great spiritual crime. (Chuckles) But, let me assure you that as emissaries of Spirit, we will always try our utmost to help and to uplift you at all times throughout your physical lives. (Thanks expressed)

George: Thank you, that's very comforting. Sometimes I feel it's a matter of trying to be responsible and perhaps we overdo that at times?

Yes, but of course, that is why you are here, to make judgements for yourselves. But, never forget my dear friends that help is always to hand if you so ask for it.

Lilian: I suppose we should think of children—they ask for help when they need it—we must be more like that?

You must always be open and true to your selves, and if your cry for help is a genuine one, then always it will have some response; and as you well know, it may not always be the result that you require, but it will be what is best for you at that particular time. But, never fear—again, I return to that word 'fear'.

Learn always to place your trust in that greater Spirit and you will always be upheld and uplifted. (Thanks expressed)

George: I've been asked by a friend to place a question to you. He would like to come along here and place the question himself, but this week he goes into hospital for a heart operation and he's still hoping to be here after his convalescence. In the meantime, I'm asked to place this question, which is quite lengthy and I shall have to read it. You may feel that this ground has been covered before, but he puts his question in a particular way and I think this is something that will be in the minds of a number of people, so I'll read the question on behalf of Jim:

Jim's question: *In view of the large number of religions across the world and inter-religious strife, is there a plan to offer mankind a unifying message for all religions with which to bind everyone in love and peace? Such a message would be a 'joint communiqué' in the name of Allah, of Jesus, of Buddha and all the masters that have visited this planet over the last few thousand years. It would have to be 'front page news' and would not be open to any ambiguity or politicising by world leaders or those who use religion for political ends. Would the masters unify in this way? It would certainly take a master to have the wisdom to create and deliver such a message. Who would ask them? Would this be something that Salumet could do? Is the question really in a league which is beyond my understanding of what is involved? It probably is, but the idea is basically very simple. With today's world-coverage of information, the whole planet could receive the message almost simultaneously. This would be 'the sermon on the planet', reaching all the world's billions, not just the '5000'. Well, this is what you have evoked in me with the book. *(Jim has been reading the Salumet book)

George: Well that is the question that I feel is a rather thought-out question, and I'm sure the gentleman would be most pleased to have your reply.

Yes. I would thank him for the question, and does it not show how well he thinks upon spiritual matters? (Agreed)

George: Yes, he's certainly taking all this very seriously, and we have spoken over the years together.

Yes. Let me say this to all of you, and especially for your friend who asks the question: always there has been, as he puts it, a master plan. What he must remember is this: that the plan affects, not only your planet, but all those other planets which are in existence. The plan of that great consciousness has always been, but that is not to say it has been worked as it should have been. But when we speak of your Earthly planet, and that is what your friend refers to, let me say only this to you: on your Planet Earth, there have come to all people, many forms of religion as he has stated. Mankind upon this planet has been given free will as have many others on many planets, but mankind being in a stage of growth, being in a stage of infancy, if you like, within spiritual matters, is still at a point of learning. But let me say to you, that your world is becoming much smaller, but in becoming smaller in communication, it grows in understanding. You accept this I hope? (Agreed) And although there are many factions upon your Earth who are still so set in their thinking that it has created many problems, there also is a much greater faction, who are coming closer together. After all, I think you will know and understand that your religions in this past century have become much more tolerant towards each other.

George: Yes, we have seen signs of this.

Yes. At this moment in time, it would not be appropriate to try to connect all religions, not because it cannot be done, but because it is not part of the plan of unification of which we are going forward to. Therefore, my answer to your friend is this: the time will come when all people upon this Earth, will have greater understanding, not only of each other, but of each religion—but greater still will come the understanding that every religion is focussed to one point. But, it cannot be done in an instant. Part of the great plan is that we bring people together by their own free will, by their own workings and understanding of each other; and although we could make as you say ‘world news’, we know that it still would not succeed at this particular time. There have been many instances when this should have happened. The coming of the one named Jesus, of whom you all know—that was part of the plan to bring people together. There have been many, many instances. But, let me say that within your next 100 years, there will be greater understanding amongst all people in your world. Down will come religious barriers, down will come the dissatisfaction that people feel because of their individual religions. We are moving forward, my dear friends, to such a time when the people of your world must accept each of their brothers of who they truly are—not of separate race, not of separate religion, but one brotherhood of man.

George: And as you said at the beginning, that falls in place in relation to a wider plan concerning the universe.

Yes. You cannot segregate this planet with a separate plan—it is not part of the universal laws. There is a much greater plan in place and that great plan is moving forward at all times. Therefore, I thank your friend for his question, but may I gently remind him, that as much as he would wish one to come to bring together all people, that is not likely to happen for some great time yet.

George: No, but it’s a grand thought to have...

Yes. We appreciate his thinking. It shows that he thinks deeply, but he must not become weighed down only by matters of this planet. He needs to widen his views to all of existence.

George: Again, in relation to the grander plan, Lilian has drawn my attention to another book, which concerns a teaching from what has become known as ‘The Council of Nine’—a teaching from Spirit through Phyllis Schlemmer in the United States. And I note that the teaching that comes from The Council of Nine in Spirit, is very much in line with your teaching, but there are several points which I would question. But firstly, do you know of The Council of Nine and would they be part of the grand scheme?

All that comes from Spirit is a part of the greater plan. Those of us who come to teach, of course are part of the greater plan. In the same way that as I speak as an individual voice, you know full well, my dear friends, that I am a conglomerate; I speak not individual words, but I speak of knowledge that has been united within our world.

George: Yes—with this other group, there is one spokesman who gives his name as Tom, who speaks for the Council of Nine. (Yes) They in turn, speak of 24 civilisations in Spirit...

May I stop you there? (Mm.) Yes, all who communicate from our world, bring to many groups, much knowledge, knowledge that will be accepted by them, for whatever reason it is being given—as I bring to you the knowledge that I give. Let me say this to you, that there are many groups and many individuals who come to your world to bring knowledge, but as in all knowledge, there has to be some kind of ‘ladder of knowledge’ and you can only bring what is available to you. But I would say to you, I am aware of what is being given and what you refer to.

George: Yes, and of course that would be a little different, because it is for an American public, (Yes) who are a little different from ourselves.

Yes, you understand completely—you are given what can be accepted by you at a particular time and for whatever reason, the communicator comes to give. And if that is what they are accepting, that is fine—there is no problem with that. All communication from Spirit will bring only what the communicator is able to project. That is why there are so many anomalies within what is written about our world. It is not that anyone is not telling all of the truth, it is only that they are projecting only what they know. Do you understand my meaning?

George: Yes, I do understand that. I must say, I was impressed with the amount of agreement between your teaching and what was delivered by The Council of Nine.

Yes, of course, when you have group teaching, which is what that is, it is brought to you by many; then of course there has to be a link with others who bring the same kind of knowledge.

George: One thing that rather surprised me was the statement that Planet Earth is the only planet of free will in the universe. I felt I just had to bring that point to you for clarification.

Yes, that is because that is what they have been given and that is their understanding. Until you reach a point within our world when that knowledge is extended, then of course, that is what you will give. But I can tell you: no, it is not the only planet endowed with free will.

George: Well, thank you for that.

It would not be feasible, would you not agree that you be the only planet with free will?

George: Yes, I’m sure we all agree!

I feel it would make you very exclusive! (Laughter)

George: And the title of that book is ‘The Only Planet of Choice’, and so I had to ask the question.

Yes, I would say to you my dear friends, as I have in times past, that you must collect all information, collate it and then take only what you can accept at the time. We ask nothing else of you and I have told you also, if any of my words are unacceptable to you, then you reject them, because of course, that is your free will, and that is part of the understanding of Spirit. That is part of your own growth.

George: I can’t think of anything that I would wish to reject (Agreed)

I thank you, and I hope I come only in truth and in love.

George: One small point that ensues: I notice that one of the sitters in that American group, was one Gene Roddenberry, who was the author of a very successful series on TV called ‘Star Trek’ and some very good points—some mystical points featured in that series. And I suspect that Gene Roddenberry has recycled some material into the science fiction TV series. I imagine that’s perfectly all right and will help to in a way make people more aware?

Yes. I would say only that if it puts the seed of thought forward, then that is not wrong. If you can put forward the seed of Spirit or anything mystical, as you put it, then as far as I am concerned, that is only good. All things start with a seed of thought. And if it brings people to think about something that they have not considered before, then that is opening the way of further seeking and searching. (Yes) I hope those words have been helpful, not only to your friend, but to each one of you this evening. (Affirmed)

George: Yes, and I am sure they will be helpful to many others.

Now I feel that it is time, my dear friends, that you have your own thoughts and upliftment and healing, which I feel each one of you is in need of in some way. (Thanks expressed) Before I leave you, I want you if you will, before next time to be aware of blue light, as you go into your sleep state at some point in this coming week and to know that we are close to you. (Thanks + farewells)

Following Sara's conducted healing journey involving blue/purple light, one came through Eileen and addressed us in clear voice:

I don't intend to stay too long. I am here only to help the lady to return this evening. But of course, I always take the opportunity whenever it arises. I am so pleased to be here with you again, because you see, groups like this one, are always close to my heart, because it was a group such as this that I also belonged to (Exclamations of surprise). It is always a great pleasure, once you have made contact, to return more than once, but of course, I have nothing of significance to bring to you, only that I am here to help the lady to return to her own being.

Sarah: It sounds as if you have been to visit us before. Is that right?

I most certainly have. (Warm welcomes)

Sara What's your name?

Emma.

George: Yes, of course!

I would like to say only that someone is calling the name of 'Wilson'. I don't know if that is acceptable to anyone, but it is of little importance...

George: I knew a Winnie and Tom Wilson.

Ah! Well indeed it may be for you. It is possible. Are they with us here in Spirit? If they are...

George: They are...

They are sending their regards to you.

George: Thank you very much. I send my regards to them! (Yes) How lovely to hear of them. (Yes) Yes, they were dear friends.

Yes. I do believe my task this time has been completed and the lady will return eventually.

George: Yes, I think you were known as Emma Hardinge Britton, on the Earth, when you were here, and as I recall, well known for your speaking.

Well, it is of little importance that names are given, but for the sake of recognition I always say my first name.

George: Yes, of course. We have our history book notes, as you know—and your name is there.

Well, I've been humbled that you should remember a name that is hardly for remembering, but of course, I know that when you are on the Earth plane, that names sometimes have some kind of meaning and seem important.

George: Yes, well, they get into books sometimes and we read books and it makes us more aware of the diligent work that was done at that time.

Well for that I will say: thank you and on those words I really must leave you. (Thanks + farewells)

George's Notes:

'The Only Planet of Choice' was first published 1993 and the first reported transmission was received 1975 (just two years following the first St Stephen transmission in New Zealand). Much detail is given in the book concerning the 'seeding' of Earthly civilisations from Spirit civilisations.

Emma Hardinge Britton first came through to us in December 2003 and this was confirmed by Salumet during the meeting of 12th January 2004.

~27TH June 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As always it is good to join with you once more my dear friends. Firstly, let us say 'welcome' to our guest (Pia) this time.

George: She has come a long way from Finland.

I am well aware! As always with any guest which enters this room, we will give her the opportunity to ask of any questions that she may have, but before that begins let me say this to you all: That words I have spoken to you in past times about many comings and goings and the evidence of my words from other sources is taking place at this present time and you will hear more of it as time continues. There are a preponderance of people upon your Earth plane at this time who come as beings of light to bring to this world much light to those in need and there is one who sits before you now. I would say to our dear lady friend that her life path will change many times throughout her life upon this Earth and as she travels this pathway, there are many times when choices will become difficult for her. But I say to you my dear friend that you are constantly guided. Have you any questions for me this time?

Pia: Not right now.

You are happy to listen quietly. (Yes) Yes. I am sure my friends have questions for me. (Some knowing chuckles)

Paul: I have a question I wanted to ask about creativity in relation to music. I was just wondering how music is given to those musicians. How does it get inside their heads? Who gives it to them and how do they get hold of it?—that sort of thing...

You are not content with just one question! (Laughter) Let me say this to you: it comes through the Soul aspect of every human being and it is never the property of one lifetime. These musicians that you talk of have housed these abilities for much of time, and as we have discussed on many previous occasions, you retain all knowledge—all knowledge is within. Therefore if you have chosen to come to a lifetime which includes music as a great part of your being, then you have opened yourself to those of us in our world to influence you. But the seed is already sown before your return to this life. It is a choice from the beginning, but of course you know all of you are influenced in many ways and I feel that I should say to you, that I feel very few people would not be influenced by the vibration of what you term 'music' and what I would like to term 'vibrations of love'.

George: So 'vibrations of love' would be an alternative expression to 'music'.

Yes, a much better term, but of course as human beings, you well know that you are prone to giving titles to all things. But music can touch the heart and the soul of all people, but as always it depends on the individual and to which pathway they are turning. But creativity with music makes the soul lighter.

Graham: I would imagine that everything you've just said would also apply to art?

Yes. You may give it different names, but the influence comes from the same source, as do all forms of influence whether it be music, art, singing—any form of vibration which lifts the Spirit. But also, too, as we have discussed before, music also can be heavy and make the vibration very dull, which can also affect those souls who are lacking in light and love. Remember always what we have spoken about of positive and negative energies—it applies to both.

George: Yes, we've spoken about Mr Masaru Emoto's work with the influence of thought upon water and one type of music was found to not be beneficial to the activity of water and that was 'heavy metal rock'.

Yes, this is what I speak of when the vibration of the music creates its own lightness or density, yes. We would wish that you are influenced by that lighter vibration of what you would term 'beautiful music'.

George: And I think that is the majority case in music. (Yes)

Sara: Can I just continue with that theme? Graham's mother was commenting this week that she was surprised by his artistic talent and she wondered if it was from another life, so I would assume that he has tapped into something that was already there and developed it further. Am I right?

It has taken time, it has been necessary for him to make contact with that all-knowing knowledge that has always been, and it has taken his illness—(Eileen coughed)—forgive—I will attend to this for one moment. Forgive—the air is dry for the instrument's throat.

Paul: Is the fan a problem? (It was a very warm evening and the fan was put on to try to keep the room cool.)

I have dealt with it, thank you. Let us continue. Yes, our dear friend needed his illness to come and to make connection with our world, and once that happened, then all kinds of influence have entered his life, but the ability was always there.

Graham: I certainly felt the influence at times—it's been overwhelming.

And may I say to you dear friend, that it will continue.

Graham: Thank you for telling me. I shall look forward to that.

As long as you are open to our influence, then you will receive.

Sara: And I imagine it's the same for me with music, can I ask? (Yes) I'm tapping into something, I'm receiving the guidance?

Let me speak generally to you all, that each individual here has been placed together for very good reason, which we have discussed. Each one of you has the combination of love and the ability to open to our world, which then enables us to come close to you and to influence in whichever way is necessary for your life's pathway. You recognize that each one of you has different lifestyles, but yet each one of you is connected by that thread of love; and that cannot now be broken. Whether you depart of ways in times to come, this connection which has been made can never be broken, as you know well, because you have come together in another lifetime. (Agreed)

George: I was going to ask a question about Soul family which seems to connect. I feel that this group as we are, we a little unusual in the way that we have come together in this life and we have also come together in previous lives, and I believe also others tend to reincarnate and meet up again through some varying degrees. Could you say a little more about that, about the way that people return and do come together again?

When we speak of Soul connection, we are speaking of something much larger than you could understand whilst on the Earth. You, my dear friend, are but one thread in a web of threads, but without your one web, the rest would collapse. Picture the web full of individual threads and you will begin to understand the complexity of the Soul. Remember that you are but one aspect of the Soul, therefore you are but one small part of one small thread; then we begin to enter into deep matters. You understand fully that when you leave this world and return home that you return to that fuller aspect of Spirit and Soul, but it takes many times for each individual Spirit to connect and to learn what it is he needs to know. Therefore shall we say it is a community choice, when individuals decide that they will return to the same lifetime. These choices are not taken easily and they can take place hundreds and thousands of years apart, but let me say, once connection is made, whether it be in this lifetime or another lifetime, those connections are never broken. If there is a love connection, that connection will never be broken.

George: And the actual choice, that extends beyond this group?

Yes, yes. The choice is much greater—it is not only your choice, but the choice of a much greater energy.

George: I have a funny picture of Soul at the moment: A huge cloth of many, many threads.

Yes, it has to be many, many threads. It is difficult to put into words how complex the situation is. We could try, but I feel the minds would become confused. It is better that we remain and keep the explanation simple.

George: It is good to have an idea even if it is a hazy idea.

Yes, but you see, you are one who needs always to probe further, what you are given (Knowing chuckles) and I do not say that to you to discredit you, because it is a worthy thing that you do.

George: But I'm happy with your answer, very happy, even if my mind is open-ended at both ends!

They are your words. (More chuckles) Does that help you?

George: That does indeed, yes. I think it helps us all. (Agreed)

Are there more questions this time?

Pia: I was thinking about when you said 'when they meet, the connection can never be broken'. So does it stay as a feeling or in what way does it not break?

It remains as an energy—feelings belong to the physical body. You are all energy, you are all light and you will return to the same energy when you depart this world. You have to, my dear friend, visualize that you are beings of energy, if you are to grasp what I am trying to teach you. It is a difficult concept sometimes, but slowly your thinking becomes adapted to the words as I am sure my dear friends will confirm for you, that slowly, slowly they now understand themselves to be beings of light and energy and not just a mass of physical bones and flesh. Does that help you?

Pia: Umm.

Ummmm? (Laughter)

Pia: But can this energy be felt in any way? (Never.) Never...

Never, energy cannot be destroyed in that way.

George: Yes, there's another question which concerns energy in a way. A recent news item is that people living close to electric power lines, within those families children are 70% more likely to get cancer as a result of living close to those power lines. So I assume there would be an effect of that high electrical voltage, an effect on the energy of the bodies of people living in those areas. Can you say anything about that?

Yes. Electricity is an energy as there are many, many energies within your world and our world. As you know, all energy intermingles; you cannot fully, when you leave this world, separate energy in such a way. Therefore I would say the conditions of which you speak and because children are vulnerable in their growth state, they do react to an abundance of this energy, which then causes their physical bodies to react in such a way as to cause illness. Let me give you an example. When those from our world come to you to give healing to the physical being, there are restrictions in the amount of energy which can be given to an adult body. Therefore if you take the body of a small child in the stage of development, think how fragile they are and if we were to overdo the energy of healing, let me say that you would not exist as a human being, but you would be joining us in our world, because of the overload of energy available.

George: That's dramatically put. Thank you for that.

I hope that helps you in your thinking.

George: Yes and I hope many people will read this, because it's something we should very carefully consider.

Yes. Yes, again man is determined that he knows how to use the energies that the Earth is supplying him with, but as in all things, moderation is essential.

Sarah: Salumet, I was going to take a friend to see somebody on the Isle of Wight—unfortunately she has been taken into hospital so she won't be going, but she was going to see somebody who has a machine that changes the chaotic light—this is the word that she gave me—when you have an illness, the light which is emitted is chaotic and this machine changes the chaotic light into pure light. Can you tell me anything about this?

It is the same type of energy that is used from our world through the hands of an instrument. It has been channelled into machinery, but it is of the same kind of energy. And after all, let me stress just one thing to you when we speak of illness: you need no machinery, you need the working of your mind, that is the only machinery that you should be using, but, as in all things physical, if we cannot influence the individual, we have to influence those within the medical fields who can help others. But I would confirm for you that this is possible.

Sarah: Thank you. I'm going to try and get the message over to her that she doesn't have to go to the Isle of Wight, she just needs to use her own mind.

You know many times I have told you the importance of your thinking, of the importance of your quiet times in connection with us here in my world, where we can influence you for good. You human beings have everything to hand, and yet you are still either fearful or you doubt. I have told you before that it is a human trait and it saddens us sometimes when individuals could help themselves and they allow negative thoughts to enter.

Sarah: I must say with this friend, she was concerned that too many people were visiting her and she didn't have enough time for meditation, because she was sure it was meditation that she needed to do, so I think she's probably on the right track.

Yes, and of course my dear friends, as I have said many times, you need very little time to make daily connection with us, therefore to say you do not have time is something that you have to face when the time comes. So I say to you, make time. You are responsible for these vehicles which you inhabit, no one else, no one else can cause you hurt or distress, only you as an individual are responsible for what you allow to happen to your body. It is a sacred vehicle with which you have been endowed. You have been given the abilities to live this life in a good and honest and truthful way, and because of the materialistic way that life has been transformed, human beings find it increasingly difficult to enter that state of union with the energy of Spirit.

I hope my dear friends that my words this time have given you a little more food for thought.

(Affirmed + thanks) As always I am happy to join with you and shortly we will continue on our errand of learning.

Lilian: Yes, we look forward to that.

Now I will take my leave and know always that I stand close by and that your words are always heard.

(Thanks + farewells)

~11th July 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I will for this time remain for just a short time.

Lilian: Yes...

This evening is intended for some self-development for each one of you. We would ask that each one calls upon their own guidance, and that if conditions are right this time, you should become more aware than you have been at any stage of your development.

George: That will be very welcome.

I have been aware of the thoughts of one among you who has been feeling afraid. I wish to say: all thoughts which come to me, I will endeavour to help in any way that I can. I wish to reinforce these words to you. If I may suggest to you that our dear lady (Sara) takes you on a short journey in order for you to go deep within yourselves in preparation for those who stand beside you. (Thanks expressed) I will leave it with you, and for the rest of this time, I will be working quietly with this instrument. It may be that your help will be required in the stages of returning.

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

Next, Sara took us through a meditative journey as suggested, followed by one with a wonderfully gentle voice through Eileen:

My name is Selena.

Lilian: Welcome to you.

I come to you, only to say, should you be fearful, should you be troubled, please hold out your hands to us, because we stand close by. We are here only to help you, to give you love and to help in your living.
(Thanks expressed)

Paul: Are you a guide?

I am most honoured to be a helper of the angels. (Surprise and delight expressed) I am most honoured when I am given opportunities such as this, to speak with people of your own kind. We hear your thoughts, we are aware of all your emotions and when instructed, we come so close to you, and we take every opportunity to stand by you and to help to change those fears, and to help you to see more of the beautiful spiritual light, which is yours for the asking. (Thanks expressed)

George: Very nice to know.

Sarah: We are very honoured that you visit us.

I would, like before I go, just like to say to you all, how wonderful the lights are that surround each one of you. If only you could see how clear and bright they are at this time, I am sure you would be truly amazed. Because I have to say, not all groups such as yourselves have so many beautiful aspects of light.

(Thanks expressed) Again, I will say thank you and goodbye, but not forever. I will be around you...

(Thanks expressed) Thanks to those for whom I work, who have given me this beautiful opportunity.

Lilian: I'm sure we are all very grateful.

Paul: We'll look forward to 'feeling' you.

George: If you have the opportunity to return again, we shall be most pleased.

Thank you, and now I must take my leave. (Thanks + farewells)

One followed through Sarah, giving feedback on what we had been trying to do earlier:

I have been waiting for a while, and I thought perhaps this was not quite appropriate this evening. But I have now come to tell you, just a short word to say to you. The ones who have been standing with you this evening have asked me just to let you know how pleased they are to have made contact with you, and they hope that you will continue with your thoughts to them, when you go to sleep tonight, because they will still be around you and would be happy to impress upon you, some other thoughts, if you would be open to it. So please, they would be most grateful to be able to help you a little further.

(Thanks expressed)

And that is all I have to say to you, and I will leave so that you can close down now. (Thanks + farewells)

Note: Sara's meditative journey 'In the pink' can be listened to on the website:

~18th July 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come to you this time I am aware that this past week of your time has seen each one of you raise your own individual awareness and consciousness. I wish to say to you my dear friends, I know that you have been most grateful for the information which has been given to you in the form of mind projection.

(Agreed) Of course there is more to come and I hope that your interest will be retained for that. But what I wish to say to you this time: I wonder if you realize by this mind projection which has been given to you, just how small the communication is between us all, that the world is not solitary, that many universes are closer than you can at first imagine.

George: Yes, this I believe is viewing it all in terms of Spirit, which we should, (Yes) but what is seemed to make it all far away is our physical observation and thinking.

Yes. What has transpired before you is meant to make you think more deeply, not only about mind projection, not only about the information given, but to your connection to the whole of existence, and just how unique that is. So you see my dear friends, your part is to play your own individual interpretation of what you receive. Would you have any questions about my words?

George: There was one question I was going to ask anyway: There have been occasions when Bonniol, the one who comes to us from Planet Aerah, has arrived a little early. In fact he has listened to some of your teaching on account of accidentally arriving a little early.

Let me stop you. There has been no accident. (Laughter)

George: Yes, I was going on to ask if it would be possible for him to deliberately arrive early and sit in for one of your sessions. Would that be a possibility?

If he so desires, of course that is possible. If the gentleman who offers his voice for his use is willing, then of course he may sit and listen to my words.

George: This possibility was voiced and I can say that he regards that an interesting experiment.

For you my dear friends I am willing to accommodate anything which is to the betterment of your Spirit.

George: Wonderful—this is certainly a most interesting area for us to explore further.

Yes. I recognize that you find all of these things most interesting, but of course it is all part of living as far as we in my world are concerned, but it is important dear friends that you expand your awareness and consciousness at this time. I have said to you previously, this is a year of your earthly lives when you could make great progress in your spiritual growth, but as always, the choice is yours. We can offer the help to you, but we cannot make you. Therefore, each individual within this room has the possibility of expanding, of growing, of becoming much more aware of all those who are around and are willing to help and to teach, not only within the confines of this room, but in your everyday living. That is the gift I offer to each one of you. (Thanks expressed) The help is there for you to use, but we cannot make you use it. And before I go further, I would like to say that when the end of this meeting is near, the two gentlemen within this room will be used to the degree possible that they will allow. Therefore, as we sit quietly towards the end of the evening, please my dear friends, be aware of what is being given to you.

More questions? (Thanks expressed from Graham and George)

Graham: Yes—at the moment I am doing a little experiment at home where I have a balance. I've got a see-saw set up and I'm trying to mind-project one of the sides to go down. (Yes) I haven't succeeded yet but I thought it would be a good idea if I were to bring the scales to this place, where we could gather round as a group and have a go. Would that be a relevant thing for us to do?

There would be no problem with that and in fact the combined energy would make it even easier for you, but do not expect it to work first time.

Graham: No, I realize it is going to take time, but it's an exciting thing to do. (Yes) Thank you.

George: I wonder what would be the best approach to that: to work on the idea that one pan on the balance is getting lighter—floating. Would that be the best approach to try to impress on the device in that way?

The best way to work is to feel the energy, to feel the heaviness of the earthly object and to transform and transmute that energy to one of a lighter degree. You understand? (Yes)

Lilian: Is that what happens to apports?

Yes. It is the change of energy which creates these things.

George: So in a sense we are visualizing a transmutation?

In a sense, but you are also focussed with the spiritual mind. There is a focus which must be used. You understand? (Yes) But of course, when you attempt this first time, you must remember that many minds together can also create havoc, therefore it will take some discipline. But you may be surprised—I feel it would be something worthwhile for you to attempt.

Graham: Is it best to do it with your eyes closed to focus? I have been trying with my eyes open.

Yes. What happens then is that with earthly eyes you see only the solid object, so I would suggest to you my dear friends that perhaps—and again I do not wish to make rules, because that is not our way, but I feel that to have the eyes closed would simplify it for you. But of course whatever is most comfortable for each individual is of course the best way. (Thanks expressed)

George: Last time we spoke, you said something about music, and since then there has been a world-wide event and ten concerts were arranged largely by three people: Bob Geldof, Richard Curtis and—the other name escapes me. That was a set of concerts listened to by many, many people and held in aid of poverty and hunger in Africa and unfair trading in Africa. I would imagine that this would be seen from Spirit as a very good event and a step forward for the world?

Yes, not only seen by us, but inspired by us! (Laughter) You must know my dear friends that as I have told you in past times, that as your life continues, although there are many actions within your world which disturb the human race, there are also many which are born out of good for humankind, such as the one you speak of. I have said that as time progresses, human awareness and the acceptance that life continues and Spirit is something that is part of everyday being, then humankind will slowly change in its outlook.

George: Yes, the third gentleman who should be mentioned is Bono, (Yes) the lead singer. I felt those were three did extremely well.

Yes, there always will be leaders who will accept positions of honour and trust for many others—there has to be for humankind to accept these things. That is why it is people in public eye who will be to the forefront of these events, but I have to say this time the event was worldwide, it was known of worldwide and that is how these things will progress. As one ripple continues on its way to join another, the wave becomes greater.

George: Yes and I could not help wondering if your few words on music the week before were also no coincidence.

Yes, you are observant my friend, yes. But does not it warm your hearts when you see such things take place (Agreed) and the generosity of Spirit from so many. But always there is the positive and the negative within your world, but the positive aspects of living are growing—it may seem slowly, but I know that you will believe me when I say: we are making progress this time—yes.

Sarah: Certainly, with the bombings we have had in London, the people—well they were obviously unhappy with it, but everybody was saying that it is not going to set us apart, it's going to bring us together. So, I'm sure that those bombings were another reason perhaps for bringing people together.

There will always be misguided people. I would rather use the word 'misguided' than what most people call evil. They are misguided souls in this world, but of course it brings much heartache to those in your world, but as you well know my dear friends, there is always the wider, bigger picture to consider, and that is what we view from our world.

Lilian: Would there have been a debt to pay at all there?

That is a possibility, but you must not always assume that that is the case. As I have said, many of these human beings are misguided in some way, or are in pain, or are fearful for whatever reason. You must not stand in judgement; they will do that when they join us in our world. So always—again I repeat my words to you: never pass judgement on another one of your fellow human beings.

Graham: There's been an awful lot of thinking since that bombing, about what drives young men to do such a thing. I've been impressed by the amount of understanding that people have actually shown to the situation that arises that causes people to do such a thing. (Yes) Those people are becoming more compassionate and are beginning to understand that people don't do things for no reason. There's usually something behind it.

Yes, whatever the reason, that is for them to decide. Whether the majority of the people on the Earth plane agree with their thinking or not, that is their freewill and that is their life choice. That is why you cannot judge, and as we have said on many occasions, there is always good or bad, or positive and negative energies as I would prefer to term it.

George: Yes, running parallel to all of this of course, there is the process of law and I imagine that that is all right, so long as—well what I would like to say is, the opportunity given to those convicted for reflecting within and offering the possibility of moving forward. (Yes) Would that be a sensible comment?

I understand your words. Of course there has to be within your world, what you call laws for your societies—of course there must be, that is the way of human living; but coupled to that law, there has to be humanity in the true sense of the word. It is not up to the human being to make judgement in such a way as to tell each individual what they must think or reflect upon—that remains with each individual. Remember also that there are individuals within your world who are misguided in their thinking, but who feel that they are right in what they do. Therefore it is a difficult equation is it not, when it comes to making judgement. Judgement will be made when every individual comes to our side of life. Judgement will be made by those individuals as they will see how their life path took shape or did not take shape. Therefore, never say there is no judgement, because ultimately the judgement will come from Spirit itself.

George: Yes, I imagine the one thing we can say is that it's absolutely fundamentally wrong (Yes) or has been in the past and that has been capital punishment, because that prevents the accused from having the opportunity of reflecting.

Yes, I understand the way of your thinking. Yes, let me just say this about taking the life of another human being: It is never right in the spiritual sense that one human being extinguishes the life of another. There is always another pathway for them to take, but the very fact that you are human beings, you are not perfect and there are many injustices that you feel exist in everyday living, will create this imbalance in harmony. It is a difficult topic to speak about, because the human consciousness automatically wishes for justice and it takes a Soul indeed, a Soul of wisdom, to stand back and to allow that greater picture of life to continue to continue to take shape and to allow the ways of Spirit to move forward as it always will. There is indeed much influence being given to the world at this present time, and that will never stop, until such time as the human being becomes more gentle within himself and recognizes the Spirit within. The greatest Spirit can change an entire situation into a much better one if they so desire, but that is the crux of the situation—desire! I hope my words have given you something to think about.

George: Yes, indeed, they've taken us forward and also they've embellished certain things from earlier teachings and yes, thank you for that.

Yes. Life is most difficult for some, not because that has been their pathway, but because that has become their choice. So be cautious that you do not make every event something that is preordained. It is difficult I know, but look deep within your hearts my friends and you will come to the right conclusions.

Sarah: I think we're all thinking very differently now to when you first arrived to teach us.

Yes, I am sure that is so, because your lights are so much brighter, your understanding so much greater and your knowledge of Spirit so full of understanding. Yes indeed, you have grown my dear friends—unfortunately you do not know how much, but that is for me to welcome each time I join with you.

Sarah: Well I think we are going to give you 10 out of 10 for your teaching. (Chuckles)

I take it as a compliment, thank you. (Chuckles) Now I will withdraw this time and allow any others to come who may wish to speak with you, but do not forget gentlemen that you have work to do this time. (Thanks + farewells)

~25TH July 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time I feel there is some depletion of your energies, therefore we will try to uplift you before the end of this meeting. (Thanks expressed) I also wish to extend our greetings to the young man who we have waited sometime to say welcome to.

Ben: Thank you. (Sarah's son Ben, visiting from Australia)

I will give you the opportunity to ask any questions that you have, but firstly let me say this to you: you are almost a contradiction in yourself. You are reserved and yet you are outgoing. You find that people are attracted to you in many ways, but there is with you a trend of impulsiveness, which would benefit you to temper a little. I am sure you understand what I say. It is always difficult to gauge one's personality, but within this young man there lies a pathway, which would open to him should he so desire. But as with all people, the desire needs to be there; the freewill has to be respected. But I say to you my dear friend that gifts of the Spirit are waiting for you if you so desire. Now, as always when we have visitors, I will take questions from you. Does anyone wish to ask any questions?

Lilian: Have you got any questions Ben?

Ben: Not at this stage, thank you.

Lilian: George?

George: Yes. I think you invited us to think on mind projection—on that subject, and it does occur to me that on thinking about the spiritual world and the physical world, a key difference perhaps, if I could put it that way, is that the physical world has rotation within it running through and through—from the smallest particle, to the atoms, to the planets, to the suns, to the galaxies—all rotate. This may be part of what gives rise to the physical properties of mass, gravity, space, time and various energy fields. Now, that is the physical world, and the spiritual world has none of these properties, yet connects to the physical. Where mind projection is concerned, I think the astral planes are important, and one can mind-project from planet to planet via the astral planes, which are like staging posts between the planets and what I might refer to as 'Spirit proper' or 'formless Spirit. So mind projection utilizes Spirit, with the good offices of those in the astral planes. So mind projection is from physical beings to physical beings, but involves Spirit and those in the astral planes, and so there is no effect of space or time, so that the communications are instantaneous. And I would ask: is that a fair picture of how things are, involving mind projection?

Yes, I understand your question and let me say I admire the complexity of your words. (Chuckles) If I may simplify it for you further. Whether you speak of the physical or the spiritual, you are speaking of 'energy'. (Yes) Physical energy is much denser—that is so, whilst spiritual energy is much more refined, and yes, the mind projection from the human is part of the spiritual connection which is needed. But in your mind, the way you have described your words, you are thinking along the correct lines, but I would prefer to say that refined energy conjoins with denser energy at certain points, which therefore makes it appropriate for mind projection to work between beings, and not—I do not say, human beings—there are many forms of beings who are not of Spirit. But the connection is simplicity itself: it is the joining of refined spiritual energy, joining with that denser energy, which comes from the human beings own thinking. If you try to make these things more complex by your human thinking, you will come unstuck, because there is no simple answer for you. But your explanation I much admire.

George: Thank you! I'm searching for a reason for one world having a set of physical properties, while the other world has not, (Yes) and perhaps this is unnecessary thinking...

Yes, it is extraneous thinking. It is just denser energy—the same energy of all life, but much more refined energy, combined with denser energy is utilized for the purpose of mind projection. It is as simple as that.

George: So the denser energy automatically has the physical properties?

Yes—yes. Does it not seem more simple now?

George: It certainly does seem more simple, yes, thank you!

I hope that helps you. We are speaking of a difficult topic here, when we are speaking again of energy.

Always this has been a difficulty, when we come to explanations.

George: Yes, and going on from there, from mind projection between beings, would that mean it also happens between beings who are not on physical planets?

There are many forms of life my dear friends, some of which we have spoken of, and as you have become aware in recent times from our visitor, shall we say, who is projecting his mind, because, from where he comes, it is so much easier for them to do, because they have developed that sense of projection. I am afraid mankind as he is at this moment in time, is but a child in this activity.

George: Yes, I'm sure we all accept that!

But that is not to say they cannot be taught and that is what we are trying to attempt with you all, my dear friends.

Lilian: Anyone else a question?

Graham: Again on the subject of mind projection, in trying to visualize it in my mind, I realise how difficult it is to do. Probably some people are better at this than myself. So before I try to influence the scales in the experiment I was describing last time, what I am trying to do is to practise the visualisation of objects in my mind during meditation, and I assume that if I continue to practice with this I will actually get better and better, eventually visualising things in my mind, which means that later on I will be able to focus better than I can at the moment.

Yes, of course you need to develop the spiritual aspect of your being if you are to focus with the thinking brain of humankind, then you will always find it to be more difficult. You have to be in a state of raised consciousness, (Yes) which means leaving behind the physical thinking and just being.

Graham: With a totally quiet mind.

With a quiet mind if possible. (Yes) But as you well know, this takes practice, as does all things. You would not expect to do anything in your world without practice and also it applies to many of the spiritual attributes that they also must be practised often. You understand? (Affirmed) But yes, please continue in the way that you are and you will reap the results if you stay true to it.

Graham: Yes, so that's something to look forward to. Thank you.

I would gently remind all of you, that many things are possible if you have that deep spiritual desire. It is entirely up to each individual, how they develop in their way; it is part of their own freewill and their own responsibility, in whatever way they choose to develop.

Now, I feel this time that we will allow some others to come.

Lilian: Thank you.

And I look forward to our next meeting together. (Agreed) And I know that as you leave this meeting place this time, you will feel much more upliftment within your individual lives. (General thanks expressed)

There then followed a rescue. (Audios of rescues freely available on website: www.salumetandfriends.org)

~1ST August 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you all once more.

Lilian: Yes, it's lovely to be together again.

For the duration of this meeting I wish to work closely with this instrument, therefore if there are questions, I will answer now.

Lilian: Could I just say before any questions that Sue who comes would like to say 'thank you' to you. She did ask for help and has called your name in the last few days and she wished me to say 'thank you'.

I am available at all times my dear friends. Before we have questions I would like to take this opportunity to say that I will be working with this instrument in order not only to use her voice, but to be able to be a little more animated, but as you know, these developments take much energy and time.

(Yes) There is one exercise my dear friends for you this evening, for your own development. It is that each one of you chooses a colour to be visualized in the area of your third eye and to look deeply within and to find what lies within the colour that you have chosen.

Lilian: We'll try that.

Yes, it is just another development for you to try. Now, we will make any questions short.

Lilian: Ben, how about you?

Ben: I don't seem to have any questions at the moment.

Sara: Could I ask a quick one? My little boy I'm sure he is seeing Spirit and he spoke to me about it yesterday. I don't think he's too afraid of it, but I felt I needed to say something to him, so I told him not to be afraid, just to see what happens and what he could see and that possibly when he's older he may be able to help people with this gift. Is that appropriate? Could you comment?

Yes. Just let the child be, and whatever comes to him will feel natural without any detailed explanation. If it seems an everyday occurrence, then children will accept it as being so. That child also sees much colour.

Sara: Yes I thought he did, yes. He told me he was seeing light. (Yes) I'm not sure if it's aura, but I think he sees Spirit in the form of light—the colours.

Yes, that is so.

Sara: Yes, he can at times be a little nervous, but when he spoke to me yesterday he didn't seem nervous at all. He seemed to accept it and was very happy to know that it was a special gift.

Yes, it is for him a natural progression of his development, and as parents, if you allow him to be himself, even including some fear, he will come along very nicely.

Sara: Good! (Chuckles) I'm beginning to understand just how sensitive he is, (Yes) and I understand why sometimes he finds things a bit difficult, because he is so sensitive.

Yes. Just because we have Spirit in child human frames, does not make life any easier. (Yes) In the same way as I have told you that as adults, sometimes the more knowledge that you accumulate, can cause you in some way, more problems, because of the development of your understanding. But just let it happen naturally. You will find with this one that animals are attracted to him, but it will come at a later stage of his life. But be aware.

Sara: Yes, perhaps a pet might be good for him probably...

Again, I will say to you as I have in the past that this boy child is much impressed by the father's words. Do you remember?

Sara: Yes, there is a strong connection with him.

Although he will come to his mother, the words of the father are the ones which will go deep. Therefore you have a great responsibility my dear friend!

Graham: I shall be careful what I say! (Knowing laughs)

Yes, you may at times find that he knows what you are about to say, before even you say the words.

Sara: Have they been together before, is there a past life connection?

There is always a connection in some way—we have discussed this many times. But of course, as you know, all come together on many occasions. (Yes)

Lilian: If our friend comes from the other planet to visit tonight, we were going to play some music and if you're working with your instrument, will that disturb? Would you rather we didn't play the music this evening?

Provided there is no sudden noise, there is no problem. It is the suddenness of noises which will affect the instrument. But as I work with her, she is far enough away.

George: Could I ask a question about something you were talking with us about a while ago—about the time we move to Spirit and there is the choice of moving forward in Spirit, or returning to the Earth for a further physical life? And the implication was that many people return to Earth, because they have certain likings for the Earthly life. And I wanted to ask: is there any danger in Earth becoming a kind of spiritual ‘bottleneck’, so that not enough are moving forward in Spirit, and this part of the universe gets retarded, because not enough people are moving forward in Spirit and making that choice?

I understand your question. I will correct one thing that you have said, (Thank you.) and that is, you do not consider when you are thinking of returning—you do not consider returning because you have likings for the Earth plane—you do not; that is the first point. Secondly, the remarks that you make my dear friend also implies that the great plan is imperfect, and this can never be. Therefore, your question is really one of a hypothetical nature.

George: Yes. The reason I ask this, I came across this idea in a book I was reading, (Yes) and I thought it might well be good to have some clarification.

Yes. Remember, as in all thoughts and in many books, it is the consideration of the author’s thinking, rather than actual factual details.

George: Yes, well thank you, it is good to have clarification on that.

Yes. But never assume that Spirit wishes to return to Earth, because they like what is here. They return, very often unwillingly, but know that they must, if they wish to progress. So, I hope you will consider that idea more fully.

George: So the Spirit, either moves forward in Spirit or returns to Earth, but nothing is going to go wrong, whichever happens—it is a perfect plan!

How could it go wrong, when it stems from perfection? You understand?

George: Yes. That is understood. Thank you!

Now, for this time I will work quietly and allow you to continue firstly with the exercises which will be good for you all, and please speak quietly until such time as I have taken this one to a slightly different level. Until we come together again my dear friends, know that I am always with you. (Thanks + farewells)

Note: The notion that Earth is a spiritual ‘bottleneck’ was taken from the book: ‘The Only Planet of Choice’, also mentioned in our meeting of 13th June 2005.

~15TH August 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As we join together this time there is about you all a sluggishness a tiredness of your energies, but as I continue, you will feel before you leave this room much more lightness within you. (Thanks expressed)

George: Yes, I must admit to feeling a little tired this evening; I commented on it earlier.

It is much more general than your good self.

Lilian: Yes, I can appreciate what you are saying too.

I have been most interested to see how much you have gained from our visitor (Bonniol) who comes to you.

George: We have indeed gained much.

Yes, but I have to say, my dear friends, that the practice that would be good for you is not in general taking place.

George: No, I think we feel we need to get ourselves into a slightly less tired condition so that we can be sharp of mind. I think that sharpness of mind seems to be an important factor in this work. Would you agree with that?

What is important is that you are willing to try. After all, it is the Spiritual essence which will be at work and not the physical being. Therefore physical tiredness is really irrelevant.

George: That’s interesting.

Paul: Would you say that to concentrate on one aspect of mind projection at a time?

I would suggest that each one chooses what they wish to try and to make it individual to themselves, but to focus upon one thing, as you say, is a much better thing to try to achieve, yes. But if you do not attempt, how can you expect for these gifts to grow?

Paul: Yes, that's very true.

But as I have said to you in past times, it is dependent upon each individual what they attempt to achieve. We can offer our advice which I must say I have done often, but in the end it is up to each individual to decide for themselves. But remember that the object of the mind projection was for your benefit and not only for the enjoyment and the knowledge. Do you remember those words?

George: Yes indeed. Yes, I'm sure we all appreciate that, and yes, we must get down to the practice more thoroughly.

Paul: Yes, it needs to become part of our daily meditations.

Yes, indeed, you are quite correct my dear friend. Daily meditation is the source of your knowledge, and again I have to say dear friends that some of you are rather lax in this area. But again, the responsibility lies with you all, and I am not here to place criticism at your feet, but to try to encourage you. So I hope that my words do not bring offence to any of you.

Lilian: No, we need that sometimes.

I also would wish to welcome our visitor this time and to say just a few words to him: That it would be appropriate at this time in his own spiritual thinking, to perhaps make a little more commitment to his own spiritual growth.

Richard: Thank you.

And I will leave it there with you. If you have any questions this time, I will be happy to answer them for you.

George: Can I refer once again to the London bombings which were mentioned. And there was a gentleman who wrote in the Press something quite interesting I thought. He mentioned that the recent bombings were due to Muslim 'extremists'—that was the expression used. And exactly 400 years ago there were some further attempted London bombings; that was the year 1605 and it was the Guy Fawkes gunpowder plot; a plot to blow up the Parliament building—and that was due to Catholic religious extremists. It does seem rather extraordinary that 400 years exactly should separate these two events, it's like history repeating itself and just I wondered if you have any comment on that?

I am happy to pass comment as you know. Yes, let us go back to the beginning of human time upon this planet. There has always been unhappiness amongst humans. There has always been a degree of dissatisfaction with some, which has caused unrest, which has led to wars as you call them—to man against man, killing, fighting and all of these things that you are well aware of. But of course as time has progressed and what you call weapons have been constructed and become such destructive forces, then of course the unrest and dissatisfaction with fellow men has become greater, because the destruction of fellow men is greater. But there has always been this element of mankind, no matter what religious status you place upon them, there has always been a minority of peoples, who for whatever reason they feel to be right, have brought upon themselves and their fellow man much harm and destruction. So you see, this is not new, and the coincidence of time that you have noted has no bearing on what has happened. It is something that has constantly happened throughout your time. That is why it is most important that those from our world have gathered in numbers at this time of your evolution, so that mankind can recognize the many, what you would call injustices within your world. And until such time as mankind realizes, there will always be unrest. But remember my words that this time mankind will not be allowed to become a destructive force upon this planet that as time continues, and of course we are not speaking of months or years or even in your earthly time—but eventually the time will come when mankind must realize that his fellow man is the object of his Love and not his hatred. For whatever reason he feels there may be injustice, it cannot be allowed to simmer. And I assure you my dear friends, that that is our purpose and our plan for this planet.

George: Yes, thank you for putting that into—proper context, I think that would be a good expression.

Yes, you must always remember these incidents are small incidents in the history of your Earth, and no matter how devastating they may seem to you or to the peoples of this Earth, there is always that much wider picture. (Yes) I hope that has been helpful to you.

George: Yes, indeed. Yes, thank you! While we're on this topic, I have been asked to place a question to you by a friend. And the question concerns the running down of the Earth's oil stocks. And I know a lot of people see this as a difficult period, a period of transition in some ways I believe. But it could also be a dangerous period politically, when different factions are striving for the last remains of Earth's oil. But I think you will say this is a physical exercise and this is an exercise for us in looking to new energy sources, (Yes indeed.) and some which will not be as damaging to the planet as oil has been. I would welcome any words on that, which is seen by many as a difficult forthcoming period.

Yes, again you see, mankind on this planet has always tried to claim what the Earth brings as their own, when in fact all of these things are on loan to you. And let me say that the word 'transition' that you used, that is precisely what it is, as it has been in times past. But the depletion of oil supplies in your world will of course be replaced by other energy. And if you remember quite some time ago in your time, I told you that they would look to the seas of your world for energy. That is something to come. But I understand your question and yes there will be many who will be unhappy with the situations in your world. And again I will say, it will cause problems, but to you I say, keep faith in that all of the earthly laws will continue in the way that they are meant to be.

George: Yes, that is a lovely, strong finish to your statement—keep faith—yes, thank you for that! If there are no more questions, I will work quietly with this instrument and allow your other visitors to come.

Lilian: Thank you. Is it ok if we play some more music?

Of course. Again I say, no sudden loudness, please. (Thanks + farewells)

~22nd August 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

How pleased I am to join with you once more. I do not intend to stay long speaking with you this time. I have work to carry out with this instrument and I would say to you that she will be taken a little more deeply than usual and therefore may need some little help at the end of this meeting. I was most interested to listen to you before this meeting about remembering words long past and how it reinforces your thinking about the words I have used to you. (Paul has been transcribing older Salumet recordings which had been discussed.)

Paul: Yes, we had very special meetings with Leslie and continuing—we're very lucky.

I would not call it 'luck', but I would say to you, this was always meant to be at this time.

George: Yes, we have some expressions and 'our good fortune would be another expression and we certainly rate ourselves as being in much light as a result of this work and I think we feel it is our good fortune.

Lilian: Maybe that's the human part of us...

Yes, in that case might I be included in feeling so honoured to work with each one of you.

Sarah: That makes us feel even better when you say that Salumet.

But it is the truth. Now, because I have much work this time, I know that you have words to say to me, (Yes) therefore let us speak of them so that your evening may continue.

Lilian: Yes, do you mind taking—one question this time, from a young lady who lives opposite me—and she's obviously searching. She's read some of the transcripts—would that be alright? (I will be happy...) Yes—this is about her daughter: 'My daughter is an extremely sensitive and anxious child who feels both physical and emotional pain intensely, both her own and others. I am increasingly seeing a strong nurturing instinct in her toward all living things—plants, animals, insects and human, and she can show great distress if she sees anything being harmed. How best should she be guided in view of her young age, so that she can retain her kindness and gentleness without being overwhelmed by the challenges of life? She is often unhappy and deep in thought and I would like her to have greater peace of mind and confidence.'

She is obviously searching herself.

Yes and as all mothers upon this Earth, she is concerned for this young soul. (Yes) Not only does this happen with youngsters, but mothers of the adults in your world also feel they need to protect. To protect is not all, but to allow the Spirit within to grow is a much greater gift of Love. If the child has sensitivity and emotional sensitivity, how can you decide that she needs to find more strength? That sensitivity belongs to her Spirit, and should be encouraged, although I have to say it is innate within this child. What I would say to this mother is that she must help her on the emotional sensitivity, because, as you well know, you must take control of the emotional aspect of your being if you are to move forward in life. Do you each remember my words about emotion? (Affirmed) (Yes)

Lilian: And she has gone through a pretty tough time herself.

That is her choice. She came to this life with those choices—that is something that the mother is still to understand. She can only protect her in as much as she can offer in the purely physical sense, but the child needs the spiritual aspect, if she is to develop that great sensitivity which she now has. The mother is in fact ‘borrowing’ this child for this lifetime and the way that she can best help, is to allow the child full rein of that sensitivity in all aspects of living, but to try to help her to understand that to become too physically emotional, is not the way forward. But of course the mother at this time has trodden a pathway, which for her has not been easy, so she would find at this time it most difficult to deal with the emotional aspect of the child. So I would say only this to her, that to encourage the sensitivity and just to allow the child those times of great love and also of unhappiness, because as you know, you cannot have full rein of one without the other.

George: So I think your previous words on emotion included: if we can distance ourselves from the seat of that emotion and view it from more afar.

Yes, because your emotional body belongs to the physical, the sensitivity belongs to Spirit—there is a great difference and it is something which you human beings struggle with throughout your lives, but having the knowledge helps to ease many emotional institutions. I have seen it within this group, how you now view matters within your world, which at one time would have caused you great concern and distress and which now you accept as part of a fuller picture.

George: Yes—the knowledge certainly helps.

Yes, but it is not something that comes easily to the human.

Lilian: Thank you very much.

Now, I will continue my work with this one and please do try to refrain from any sudden loud noise.

George: Might I ask if the music we played last time, was an inconvenience at all?

No, because I am aware of what you are doing; it is any sudden loud, sharp noise—and again, it is not for my benefit but for this instrument. (Thanks an farewells)

~5TH September 2005~

The meeting began as usual with our giving of names (and brief identification address) for healing. In addition to individuals this time, our prayer/heartfelt feelings were for those caught up in Hurricane Katrina and the many hundreds that lost their lives and the bereaved ones in Iraq:

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As always my dear friends it brings joy to join with you once again.

Lilian: Yes it brings joy to us as well.

George: It certainly does.

Before I came to you this time, it was good to see how brightly each one shone as help was asked for your fellow man. This is a time when asking for help for another increases your own dimensions of light, not only for those who ask, but for those of you within the room who join together in asking the Great Creator for the help that is needed. Your light shines more brightly at these times than at any other time in your earthly existence, because you place to one side your own egos, your own thinking, and you feel and love for one other human being. There are many who gather around at these times, because your thoughts are seen before they are asked, and therefore many gather in the name of Spirit and in the knowledge of knowing each one of you that your prayers must be offered in the way of love. Therefore I wish to say to you: thank you from so many in our world who are dealing with your thoughts of great love for your fellow man.

George: It's very good to hear—to have confirmation of all that connection which we think we feel sometimes, but it's so good always to have that confirmation.

Yes, you are always prone to some doubts—we know this too well, but by now my dear friends you know how powerful your thoughts can become, and those thoughts when given selflessly and given with much love, are so much more powerful in their destination. I would like to say just a few words this time about something that puzzles so many in your world concerning the transportation of your Spirit from this world to ours. So many times have you heard that when the Spirit leaves the human body, so many describe the journey of the tunnel and Light. You full well know my dear friends that as the Spirit departs from the body, there are many who are ready and waiting for that Spirit to come home. There is some talk amongst you human beings in your world about why the majority of people who depart, and who have returned to the body, come back mainly with the same conditions of seeing a tunnel that is filled with light at the end, and feeling of great love. Many say that the Spirit actually travels through this tunnel towards the light. Many refute this explanation, but as you well know, when the Spirit leaves behind that overcoat of the body, it is immediately lighter, and the Spirit does not travel through a physical tunnel, but it is the experience of being free from the body that the Spirit is expressing—the feeling of lightness and leaving behind the fear and the darkness of your Earthly world. After all, it is much darker and denser in your world, is it not? (Agreed) Therefore the Spirit immediately feels this lightness and the feeling of travelling through a tunnel, but it is not a physical tunnel as you would expect, it is the experience of lightness, the experience of the Spirit being and the Love which surrounds them at that time. Therefore I wish to say to you that whenever these experiences are denied, you can my dear friends say: 'No, it is a genuine experience of the Spirit.' And although it is described as a tunnel, it is the experience of Spirit being free.

George: So the idea of the tunnel suits our physical way of thinking?

Yes, it is a description given when the Spirit then returns back to the heaviness of the body.

Paul: We have an expression a bit like, emerging from a cave, from a dark place.

Yes, darkness to lightness, but that is what it is. And of course my dear friends, well you know that there are many experiences when the Spirit departs this Earthly plane—that many experience instantaneously, standing with those who have gone before. There are many experiences, which belong to each individual Spirit, but I would say on the whole, those who return to physical life say that they have experienced a tunnel. It is because they have been allowed to experience for some short time that lightness of Spirit. You understand? (Affirmed) Do you have any questions at this point?

Graham: A soul who led a life of wrong-doing, would their experience be any different in their destination in Spirit world—would it be different?

Again we are touching upon something which has so many explanations in your world. So often we hear of good and of bad. I would rather say that the experience of Spirit in your world is varied so much that when Spirit returns home, then it goes to the place which it has built for itself by its own experience. For some, as you know, that may entail a 'darkness', but it is not a darkness as you would understand here, but a darkness of Spirit.

George: So those who experience what we sometimes call 'near death experience' or 'temporary death experience', they might well come back and report the 'light tunnel'.

Yes, but you have a minority who also experience some form of heaviness or darkness, as you call it, but as I have taught you on many occasions, that darkness is the fear which they hold onto. So what I am trying to say to you all my dear friends, is that you must not consider these things on a physical level, but always look to the spiritual explanation and things will always become much clearer to you.

Sarah: You did say once before that we create our own light and we also create our own darkness. (Yes) The darkness that we create then, you are really saying is fear?

It is based on fear and the way that their life upon this planet has been conducted. Remember I have told you all of life's experiences depend either on love or fear. Darkness or whatever you may wish to call it, stems from acts of fear. Therefore the Spirit remains in the darkness of its own making, until such time those in our world can reach out and 'touch' them.

Sarah: I remember reading once of somebody who had had a near death experience and who saw lots of animals—not very nice animals that they didn't really recognize and they were in this pit with these animals. That was just fear then, was it?

Yes. The fear is their creation, which then becomes their reality. Remember that your thoughts are so powerful, whether based in fear or in love—whichever one you are based in, that creates your reality. Therefore, if you remind yourselves, all experience of leaving this world is entirely at your own freewill, and although there are many who wait to help, as I have said many times, we are not allowed to interfere. The Spirit must recognize for itself what actions it must undertake. Do I make sense to you?

(Affirmed)

George: So those waiting, just have to continue waiting until the Spirit moves forward?

There is much those in our world can do to help, but we cannot step forward and say you must do this or that, because so often those in a state of darkness will not listen—they do not want to listen and we must respect that freewill, which has been endowed to them. (Yes)

Sarah: On a slightly different tack, a friend of mine said that she had heard that when you have Alzheimer's, part of you has already gone to Spirit. Would that be true that the part that they seem to forget, that they don't seem to be aware of what is going on in this world, have they already started coming into the Spirit world? Is that true what she was saying?

I would say to begin with, no, it is a physical degeneration of the physical brain, and only at a later stage of this condition does the thinking then begin to remove itself. But in the majority of cases, no, it is no different from any other disease in your world.

Sarah: So when you say at a later stage the thinking begins to remove itself, is that the stage when it is starting to go into Spirit?

When the body begins to close down, then the Spirit becomes closer to our world, as in many conditions of diseases within your world. For example, those who are unconscious for any length of time and their thinking is not in this world, but it is only in the latter stages of these diseases that the Spirit is preparing to return home—and there are many who stand close to help. But yes, I believe I have spoken before about returning home, and that as the body ages and begins to break down, then those human beings begin to be closer to our world than to yours.

George: And the silver cord would still be in tact at that stage...

Yes, you cannot be in Spirit until that cord has been severed.

Sarah: This friend who I was talking about, she is beginning to get paralysed, she's got bone cancer, and she feels, she is beginning to feel that her Spirit is beginning to get purer. I know you don't normally say things about people, but would you have anything to say about her?

It is her thinking which is creating these conditions, and if her thinking is saying: 'the Spirit is rising', then of course it will happen. It is, I would say, a good way to condition yourself, preparing for that ultimate move. Yes, I agree with her.

Sarah: Thank you very much.

What she must not do, is doubt and become negative, but to allow the Spirit to rise.

Sarah: Thank you very much, I will pass that on to her.

I hope those few words, although we have spoken in past times, I hope it has triggered your memory of my words and again clarified the position on these things. (Affirmed)

George: Yes, you've now given us more detail and clarification. Thank you.

Paul: You've given more reason to it for our understanding.

It is only because your understanding has become greater that we are now able to, how would you say, 'infill' with the detail a little more.

Paul: I'm sure there's lots of that to be done!

Yes. The more you grow, the more you begin to understand and the more that we can elaborate on these details for you. Therefore my friends, I will say to you that each time you come together and give thoughts for help for those in your world, you are indeed growing in your own spiritual natures.

Lilian: Yes, we'll remember that, thank you.

Now, if you have any questions, I will take them before I take my leave of you this time.

Graham: I would like to ask a question about Spirit rescues. I am sure this has been covered, but you were saying that you're not allowed from the Spirit world side to interfere with a soul that is passing over to your side. With a Spirit rescue, is the situation created, where we are able to help and guide somebody who is passing over to do the right thing, but they're reluctant to do so—is it that they would listen more to the physical voice?

Yes, when we bring to you rescues, it is because the Spirit has shown a glimmer of light in the way Spirit is thinking, but because it has been encased within the darkness of its thoughts, it is closer to your world sometimes. Therefore we need your help and the easiest way if that individual Spirit will not listen entirely to us or one who has gone before, is to return it through a medium who the Spirit normally will accept, although not always, but it allows that Spirit to think about what has been said to them.

Graham: Yes, thank you for that.

So you see, in rescue work, it is imperative that our two worlds work closely together.

George: Yes and those Spirits involved, they could perhaps think of them as being delicately balanced between worlds?

Yes, that is why it is of utmost value that there remains in your world people dedicated to the work of rescue, because without you they may well remain in that darkness longer than they need to be.

Graham: That's very interesting, thank you.

Sarah: I must say that the majority of rescues that we have, which aren't that many these days, but the majority they do find the light, which is very encouraging.

We would only try to bring those to you that would not create too many problems, but I can assure you there are those individuals who would resist and fight any attempt to free them into lighter conditions. That is why it is important for you all to be secure in the knowledge of your safety with us.

George: On a lighter note, could I mention a report that comes to us from India, about a monkey that approached a Shiva temple bearing flowers on a holy day, and there were hundreds of people there in silent prayer and meditation, I gather. The monkey took vermillion and touched its forehead, as is the custom, and sat with those in silent prayer for nearly an hour, (Yes) at the end of which period, some of those present, garlanded the monkey with flowers and it ran off back to the jungle.

Yes. Still my friends you are amazed by all of these actions.

George: Well, I'm wondering if the monkey picked up that consciousness and joined in...

Animals can be influenced by the minds of those in Spirit, in the same way as you human beings are, in the same way as I am using this instrument, so too can we influence the actions of our animals in this world.

Lilian: That's interesting.

George: It's a lovely story.

But it is not unusual. And after all there is so much close connection between humankind and the ape populations in your world that it is easy to influence their thinking also. Do not be surprised that the animal kingdom is closely related to your own thoughts and thinking. After all, your domestic animals recognize your feelings and your thoughts, do they not? (Agreed) So I say only this to you: do not be surprised by anything that includes the actions of animals in your world.

George: It's nice to see such stories in print.

Yes. They would have been ridiculed many years ago, but now there is so much influence being given to your world that mankind cannot now deny what he sees.

George: Yes, these things are so much better accepted today. And there was another story about a 12-year old girl who was abducted by some men—this comes from Ethiopia. They took her out into the desert and were trying to force the girl to marry one of them and some lions appeared, whereupon the men ran away and the lions stood guard around the young girl for several hours, until her family and the police arrived and took charge. So the lions seemed to be doing a very good job there!

Yes. Although you say the lions, it is the influence of the girl's own guardians in our world that have created that situation. She, I would suggest to you, has a special task in this world to live up to and therefore has great protection. You understand?

Paul: I would imagine it is the same for those swimmers who have been rescued by dolphins, and I think one was rescued by a giant turtle even...

Yes, so many times you will hear: why is this one saved, why is that one not? That my dear friends is not for you to ponder. But to accept that in the larger scheme of life that is what is to be, and to learn to accept all that comes to you. If you could but do this my dear friends in your daily lives: accept what comes to you with love and with thanks, then all that you do would go forward in the right direction. But of course, being human beings, you do like to make your own lives so difficult. (Affirmed + chuckles)

Lilian: It was very interesting the week before last to hear about beings on a smaller planet than the Earth that looked somewhat like the mushrooms that grow on our planet. I thought that was quite fascinating—I suppose we hadn't thought of beings that didn't have legs and walk...

Again, you see my dear friends, that so much your human ego affects your thinking. (Agreed) Think of creation on a much larger scale. After all, is Spirit visible? It is not when it reaches the stage of all existence, of all the love, of all unity. Therefore do not be surprised by anything that you hear. I do not say accept it without deep thinking, but that which you can accept, take aboard and think about it deeply; that which you wish to reject, then please reject it, because it means that you are not ready for that knowledge. But what we are trying to achieve now with you, is to open your hearts and mind to much deeper and greater things. It is up to each individual to decide for himself whether he wishes to advance with that knowledge, or whether he wishes to stay quietly within the knowledge, which he has already attained.

George: Yes and you have told us before that all things are possible, and I think we are learning the wisdom of that.

Yes, you are beginning to know the ground rules, as you would say in your world. You are quite a long way from all knowledge... (Knowing laughter)

...but at the same time I can tell you how much your minds have opened to the way of Spirit, and after all, as sparks of divinity, you must have that all-knowing knowledge within, otherwise how could we make sense of it all? Now my dear friends I feel that I have given you more than enough to think about this time.

George: We have much to think about.

Yes. I do not apologize for going over old ground, but hope that you realize that by reiterating my words with a little more added on, it helps you in your understanding. (Affirmed) And with those words I will leave you, and I know that until we come together once more, your lives will be enriched by the knowledge which comes to you. (Thanks + farewells)

Note: Both the 'monkey' and the 'lions' stories were recently reported in Fortean Times; a monthly magazine that has as one of its objectives, to present unusual and intriguing stories, found in the world's press.

~26th September 2005~

We had to cancel a number of meetings, so it was wonderful to get back to our group once more. It was only a small gathering, but one who had been before came through Sarah:

I am visiting you once again. I hope you remember my last visit to you. This was some time ago, when there was a Danish lady here. (Expressions of joy)

George: That was Jetté! (A good friend)

When I came that time I spoke in my native tongue. I have been asked to come to you and speak in a tongue that you will understand.

Paul: What was your native tongue?

We were from the Southern Americas.

Paul: Ah yes, I remember.

This group that was my family was brought to a kingdom that was foreign to us. We were taken as slaves to work for this powerful unit. We were ostracised, because we could not speak their language and it was during this time that the language I spoke became intermingled with the language of those who took us, and in time, our language became redundant. It was for this reason that you could not find a translation for our language.

George: Oh that's most helpful that you've told us that. We thought at the time that it was an Inca dialect—an ancient Inca dialect. Would that be anywhere near?

The Incas were the ones who took us. But the language was not Inca. It became intermingled with their language, but the pure language that I spoke at that time was from further south, and was a tribal language. It bore little resemblance to the Inca language and this is why it died out when I was taken. The tribe that I came from was so depleted that it was unable to exist for much longer, and the language ceased in that part of the Americas as well. So it would be very hard for you to find any translation of that language.

George: Yes. Thank you for telling us that.

But we were a proud tribe, and we wished dearly that the language would continue. It was for this reason that we wished to bring this to you, so that a recording could be taken and it is therefore not completely lost.

George: And it is not lost in Spirit of course...

This language, of course, can be used, but I have to say that we do not use language any more. But, in returning, I had this strong desire to use a language dear to me and to the members of my tribe.

George: Yes, we understand that. I can say that, since that occasion, we have got some much better recording equipment, so if at some stage you would wish to use that language again, we now have a superior recording of it.

Our guest immediately launched into a 2-minute oration in their language—Audio link:

http://www.salumetandfriends.org/resources/2005_09_26+keeping+a+language+alive.mp3

George: Wonderful! So we have your introduction as well as the spoken language. Are you able to tell us something about the meaning of the words you have just spoken?

Much of what I was saying was to praise the tribe and the living that we had. When we were happy, we were partying, as you would say. And it is in this joyful atmosphere, that I was bringing you words of happiness and enjoyment, and discussion of various activities that had pleased both the tribe and the elders. (Wonderful!) Words that were given were difficult to translate word-for-word, but the general feeling was happiness and gratitude for life, and the joyous moments that can be taken from activities of groups together. Venteh-ooah! Is 'greetings to you all'. And I know that the members of my tribe are most happy that you take such an interest in our language. We would hope that sometime, we will be able to impress upon you, not only the beings as we were, but of our clothing and headdresses that we wore.

George: That would be wonderful.

We will try on another occasion, to bring to you the atmosphere and the whole concept of our living to you, and we will try to dress each one of you in an attire of that time. But I will need some help from others in order to do this, so this will be for a later time.

George: Yes, and hopefully we shall have a larger group here; our numbers are small at the moment. We offer you our regret and sympathy that you were taken into slavery. That must have been a difficult time for you.

It was a very sad time. But, as you are aware, that is really of little importance today (Agreed) So, I will take my leave of you, and look forward to dressing you all up on another occasion.

George: Thank you so much for your visit, and we are very happy to have this recording of your words in both languages.

Paul: And it would be lovely to hear more about where you lived—it's a beautiful area in South America. You've got so many different aspects—mountains and jungle—wonderful rivers—lovely to hear about where you used to live.

We will bring more information to you next time. And we will bring the chief with us, who will inform you of much of the area, as he was the narrator at that time.

George: We shall look forward very much to that visit. Thank you so much.

George's Notes:

On the Monday following the earlier visit (19/4/2004), questions were asked of Salumet about the language, and his words were: I feel that you should look towards the Inca language. He also said: you may find that some of what was said is of the ancient language and may not be as easily available to you as you might hope. On reflection, the words as chosen are very apt! Through the Internet, we were in touch with Barry Werger, in California, who assured us that it was not Quechua—the lingua franca of the Inca, and that is about as far as we were able to get with our enquiries.

~3rd October 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you again.

Lilian: We're very happy to have you.

George: Yes, we've missed you and are indeed very happy ourselves.

I have not been far... The delay this time was because there was one anxious to come forward, but I have delayed that this time. As we gather together again, I say to you all my dear friends, how far you have come in this year of your time.

Lilian: Thank you.

Not only have you gathered information about mind projection, but indeed your own individual Spirits have soared, at some point in this one of your earthly years. You have come together as a united group and I know you feel you always have been that, but it is only in this year of your time that this has occurred spiritually. You cannot always see or feel this for yourselves, but because we are more aware of the wider scheme of life, we are able to see much more clearly how you have grown.

George: I think there is a feeling that this is a very important time, but it's very nice that you tell us that things are moving forward for us.

Yes, and of course I reiterate to you that a great deal of that responsibility lies with yourselves. We can bring to you much, but without your cooperation, without your dedication it would be lost. But this growth of Spirit is not only confined within these walls, but it is something which is growing throughout your Earthly world at this time. It is a map, which is being written in time, as many individuals are beginning to recognize that they indeed are more than physical beings. I am sure that most of you by now have recognized that many more people are speaking of their own experiences, about what they feel and what they know. This has not always been so; there have been times when the words of many have been put down as 'complete rubbish' in your world, but the Truth will always survive. And this is what is happening—it is almost like an explosion of Truth within your world at this present time. No longer are people being kept quiet about what they know to be the Truth. The people of today on your planet are recognizing that each one is an individual with a mind and thinking of their own. Have you any questions at this point?

George: In our exchanges with Planet Aerah, we were debating about the way in which our many and complicated rules, laws and regulations are really taking over, or have taken over to a large degree, from personal thinking. We differ from Planet Aerah in that our lives here on Earth are much more complicated in terms of rules and regulations as opposed to free personal thinking, (Yes) so if the thinking comes to the fore, I imagine this is a very good process.

Of course. I have told you previously that this planet is such a young planet as far as spiritual growth goes. There are many worlds that you know not of, which exist and exist with the use of the thought and the spiritual mind, and yet are not Spirit, but they have attained a degree of knowledge that just to 'be' is all that they need to be. Do you understand? (Yes) And, yes, your connection with that mind projector, which after all was meant for your own spiritual growth, is a planet, which is much different from your own.

George: The comparisons help us in a way to see ourselves more clearly I feel.

Yes, that is a good point. It is something that you should study well. You should learn from the information that is being given to you, but at the same time, it is not only information which we seek to give to you, but we wish to teach you of the experience that you are ultimately capable of, and which I am pleased to see you are trying to now put into some kind of action.

George: Yes, we are trying and I am sure we all realize the great value that this can have.

Yes, you must always keep that focus in mind. It is for your benefit also, not only just to be given the information which comes, because after all, you may digest a book, but never really understand it. But what we wish you to do is to accept the information, but to also take that projection which is being shown to you and put it into daily practise.

George: I get the impression that, as the spirituality increases on a planet, the matter-density of the planet decreases, (yes) and the water on Aerah sounds to be more like the water in our Earthly Astral Planes...

Yes, you are quite correct in that assumption. After all, if you grow spiritually you are leaving behind that heaviness, that density as you call it, and you become much lighter beings. Therefore, if so much lightness exists, so too does that have an effect on the planet within which you live. In the same way as you as human beings give out thoughts of love to many on your planet—when those thoughts are received and help is given by all involved, there are areas within your planet, which also become much lighter, much purer. So, can you imagine the lightness of a planet whose spirituality is far above your own?

George: Yes indeed. This is quite a realization and I'm sure our scientists, and particularly chemists, have felt that matter is all much the same throughout our universe! But its density does seem to be very different...

Yes, it has to have some effect, in the same way as your thoughts project and give help to others—it is the same, it is the lightness which touches the density of the matter where you are, and makes it lighter, because of the love element. It is the love element, which alters matter and structure and people. Always remember this my dear friends and you will not go wrong in your thinking.

Graham: With the development of mind projection, which we are trying to achieve, if that is achieved to some extent and a certain level of attainment is reached in a lifetime, is that level of attainment then continued into the next lifetime?

You already have that attainment within you; it cannot be lost when you return home. (Yes) You are on this planet rediscovering what you already have. It is just that because of where you are and the situations that you are in that everything becomes much more dense, and that your mind has become dulled over the many centuries of living upon this planet. But as Spirit you already have that ability, you already have that knowledge—you are here to rediscover what you already know.

Graham: Yes, you have told us that before! (Chuckles) (Yes) It is interesting that Bonniol (from Planet Aerah) said that the Spirit children, even when they are unborn, are able to mind project to those around them, which I thought was extraordinary. They have obviously progressed so far and they have come back to their planet with this extraordinary ability ready to continue where it left off.

Yes, they are already lighter beings and that is what you are working towards on this planet, although you will never achieve the same amount of ability as they have upon that planet, because that is not part of the evolution of this Earth.

Graham: So our two planets won't necessarily converge; we are just following different evolutionary paths. (Yes) I understand, yes.

You cannot be the same, but you can have connection through the mind projection.

Graham: One thing I was particularly interested in was their method of transport, where they use the energy from the elementals to help them provide energy for their vehicles for transport, and things like that. Is this something that will become part of our evolution in the future?

We are looking a long way into your future, before any attempt at that kind of travel is possible. I would have to say your evolution is in the first stages, in the same way that you as Spirit within these physical bodies are quite naïve in your knowledge. But it is only a shell, the knowledge lies within, it is up to each individual to hold that responsibility for how much of that Spirit is allowed to become free whilst upon this planet. And I do not ask any pardon for repeating that you are entirely responsible, with our help, of course.

Graham: Yes. Thank you for those answers.

There are many planets, which you could not associate with, because they are, as you know and understand full well, all of existence. Yes, too much for your understanding; you will never fully know until you return home, how much of existence there is within all of creation. You are but one iota within all of Creation.

Lilian: Something to look forward to, to be able to understand...

And even when you return home, you also have responsibility in discovering what there is to know. It will not come to you in an instant, but it is there for all to see.

George: It was very nice to have a further visit from the 'ancient language of South America' friend, and it's now our understanding that it was a South American tribe that was enslaved by the Inca, so that their original language was melded with the Inca and it is not exactly an Inca dialect. Your words "look to the Inca" when we asked you about it were most apt. (Knowing chuckles)

I thank you for those words. It means that sometimes I am correct! (Big chuckles)

Sarah: I think, Salumet, you could knock the 'sometimes' off—I think you're always right! (More laughter)
I am here to serve you, to encourage you, to help you and most of all, to bring to you Truth of Spirit. And as I told you when first I came to you my dear friends, I ask only that you can accept what you will, and if any of my words do not fit, then I ask you to reject them, not because my words are untrue, but because you may not be ready to hear them. But I can again say to you that this group to which I have come, and waited many years to come to, are sound in their acceptance of my words, and for that I thank you.

(Thanks expressed)

George: We would be very foolish not to accept. We have so much enjoyed your words!

Lilian: Could I ask a question of something you said I think the last time you came—I'm not sure, but it was about a neighbour of mine who has this young daughter, and I believe your words were that she 'borrowed' that child, obviously in Spirit. Could you explain a little more please?

About borrowing children?

Lilian: How come she borrowed the child?

Perhaps the word 'borrowed' has confused you.

Lilian: Yes, I am not quite sure that was the word, but I think it was.

Yes. Let us speak generally—in that case that each one of you comes to this lifetime as part of an agreement with many others, and when I say 'borrow', if that is the word I used, it means that no one person belongs to another. You have come and taken a pact to be whoever you may be in this world for the betterment of either your own Spirit, or that of others, whether it be husbands, mothers, fathers or children. Each Spirit comes with the knowledge of what needs to be attained. Therefore, that child has come to that mother on their own agreement; therefore that way the child does not belong to the mother. Does that make more sense to you?

Lilian: Yes. It's almost teamwork, but we don't belong to one another.

You have responsibility, individual responsibility, but of course in the way of life of this planet, adult members have children who need to be looked after and guided and helped, but you do not 'own' your children.

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

Graham: A lot of talk has been about 'learning planets' and planet Earth is certainly a learning planet, but are there any other types of planet in our universe, where beings are just being there and not necessarily on their planet to learn but for other reasons, just 'to be' for instance?

There are indeed other planets that have different purposes. In fact there are many, many planets, where the Spirit is there only to reach enlightenment in order that they may return home more 'wholesome', if I may use that word. Yes indeed, there are many, many planets of which you do not know.

Graham: So the beings on such a planet would be of a meditative state?

Not necessarily, but their awareness would be much greater.

Graham: Yes. That's very interesting.

Yes. There are also planets for the angelic beings, who return to them time to time, but that is a topic for another time. But yes, you are correct when you say there are many, many planets. (Thank you.) You are isolated on this planet for knowledge; that is why I felt it would be good for you to have a visitor from another planet, to expand your way of thinking, and to introduce you to the fact that there are many planets in all of Creation, which are different from your own—but nevertheless they exist.

George: Yes, it's like taking a look at ourselves from afar. (Yes) We have the expression: 'you can't see the wood from the trees', but if you're away from the woodland you can see it most clearly.

Yes, that is a good analogy, I would agree.

Sarah: And also it seems that, we call it Planet Aerah—the people on that planet have become more spiritually advanced, or aware perhaps I should say, than we are, but they weren't always like that. So, it gives us a little bit of hope as well that our planet will get there as well—you tell us we will, and it's nice to see that planets can get there.

You must not compare yourselves to another planet, because each planet has its own function. As the gentleman previously has said, there are many types of planets. There is still a learning process going on in Planet Aerah, which you would not be aware of, or perhaps even understand, but it is still a planet of learning, although far superior in knowledge to your own. I hope that is helpful to you.

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

George: Forgive me for asking another question about the past, but it does have connections and I wanted to check material, which comes from a particular source. I have heard that in the days of Atlantis there were four brotherhoods, and those four brotherhoods had connections to the four elements and the elementals within those elements; such that the brotherhood relating the water element were very good at looking at problems of 'emotion' in humans, and the brotherhood that related to the air element, they were very good at examining problems of 'mind', and correcting them and so forth. Would you be able to confirm if there were four such brotherhoods?

Let me say this to you my dear friend: much has been spoken about Atlantis. Yes, it did exist, yes there have been many things spoken, but I will simplify this for you. Indeed there were many brotherhoods as you call them upon this Atlantis. If you look to your astrological processes of today, you will find similarities. They also speak of Earth, fire, water, air, which are connected in the same way as you have mentioned. Water and air, and yes, I will confirm that there were brotherhoods who dealt mainly with these things. But look to astrology and the source of astrology and you will find that there are many comparisons to both. I hope that will be helpful.

George: Thank you, yes, that is another thought for me. Yes I know this lady whose Atlantean high priest still visits her, while she's in this life. (Yes) I just felt I needed to check that piece of information.

Yes, they had much knowledge at that time, but I have to say there was a lot of abuse of their knowledge.

George: Yes, thank you very much for your answer—that does help enormously.

Sarah: And the 'abuse of the knowledge'—you said that great civilizations, because they have abused their knowledge and power, that is why they have fallen. Maybe that was the same with Atlantis.

Yes, and of course evolution played a great part in the downfall of Atlantis.

George: The Earthly evolution?

Yes, it is a much wider picture than is usually painted, but there was abuse of their knowledge also.

I hope that is helpful to you.

George: Yes indeed. It surprises me sometimes how much interest there is in that particular civilization, and how much controversy there is, (Yes) with scientists who dispute the Earthly evolution factor and in terms of—they would expect to see more evidence on the ocean floor of the upheavals.

As I have told you, in time past that your oceans have yet to produce much which has until now never been discovered—but that time will come; it will present itself for all to see. Your oceans on this planet at this present time—little is known about the far depths of the planet.

George: And as you have said several times, the timing for these revelations has to be correct.

Yes, it would be simple to say ‘why, what, where’, but as you have said, those people who are credited with knowledge, are sometimes the last to know and understand. (Yes)

Now my dear friends for this time I will leave you once more with all of my love and I ask that you sit quietly and allow anyone who wishes to come, to come to you in peace and in love, and I will leave you with our dear lady friend. (Lilian—thanks and farewells)

George’s notes:

Matter density: What constitutes matter of course, is: molecules, atoms and sub-atomic particles. It all becomes less dense as spirituality comes to the fore. And it is clear from our other communications that this confers a bias on properties of liquids, metals etc. So, one cannot assume that ‘chemistry’ is constant on all planets in the universe.

Atlantean brotherhoods: In fact we had mentioned Vincenta before to Salumet (3rd Nov 2003) and had been told that there is good purpose in our communication. (Perhaps I was checking a detail prior to later publication of some facts on Atlantis and their connection with the Salumet teaching.) Anyway, it is always good to find agreeing cross-reference between sources, especially such sources as Salumet, Bonniol on Planet Aerah, a lady who ‘receives’ from an Atlantean High Priest, one from an extinct tribe in South America who were enslaved by the Incas (More on that next time) etc. How diverse can one get?

~17th October 2005~

One via Sarah, from a pre-Incan South American tribe:

Lilian: Good evening.

I am most happy to be with you once more. We have been keeping an eye on you, and feel that you are ready to take on some of the clothing that I mentioned to you last time.

Lilian: Yes I remember.

If you are happy to dress in another garment I will bring my friends with me and each one will put on one of you, a garment that was used in our time. So, can I ask if you will be happy to be dressed this time?

George: We’ll all be very happy. Thank you. (Enthusiastic agreement)

So each one will have a separate dresser and each one will take a different costume. We will ask that you try to tell one another what garments you are wearing. This has been done in conjunction with others in Spirit, and this is part of your development as well as a little light heartedness from a ‘previous time’s dressing’. So, if you will prepare yourselves, we will bring to you the costumes, and I will return in a short while to hear what you feel you have been dressed in.

Lilian: That should be interesting for you.

And if I may say, I think it will be quite interesting for you as well. (Chuckles)

Lilian: Yes, it certainly will!

So, I will stand by for a short while, and then will return for your comments.

George: Can you say if they would be everyday clothing, or would they be ceremonial attire?

There will be a mixture. This is why I have brought along my friends to dress each one of you in different attire, but let me assure you that my tribe would have all had a part in the preparation of these costumes, so they are from our tribe only.

George: Mm—thank you (General thanks expressed)

(Pause of 2-3 minutes)

Let me first explain my costume: I have several feathers in my hair. My hair is tied back and the back part is plaited. At the end of the plait there is also a bunch of feathers. On my feet I have skin from a wild boar, and the fur is covered over the top. On my legs I also have skin. This is wrapped round the legs and tied with pieces of skin and coarse grass. On my lower part I have a skirt which is also made of skin, but it also has woven in it, parts from a plant which is most hard to touch, but when soaked, becomes soft. When it has been woven together and crushed, it becomes quite soft. This is used only in the hot weather. In the cold weather, the skin is laid over the top and is fastened together through the legs. This helps to keep warm. On the top, I have another of these woven garments, and on the top I have a beautiful fur, which has on the back, many feathers with the quill pointing upwards and the feathers forming a fan over my shoulders. These feathers we colour. Each colour of the feather denotes something. In my case, most of the feathers are red. This is because I am the chief of the tribe. On the front, I have buttons, which are made from pieces of bone, and are tied on with pieces of skin and grass. My headdress with the feathers, is kept on by a leather strap. When it is cold, a cape is made from the grasses, and the fur is stitched onto it. It is attached at the shoulders, and this helps to keep warm—but always the feathers must show. On my back, the feathers are mostly red, but on my head they are white. This is a signal that I have taken over from a deceased relative. If there are no males to take over, the one in charge would have his feathers red, and the ones on his back would be red and white. And now I look forward to hearing what you feel you have been dressed in. I will sit quietly and listen.

Lilian: Yes. Thank you for the way you have described your costume. (Thanks expressed) Graham, what did you feel?

Graham: Well, I think I could feel something around my body that was brown and I think was tied around my middle, and I think there was something white round my neck and across the top of my chest. And my legs were covered with brown leather—soft chamois-type leather. These kept me warm. I didn't feel anything else.

Lilian: Sue?

Sue: Well I felt very cold and was wearing almost nothing, but I then had the impression of a heaviness around the shoulders and I think I had a cape on. I also feel I have bells sown around my ankles, also something like an apron covering most of it, going across my chest, round the back and tied. And I've still got this feeling of a heavy cape, with very little else.

Lilian: George?

George: Well, I have a feeling of more like a bark-cloth, but I may be wrong about that. It seems fibrous and smooth—a sort of brown jacket, and something around the lower body—tan coloured with small brightly-coloured pieces. A sort of shoe—possibly a skin sandal. I haven't really got any feeling of feathers. And that's about it.

Lilian: Eileen?

Eileen: Yes, I'm also dressed in a brown chamois-type material, quite plain type of material. My hair also is plaited. And I have a feather, which is white, with a black tip. But at the end of the plaits, it is like pieces of leather of some kind, in blue, yellow and black. At first my feet were bare, but now I could feel flat boots, with a white fur. And I've got beads around my neck and they also are blue yellow and black. And it almost feels like I am in a marriage costume. And perhaps that's why the boots were placed on me. All I can say is that I feel very clean, if that's important (Laughs)

Lilian: Well, I was feeling feathers, almost before he'd stopped talking. I can only think it's a cloak. I may be wrong there, but a cloak covered with feathers. I don't know about my feet, but I felt there was braid about my legs. Nothing with the hair or the head. So let's see how right we are...

We are most glad that you have been able to accept what we have put on you. Let me tell you that the first gentleman, (Graham) was a worker in the stables. We have many animals, and you were indeed helping with them. The costume you had was one of one who works with animals.

The lady (Sue) who was dressed in this heavy cape, this was because she was taken to the fields with food for the shepherds, and it could be most cold. This was her work, and the one who would wear this cloak was the only one who would take the food out in the winter months.

The lady who was sitting next to me, (Lilian) she is the one who would prepare the food for the summer months. In the winter months, she was allowed to be with the elders in their capes, and her role would have been to make sure all was well with the high-up people in the winter months. For this reason, she was made to look much more attractive than most of the females in the group, and was permitted to wear these braids upon her, not only on her legs, but also on her arms and around her head and neck.

The gentleman, (George) he would have been one to prepare the ammunition for fighting and hunting. He was a most important gentleman, and he was the one who organised all, to make sure there was sufficient arrows and suchlike for the fighting and the hunting. But he seldom went out hunting himself. The job of fighting and killing animals was up to others.

And the last lady, (Eileen) how right she was! (Speaking tenderly) She was my wife.

Lilian: Oh—very colourful, I should imagine...

Unlike nature itself, the females of the tribe were dressed in the most beautiful attire that could be made, and much work was done by others in the tribe, to prepare the ladies for this most important role. At all times, they should be dressed and attired in the most luxurious and attractive clothing and ornaments that we had available to us. This was partly why the other ladies were always dressed in dull colours, so that the most important ladies could shine and were indeed noticed.

We are most grateful to you for letting us bring to you a little of our life and costume.

George: We also are very grateful.

It warms us most heartily, because we now feel that our language and our dress have not been completely lost forever.

George: Chief, you mentioned the cold several times. Does this mean that you were from a mountainous area?

We were a tribe of some 'nomadity', if that is the word...

George: Yes, nomadic, yes...

We spent some months in the valleys and some in the mountains. But we were pursued, and we needed at times, to go high where it was cold, so that those pursuing us would not venture that far. For that reason, we needed to have both warmer and cooler clothing. We would have preferred to stay in one place in the warm climate, but for the sake of staying alive, we had to suffer the cold. So I hope that answers your question.

George: Yes indeed. Thank you very much for that.

Lilian: Did you have more than one wife, or just the one?

I had the one.

Lilian: As we do here...

But it was not uncommon for leaders to take more than one. But I needed only one.

Lilian: Did you have big families of children?

I was most fortunate in having twelve children, and five of them were male. So I was hoping that I would have an heir. But this, as you know, did not happen (Yes) I will now ask my friends to join with me, and give each one of you a taste of our celebration wine, which was made from a berry that was so sweet that in next to no time, the wine was ready to drink.

Lilian: Interesting that you made wine as well...

We are putting a little on each of your lips, and ask you to savour the sweetness, as we take our leave.

Lilian: Thank you—very interesting!

George: What a lovely thought! Yes, thank you very much for that. (General thanks expressed)

That concluded the third visit from our South American tribal friends, and left us with a valuable picture of how life in that region must have been; and how sad it is that they were finally taken into slavery by the Inca. Perhaps this record and the language record received earlier have been in the nature of a healing? There then followed a meditative journey of upliftment, channelled by Eileen, the audio of which can be found in the meditation section of the website: <http://www.salumetandfriends.org/16.html>

Finally there was a rescue through Eileen. (Audios of rescues freely available from website: www.salumetandfriends.org)

~7th November 2005~

Again several meetings had to be cancelled for various reasons. One of interest came through Sue, describing all of the spiritual lights in the room as looking a bit like fireworks. There then followed a rescue through Eileen. Audio link: http://www.salumetandfriends.org/resources/2005_11_07+Rescue+pastry.mp3

~14th November 2005~

Lilian: Good evening, welcome.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Before I begin, let me wish and extend a warm welcome to our guests this time. As always, my dear friends, it is good to join with you, to enable us to discuss matters, which will provide you with more information. But, because we have our visitors this time, let us have an evening of your questions. Before we go on to your questions, let me just say this to you: that, as we approach another of your Earthly years, you all my dear friends, will find a great upliftment of your spirits and as we approach the time of your new year, I ask that each one prepares himself for more new knowledge.

George: That is certainly something to look forward to.

You have been hopefully, developing that inner strength, which belongs to you all, and this past year has seen many occasions when this has been so. Now, if you have any questions at this time, let us try to discuss them.

Lilian: Shall we start with you George?

George: Yes, there's one question I would like to ask: We have a term 'Ascended Master', which I think implies that a Master has developed and ascended from planetary life. But I think we know that it is not always like this and this presupposes different kinds of Masters, or Masters that have travelled different pathways, and as a result, reach the status of Master. Can you tell us something about that, to help clarify our thoughts?

Yes, I understand your question. Let me say this to you, my dear friend: As always we have the problem of physical words, and the saying, 'Ascended Masters', has been used as a cloak for many things. But for you, I will try to clarify our position. There have been, and are today within your world, many people who have gifts of the Spirit, which is far above the normal human being. These people who have come to this Earth Plane with these many gifts of Spirit to display, are given titles, to which truly they do not deserve to have, because, let me clarify this for you: An Ascended Master from our world, would be one who already had many gifts of the spirit and would work from the spirit world, in the way of influencing another human being. That is the reality, but because you human beings hold on to your egos, you are inclined to think that any soul who has descended to this Earthly plane and shows these many gifts of Spirit, must be a Master who has ascended and returned to your Earth plane. Not so—they are another aspect of a Soul who is still learning in your world. And although the word 'Master' may well be used for them, I have to say in our world, they would not be called Masters.

George: Yes, I see—this has to be the key to our understanding, (Yes) that they are Masters as defined in Spirit world.

Yes, yes—always you human beings are so keen to have something special, when very often it is only a Soul who has come to grow, in the same way as every individual within this room, has come to grow.

Graham: Would Jesus be an example of an exception to what you've described?

No, no exceptions. He came to this Earth—if you wish to use the word 'Master', then he was a 'Master of Spiritual Gifts'. (Yes) But he was not what we would call in our world 'Ascended Masters'. Ascended Masters teach from our world. You understand? (Yes—) They exert their influence through many people, not only one.

George: So an Ascended Master, as defined, would not reincarnate, (No) and would possibly not be able to incarnate?

No of course, ‘ascended’ means ‘risen’, and if you have risen in our world, there is no need to return in a physical incarnation. You understand?

George: Yes, that does clarify. Thank you.

But, we are happy, and we understand that physical language dictates to you, for your own understanding, and to us that is perfectly acceptable, providing the knowledge is understood.

Sarah: So those that come back to this world, sometimes they come back to help others, but the main reason is to learn?

If you return to this Earth plane, you have come to learn something. There is no one person upon this Earth, who is—has full knowledge of Spirit, only when you return home, is that knowledge extended for you.

George: Yes, I think I can understand that Jesus would have had much more knowledge (Yes) than others inhabiting the Earth, but I assume, as you say: not full knowledge.

Of course, otherwise he would not have returned in human form. But of course, he had many, many spiritual gifts, which were useful to him while he walked this Earth. And as we have discussed on many occasions, there have been many so-called Masters in your world—those Spirits who come to offer their love to this world, and to use their gifts for the betterment of mankind. I hope that is helpful to you.

George: Yes, I’m sure that’s helped clarify all our thoughts.

There is much misunderstood information upon your planet, but as I have said, if people find these words helpful in their understanding, then so be it.

George: Yes, I think part of the difficulty has been our incomplete knowledge and our language (Yes) and our thoughts. (Yes) But that does help to clarify, thank you.

And as I have stated: mankind’s own ego—that has to be a huge consideration.

George: Yes, that can power our thoughts in the wrong direction. (Yes)

Lilian: How about you Roy, any questions?

Roy: Thank you, yes. George told me, Salumet, that you would not be available over the Christmas period. Is that a coincidence that that is also the main Christian festival that’s on at the same time?

I understand your question and thank you for it. I withdraw on many occasions throughout your calendar year upon this Earth. But at what you call ‘Christmas time’, which after all is another religious festival, it does coincide with a time when many of us in our world gather, because there is so much love already in your world at that time of year, that we feel it appropriate to withdraw for a very short time. But in saying this, although we withdraw, we are fully aware of each and every one to whom we come. There has to be a time when we withdraw, and we have to regenerate if you like, our own spiritual energies (Thank you.) But as you would no doubt agree, at the time of your many festivities throughout the year, there is always more abundance of love and goodwill to each other—and in this, I am speaking generally. But it is not because it is Christmas—that really does not hold any strong indications with us. It is all to do with the love energies, which surround your Earth at that time. (Thank you.)

Sarah: And you have told us Salumet that you need to yourself, get regenerated or whatever is the word... Yes, it is something that has to happen, because, as I have told you in past times, to come down to this level of energy is not easy, and it is important for us all to recoup those spiritual energies and return to where we truly belong.

George: Yes, and I think I would be right in saying that that difficulty of coming down to this Earthly energy also connects with the last question, and would make it impossible for a Master (An Ascended Master) to incarnate?

The density of your energy indeed would make that so. A true Master would not reincarnate into a human form—it just would not happen. And again, we have not gone enough into the subject of energy, that your understanding would be great enough for explanation of it.

George: Yes, perhaps that is again something to look forward to in the future.

That is to come, but that is some way off, I have to say. (Yes. Thank you.)

Lilian: How about you Pam?

Pam: I haven’t any questions at the moment. I’m just interested though in what I hear.

Yes, her mind is whirring within.

George: Understandably! (Chuckles)

Lilian: Graham or Paul?

Paul: I've got a question—a bit of a tricky one but I'll try and simplify it. It's about the power of thought I think. I've been reading a book called: 'Seth Speaks', and he gives information about 'thought' and how our thoughts effect and create the world around us. (Yes) And he gives information about an invisible energy grid, throughout the Earth that interacts somehow with our thoughts and is used in the way they materialise into the physical forms. And this energy grid has various intersections throughout it, such that certain places are easier or quicker maybe to materialise thoughts than other places. And I was listening to the news and picked up that there are an unusual amount of lottery winners in two towns that are close together. (Romford and Ilford in Essex) It was beyond the mathematics, so I wondered if those two areas were benefiting from this energy grid? And also there's a place called Pai in Thailand—a favourite spot in my travels, where I've felt thoughts seem to happen rather quickly there. I don't know if you can confirm any of that?

Yes, again you are delving into deeper matters when you speak of energy, but I will try in a simplified manner, to explain for you. In fact there is a confusion of questions here, and some, which I have answered for you previously. Yes, there are many 'areas', if you wish to call them that, throughout the whole of your planet, where energies are much stronger, but I would say that the areas mentioned by you, which have been lucrative for—I do not know what you said, 'winners'...

Paul: Lottery winners.

I am not familiar with 'lottery', (Laughter) but I take it that you mean that it has become lucrative for those who are doing such actions. (Yes) I cannot say that the energy of your world in that particular place is especially (good) for this to happen. (Eileen coughs) Forgive the lady, she still has a little problem with her throat this time. Let me say this to you: those places where you feel true energy, and there are many places throughout your world, where thoughts quickly become your reality—and those in the main, are places where there is not too much abundance of people-energy, but that the energies remain purer. Yes, there is what you call some form... (Another cough) Forgive—I will deal with this problem. (Pause) Yes, we have not discussed this before, but we do have beings of energy, and I mention it only because you have asked the question. There are beings of energy, who help with the thoughts of every single being within this planet. Do you remember the conversation that we had, when thoughts can be intercepted, (Affirmed) when they are negative thoughts? In the same way, thoughts of harmony and love and for good, can be harnessed and helped to create that reality. After all, I am sure you remember that your thought is your reality. (Yes) Reality begins with the thinking. So therefore you are correct when you speak of grids of energy. That is not the way I would have explained it to you, but it is satisfactory as far as I am concerned, if it helps again in your understanding. It is something we will go into much more deeply at a later stage. Again we have broached the subject of what I feel is the most important, and that is 'thought'. How often have I repeated about your thinking? (Yes) Your thinking is everything. And it is important to realise that what you think and what you wish for, should be guarded well.

Paul: We should monitor and pay attention to our thinking...

Yes, do not allow your thoughts to be too random. Be careful of your thinking at all times, or if you are not, then you must be prepared and be responsible for the results.

Paul: Yes exactly—we're responsible...

Yes, and of course again, that brings us back to thinking and the way that it affects the physical body. So you see, you come full circle with thought?

Paul: Yes, it really is our—it's everything; we have to acknowledge it, it's right at the centre of all of our lives.

Yes, but yes, there are many points of energy throughout your world. I can confirm that for you.

Paul: But generally these are away from the busy-busy people places...

If you are looking for pure energy, go to the places of openness, where the energies have not become tarnished with the everyday mass-of-thought, which occurs in places like your cities and towns. Return to the more natural habitats, and there you will feel the power of your thinking, and the way it is utilised to become your reality.

Paul: That clarifies it, thank you for that.

Lilian: Sarah?

Sarah: I haven't really, but there is one thing with—I know you've covered this ground before Salumet, but when people get older and they start to lose their memory, is this part of what they've created themselves, or is this a process of...well, perhaps I should just ask you just what it is?

Well there is never one answer, as I have told you, but I have to repeat once more, that in general, the result of your thinking creates your illness. (Yes) But there are those people in your world who have chosen to come, to live for however many of your Earthly years, and loss of memory can be part of that life they have chosen.

Sarah: I was just wondering if it was a depletion of energy...

It is either an abuse of your thinking, or it is a chosen pathway. (Right—thank you.) And of course, the way you live your life will determine what comes to you. And whatever you have chosen, will always come to you, if your freewill allows it to. You understand? (Yes, thank you.)

George: Coupled with that, it is a frequent pursuit these days for people to exercise their physical bodies, but not necessarily exercise their minds. In fact, much physical exercise must be very boring for the mind, and I was just wondering if this detracts from the mental self at all—exercising the physical body in a rather boring sort of way—monotonously?

Yes. Let me just say this to you my dear friend, that physical exercise I know for many people helps with their thinking. If that is the case, then it can only be good for them. (Yes) But, if they are exercising the physical body for the wrong reasons, then of course—and when we speak of mind, I believe you are speaking of the physical brain, when you say 'boredom,' because the mind would never become bored, because of course the mind belongs to Spirit.

George: Yes, that is correct. I was really thinking of the physical brain.

Yes, I thought that you were, but of course the mind needs to be—and I use your Earthly word, 'exercise,' only in as much as you need to meditate, and again I am saying to you, my dear friends, that is the way forward, because without your quiet times, you cannot develop those spiritual gifts. So in a way, that is the exercise for the mind. You understand?

George: Yes indeed, thank you.

But again we return to your freewill and every deed, every thought, lies with the responsibility that you have made the choice. You decide my dear friends, what it is you wish to do, what actions to take, what thoughts to think. It is a great responsibility is it not? (Yes) And indeed becomes more complex, as indeed you grow in Spirit—that responsibility becomes greater.

I will take one more question this time.

Lilian: This is more of a comment really: I just wonder what your thoughts were. I was listening to a program about animals—especially the farm animals—sheep and cows and so on... It has been discovered that the animals are much more intelligent than originally thought. If this is so, then we'll have to think again about the farming methods, and obviously make it much more kindly to the animals. I wondered if this is the way forward, hopefully to help the animals in the long run. Is this the way it should go?

Any deed or action that is better for the animals in your world can only be good.

Lilian: Yes, I think some are very badly treated.

I would say that in times past, the animals in your world were treated much better than they are today, because hunters and people killed animals to survive, and they did not have the knowledge, which is available today. They were in a sense, much kinder in their treatment of their animals. And again I am speaking generally, because there always are in your world, many exceptions to the rule. Animals in your world today are farmed to be killed, and that is a blight upon mankind. Animals were placed upon this Earth for a reason, and it is not always cruel for a man to feed his family—to kill an animal, provided it is done with love and for the right reason. But today I have to say, fear has been created among many in your animal kingdom, not for the feeding of many people, but for the making of money, (Agreed) and for many reasons, which are not good. So my reply to your question is that any opening of discussion can only be good, and can only take you forward as far as the animals are concerned.

Lilian: Let's hope so.

Sarah: When you say Salumet that the animals are here for a reason, is that just part of the ecological development or...

Animals have their own evolution in this world. They have the right to grow in the same way, although differently, as you human beings. But, as I have said, in past times, for humankind to exist, he needed he felt, to kill to survive. Not all—many survived upon the pickings of the Earth—that is because their innate spiritual knowledge was greater. It is the thinking behind the action which is important.

George: Yes, I imagine that in present times, our interaction with the various animals on this Earth is an opportunity for us to go forward.

Yes. The very fact that there are now discussions about it, means that mankind is opening his eyes to the suffering that he creates, and no one upon this planet can be without some responsibility for the killing of your animals. Mankind I feel thinks he is the superior animal because of his brain size. That, my dear friends, is not entirely true.

Paul: I think I've read somewhere that dolphins have actually got more developed brains than us.

That is true.

Paul: And even they hadn't, I don't think we have the right to do the things we do to them anyway.

And who is mankind to say that the love of an animal is not as strong as the love which he feels? (Yes)

Now, my dear friends, for this time, I will take my leave of you. As always, I will be with you in your everyday lives, and as I have said, you will begin to feel an upliftment in all of your lives. (Thanks + farewells)

~21st November 2005~

No Salumet this week. We did have a rescue through however and there was also our visitor and friend from planet Aerah, which has been presented elsewhere. (Audios of rescues freely available from website: www.salumetandfriends.org)

~28th November 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time, I am happy to see that you are more uplifted than last time we met. (Good.)

As we are few in number this time, I will say to you that until we have gathered more of you together I will continue with questions, but before we continue with those, I wish to say that there are many gathered who would wish to come close to each one of you over the following weeks. As always, I tell you that I shall be with you on the next two occasions that we come together, and then, as always, I will withdraw for a short period of your time.

Lilian: We look forward to more people being able to come.

George: Yes, we have our various little difficulties.

We fully understand your earthly conditions and that try as you may, it is not always possible. But no matter, so long as the information is passed to each one, which I know that it is, then that is most gladdening.

Paul: Yeah, hopefully they get to read it even if they don't manage to get here in person. (Yes)

George: And I'm aware that with our email system we are sending the transcripts steadily out to more people all the time.

Yes, is it not of interest to see how your progress develops so quickly upon your planet?

Paul: It's tremendous.

Yes, in your past few years there have been many steps to help you with your daily lives. I will not go as far as to say that I think all of this is progress, but I will accept that if it helps to make your lives easier, then so be it.

George: Well I guess it's nice to have these various assisting things, as long as we make good use of them and that's rather down to each one as an individual I guess.

Yes, you do not want to become a slave to machinery—you are much more than that. Now as we continue this time, I am happy to take your questions.

Paul: There was a question on my mind about animals: we mentioned how dolphins have a very developed brain, even more developed than humans. I know it's been said that animals have a different system when they die and come back—they haven't got the spiritual awareness that humans have, but I was wondering if that was definitely applying to all animals, or whether there were a 'select'—I don't like that word, but I wondered whether there were some that were much closer to the human awareness.

Yes, I understand your question and I feel that it is probably quite obvious to you as human beings which animals have that closeness to the human way of thinking and the human spirituality. Yes, every animal upon your planet is Spirit—all things belong to Spirit as does your planet. Therefore let that be the starting point: that all is Spirit. But when mankind has a connection with some animals whose brains have also developed over eons of time, then there has to be some similarities and it is only now that your many scientific minds and those who deal with animals all of their time, are beginning to understand that these animals have the ability to think and to feel and have intelligence.

Paul: And I think some have freewill, I'm not sure if all do?

There is an element of freewill of course within all animals, but not to your understanding of freewill.

There is freewill within the regime of the animal kingdom. You only have to look at those great creatures within your oceans—your whales and your dolphins and even those sharks that man is so intent on calling—what is the word I seek—a vicious animal. This is not true. In fact the shark could teach mankind many things. You probably already know that the shark in the deep oceans do not suffer the disease that the rest of the animal kingdoms do. There would be much to find from those sharks; but it is coming as all information gradually comes.

Paul: Because a lot of these animals, they've existed since the dinosaurs...

Yes, so of course their minds and their brains evolve as does the human being, although as human beings you have developed a little more quickly—that is all—neither better, neither worse, but different. You only have to look at the animal kingdom of the apes and the monkeys within your world to see their intelligence. But it is not only within those animals that display some form of intelligence, you must also look to those what you would term 'lesser creatures' and look to how they plan and think, and of course, whatever anyone says within your world, they do feel. So I hope that has been a little helpful to you.

Paul: Yes, thank you very much.

George: Where sharks are concerned, they're certainly recognized as superbly efficient creatures. (Yes) I'm not quite sure what that means, but perhaps it means that they in a sense live a good life.

They have the ability to cast off disease and that is something that mankind has not yet the ability to do for himself...

George: Yes, that's an interesting point.

But I will stand corrected, mankind has the ability, but he does not use it.

Sarah: But we cause our own disease, (Yes) so you told us, so at some point, even though we've caused ourselves to have a disease, we could get rid of it.

Yes, there is no doubt about that.

Sarah: Because some diseases that we get today can kill us...

Yes, there is always confusion when we speak about this subject. Always we hear: 'but we do not wish to be diseased'. No, with the thinking brain you do not wish to be diseased, but with the mind, which belongs to Spirit, there is an inner feeling and thinking which has to have a result within the body. That is where you must look to find the beginning of disease. You are only open to disease if somewhere within your lifetime you have been open to wrong thinking. It is as simple as that, and yet humankind finds this so hard to accept.

Sarah: I was quite surprised to see in a woman's magazine that I was looking at, and the heading was: 'Heal yourself with your mind.' I thought this was good news.

Did you want to say: tell me something new! (Laughter)

Sarah: But I was pleased to see that that sort of thing is coming through now... (Yes)

George: Did you see it in a magazine for sharks?

Sarah: No! (Laughs)

Yes. But be aware as I have said before, there is much information that can be obtained from looking to the oceans and seas and rivers of your world, as yet not quite discovered.

Sarah: Do you think if we were to give your words to the scientists that would help them to go forward to look—they just haven't even thought perhaps of looking at the sharks and if they were aware of it they might find the information quicker?

This is always a possibility, but I can say there is influence being given in the right places at this particular time in your evolution. It will come, but of course within the oceans of your world man cannot travel too far down to discover what is there, but it will come in time. But, even now there has come to mankind an interest in all kinds of animals in your world and a much greater understanding in this past century of your years, where men are beginning to see the animals are their equals in life rather than beasts to be preyed upon. That knowledge is already here and in place, so do not doubt that more information will come, because we are giving that influence to those in the proper places.

Paul: People are beginning to—like the song of the hump back whale—they feel it's something very special—we do not understand the clicks and the noises in the oceans, but I think they are beginning to realize that there is so much that they don't know.

Yes. It has to be recognized that you are different. Mankind and the animal kingdom are different, only in as much as you have evolved very much more quickly as a group of animals—that most of you come into this world and have greater opportunities before you than do the animal kingdoms.

Paul: And that applies even to the dolphins and the ones with more developed brains...

You see the attunement today between dolphins and those who feel their energies and I am sure you must be aware of the healing energy that this animal can display.

Sarah: People go and swim with the dolphins...

Because they are in tune with the energy, with the spiritual energy, and we all derive from that same energy; that is what you must remember. It may be in a different format, but ultimately it is all of the same energy.

Paul: I've read that the Atlantians had a much better rapport with the dolphins—they interacted with them. Maybe it was the children, I'm not sure, but I read that they helped them realize that the oceans are friendly places.

George: They rode on the dolphins...

They were a race with much more open minds and hearts than anyone today, so therefore any spiritual gifts of the animals and the people would find that blending so much easier. That is all it was, and of course it was lost, and so mankind returns to the beginning to relearn what has been lost. And that is the situation of it in simple words.

Sarah: I think you did tell us once before, why they disappeared. I know that the city went under water, but the people could have moved.

George: There was evidence that some did.

Yes. There has always been dispute in your world as to whether they have survived to this day or not. Always there has been this question mark within your world. And there are those in your planet today who have come from this family of lost souls, but all who lived on that land, disappeared when that land disappeared into the ocean. And you must remember that people did not travel quite in the same way as you have the opportunity to do in this present day. But, yes, I will confirm for you that there were those who survived and travelled to other lands.

Sarah: And took the knowledge with them, but over time that's got lost as well. (Yes)

George: Thank you for the confirmation of that. Some of this information tallies with past life readings of Edgar Casey, which refer to escapes from the continent, which was submerging.

Yes, you could compare it to those of us who join together in this room. At the moment there are most of you here, but there are some who are elsewhere. So if we were to go this evening there would be those few left to continue and carry on the good work. It is a simple comparison, but in your minds it will help you to understand.

George: Could I say thank you to all concerned for welcoming my cousin and his lady last time. That visit was much appreciated.

We are always happy my dear friend to welcome those who show an interest in these words. We are always happy to accept those who are willing to keep an open mind—whether they accept the words or not, is entirely part of their own freewill.

George: Yes, I'm sure it's given them much to think about.

Yes, yes I am sure that they understood a little more by being here with us, because what they achieve by being in this room with all of you who brings such energy is that they feel the difference in the communication, rather than seeing the printed words or hearing the voice upon your tapes. They do not get the feeling of the energy and the unique oneness that is within this room.

Paul: I suppose that's something we'll never be able to...(No)...even if we get a website we still will never be able to give people this experience unless they actually come.

No, that will only be experienced within the group, because of the group energy, and after all, it is your energies my dear friends that brings me to you. So please remember how important each one of you are to this meeting—without you it could not take place.

George: Yes. Could I mention another similar group? Having been away on holiday for the past week, I had the opportunity to read a book concerning Seth and the medium Jane Roberts and her husband Rob. Seth first came through in 1963 and he, I would describe as an advanced Soul remaining in Spirit while the other two incarnated. All three I understand had shared previous incarnations. That group of the three continued for 5 years and then what is known as Seth II came through. Now, we have to see Seth II as a much more advanced being in earthly terms, from our future, our distant future, and Seth II describes himself as a conglomeration of beings, (Yes) most of whom have not had physical existence, but that conglomeration includes the much advanced Seth I. Now, I've heard a similar description in terms of a conglomeration of beings before! (Knowing laughs—Salumet has described himself as a conglomeration of beings.)

And did I not tell you that in time there would be confirmation of my words? And I would say that this is one of those times.

George: Yes! It's a very interesting similarity and Seth I displayed a little bit of ego and panache while he was teaching, (Yes) and Seth II has a totally different voice, which displays none of that.

Yes, because it is another aspect of the conglomeration.

George: And I think I would be right in seeing Seth II as a Master who teaches.

Yes. Yes, we are not always open to a dual reality, it is something that we learn when we come to this plane of existence, and I have to say, you have to understand the makeup of you human beings to be able to display all of those truths, which we try to bring to you. So, sometimes I have to say a little dual reality is perhaps what you seek although it is not part of any truth. You understand?

George: Yes. I think reading about that one has opened my eyes to a few things. The idea of all reincarnations, as seen from Spirit, happening at once; this is something I hadn't really thought about much before.

Yes and what is happening is that your mind is being broadened to all that exists. It will never expand to the extent of understanding what happens in Spirit, only of what we bring to you—the understanding from our world to you. But you can only expand so much whilst you are in these clothes of human flesh. There is so much that awaits you my dear friend that you will never understand here, but sometimes you can have a glimmer of what it is like and our understanding from Spirit.

George: Yes, I can well accept that.

Yes. We know my dear friend you will always be the one to push forward for more and more information—you seek clarification in all things, and that is your part within this group; and may I say to you my dear friend, you do it well.

George: Thank you very much. Well, we all try in our various ways and I think we all realize that it is to no avail unless we manage to put this information before many others.

Yes, the opportunity must be given for others to open up to the prospect that there is much more spiritual knowledge for them to digest, but as always, it is entirely dependent upon their freewill, and we can never force any truth upon anyone and that would never be our purpose—our purpose is to come to you. And remember my words when I told you that you may always reject anything that I say until such time as your understanding is greater, but I have to say your acceptance of my words and thirst for knowledge has made my task just so much easier.

George: I was going to say that the thought of rejecting your words would be—that process would be most difficult. (Knowing chuckles)

I am gladdened by those words, but that is entirely up to you, as is all information that is given from our world.

Paul: Some of these books like the Jane Roberts 'Seth' books, though they were written, by our standards, quite a long time ago now, but to my mind they are very clear and obviously full of more spiritual knowledge than a lot of books that are written today, but they probably don't sell as well unfortunately. But I suppose it's out there for people to dip into if they search hard enough and maybe one day, even though the books were written a few decades ago now, they may actually at some point when we've progressed enough, they'll achieve their more rightful place really, because a lot of these books should be best sellers, (Yes) but they are not at the moment.

The truth will always prevail and throughout your time upon this planet we have always brought to mankind the knowledge that he seeks and it is brought to those individuals who we feel will digest and dissect the information and then to pass that knowledge without any prejudice. It will come at many times throughout your world and in many places, in order, as we have said earlier, that the truth may be verified in many places and in many ways. But we cannot make you as human beings accept our words, accept what is truth, unless you are open to us as spiritual beings. That is why it took many of your earthly years before I was able to come to you, because many factors dictated that we must wait for the right time, and that is what happened. We needed the right mixture of human beings within your group, we needed the right place that had the purest of energies and we needed my agreement to come to you. So you see, it was not something that happened in the blink of an eye as you would say, but something that we waited many, many years of your time to achieve.

George: Yes I can visualize the preparation and there is something in the Jane Roberts book that caught my eye as well: apparently she had a previous incarnation as a medium and I imagine that this was part of her conditioning to be ready for that happening.

Yes, it does not happen within one lifetime. These preparations from our world are thought about for many, many years of time, before we can put them into action, because after all, if you think of it, each one of you incarnated into a different body in this lifetime at different times, and therefore we have to wait for that coming together, which in your time took many, many years. Although you have been together in previous times, in this lifetime the expanse of time has been greater. I hope you understand my words.

Sarah: So when we were together previously, we weren't ready for this information?

No, only when you returned to Spirit. You would not have been aware of it at that time of coming together. Each of you has had lifetimes when the others have not joined you, or been aware of you; some have remained in Spirit and some have reincarnated.

George: Yes, we've had very interesting information and visits concerning our past lives and the most recent—I'm not sure how many of us would have been involved, but the South American group who were enslaved by the Inca, I think I understood that that had past life connection to some of us at least.

Yes. You have not always been together, but some of you have in different lifetimes, but this is the one when it was thought that the information and the truth was going to be delivered by each one of you now at this time in your spiritual evolution of this planet—that the time was right for each one of you to have separate lives, but to come together in order for this truth to be given.

George: I certainly have a very strong internal feeling about that myself and I think I speak for us all in that. (Yes)

Sarah: And Leslie, who started the group off, that was just his job to bring us all together, was it? He did not bring you together, you brought yourselves to a situation, where eventually you came together. But his energy and that of many others throughout the years, was the 'build-up', if I may use that term, to what was to come. He was a little misguided in his thinking, because they had set their minds to other happenings, when in fact what they were doing was building the energy within that place.

Sarah: When you say 'they', are you talking about Leslie and his wife?

And those others over many years who entered.

Paul: Everyone played their part.

Yes. It is not up to any one individual; it is the coming together of many Souls and the energy being used for the purpose it was intended for.

Paul: I guess we all agreed this before we came and all decided that it was time for us all to really get the clearest message out we could ... (Yes) ...about truth, because this is the clearest way for the delivery of the truth. You can be inspired yourself, but to have yourself coming through communicating with us like this is, I think, is the clearest way of all—to deliver the words.

Thank you. It is not always easy to find the proper words in your human language, but before I came to you, it was decided that the simple words were the best to be used. Of course, many words within your language can be used, but the truth must be available to everyone—everyone's understanding, and so many times we have seen words used that are confusing to many. Therefore my purpose was to come to not only bring to you truth, but to come to you with simplicity, and that my dear friends is what I have tried to achieve.

Sarah: And you have! (Agreed) I know you can't generalize, but would you say that those who can't accept your words are young Souls?

They just are not ready in this lifetime, not necessarily because they are young Souls. They may well be old Souls, but cannot accept the truth within this lifetime. It depends why they have returned. (Thank you.)

I feel for this time I will take my leave of you. As always I feel your love and how receptive you are to my words.

George: I feel there has been so much joy with this particular meeting.

Yes. I hope you may feel the love, which surrounds you all at this time. There are so many who stand close who also listen to my words, but who clothe you with love and with protection, and to them also I will say: until we meet next time, my love stays with you.

Lilian: Thank you. What a wonderful evening. (Thanks + fond farewells)

Finally there was one briefly through Eileen called Maizie, who had been mute in her lifetime and worked in a stately home, where she suggested certain infidelities regularly occurred, which was probably why she'd been given the work, as her muteness meant that she could never talk about such capers. She made up for it now, having a delightful joyful voice, full of expression. She said that she would be working with Eileen, giving clairvoyance.

George's notes:

The interesting point is made that sharks are highly efficient and do not attract disease. And Salumet is careful again to distinguish between our physical/thinking brain that 'wishes' not to have disease, and the spiritual mind, the stress of which may lead to disease.

The point is well made that visitors have the added experience of the group energy when they 'sit in'. All are welcome to, by arrangement, come and share that experience.

It was during Salumet's second visit to us (4th July 1994) that, in reply to a question, he described himself as one from a conglomerate of beings, most of who had not experienced planetary life. And I think his implication is that such 'structures' are a reality of Spirit that we shall know of when in Spirit, but such material does not form a necessary part of the earthly teaching curriculum.

It is a well-known fact that publishers and bookshops tend to steer clear of spiritual and Spirit communication books, even those about Ascended Masters. (They are in business to make a profit and 3-for-the-price-of-2 fiction simply sells better. And I quote Margaret Atwood: Publishers are in business to make money, and if your books do well they don't care if you are male, female or an elephant.

The 'little misguided thinking' and 'build-up time' referred to, was prior to June 1994 when the group meeting at Leslie's, anticipated 'direct voice communication' as the next step. The next step was of course not direct voice, but Salumet. Clearly, it is the teaching that is important, and not its method of delivery ... all very quickly came to this realisation.

~5TH December 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I joined with your energies this time, the colours which surround each one of you are bright and have grown much in depth of colour, so I feel happy to say to you that you have the abilities within to make much growth in your coming months.

George: That's nice to hear.

I have told you in times past that your own individual development is as important as the words which I bring to you, because you cannot remain the same once you have heard and understood the words which I bring to you. There has to be personal growth also, if we are to move forward in the way that it has been intended. You are all working hard at trying to become part of the mind-projection and I see your struggle, but nevertheless I hope that you will continue along this pathway, because it will be to your benefit, your growth and your understanding of Spirit.

George: Yes, I think we all probably understand that there's the feeling within that this will be so worthwhile.

It is a start—there is much that you can gather in the way of knowledge and understanding, but what you do not see is how much the Spirit grows in your endeavours, and that is what interests us in our world, that each one of you becomes aware of that inner voice which can help you at all times.

George: Yes, I feel that the inner growth has two parts in a way, one part relating to our endeavours and the other part coming direct from your teaching as we become more aware.

Yes, you are correct in your assumption. As always my dear friend you quickly pick upon my meaning and my teaching as well. Both must go hand-in-hand if you are to succeed. I can come and I can bring to you many things, but if it does not travel along with your own spiritual growth, that would not be me doing the job that I came to do—I would be failing you miserably and I hope that I am not doing that.

Sarah: I don't think you are failing us at all Salumet, I think it's entirely us failing you!

Lilian: Yes, I think that is our worry.

No, we will not use that word 'failure', because your endeavours must be congratulated—your patience and your loyalty to your own group has to be mentioned in any words of goodness that I say to you, because indeed my dear friends you are an inspiration to all others. I have to say, not all groups have that bond which is here within this room, and I do not say those words lightly to you. I have said it before and I will say it again, that you were bound to come together in this lifetime for this work and of course it is entirely up to each individual whether they accept or they go from these teachings.

Lilian: Thank you for your encouragement.

When I return to you in another of your years upon this Earth, I will bring more teaching for you. It will be interspersed again with general looking within, in order that you may grow; that will also remain an important part of my coming to you. I will not speak too long this time, because my dear friends, I will bring to each one of you a very strong colour, which you should be aware of as I leave, and within that colour you should see your own individual guidance. I know we have attempted this with you on another occasion, which was partially successful, but now I feel you have reached a stage of your development when you should be in much closer contact with your own helpers. So I say to you, if you have any questions I will answer them now before I leave.

George: Yes, a gentleman who came through to us last time called Ond Kulla, a head farmer from ancient Egypt, he seems to be watching over us and encouraging the process of organic farming, which is needed on this planet and it's so heart-warming to know that such people are still attempting to guide us, to help us, to influence us. I get the impression that there are many, many individuals and groups working like this and it helps to give one just a glimmer of the 'oneness' of Spirit. Am I right in thinking there are many, many such people and groups all endeavouring to influence us in the appropriate way?

Yes, of course, I have told you before my dear friends that any development in your world originates from our world, but for those thoughts to develop there has to be that gathering of thought. And for those in our world who have found an interest in whatever subject, if that interest is strong enough they will constantly endeavour to return and influence all that happens within your world. As many groups as you are within your world, also there are many in ours who are working for the good of this planet—whether it be farming, whether it be in energy, whether it be generally one-to-one impression.

There are indeed many Souls in our world who stay—I will not say ‘behind’, but they remain close to this planet in order that they can help.

George: And they seem to come from so many time periods...

Yes. Time means nothing. Of course, we understand the difficulty always you have about time.

George: It helps us to glimpse the oneness of it all.

Yes. That is a good way to describe it—yes, because you see all is oneness. You are united with us throughout many, many years—eons of time in your world—but time in our world does not have the same meaning. Therefore those people whom you consider to return from a long time past, to them it is but a blink of the eye, and if the love is there—and which I have to tell you there is much love still for this planet—you are surrounded by love, even if you are not aware of it. But remember, you are never alone, my dear friends. In any thing that you do upon this Earth, there is always someone who is looking out and trying to influence all for good. I hope that has answered your question.

George: Yes, thank you for that—that sharpens the picture I’m sure. (Yes) Could I just go back also to the shark, which is seen as a most efficient animal...

Yes—it has set you thinking I know...

George: Yes—on thinking about that, I think also that he is a very objective animal, much more objective in his living I would say than we humans (Yes) and I rather fancy by comparison that we have all sorts of right and wrong ideas within our minds which don’t go together too well and create the stress that results in illness. I get the feeling that the shark is so objective that he has none of this, (Yes) and so I rather fancy that this is the key to what makes the shark a fit animal that doesn’t have disease.

Yes, and the animal in the form of the shark has been within your world for such a long time; and as you as humans have grown, so too have the animal kingdoms evolved. And the evolution of the shark would indeed give you much to think about, and that knowledge is being imparted to people within your world now, who are interested in this sea creature. There is much to be gained from the creatures of the seas—but the knowledge will come.

George: That is nice to know.

Lilian: There is certainly a lot of interest in the animals in the sea. (Yes)

Sarah: It was also a good teaching last week Salumet, because I have discussions with my brother who doesn’t believe a word I am saying normally when I pass on some of your words, but this last time I just mentioned to him, because he is interested in animals, about the shark and did he know that they didn’t have diseases—which he didn’t, and at that point he became interested. So thank you for that, I shall send him the transcript and maybe that’s the seed beginning to grow just a little.

Yes, you indeed, as all of you do, have many seeds still to plant in the minds of others. And as you say, what sparks one mind will remain dull within another. But it matters not, it matters that each individual be given the opportunity to look for himself, and then the responsibility lies with each individual—but I am happy to hear your words.

Now, as I have said, as I leave you and work quietly with this one, you should be aware of a strong sense of colour with each of you, and within that colour you should be aware of a helper who stands close to you. You will obviously discuss it between yourselves, but I ask that while I remain with this instrument that your voices stay quietly as you speak. (Thanks expressed)

Sarah: And we will see you again in the New Year...

No, I will be with you one more time and then I will take my leave as usual for your holiday period.

Colours and images were seen concerning our guidance during our quiet time. One came through Sue afterwards and gave feedback on our results.

~12TH December 2005~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time let me extend a welcome to those who visit with us this time. They feel a little tentative, but as they leave this room this evening, they will feel much upliftment. As you know my dear friends, this is my last visit in this your year of earthly life. I will withdraw as usual during your holiday period and return once more when you welcome your New Year. If I may continue from last time when each one of you discovered the colour which was given to you, and within the colour you met one of your guides. I would ask my dear friends that you continue this practice while I am absent from you.

Lilian: It will be an interesting thing to do.

I would suggest to you that you remember my words and remember the difference between your guardian angel and those you call 'angels and guides'. Do you remember the difference?

George: Yes, I think our guardian angel is the one who is with us always.

Lilian: All lifetimes...

Yes. You have remembered well my dear friends, but keeping those thoughts within your minds will help you to recognize and come close to those who stand by you.

Sarah: So this practice we do whilst you are away, we won't necessarily meet up with the same person as we met last week?

I would like you my dear friend to try to differentiate between them, to see if your recognition has grown. After all, we have devoted much time this past year in your own individual development, and this my dear friends, is to continue. But, in your new year, when we have gathered together with more of our group, I will be bringing to you information you have not heard before, but it needs to go hand-in-hand with your own spiritual evolvement. Now, because again we are few in number, this time I will take questions and try to help you understand anything that has troubled you in this past year.

George: Shall I begin with a question? (Agreed) You have told us about our planet and the way it has a consciousness, and you have explained the nature of planetary evolution and what we call 'natural disasters'. I've been thinking what we do and think must feed into, to some degree, that planetary consciousness and that planetary consciousness may well have its connection with planetary evolution and with some of those things that we call natural disasters. So I'm really putting a very direct question and saying 'what we do to the planet—and not all the things we do to the planet are nice at all—but what we do to the planet, does that have direct or indirect result in regard to natural disasters so called—the hurricanes, the earthquakes, the tsunamis'. Can you elaborate a little further on that please?

Of course. I understand your question my dear friend. Let me say this to you. We have spoken much about the power of your thinking, and yes, as you have helped to create this planet, therefore also must you take responsibility for the evolutionary pathway, which this planet takes. You cannot separate your responsibility from the natural disasters, as you call them, of the Earth itself. Each goes hand-in-hand, and whatever pathway this Earth planet takes must have an effect upon all of the planets around the solar system. You must always keep in mind that there is great responsibility on each individual's thinking. Of course, there would be what you term natural disasters, even if mankind did not exist upon this planet, but what I will say to you my dear friend is that mankind has accelerated some of the disasters which have occurred.

George: Yes, thank you. I felt there must be some input from ourselves in this.

Yes. I am not always happy to use the word 'disaster'; after all, we have cause and effect and mankind is growing at all times. Therefore these situations have always occurred and will continue, until such time as mankind recognizes his part in this pathway of life.

George: Yes. Perhaps I should use the term 'major event'.

Yes, that I would suggest is a much more suitable term. I hope that has helped you.

George: Yes, indeed. We rather suspect that some of what we are physically doing to the planet results in the hurricanes, or results in some change in the hurricane cycle.

Yes, you are not responsible for all, but there lies within mankind a great responsibility.

George: Yes, and I think we appreciate the planet must have its own evolutionary process as well.

Yes of course.

George: Yes, thank you that does help clarify.

Lilian: So if something has contaminated some of the Earth, could we call on the elementals to help to restore the goodness back to the Earth?

The elementals of course, as you well understand, have a great deal to do with the health of this planet, but they can only do so much. They also are limited by the thoughts of man, and although their work is in some sense superior to the thinking of man, they still come under natural laws, which in fact would deprive them of doing all that they would wish to do. And never forget my dear friend that they are governed by the angelic beings, who see for themselves the far greater plan of every planet. So, as in a way you cannot interfere in another's life, so too the elementals have their limitations. I hope that is helpful to you.

Lilian: Yes, thank you very much. Any questions you two, Daphne or Rod?

Rod: Not a question, but I rang my daughter up in Cheltenham, Heather last night and she was so excited that we were coming here. She sent her love and wishes she was here with you, and also apologized for the...

Daphne: ...'hounding'...

Rod: ...hounding that she's given you over the last months with the problems she has had with running the company...

I understand my dear friend. Let me just say to this one that she has a good heart, but she must learn to adapt and to call upon her own protection, her own angels and helpers, who are with her at all times. (Thank you.) Yes, of course I am always aware of what comes to me, but I have to say there are those who come much closer to her—always in time of troubles and worries which each individual seems to have upon this earthly planet. But she can find contentment and hope if she is willing to ask for that help.

Daphne: Thank you, that's very kind of you.

...but she does have her own guidance.

Rod: Thank you very much.

George: Perhaps she'll come and sit in with us one day.

Daphne: Yes.

Rod: I was hoping so—she'd be thrilled to come along.

George: I'm sure she'd be very welcome.

Daphne: It would be a great privilege.

Rod: Thank you very much.

Lilian: Can I ask a question for my grandson who has visited and was hoping to come tonight, but was unable? As you know his mother is quite a good channel for Spirit, but twice just lately, someone has obviously thought to communicate through my daughter-in-law and just said 'Richard' to Richard, but the time was not convenient, so she grounded herself and said 'no'. Richard wondered why someone was trying to contact him. Can you help at all?

I would say this to you: that when the time is right and you are ready for the teaching, then every opportunity will be sought to make connection. If there is someone who is awaiting contact, then if the channel is available, then it will take place. That young man should already be working for Spirit, but how would you express it within your world: he is dragging his heels.

Lilian: Right—he will read your words.

Many opportunities have arisen for this one, but as in all things in life, it is his freewill and it is his choice. That is all that needs to be said about that.

Lilian: Thank you, thank you very much. Any questions Sarah or Paul? (No questions)

It seems I have taught you well!

Sarah: (Chuckles) Very well!

George: We are not denying that! (Chuckle) Anyway, there's an extension to a question I would like to place. You gave us very fine words on Auschwitz some months back and we were searching for meaning for that event and you gave us meaning. We have since talked quite a lot about animals and in particular farm animals, and abattoirs, and I couldn't help but make that connection that what we do, the way we treat animals in abattoirs, is rather like the treatment at Auschwitz to the human race and I couldn't help but think: does that help to give us feeling for what we are doing to animals—mistreating them. So perhaps this is a further learning for us from that horrific event. Would you care to comment on that? I would my dear friend. It shows you, does it not, how much you have grown spiritually, when you can make such a comparison. Whether it be to mankind or to your animals, cannot be right, and great responsibility has to be taken for those who perpetrate such actions. The animal kingdom within your world my dear friends, has always been placed beneath man, not because they are inferior, but because mankind has insisted that this be so. But, as you know, as I have said many words upon this subject, they may not have the same brain within the physical coats, but they have that element of understanding, which makes them suffer from the actions of mankind. And it shows when your understanding, and you make comparisons for the animals, that your Spirit has blossomed, that you understand that the animal kingdom has feelings of love, of pain and all else that man also feels. I would say only this to you my dear friends: Treat every animal as you would a loved one within this world and you will not go wrong. That is my words to you.*

Sarah: So really we should all be vegetarian and we wouldn't have to kill the animals...

At certain times within your history mankind has killed the animals, but he has praised the animals for that flesh to eat. Remember it is the thought behind the action, which counts. Therefore, I will not say that those who have killed your animals in past times were wrong—that would not be entirely true, but it depends upon the situation. But as you stand today, as supposedly 'developed man' when in fact we know my dear friends that you have lost so much in past times. Animals are treated so much with disrespect today in your world, whereas in past times they have been honoured as part of living—there is a great difference.

George: Yes, that's something which many, many of us should think upon.

Lilian: Is there a glimmer of hope that things are improving anywhere?

Sarah: The trouble I think with today is that there are so many rules and regulations that even if the farmer is being very kind to his animals and likes his animals, he doesn't have any choice in where they go to be killed, so they're shipped all over the country, just to be killed. So it's the government that we've got to get to.

Yes. Until mankind forgets his materialistic ways, there will not be great change just yet—but mankind is developing in his understanding and that is what we are trying to impose in the minds of those who deal with your animals.

Now, my dear friends, as always it brings me great joy to have spoken with you, but I will withdraw for this time and allow others to come to you. As always, although I may not speak with you, I surround each one of you in that light of love and protection, which belongs to you, and until such time as we come together once more, I will withdraw and look forward to our next meeting.

Lilian: Thank you for a wonderful year.

George: It's been a wonderful year, which we've all much enjoyed.

Paul: Yes thank you for the whole year.

Sarah: And we wish you a very pleasant stay back where you belong.

Yes.

Paul: I thought you were going to say, we wish you a merry Christmas. (Chuckles)

George's notes:

Planetary progression: As stated, there has been considerable mention of planetary evolution/motivation over the past 12-years. I think I understand that our responsibility for our Earth is two-fold. There is the intrinsic responsibility inherited from our connection to its creation—and that includes acceptance of its required evolution in the shape of volcanoes, quakes etc that must happen. And we must be sufficiently responsible to live with that successfully, developing a 'planetary consciousness' and making sensible allowance. (cf. Indonesian elephants during the tsunami) Then there is human influence on planetary consciousness, which can have good or bad repercussion—for example, accelerated global warming, changing ocean currents and atmosphere deterioration.

~16th January 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I connect with you this time I thank you for the love and the anticipation, which I could feel.

George: We are pleased that you have a good-sized welcoming group this evening.

Yes, I have to say your lights are shining brightly this time. As we come together this time, I wish to say to each one of you that I hope your holiday period has left you uplifted and rejuvenated and that the spirit is ready to continue its journey forward in this, another of your earthly years.

George: Yes, I think we are all approaching the year with optimism and I know that some of us feel uplifted.

There are one or two within this room who do not feel quite uplifted, but hopefully by the end of this evening that will change for them. There is much to be given to you in this, your coming year. It is now time for us to move forward, that I might relate to you some information not already given, but because we have new faces this time, I will speak in a more general manner. I wish to tell you my dear friends that this coming year of your time will be devoted to your own personal understanding and responsibilities. That we intend to move forward gladdens me as it must you, but before we can move forward we have to accept that each one of you is responsible for this to happen. On many occasions I have told you that each one of you is responsible for all actions within your life, and those acts of whatever incidents, is responsible for what is to come; with this I am sure you all agree. (Agreed)

Therefore let me say this to you my dear friends: that as the time continues we hope that your understanding of mind-projection is a little fuller, because at the moment we are taking things very slowly for you and I understand that you are finding some difficulties with it. (Agreed) But we do not wish you to become despondent; it will come to you as do all things that continue to be worked upon. But there will be exercises for each one of you throughout this coming year that will broaden your outlook on many subjects—but as I say, you must endeavour to play your part. So I hope those words have brought you hope and inspiration for the weeks to come.

George: Yes it is wonderful to have your words and the words from Bonniol, our visitor who comes via mind-projection, and to have those dialogues plus our attempts at trying to mind-project—with all three working together, I think I could say there is much hope there.

Yes, but there will be expansion in other fields. I do not wish you to become static in what you are trying to achieve; you must widen those horizons in order that the spirit comes forth and grows, but again that is the responsibility of each one of you. We can help, we can uplift, we can encourage, but we cannot live life for you. Now I feel that I have spoken enough about what is to come, therefore the rest of my time with you this evening we will use for any questions that you may have.

Lilian: Have you any questions Heather?

Heather: First of all I would like to say, Salumet, thank you so much for all the upliftment that I know you've given me over the past months—when I've called for your help you've been there, I know you have. But I would like to ask you: I've read back in the transcripts and you mentioned that healing takes place when the spirit is touched, (Yes) and I felt on two occasions my spirit has been touched while I've been giving healing. Would that be correct?

Yes, I understand your question. Of course, as you allow the spirit to come forward and if you are giving healing to another, then you are in a prepared state for your own spirit to be helped. Yes, you are quite correct, but what I would say to you my dear friend is that first you must come to know yourself much better. If I might offer some words of comfort it would be that within you there is a deep fear, which allows you to have problems within the physical being. You must go within more and find your true self. You will then find that once you understand yourself fully that the healing that you are trying to give will be much more successful. But your problems are based on fear. As all of my dear friends here already know, all actions are taken either from the basis of love or fear, which then will have a cause within the physical body. It is up to each one of you to truly know yourself and, as I have said on many occasions, to be honest with yourself. I hope that is helpful to you.

Heather: Yes. Thank you very much Salumet.

Lilian: Do you have any questions Richard?

Richard: No.

I welcome this young man back into the love within this group.

Richard: Thank you.

You are ready to be used my dear friend, but there is something which holds you back and as I have said to our dear lady friend, if you truly wish to develop the gifts that you have, then you must go within, you must allow that spirit to come forward. Again, as with our young lady friend, you are fearful. I would say to the gentleman, he has the ability to achieve much, but again it comes to his own freewill and that, as I have said, cannot be interfered with. There are many who stand behind you waiting. Now it is up to him.

Lilian: Yes, he's obviously got great gifts there.

As do all of you. I do not wish it to sound as if he is exceptional, because each one of you within this room has—as does all human persons—have gifts of the spirit, which are to be used. It is whether the desire and need is there, but that does depend on his own freewill. I would ask my dear lady friend that you go forward and place your hand upon the lady next to this young gentleman and we would wish to give her some healing help this evening.

Lilian: Yes, I will.

Are there more questions?

Jan: Salumet, thank you for the healing this evening, that's nice to receive. Is it safe for Richard and I—the young man sat next to me, to work together in the comfort of our own home?

Provided you have that protective cloak around you, which I believe you have discussed. Yes, you are both very much connected to each other as has been told to you in past times. Provided you sit in the name of love and you have protection, there is no harm in that. But if there is fear, I suggest that you go very slowly, because there is a deeper fear within this young gentleman, a fear he may not even recognize.

Jan: We have recognised together that it's more Richard's fear (Yes) than my own when we are on our own.

Yes—you are there for support. Yes, that is perfectly acceptable as long as you know that when you have opened up, if fear exists there is the possibility of those who are not so gentle in coming. You understand what I say?

Jan: I do. We have been careful on the two occasions to make sure that I feel we have closed and Richard feels happy in his own body, if you know what I mean.

And if you wish you may call upon me for protection.

Jan: Thank you very much. And the second question I have Salumet, which I think you've already addressed, because you have asked the lady next to you to help me. (Yes) The pain I am experiencing at the moment, is that because the pathway I am treading at the moment is not the right one?

You at the moment have a fear of going forward and the fear is connected to your earthly husband at this time. Once you allay those fears you should find self-healing in evidence, but whilst this fear is there, it will not take place. As I have said, all conditions within the body are basically from love or fear.

Jan: And mine at the moment—I'm experiencing fear, I know I am.

Yes. Try to allay those fears within yourself. Surround yourself with positive thinking, ask for help from those who come close to you; and I have to say there are many who come close to both of you who belong to the same aspect of Soul for both of you.

Jan: Is that because Richard and I are of the same aspect—is that possible?

You both come from the same soul energy, yes—that is why the connection is there.

Jan: We will try and do our best. Thank you very much.

Lilian: Would Richard's grandfather be able to help him from spirit? Would he be able to help him?

If he so desires, of course! Let me say that any healing thought is never placed to one side—again we go over old ground. I have to say that if healing thoughts are sent out, then they will be addressed, but not always in the way that you desire, but in the way that is needed for the individual. But whilst there is fear, it almost creates some blockage for that love and healing to take place—you understand? (Yes, thank you.) That is where your own personal responsibilities come into play. I am sure our dear gentleman friend across the room from me will tell you that once he looked within, there was a betterment of his condition, besides the other steps that were taken.

Graham: I should say! (Graham was at this time recovering from Dystonia, a so-called 'incurable' neuro-degenerative disease, which he nevertheless did indeed make a full recovery from!)

Yes. So within the comfort of this room, you can see one who has experience of positive thinking.

Lilian: Yes, definitely. Do you have any questions George?

George: Well, there is a fairly topical one. Recently there was what is known as the 'Hajj pilgrimage' and this is a pilgrimage on which many come from around the world—it is held in Saudi Arabia I think, and they file past a representation of the devil and they throw stones at it. And on this last occasion, there were so many people and there was a stampede and 360 died. It's a very curious pilgrimage I think, and it's a very curious thing to happen, for so many people to die as a result of it—it doesn't seem to make a lot of sense. Perhaps it's an exercise for us not to judge. I was just wondering if you have any thoughts on that occurrence.

You are beginning to read me my dear friend! Of course you must not judge. There are many what would be termed 'strange ways' within your world—many religions, many pathways, many ways of thinking. Whether it seems to you foolish or otherwise is really not for anyone to judge, but again it comes back to what I have been speaking about and that is the personal responsibility of every individual that is involved in either the death of a fellow human being or in any kind of destructive behaviour; that is something for them to judge themselves for. It may not always happen in your world as you well know, but when each spirit returns home they have to face their own judgement. Mankind has many strange practices I am sure you would say, but I would like you my dear friend to take the wider view of your world, to take the good within your world and to elaborate your thinking upon those many things, and in concentrating on the good of your world, you will help it to expand and to dispel any negativity that is still within the planet, but as we know, that is not going to happen just yet.

George: I was going to say, likewise there is a political trial going on in the law courts at the moment and I picked up a reported statement that the man said that 'Allah curses a sector of the community', and I would think that's something to be impossible.

Yes, I would suggest to you all my dear friends that your thoughts of love are needed for these people, that the thoughts of love may change those thoughts of evil, as you call it—I would prefer to say that these are misguided people who need your thoughts of LOVE on so many occasions, if your world is to become a better and safer place to live.

George: Yes, I feel you've just made a very, very important statement: these people all need our thoughts of love.

Yes. Again I would suggest that you dwell upon not the negative, but the positive aspects, because there is so much good happening in your world also, and you tend as human beings to focus too much upon the negativity. I want you my dear friends as this year progresses, to feel that you are beacons of light, beacons of light, which will touch every individual that crosses your pathways. You are already my dear friends sending out the words that have come to you, so many thousands of people will know that the truth and love will always prevail.

George: Yes absolutely. Did you have a question, Paul that follows from that?

Paul: Not so much that follows. I was just thinking that was a beautifully simple way of putting it: focussing on the positive. The negative—you can get bogged in it anyway and sometimes there's probably not too much to understand from it. So yeah, that really struck a chord.

If I may simplify it even further for you. Which would you prefer to view, the cloud and the rain or the sunshine and the flowers?

Paul: (Said with a chuckle) Funnily enough, I do like the rain actually—I rather like it, but I know what you mean. (More chuckles)

I do not say the rain is not beautiful—all things are beautiful, but it is your conception, your thinking in general, which is important.

George: Yes. 'Beauty is in the eye of the beholder.' That's one of our expressions.

Yes, therefore, focus on what is beautiful and that includes all of your fellow man.

Paul: Sometimes I think when you focus on someone's positive points, the negative just disappears, doesn't it, and you don't need to delve into the negativity to sort it out.

Can you remember some long time past when I told you that when you disapproved of what someone did, then to look within yourselves, because within yourselves lies all negative and positive viewpoints.

George: Yes. Unfortunately the barristers in our law courts don't do that! (Laughs)

I accept your statement completely!

Sara: And our politicians.

Paul: And psychiatrists.

Yes. But they are being helped. No matter, they are being impressed, but for those of you who know just a little more, then of course the responsibility is much greater.

George: Yes, I must say I have met a number of barristers and there are some very fine people there—I must say that as well.

Yes. Well, I think for our first evening back together, I will take my leave of you. As always, I leave you with my love. I thank you for your coming together and all that you give to each other. (General thanks and fond farewells)

~23RD January 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time, I am happy to say how happy we are to be joined by those who are not part of our regular group; I extend my love to each one of them. You would be surprised, I feel, to see the difference in the energy within this room when we have others who come to join with us. I wish this time to say to you my dear friends that ahead of us in this coming year there is much for us to discuss, but I will say only a little this evening in order that our friends might have a wider picture of what happens within this group. There is much my dear friends that you will learn of in this coming year and one of the things that I would wish to discuss with you in the weeks to come, is following on from what you have been trying to achieve: mind projection. This, as you may have gathered by now, is not something new, but is new to all of you.

George: Yes—new and very interesting.

Yes, and it will become even more so as time continues. I will say this to you: that already, and for many years past, the mind has been projected to many areas within your world—even so, the mind and the thought has been captured upon film. Of this, you may not know, but I assure you that these things have taken place, and it is the step forward from mind projection. There is evidence upon what you call your photographs.

George: Yes, I don't know about this!

No, but you will. It is something I will discuss with you, as I say, at a later stage. I feel sure, and especially you my dear friends, that to capture thought to film can only be most interesting for you.

George: Yes, indeed.

Also in this year there will be much more spoken about communication from our world. It is ever-increasing to people who seek all that they do not understand, and this coming year will see many more people who become interested in what is termed 'paranormal', but that we know as 'perfectly normal'. Also there will be in these coming next few years, more information about the whole cosmos in general. Your scientific fields and your astrologers (astronomers?) are beginning to see a wider 'film' of all that exists and these facts will become known, as too will be known the formation of other planets, which can only again be of interest to you all. So you see my dear friends how much we have to discuss in this coming year, and of course I will discuss with you things that have been promised from me in the past, and if the time and conditions are suitable, then these topics will be raised.

George: It's wonderful to have this feeling for spirit and spirituality running through the entire universe and I'm sure this has not yet occurred to many, many scientists who have been very interested in the physical universe, but to add and have a feeling for the spiritual dimension has to be seen as a great joy and a step forward for mankind.

Yes, yes. Truth cannot be kept in the dark—this I have told you many times and still upon this planet for every believer in Truth, you will have one who is sceptical, but that is the way of your earthly lives at this particular time. But what is satisfying for us who come to you from spirit, is that now you human beings are beginning to think for yourselves and are not going into life with what you term 'blind faith'. This indeed is a big step for mankind. As you know, each one of you are individuals in your own right, but the common ground for each one of you is the knowledge of Truth and Love which surrounds us all in this world. Truth and Love cannot be denied. Have you any questions on what I have just told you?

Paul: Going back to the thought-photography, you said that that's already been discovered, has it? It has been achieved and the time is now ripe for that knowledge to be made known—yes.

Paul: That is a fantastic thing because it really ... um ...

It should again reinforce my words how powerful your thoughts are.

George: Yes, I was just wondering if this relates in any way to the 'random number generators'...

That has been part of it I have to tell you. Many things have taken place and I know that we have discussed briefly the case of the numbers, but much has been happening in our world, which has to be transferred to you human beings in order for it to become your reality. But there has been much work 'behind the scenes'—I believe that would be your expression. Yes.

George: Yes and I was wondering—a great area of scepticism relates to elementals. I was wondering if in taking steps forward, if elementals would be coming any more out into the open in our thoughts.

All that has existed ... has existed. It is only that it has been denied, by those, who have been spiritually blind, if you like. Until such time as each individual opens their eyes, they will not see. Now, as we continue, I wish to say to you my dear friends, I would like you if you would when you leave this room this evening, if you would send a thought to all of those people whose eyes are spiritually closed, to help them to understand what is round and about them. They can be helped from our world, it only needs to be asked, and I can assure you that in this manner, it is not interference in their lives, it would be the rebirth of their lives. You understand? (Affirmed)

George: Yes. In any event it seems to be it would be in the nature of a prayer.

Lilian: It is like healing for them, isn't it really?

Yes. It is help in understanding themselves, in opening their eyes to Love and to the truth of their very existence.

Paul: I don't know why but I just had a feeling that this year would see a bit more spiritual growth on the planet. I suppose every year sees a little bit more as of late. Do you see this year as being a particularly good sort of spiritual growing year?

I understand your question and, yes, take heed of what you feel of that innate feeling within, because you would be right in feeling this. Each year that I have come to you my dear friends I see as a time of being special, because each year I come to you, there seems to be a little more understanding within your world, and although this world still has many problems as you see it, I have told you that all is working together for the greater good and you cannot have positive without negative. Do you remember those words? (Affirmed) So try always my dear friends to keep a balance, not only in your own lives, but in your thoughts of your planet and all of your solar system and as you now realize, even further. Try to expand your own consciousness and the realization will come to you of all that is good and all that is truth.

Paul: We are also hoping this year maybe, maybe this year, to get the website with all the wonderful teachings you've given over the years. If you have any suggestions for that, we would be most grateful to hear any.

I am most humbled by your words, and of course if I can help in any way, I will do so, but it will not come in the form of words; it will come to you as it has done by inspiration, and without your dedicated work, you could not have achieved what you are doing. But I wish you to understand that behind all of you we stand, we give encouragement, we give hope for your futures, and we hope we bring to you peace and calmness and goodness for your lives upon this Earth.

George: Yes, and we feel that the technology developments today are helping us immensely, and it is now possible to put the whole of your teachings over twelve years onto a single compact disc, so that all of the teachings can be thrown onto the computer screen and read and this will carry a subject index as a means of reference. So we are being helped with the technological developments.

Yes and they have been important in this development upon your planet. So often we hear people say, 'Why is this necessary?' But imagine what I have told you earlier about the thought that has been put to film, to photographs—how would this have been possible without that technology? (Yes indeed.) So, always there is a reason for these happenings. But to all of you I give you my love and support at all times. And if you can remember when first I came to you I said to you my dear friends that if only one person is touched by the words I bring, then indeed I feel my task has been achieved.

George: In fact there is one person who has put a question to me, which I would dearly like to pass on to you, because you will clarify so much better than I. So if I may ... you've spoken much on the subject of meditation, but in possible connection with this there is hypnotism and there is self-hypnotism. Now, I rather fancy that self-hypnotism is very much like meditation but for different purpose. For example: removing pain during dentistry—and of course, ordinary hypnotism needs control by another, but are you able to clarify those three things and how they connect for us?

Yes, I understand your question. The purpose of meditation is slightly different from the others, because in true meditation the spirit should in fact raise from the physical body to meet that of spirit—in true meditation. I wonder if you are speaking of a deeper sense of relaxation, which goes deeper than you normally would in waking time. True meditation, as you know and understand it, should connect you to that spirit outside of the body; the spirit is raised from the human form in true meditation. (Yes.) When you speak of hypnotism, it is indeed going deep to the subconscious mind, and we know that the mind belongs to spirit, but it is also encased within the human form; for it is possible to reach that deep, subconscious mind, without the spirit leaving the body. Does that make sense to you?

George: Ah, I see, so where hypnotism is concerned, it is a part of the spirit, which is more contained...

Yes, it is still part of spirit, but it is more contained within the human form. But in true meditation the spirit should be able to raise itself from the human form towards spirit—there is just that slight difference.

George: Yes, thank you for that—that does clarify it beautifully, because it did seem to me to be a difficult area.

It does not seem so difficult now.

George: No.

No, no.

George: Thank you.

But all states where you are trying to go deep within the subconscious, is a state not normally achieved in waking time. Now, my dear friends I have spoken with you enough I feel. I feel it might be beneficial if our dear lady friend (Sara) could take us on a short journey this time and I will leave you in the capable hands of our dear lady here, (Lilian) who will take charge of the rest of this evening's meeting. And as I withdraw this time, know always that I stand close by each one of you, know that I know your thoughts, I know what is within your hearts, and whenever I can I will endeavour to help you all. (Thanks + farewells)

Sara then took us on a guided meditation within ourselves and there was also a communication from Bonniol, all freely available on website: www.salumetandfriends.org

George's notes:

We were pleased to welcome on this occasion: Izumi (A friend from Japan), Heather and Natalie. Each has sat with us before, and it is always a pleasure to welcome back old friends.

Salumet's words on 10th March 97 were: '...no longer will there be the fear and the distrust over all things termed supernatural. They will become known and natural...' This coming year then, Salumet is saying, that many more will be seeking the paranormal, that we know to be normal. So that earlier statement is coming to fruition. The 'restrictive' view of hypnotism and self-hypnotism seems important, because this is a corner of scientific thinking that could be seen as 'in the melting pot'.

~30TH January 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time it gladdens me to hear your laughter.

Lilian: It certainly lifts the spirits.

It also helps to raise the vibration within this room. Now my dear friends this time I will speak to you for just a short time, because there must be some time left for some self-development this time. I wish to speak with you, the last time for a while because I know I have spoken much about this subject. I am sure you already know what I am about to say.

Sarah: Thought.

Yes, thank you my dear friend—not only thought but love. Many of my words have been dedicated to these two simple words of your language, but words which should mean much to you. You all know how much and how powerful your thoughts are, and we have spoken much about those insignificant thoughts which remain within the ether. We have spoken of the purpose of powerful thought and how it can affect, not only oneself, but not only your planet, but also the whole of your universe. How powerful those thoughts are! You also know that powerful thought—and we have spoken of collected thoughts and how much more powerful they can be—how they can transmute darkness of thoughts from many upon this planet. You understand all of these things. (Affirmed) What I would wish to say to you this time: have you considered my dear friends what happens with the thoughts that you have formed just before you enter your sleep state? Would someone like to...

Lilian: Personally, no I haven't.

Graham: I think sometimes when I have a question in my mind and I've gone to sleep on that question, next day the problem around that question doesn't seem so bad and I can see the answer.

Yes, so therefore you have had positive thinking before the sleep state. (Yes.) Let us assume that before your sleep state you have watched your televisions, you have read your newspapers, you have read your books or you have been thinking with negative thoughts, before you go to the sleep state. What do you suppose happens then?

Sara: Your minds are filled with whatever you've been absorbing (Yes.) and I imagine it can sometimes produce strange dreams, but also I believe it can lower your vibration (Yes.) before you sleep.

Yes. Of course you are right. Your last conscious thinking will—and as you know, when you reach your sleep state that the spirit leaves the body—yes. What happens then is that with negative thinking that last conscious thought will find you in the lower astral planes, because like-minded thoughts will come together. Can you understand? (Affirmed)

Lilian: Yes, that hadn't occurred to me I must say.

Have you any questions?

Sara: So it's much better to go within before sleeping and have quiet time.

I would suggest only positive thinking, or of course your meditation—that would be an ideal time for many. But this is an important point for you to remember.

George: So that thought would travel with the spirit and would not remain with the subconscious part.

Yes, because it is the last conscious—and remember that thought belongs to spirit, so of course it will travel with spirit and in the same way as your thoughts will travel into the ether, so too those last thoughts will travel with the spirit into our world, but any negative thinking will keep you in those lower astral ranges. So, that is also something else for you my dear friends to consider.

George: Yes, that is very useful information to have.

Sarah: So, if you wake up feeling really wonderful, it's probably because you had good thoughts before you went to sleep and it's been worked on whilst you've been away.

You would have joined us in spirit to the place where you rightfully belong at that moment in time. Remember there are many planes of existence and it would not be right to forego telling you of these lower astral planes, because that is where all of the negativity would still remain.

Sarah: When you go to sleep, Salumet, and your spirit leaves your body, is this really a little bit like you going back to where you belong to rejuvenate the spirit a bit?

I also would return to the place that I am suited to, yes, of course. Yes. You all, although your memories are few, do return to that place where the spirit can be rejuvenated, uplifted, and, as the gentleman has just said, can be inspired. In many ways you are helped during your sleep state. But of course you have times when you wake and you feel as if your rest has been negligible. That could, I do not say always, but could be because your thinking has been incorrect.

Sarah: And if you're in the lower astral plane, those negative thoughts, would they—and I know you're going to say that energy is always moving, but would they remain fairly stagnant in that lower astral plane, whereas when you're in your rightful place there's a lot more movement and a lot more work being done on your thoughts?

Yes, of course, because like attracts like and you would be attracted to a place of negativity, where indeed there are still many who have retained those negative thoughts, although they are in our world. Remember that you do not ultimately change, you do not suddenly become angels, (titters) you do not suddenly become a positive-thinking person; but it might be good for you my dear friends to assess for yourselves each thinking thought that you send out as it occurs throughout one of your days and I am sure that you could see from those thoughts whether you are a very positive person, or whether your thoughts dwell upon the negativity of your lives. After all, thought becomes habit, it grows from habit and it is much easier for you as human beings to focus upon those lower feelings rather than those feelings from spirit. It is a pattern, which is easier for you all to follow, but I do not excuse you all my dear friends, because now you have the knowledge to change, therefore you see how that responsibility has grown. (Agreed) You are not only responsible for yourselves, you are responsible for others whom your thoughts reach out to touch, you are responsible for the condition of your planet, and you are responsible for those thoughts that reach further out into your solar system.

George: I was just trying to visualize the habitual criminal and how that would apply and I think I can see that it might well be quite difficult for the habitual criminal to get out of the routine of non-love, should I say.

Yes. But as a group you could help to transmute that way of thinking by another. The love from your auras can reach out and touch and change. That is why it is so important my dear friends that this understanding of thought is great. That is why I have on numerous occasions returned to this subject, but now I feel that your understanding has reached the point where we can now move forward.

Graham: I can see that it's important, Sara and I, with our children that we always try to give them a happy goodnight—sometimes getting children into bed isn't always easy; (Yes.) we try very hard to keep them happy at that very important part of the day.

You have become wise, yes. And of course it allows their own special angels to watch over them at that time of their living.

Graham: And this would be a good time for prayer as well...

Of course.

Graham: ...to say thank you for the good things in the day.

Yes, and it would be most helpful if children could be taught to say thank you, not only for the love and the goodness which surrounds them, but also for the learning and the understanding of the problems that they encounter in their young lives. It is important that they learn to give thanks also for the—what you would call, 'not so good times', because that is the time of their understanding and recognition of themselves and their own spirit's growth. (Thanks expressed)

Sarah: And also the people who are depressed, they must go to sleep feeling low, so it's a downward spiral really.

Yes, if only they could understand themselves a little more, but they can be helped by people such as yourselves, whose light shines more brightly, who can touch them, even without their understanding. But always, as I have told you in the past, light will always gain over darkness, and it is a matter of perseverance and understanding with these people. And of course that brings us very aptly onto LOVE, because without love, nothing could exist. All of your being should be of love and understanding, and to understand others you must come to understand yourselves. And my dear friends, is that not the hardest task of all? (Agreed) You must know how to forgive yourselves, to love yourselves, because if you cannot love yourselves, if you do not have forgiveness, if you cannot let go of all loss—and I feel at this point I have to explain to you loss, because you automatically think of loss as the passing of a loved one: not so. People need to learn, because they fear so many things: they fear the loss of their youth, they fear the loss of course of one they love, they fear everyday living. They must learn to deal with loss of these things. Do you understand what I am telling you, (Affirmed) because truly, until you feeling love shine from you like a bright light, you will never truly understand what life is about. And I can tell you many things, say many words but until each one of you fully understands what love and forgiveness is, you will always falter throughout your earthly lives. You really must come to know yourselves well.

Sara: I think the hardest thing for most human beings is accepting their own dark side, their own dark shadow, (Yes.) and it is only then that you can accept other people's darkness, but then of course they show different dark areas sometimes to our own, (Yes.) and that's where the real learning is because sometimes we have to make a friend with a particular dark area to enable us to understand another one we've judged. I've found this in my own experience.

Yes. Firstly you must never judge—that has been one of my teachings to you—but because you are human this is a difficult thing for you to achieve, because none of you are infallible. You try so hard and you cannot ask for more, but it is the knowing and the understanding of these things, and the trying to achieve that greater spirituality which belongs to you all. Do you remember my words of some long time past, where I told you, if you had a problem with another human being, if you make judgement, to look within yourselves, (Agreed) and therefore you will find your answer to all of these so-called disagreeable traits in your fellow human beings.

Sarah: I also remember you said that when you have some troubles, that's the time when you grow. And a recent experience I've had has made me understand some things so much better that I wouldn't have understood if I hadn't had the problem.

Yes. I am sure each one of you has something that you could say about experiences of life, where in hindsight, you can say, yes I understand better, or the way I think has changed, or my understanding of another person has grown. That is your spirit growing, that is your inner voice telling you that these difficulties have been the test of human living. And yes, my dear friends, you have learned much from these words, but I did wish to remind you just once more before we move on to pastures new, how important love and thought are in your lives.

George: Perhaps there is no loss, only change, in the final analysis...

Yes. There needs to be positive and negative to create the whole, and that remains a fact for all living.

Sara: Not judging becomes easier with experience. (Yes.) We have to have quite a lot of experience sometimes.

Experience is why you are here. Yes, you might like to call it 'lessons', but experience is a good word I feel. As long as you learn from those experiences, then you will always move forward. Now, if you have any questions on what we have discussed, I will answer them before I take my leave. (Pause) No?

George: Yes. I was just thinking: we spoke of loss, but within this tremendous aura of love of spirit, the losses that we can think of, they seem to diminish (Yes.) and we all know of course that life is ongoing.

The feeling of loss would be transmuted into love—of course. Those feelings of loss and fear within you belong to the negative vibrations of your life, but once you allow that love and understanding of yourselves into your lives, then of course all else falls into place. I hope that you will try as I have suggested my dear friends, to try to assess your own thoughts each time they come to you—assess them at the time that they are created and see what comes from that. I am sure you would be surprised throughout one of your days how much negativity can be created unwillingly.

Sara: I have noticed when I'm positive, I have so much more fluidity, I can move through so much more in a day (Yes.) and my mind travels more quickly, everything is easier.

And your energy...

Sara: ...is better.

Yes of course, because the human body is then filled with spiritual lightness, which is then transformed through to the human form, and as you have just described, feels so much better. Yes. Perhaps on days when you are feeling down, then ask your question: 'Where is my heart, where is my thinking?'

Sara: If something goes wrong in my day, I do always check what I was thinking at the time, to try to understand how it came about.

Yes, in this way you can change thoughts quickly, because your thoughts are your reality and your reality creates form within the human body. And of course you know that is how we have illness and it does not always occur in an instant—it is a culmination of negative thoughts and not being able to know oneself—yes.

Now my dear friends, as I take my leave, let us thank that Great Creative Force for this time together in joining, in discussing and hopefully in expanding that love vibration which is within this room. As always I shall stay close with you, and before I leave, I would just like to say, although I am aware of the thoughts that are sent to me for help, I will not give individual attention to whatever thoughts come to me. I will in every situation try to help and uplift you, but I will not recognize those thoughts within this room. (Thanks + farewells)

George's notes:

Regarding Salumet's final statement. It is felt that it embraces several points. Firstly of course, that he is aware of our thoughts. Secondly, he has reiterated several times that he can give love and upliftment, but cannot solve our life's problems. Thirdly, his mission is to teach, raise awareness and place spiritual knowledge before us for the benefit of all humanity. Fourthly, he is not recognising of 'individual' request 'within this room', because he credits us with knowing these things, from having had the benefit of 12 years of teachings.

~6TH February 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As we join together this time I was happy to hear your loving thoughts for those who are in distress in your world. They, as are many others within your world, so misguided about what they feel to be the truth—can only allow people such as yourselves, who have good and open hearts—it allows them to be engulfed within your love. Therefore, I will take this opportunity to thank each one of you for each week that you give out your loving and healing thoughts.

I hope my words to you last time about the state of your thinking as you approach your sleep state, has made some impact upon you.

George: Yes, I'm sure we all benefit from that knowledge.

But it is of no use if that knowledge is not put into any form of action. But it brings me to the much greater and wider picture of what you have been trying to achieve over these many, many, many months of your time. I have brought to you the thought of 'mind projection', yes, and indeed you have been interested in all that has been brought to you. I now have related to you that you must be more careful of your thinking as you approach your sleep state—these, my dear friends, are not separate issues. Tonight I will explain to you why it is important that you take on board what I have been bringing to you. You know the power of your thinking, you now know and understand that the power of thought travels but in an instant—as you think, so it is reality.

George: Indeed. (Yes.) Yes, you have told us how we can be an influence throughout the universe, and yes, one is beginning to feel the wisdom behind those words.

Yes. Your understanding is great on those matters. That is not the purpose of my talk this evening. What I now wish you to understand my dear friends is this: you of course realize that in my world thought communication is all that happens—there is no need of words. But what I wish you now to achieve with your thinking, especially as you approach your sleep state, is to make that stronger communication with our world and already I can hear: ‘but how can we achieve this?’ You can achieve this quite easily with what you have already been trying to do—to project the thought; I know it does not come easily to you at this time. Now we bring in the thinking as you enter sleep state. If your thinking is on a higher and purer level, then it is much easier to come to our world in sleep state and then to use the thought as a means of communication, not only with those who stand close by you, but also loved ones with whom you have been acquainted whilst on this Earth. It seems a mammoth task, does it not? But let me tell you my dear friends, that you are ready for this next step in your unfoldment. Again, it will depend on your own freewill, because even in our world that is not taken from you—but the opportunities are great. Do you have any questions at this time?

Lilian: That has certainly given us something to think about.

Sarah: It makes a lot of sense to me, that...

That is because you are ready to accept my dear friend.

Heather: So what you’re saying Salumet, is as we go into the sleep state and we are in prayer as such, we’re starting to be connected at that stage. Is that what you mean?

The point of connection is already made easier for you. That is why it is most important that that time before your sleep state, places your mind, which of course belongs to spirit, into a frame of thinking, which would then make it much easier to connect—because again, as you think, it then becomes your reality. Remember this always. That has been the point of these many months of demonstrating to you the power of the mind. How could we have given you through an instrument in your world, the thoughts and the feelings of another from far away? (Referring to planet Aerah communications)

George: It certainly brings home to us how ‘close’, if I can use that word, everything is.

It is but in the blink of your eye and it is the way of communication for those in our world. That is why the thought of another brings you immediately to that person or to that place or to that animal. That energy, that spiritual energy, is within you all. You have now reached a state where your hearts are open to all things—but again, the responsibility lies with each of you. I do not have a magic wand that will bring to each one of you your heart’s desires, and after all, that which is worthy must be worked for.

George: We must think in terms of ‘magic minds’, not ‘magic wands’.

Yes, yes—the words of our dear writer friend! (Chuckles) Do you have any questions?

Paul: So if we are able to get greater communications in our sleep state, will we have stronger memories of it when we awake?

Yes, of course—that would be one part of that development. You would be a much larger part of spirit, and that memory would be retained.

Sarah: So therefore if we are giving a message to or making contact with somebody in spirit, or even somebody perhaps like Bonniol, we could well remember what they were sending back if we were having some communication in our sleep state?

Of course—how do you think it works between these mediums upon your Earth or on any other planet, if it is not by the thought? But I wish you now my dear friends, with all the knowledge that I have brought to you, to place these into action and to use the information wisely for your own spiritual unfoldment and for the greater good of your group and all those people that you touch in this world. I will not say more, but I wanted to collate all these things together for you this evening, and it places a much greater responsibility on each one of you that you may now be careful in the way that you are thinking.

Sarah: You did ask us this week to try and have a day when we could see how many negative thoughts we had, (Yes.) and although I didn't count them up, I was aware each time that I did it and I thought: 'Whoops, let's change this one!'

It is always a good exercise to fall back on, just to remind yourselves that these negative thoughts come so close to the surface of your thinking.

Lilian: Yes they do.

Paul: They so easily slip in.

Yes. So many people feel that they are positive human beings when in fact, as I have told you, if they bring it to the surface they realize that they are not.

Paul: I hold my hand up to that I think.

I will not exclude you my dear friend. (Chuckles) I feel that each one of you is responsible for that.

George: Yes, I was thinking recently about perfection and imperfection and I thought: the Divine Plan is perfect and the Creative Principle is perfect, (Yes.) but we ourselves, and all earthly things have to be imperfect...

Do not feel that those in our world are perfect—that is not so. What you are working towards is that state of perfection, but it will take many eons of time. You cannot expect perfection in one second of time, and one second of time is where you human beings belong.

George: That's right and I was wondering how the divine plan appears, not from where we are, but from in spirit. Does one have an impression of the complete divine plan?

Yes. I can only speak of what I know and as a conglomerate of beings, I feel I can speak and tell you that we also are working towards that perfection, but it is a feeling, which you attain. But suffice to say, as you feel you have gained ground, then you become aware that the vista before you opens wider—and so, you are forever growing.

George: Yes, I felt there must be a difference of view, and when you say, a wider vista before you...

Yes, but it is a deeper, more meaningful feeling of great love. Perhaps that would be a descriptive viewpoint for you. But, yes, from my point of view, then things are much different.

George: Yes, thank you for that.

Paul: Yes, that's interesting. We can relate to that as well, I think the way a new vista opens up, just when we think we've reached a certain point. (Yes.)

Lilian: We have, but we need to move on...

I believe that many years ago I made the analogy to you of climbing a ladder, a never ending ladder, and although as you look backwards you can see the progress that you have made, but as you look forward you can never see the end.

Sarah: I do remember you saying that. (Yes.)

George: What helped me in my thinking a little, was when we talked of 'Seth I' and 'Seth II', I felt there had to be a large number of rungs of the ladder between those two. (Yes.) As far as our view is concerned, Seth II, who described himself as a conglomerate of beings, must be far into the future compared to Seth I.

Yes, of course. Now you are beginning to understand—yes. And remember also that your human thinking is three-dimensional; it is so stunted in a way that you will never fully understand the way of the Great Divine Plan. Perfection is not easy to describe.

George: So, in deeper spirit, there are more dimensions to the thinking. (Yes.) So it's like comparing an abacus to a computer perhaps?

Yes, again you have given a good analogy. You see, as we move forward, each individual piece of information then grows to be much more expansive, as each piece of information breaks into areas of greater magnitude. So, rather than become simpler in terms of understanding, it becomes much, much more complex, but because your understanding of yourselves has grown, then your understanding of each developing part becomes greater.

Now my dear friends, I hope I have given you a little more to think about.

George: You certainly have.

Paul: We'll have to practise this—so going to sleep in as high a state of thinking as possible (Yes.) and then with the intention of communicating with our spirit friends and guides...

Firstly you must pay attention to your everyday thinking—all thinking—you must become masters of your own thinking. That is the pathway to be in command of what you think, and then to make sure as you enter your sleep-state that the purity of your thoughts is much greater; and then you truly can move forward. And as you say, the gifts of the spirit will indeed unfold before your very eyes. It is entirely within your grasp, but I do not want you to think that these things can happen in a blink of an eye—it has to be worked for.

Paul: Yes—all the best things you have to work for I think.

I will, next time I come, have a much longer discourse with you on another subject, but for the rest of this evening, it is important that each one within this room be given the opportunity to come close to those who guide them, and to help again in their own spiritual knowledge. Therefore my dear friends, as I take my leave from you, I offer you much love. We ask that Great Creative Force to help you, to lead you throughout your daily lives. Therefore I will take my leave and leave you in the hands of our dear lady friend. (Thanks + farewells)

Lilian: Until we meet again, our love goes with you.

George's notes:

On 20th June 05, Bonniol spoke on the subject of mind projection and how it was becoming for us, the norm: "That is always the way with a new thing. It always starts like that and then after a time, you will be doing it ... in your sleep!" We laughed and saw it as an ordinary joke at the time! Now we are able to see a clever double meaning in the remark. It is also worth remembering that on 22nd August 05, another planetary being visited with Bonniol who's mind projection activity occurs only during sleep-state.

Interesting connections!

We are reminded that our earthly experience is 3-dimensional. Salumet and deeper spirit clearly experience a more complex dimensionality. This status may well begin to explain the mechanism that lies behind the phenomena of synchronicity and Bible Code.

~20th February 2006~

As is our normal routine, names were given for healing at the start of the session, before Salumet or any others speak.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to be with you once more.

Lilian: We are very happy to have you with us.

Before I continue this time, I would like to ask you my dear friends, how many of you are aware of the change of energy within this room this time?

Some of us could feel this difference and we made our various comments and it was described as a 'good' energy.

It is because we have with us this time two much younger energies, (two teenagers) and it has made some difference to the overall energy within this room. So, I am most pleased that the awareness of this has been good for some of you—which brings me to say a welcome to our latest visitor to this meeting. (Ashlea) As I continue this time I wish to speak to you my dear friends, to speak to you once more about healing thoughts, but also to elaborate just a little on what you already know. It is most apt that I speak to you this time when so many thoughts have been given for those who are ill and are distressed. So many times we are asked from your world: 'Can you please explain how the power of the spirit is utilized for the purpose of healing?' And as our acquaintance my dear friends, has been one of much knowledge, you are now aware of the power of thinking, you are now aware that your thoughts become reality, but how then are those thoughts used in our world? That is what I would like to talk about this evening. Thought sent by people upon this Earth, come to us in one instant—this you know—and that thought becomes reality, it becomes a vibration, which can then be utilized, not only for healing but for many other things. What is spirit power? Spirit power is the very LIFE FORCE; it is infinite, it is malleable and therefore with those words you see that it can then be used in many ways. We have within our world scientists and chemists, as you would call them here on Earth, who take this spirit power and they characterize this power, this energy, and it is used in many permutations and then it is finalized for use, to be used through the instrument or channel for healing. So you see my dear friends that, that one thought goes through a process of change. The aspects of the power are used in the same way as the many aspects of each individual are used in these meetings. Do you understand my words? Or if you have any questions I will take them now.

George: I think my understanding is that the healing thoughts that emanate from us here, pass into spirit where they are changed—and I'm not forgetting that these are living thoughts, (Yes.) and those living thoughts having changed, they are then returned to the target person. Does that describe the process? They are through the instrument of healing to the person who is in need so that this power might touch the spirit of the individual. That is the process of healing work. So, it is not just one random thought, there are many processes that are used.

Sarah: I know there is no time in spirit, but this is quite an instantaneous...

Already the thought is used, because we are aware of what is about to be said. We are a little ahead of you as human beings. All we wait for is that connective vibration from you and the process of using spirit power or Life force or Love, whatever you wish to term it, is used immediately. That is not to say that it is felt by the individuals concerned in that moment of time, because as you know, for healing to work, the spirit has to be touched.

Sarah: So does it actually go one step further still? You said that you are one step ahead of us with the thought that we are going to give out. Do you actually sometimes impress us to make this thought? (No)

George: Should we think of this healing process in a collective sense rather than an individual sense?

No. You can if you wish, but it does not change the outcome from our side of life.

Lilian: So if we can't remember the name of the person who needs the healing, but the thought is sent anyway, how does that work? Is that thought discarded or is it able to be used anyway?

No, we would never discard a healing thought that is sent with love; only those thoughts that have no power behind them—everyday thinking as I have told you previously. But a healing thought sent with love is never disregarded. Collective thought, as I have told you previously, has a power of its own, but all of these thoughts are collected so do not concern yourself with active thinking about how it should be done. Just give of the love and the help for those who are in need.

George: Yes, I was really thinking, does it work in a collective sense as seen from spirit? Do thoughts get combined and circulated where needed or is it on a more individual basis?

It matters not—all thoughts are collected. It matters not whether it comes from, as you have said and as happens within this room, 'collective thought', or whether it is 'individual thought'—all of these thoughts have their own reality and that is what will be utilized, will be changed. Aspects of that power are being altered and changed to suit the situations needed for each individual sickness or illness or whatever problem is being asked for help for. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes, thank you.

But it gives you food for thought. We have spoken much about the power of thought, but now I wish you to realize that there is much more involved, that the work within our world is on-going and does not stop on reception of any healing thought or for that matter any thought that is for help—and I have to say, any thoughts that you send for yourselves.

George: Yes, that certainly gives us much to think about.

It shows you, does it not, that spirit-power is indeed infinite, that it is changeable and it can be felt, indeed in a very strong way by all individuals upon this Earth plane.

Graham: I was wondering if I could ask a question on behalf of these two younger ones who are with us this evening? (Of course.) They had an experience a few days ago which seems to have touched both of them. During their skiing holiday, Natalie here got lost and she ended up in a place where she was very lonely and afraid and she asked for help and she felt as though someone was with her. My daughter here (Ashlea) was also part of that drama and she played her role in it. They both feel as though things happened which they both described themselves as miracles, and I was wondering if there was anything you could say about that experience to them?

Of course I am happy to speak with these young energies. We know of course that the one you call Natalie has already made connection with us here within this room. Once that connection is made, it cannot be severed. As every individual who has entered this room knows, when you make a connection with our world, you are in fact uniting with your own spirit, and therefore at all times you are closer to our world, and when instances of fear or whatever emotion lies within, then those who stand close to you will come close to help you. What these young people do not fully understand is that they are never alone. It is entirely up to every individual to allow us in our world to come close to you. But sometimes, because of the strong emotions and the ties to the material world, it blocks our efforts to help. But what should happen now is that these young people learn and get to know themselves, and when that happens then their spirit is opened up to us in our world, and that connection will always remain with them.

Graham: Thank you for that answer.

George: Yes, I'm sure they will both note that well.

Yes. There is a good energy between them; it could be utilized if they so desired, but they have a lot of material living to do. But if they could only recognize their true selves as spirit, then life for them—I will not say will be easy, that is not for me to say, but their lives will be enriched in many ways, and I am sure it has demonstrated to them that they are never alone. It should be a comforting thought for them to know that you do not always need the human touch to feel comforted.

Graham: Thank you, that's very interesting.

Natalie/Ashlea: Yes!

Graham: My daughter was a little nervous about coming and she has been apprehensive for a while, but I'm so pleased now that she has made the step.

Yes. This young one could do much with the pen, but I will leave that with you and perhaps words of wisdom will be listened to and perhaps if she so desires at a later stage that she might find a connection close to her. It is not for us to tell each of you what you should do. You know that has never been my purpose, but I also wish to encourage and uplift anyone who wishes to receive help from spirit. Have we more questions before I leave you?

Sarah: Yes. I was telling my daughter that you said the last thought you have before you go to bed should be a positive one. She said that that first night that I told her that, she said that she definitely went to bed with a positive thought and then she had nightmares! So she wondered why that should have been.

Because one positive thought is not enough. She has many negative thoughts, which the spirit has to deal with. You know that the material body and the spirit are interwoven and one has a very strong effect upon the other; because you retire with one positive thought, will not automatically erase any negative thoughts throughout that day. What I have tried to teach you is that this must be an accumulation of good thoughts, and then when you retire to the sleep-state, that last thought then is like the catalyst that takes you forward into spirit. I hope that is helpful for her.

Sarah: Yes, that is very helpful. I shall pass that message on to her. Thank you very much.

It is not that you need just one positive thought; it is something you should try to achieve at all times.

Lilian: It is something we really need to work hard at, isn't it?

Yes, and I have to say that my words on that subject have been easily forgotten with some of you, therefore it is apt that this is a timely reminder for everyone.

Now, I hope that you will consider my words carefully this time and to realize that this is a further step in your knowledge. I ask only my dear friends that you continue to give of your love, your time, your energy and of course that you give this knowledge to others in order that it may help them in their everyday lives; and of course for yourselves in your own spiritual unfoldment. I will take my leave of you, I bathe you in spiritual love, and for the rest of this evening I will work quietly with this one (Eileen). (Thanks + farewells)

George's notes:

Natalie skis well, but on this occasion she got stuck in a narrow ravine in deep snow, that had cracking ice and water beneath! She got separated from the group and was out-of-sight. Rescue came 5-hours later and happily she was none the worse. It is worth noting that in addition to spiritual connection, the mobile phone also played its part in this.

~27th February 2006~

Before Salumet spoke this time, one through Sarah spoke of delays due to difficulties in coming through this time. Another also through Sarah, wanted to let us know that our rescue work had been of much interest to others in spirit realm, and had helped many in learning how to make the transition from the physical to spirit world much easier. Salumet began to speak some time later:

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As always my dear friends, there is purpose and reasoning behind all that occurs within this room. This evening has had its purpose. It has had a purpose, not only for yourselves, but for those in our world. It is a discipline for them as it is for you. As we come into this silence together, so many expectations await you, not only from this side of life but from yours, and without each other these meetings would not occur. It is I feel, most apt for you all to learn that we, from our world, cannot be summoned at will—that sometimes conditions, as you have been told, are more difficult, but also that unless there is a deep love-bond, we cannot come close to you. That, of course, is not the case within this room; there is so much love, which each of you brings to each other and to those who stand close by you. But the purpose of this evening was to let you recognize that you must not always take us for granted.

George: Yes, I'm sure we appreciate that.

Lilian: That was quite a lesson.

Sarah: So those two who came through me Salumet, were they opportunists?

Of course not—there is a purpose in this evening and the one who spoke through you had that job to do: to mention conditions, as did the one who comes through with mind projection. All are informed of what is about to happen. Each takes their place and speaks thus.

Sarah: Thank you.

I wish to say to the young gentleman who has joined us again this evening (Richard) that you must allow your natural gifts to push forward. This is the time and we know that you are a little hesitant at times, but there have been many who have worked with you this evening. Whether you are aware or not, I can assure you my dear friend that there are many who wish to work with you.

Richard: Thank you.

Now, before I leave you, I know that if you have any questions I will be happy to answer them for you.

Lilian: Any questions? George?

George: I wanted to ask a question about the condition of schizophrenia and I think we just mentioned this in passing on one occasion. (Yes.) Schizophrenia in our modern world seems to have become an umbrella expression for a number of conditions, (Yes.) but one type of condition concerns people having two personalities, if I could put it like that. Sometimes one is a violent personality and it may be that sometimes it's related to a form of mediumship, and sometimes it may relate to an undesirable spirit taking over or being present. I think it is a very misunderstood or little-understood area. I wonder if you could say a few words about that general topic?

Yes. As many illnesses within your world are misunderstood, this of course, is one that comes to the forefront on many occasions, and yes, as you have said, many who are labelled 'schizophrenic' are indeed mediums who are confused, but they do not involve the negative and violent side of the nature of the spirit—that is nothing to do with mediumship. The violent personalities within the human being who has dual personalities is indeed a state of spirit that has been confused, mainly at birth—not always but mainly. The lady who spoke to me previously, used the word 'opportunist'. That is exactly what happens when there is confusion and spirit wishes to reincarnate quickly and ignores advice given to them. We have spoken about that subject previously also. You remember? (Affirmed) That is why sometimes when a child is born, it is not the spirit that should be there. Do you remember my words?

George: Yes. So a wrong spirit, if I could put it like that...

...an opportunist—it is an apt word for this question.

George: Thank you. And would be there permanently?

No necessarily so.

George: So it might be possible to, shall I say, correct the situation through exorcism? Would that be the word to use?

That would be one way to go, but it would have to be done with a medium in your world. It is controlled somewhat by your medical people: there are medications used which subdue the will but does not cure, if I may use that word.

George: Yes, we were rather thinking that and some of us have discussed it.

It is a distressing situation and of course it always will be resolved when spirit returns to our world.

George: So it might be a job for a medium as opposed to a medical situation?

In a number of cases—I do not speak about all cases, there are various reasons for this condition in your world.

George: Yes. And very often children who are incomplete in some way, have a wonderful loving nature, which I think suggests that their spirit connection is heightened perhaps, while their intellectual development becomes stunted. I think we see that in a number of handicapped children.

You must always remember that children are closer to our world and therefore are more open to all that happens within their young lives. They are much more open and therefore so many happenings can occur, which would not necessarily happen with an adult within your world. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes, indeed. I think that clarifies several points, although, as you say, it is a varied and complicated field.

Yes. But remember also the responsibility of each spirit in these cases. All that happens within your world does not happen purely by chance. Always consider any condition from a spiritual level and then your understanding becomes much greater.

George: Yes. Putting that another way, there is always purpose...

Not always. As I say, there are—as in your world there are people who will take advantage of another and when you have a child or a baby about to be born (Conceived), the spirit who wishes to come into, and into that pure light, will take the opportunity if they can. Therefore you have the disturbance, you have the positive, you have the negative, you have the lightness and the darkness together.

Paul: Is this something that maybe happens perhaps one percent of the time?

It is, I would say my dear friend, rare. It is not something that happens all of the time, but of course the opportunities are there.

Paul: I have heard of mothers who talk of simply not being able to bond with their baby. Can that be a sign that ...

That is normally karmic.

Paul: I see. So that's not necessarily anything to do with this then?

No. Always view these problems and conditions from the spiritual standpoint.

Sarah: So when you say karmic, that's both from the child and the mother?

Yes, yes. Remember that you have chosen whom you wish to be your parents—remember the agreements that are made before you reincarnate into this life. There is always a pact made, not only with mother and child, but all that you come into contact with within the earthly life.

Sarah: When you said just now that a spirit would jump into a child that is about to be born, I thought that the spirit entered into the child as soon as it was conceived... (Yes.) ...not at the point of the actual physical birth...

At conception—yes.

Graham: There's an extraordinary child in the school that I am working who has certainly made people think. It is a child with great learning difficulties, who has been diagnosed, I think, with autism and is in many ways restricted intellectually. He has what the school call 'a little party trick' and that is where you can give the child a date either later in this year or next year and immediately that child can tell you what day that would be. (Yes.) And when that child is asked how he can do it, the child replies: 'It is just in my mind—it just happens.'

Yes. Of course, because although the child has physical problems, the spiritual and the mind which belongs to spirit, is to the forefront and therefore that spiritual memory is still within that child. That is why you have that happening. The physical body is 'troubled', shall we say, but never the spiritual mind.

Graham: Gosh! So that gives an insight as to what the spiritual mind is capable of.

Yes. It is just within that human being.

George: So it's a very good spiritual/soul connection.

Yes. A strong memory of what has gone before, even within the unfortunate human body.

George: So the child, if I could put it this way, would have a proportion of that all-knowledge.

Yes. As all of you do. So, I feel my lesson for you this evening is again to always think with your spirit.

Leave aside human/physical thinking, use that higher level of thinking and all matters within your world will become much clearer.

George: Yes. This general topic has come to the fore as a result of Graham's present teaching post, which involves handicapped children—it started us all thinking.

Yes, it is the same as when the human form gets closer to our world to return home and then they begin to think with the spiritual mind and all becomes clearer to them. No matter what the physical problems are, remember that the mind, which belongs to spirit, will always be clear.

Sarah: So even in people who have dementia...

Yes, I was waiting for you to ask! (Knowing chuckles)

Sarah: ...although they are perhaps not aware of it, their spirit is clear, (Yes.) their physical body certainly isn't.

It matters not what the physical condition is.

Jan: Salumet, may I ask: Richard's condition—the young man sat next to me, my son—he was labelled as dyslexic and we thought the voices that he could hear and the noises in his head were all part of the condition. We have sussed it out for ourselves I believe, that that was not the case. So am I right in saying, or are we both right in saying that in Richard's case he was hearing clairvoyantly (Yes.) rather than the condition?

It has taken some time has it not, but that is why he is now ready to accept. So many people in your world are given labels, which do not belong to them, and one of them is what is happening here when children see faces, they hear voices and they are labelled as being strange, when in fact they are being more than normal.

Paul: Yes!

George: That is an interesting thought.

Jan: Richard would see animals, and especially one particular animal in the house very early on, and I just knew it was happening, but it was very difficult to get through to—obviously academically educationally, people who were labelling him all the time.

They still do not fully have the understanding. You cannot say they are wrong, because they do not know, but he is fortunate in having you and your understanding to help. He has the opportunity now to go forward and make good use of the rest of his life, but again as I have told you, it is entirely his own freewill. And as much as I would wish you all to live lives to the full, to recognize that you are spirit, I cannot interfere in your lives, because that is part of the pathway that you have chosen and each one of you is responsible at the end of these earthly lives for all that you have said and done.

Sarah: When you said that Richard was fortunate to have Jan as his mother, surely he chose his mother so that she could help him, perhaps.

That is always a possibility, but deep within themselves, they will know the answer to that question, whether that is part of their life's pathway or not, because all of you have that inner knowledge, but so often as human beings you deny what you know—mainly from fear, and I do not wish to tread upon that subject again this time.

Paul: I think it relates to that thing about being normal and if you're not normal having all these labels. (Yes.) It would be okay, but these labels carry with them so much negativity.

Yes. And we know, do we not, that positive thinking can make so many changes to a person's life. (Yes!)

Sarah: Can I ask one final thing? When George was talking about schizophrenia and you said that it can often be treated by a medium, can you give an example of one that couldn't be treated by a medium?

Only inasmuch as how strong that spirit is within the human frame. It is like what you call—now how would you phrase it—'hauntings', where you have so many negative happenings and it is difficult to remove that spirit from those situations. Remember that the medium has the helpers and the light behind them, but so also does the spirit have the darkness and the negative energy behind them, and always it is a battle between light and darkness. Does that help you?

Sarah: Yes it does, thank you.

Richard: Salumet, trying to make connections, I believe the difficulties I'm having, probably, as you told me, are about fear, but there is a great amount of negativity (Yes.) that I'm trying to lift, but I'm having great difficulty in doing so.

It will only come my dear friend with practise and with meditation and in acceptance of your guidance, and in recognition that there is with you a guidance who is here to help and to protect you. It will come, but you need to be dedicated to that task. I will endeavour to try to help you all that I can.

Now my dear friends I will take my leave and as I have said, I hope that this evening has been a fruitful one in as much as it gives you a little more food for thought. (Thanks expressed)

And as I take my leave from you, we ask that each one of you in your daily lives be given the help and the strength and the love, to continue. (More thanks)

George's notes:

Schizophrenia, as agreed, is a set of conditions, poorly understood, and Salumet's words are enlightening. The spiritual reasons are interesting indeed. When he refers to a previous mention of 'opportunistic spirit at time of conception', that was in relation to 'transgender' on 4th November 2002, which generally arises from that cause. It is very useful to know that some conditions may be exorcised through mediumship, and some 'surprising abilities' relate to spiritual all-knowledge. (And proof that spiritual mind is separate from inferior intellect?) And suppression of personality by administered drugs is not a cure.

~6th March 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

It is good to join with you once again my dear friends. This evening I do not intend to speak to you for too long. I will work with this one again as there is much to be gained by silent cooperation. There will be our friend from another world this time and also one other. That being so I will answer any questions fairly quickly this time.

Lilian: Any questions?

Rod: It was to do with the number of spirits within a newborn baby. This is where we had a 'Jekyll and Hyde' question last week and we were discussing: are there two spirits within that baby or within that person in later life?

You are speaking of the medical condition that we spoke of last time, yes? (Schizophrenia)

Lilian: Yes.

Yes. You cannot have two people, as you say, in one body, but what happens is you can have the infiltration of many minds within one body. There is a difference and if you remember: mind is spirit and is capable of much influence in the physical presence that you human beings are. Therefore I hope this clarifies it for you just a little.

Rod: Thank you very much, that does, yes.

I apologize if I made any confusion last time, but as you know, always it is difficult to put into physical words, happenings that are non-material. This is always a problem for our world, but I hope it is clear for you now.

Rod: That does clear it yes, thank you.

George: That was certainly a very interesting session that we had on that subject last time.

I was slightly amused by you all, in recognizing how unusual it was for me to speak to you at the end of these meetings. But I hope also that the information brought to you some little moments of thought.

George: Yes—now that the transcripts are circulated, I'm sure that will be of interest to many people—to many readers.

If ever my words confuse you, please do ask at the time of my speaking and it will save you unnecessary thinking energy.

George: Yes—thank you. I was watching a recently made film on the last days of Adolf Hitler and information was taken from a personal secretary who survived the war and still lives. Something came up which intrigued me: he apparently regarded 'compassion' as a weakness to be trodden under foot, and I felt this perhaps is the key to his wrong thinking, which in some measure explains what we consider to have been atrocities. I know that we have our physical emotions, which we need to control, but he seems to possibly have confused compassion with controlling physical emotion. Would you care to say something further on the subject of compassion? And of course this has to flow from spirit and I cannot really see how he could have had so much confusion about that subject of compassion.

I understand your question my dear friend. Firstly let me say, this is again a very good example of why you cannot judge your fellow human man, because you do not have the full picture at any time. The gentleman in question was indeed a confused human being. He was not of sound mind much of the time at the end of his earthly life. But what I say to you is this: of course, compassion belongs to spirit—to the mind, but you also know that the physical being is activated by the mind and the mind is controlled by the physical action. There always is interaction between the two. Therefore, when there is some kind of discontent within the human being, whether there be fear, whether there be confusion, of course this has to have some effect upon the whole structure of being. The physical and the spiritual are intertwined, but whilst you remain upon this Earth, oft times is the physical reasoning the more powerful, which then creates all of these situations.

George: So the physical intellect could control the input from spirit and could shut out the spiritual mind in effect.

Of course. Remember I have told you, there are so many in your world, who are spiritually inadequate, and this is the reason why—they do not allow those spiritual attributes to shine forth. Remember always the balance of light and darkness. Does that help you in your understanding?

George: It does indeed. It shows well the balance between the physical and the spiritual and how the spiritual mind can be dimmed by our physical control. Yes, thank you, that does help.

Yes, perhaps a better word than 'control' would be 'influence'—rather than control. But always there has to be interaction between the two. It explains, does it not my dear friends, why so many in your world create what you have termed 'atrocities'. It is a lack of light within their spirit, whilst, and only whilst, they inhabit these bodies.

George: It makes what we call 'atrocities' the more understandable. (Yes.)

Graham: So it wouldn't really be their fault then, if they were to find themselves in the situation, where the spiritual influence is being pushed away and their physical mind is coming to the fore; if they're not aware of the fact that this is happening. Is that situation really their fault? Are they blameless?

I do not like to use the word 'fault'. They of course must be responsible whilst in these physical garbs for every deed and action that they take against their fellow man, and they will become aware of these things when they return home to us. But what would be much better is if they could begin—and I will use a saying within your own world that is used frequently: if only they could 'see the light'. If only they would allow their true selves to step forward, then all the negativity and hatred and fear within them would dissolve. But no, you can never call them blameless, but that is not a judgement. You understand?

Graham: Yes. And presumably they live such a life and for learning not only for themselves, but for others around them.

Remember that like attracts like and in so doing it makes a greater picture of all that is dark. I am sure you are aware in your own world of many who are like this.

George: Yes, and with Adolf Hitler, it was quite amazing the way those close to him seemed to be swept along by his—I could call it ‘wayward philosophy’.

Yes, of course. I hope that has helped you and for this time my dear friends I will take my leave and work quietly with this one, and I would say to our dear lady friend that her assistance in helping the instrument this time to return would be most helpful.

Lilian: Yes, I will. Thank you once again.

I leave you all again in my love and light. (Thanks expressed)

Bonniol followed as indicated by Salumet—all Bonniol transcripts are freely available from website:

<http://www.salumetandfriends.org/5.html> This particular Planet Aerah session has also been included here, as Salumet enters the discussion later on with our friend from a planet so far away:

Lilian: Hello.

Hello.

Lilian: How was your journey tonight?

It was better, thank you. I had a very easy entry.

Graham: Is that because conditions have returned to what they were, or have you managed to adjust?

I believe conditions have returned, and we are also improving our links all the time.

George: That’s very good to hear.

Hopefully, if things can improve, then we can move forward.

Lilian: Yes, we look forward to that. Have you a full house tonight?

Yes, there are the usual numbers gathered. We look forward to it each time.

Lilian: I’m sure you do.

It’s always a beautiful experience for us...

Lilian: And for us!

...meeting with other aspects of creation.

Lilian: And you are much more used to it than we are.

(Pause) It is something you never really get used to.

George: Yes—a good thought. I’m not sure how many of us have been attempting to project things to you. I have been attempting myself, and I must apologise, because some things seem more difficult than others. I chose an object which I felt was reasonably simple, but I found it very difficult to hold a good image in my mind. So if you didn’t receive anything from me, I quite understand, because my image was so fleeting. Sorry about that.

But it is a sign of progress, when you are aware of your image quality and you have an idea of the quality that you would like. So that is a good sign, and you will reach a much better quality, if you continue to practise.

George: Yes—thank you.

Lilian: You didn’t by any chance pick up one of our small animals—a frog? I remember one was mentioned in the early days...

I’m still waiting for a really clear mind projection from any of you. I am picking up blurred images. But I’m still waiting for that crystal clear unmistakable...

Lilian: I picked one up the other day to rescue it from one of our roads and I thought: that’s a good idea, I’ll send Bonniol a little frog.

Yes, I understand, the frog would be something you will...

Lilian: Something you would recognise...

...yes. It is not the easiest of things to project when you are starting off, but if you feel you can create that image mentally, with enough clarity that it is as if it was in front of you, then it will be possible.

Rod: Last week, Bonniol, I stood an orange watering can on our bin and I spoke to you and I'm sure you were with me—at least on thought—and I looked at this—I don't know if you know what a watering can is—for watering plants...

Yes, we also use them. I will continue to watch for these images, and I am sure they will become clearer to me as you send them each time. But at the moment they are still shadows of the things they represent. If I was of your world, it would be possible to read the shadows, but it is very hard to read them when these are all new to us, but it is very good practice for you all.

Lilian: Yes it's a good practice for us I must say—yes.

And it is nice that you are doing it during your day, at various opportunities.

George: Yes, and you're happy for us to continue to attempt to send to you?

I am always very happy to be given these thoughts and to monitor them for you.

George: Right. Thank you.

Sarah: It seems to be a very good connection we've got this time Bonniol. Do you feel it's a better one than before?

Yes, I have had a little bit of quiet time with this one (Paul) and I think it has helped this time improving the link. We are improving each time and it should become more 'varied', if I could use that word—the communications may become more interesting as we get the sort of link we are hoping for. It is always hard to talk about more unusual things at the beginning. We have had to be patient and discuss things that we are familiar with. Hopefully we will be able to broaden our communications.

George: Well, so far we've had a wonderful mixture of science and philosophy, music and poetry and an incredible mixture—and a little bit about living things and industry, which has all been quite fascinating.

Yes, these are all topics, which are familiar to you. We also have much that will not be familiar, and we hope to share a little of that.

Graham: That would be interesting.

George: Yes. I was doing a little overview recently and the picture that is emerging, is that spirit/mind of God—however one wishes to define it—extends throughout the universe, and is an influence obviously, throughout the entire universe, so that both our planets are subject to the influence of this mind/spirit which extends throughout. So it's not surprising really that there are so many similarities within both our cultures. There are the joys of understanding music, literature and theatre—so many things of the mind, of the spirit. It seems so natural that we have these similarities.

Sarah: I think that's partly because Bonniol and his people on his planet are similar to us, but if you think about the planet with the 'mushrooms' on it, they would I expect be quite different. (Yes.)

George: Well, I wonder if their philosophy would be different—the things that connect to spirit.

Lilian: Yes, I see what you mean George.

George: Do you have any thought on that Bonniol?

Yes, the (Pause) the word eludes me for the moment, but the ways that spirit defines itself in the various worlds of matter—there is always a—there is always the truth which comes to the surface, in all worlds. But the patterns, if you like, are incredibly varied. The final—it's the various ways of getting to that truth, that defies the imagination.

George: Yes—I think evolution comes into it. We evolve in our different directions or with emphasis on different things as we evolve. So perhaps, where we have differences, it arises out of that way in which we evolve.

Yes, the evolving is your pathway—the roads that you take to your final destination.

George: In recent years, we've evolved in the direction of materialism, whereas you have evolved on your planet much more in the direction of nature, recognition of nature spirits and...

When you become aware of them, it becomes natural to work with them.

Sarah: Has your planet gone through a period where it was materialistic?

It was once very materialistic in a slightly different way, of course, to the way yours has grown. Each person is different and each planet is equally different in the way it displays its material nature. It would seem strange probably, to talk about how we displayed our material natures. But when you look at your past civilisations, they also displayed it in different ways to today, did they not? (Affirmed)

George: Yes. Just looking back 100 years, we I feel were closer to nature and farming economy then, because one small farm might have had ten people working on it, whereas today that same small farm would only have one person working on it and organizing a lot of machinery to actually do the work. So, in that sense we've moved away from agriculture and nature.

Yes, machines in some ways have cut you off from the land experience.

Sarah: And also in the cooking, whereas before you used to use your hands a lot more to make things, now that also has been taken over by machines. So there's very little contact with the raw materials, or the raw produce, which again takes you away from...

George: Yes, we are not preparing the food with love in quite the same way...

At this moment Lilian noticed Eileen's hand movement and had awareness that Salumet wanted to speak—I think we had all forgotten that Salumet was still quietly with Eileen:

Lilian: Can I just see if Salumet wishes to say anything?

Thank you. I apologize for this intrusion.

Lilian: We're pleased to have you.

I wish to say just one thing—and Bonniol does not have the knowledge which can tell you about the connection between all planets and spirit. There is a simple explanation, and I will put it to you thus: the unifying bond between spirit and all matter, no matter what that form of matter takes, is LOVE and PERFECTION. That is what every planet strives for, and that is the unifying bond.

Lilian: Yes—it's simple when you say it.

Bonniol was struggling to define that question, so I do apologize to him, but I felt it was a point to be clarified.

George: Wonderful! (Thanks expressed)

I will now leave you once more.

George: Could I just suggest that that bond, then leads to or is responsible for there being so many similarities between cultures on different planets?

The love consciousness is what connects you—no matter what; whether you be human form, vegetable form, or whatever. And it shows in the vegetable form as perfection in the way that it tries to grow and demonstrate itself. You understand?

Lilian: Yes.

George: Thank you so much for that.

But every planet is striving towards the same goal.

George: Yes—wonderful!

Thank you! That clarifies it for me too.

Lilian: Yes! It's so simple.

George: We mentioned the idea some time ago, that it would be nice if you would sit in with us when Salumet is here and now we've experienced it!

It makes for a very interesting evening.

George: Wonderful. So, where do we go from here? Are there any questions you'd like to ask us, or would you like us to ask you questions?

I would like to be a little more frank, about some of our peoples. I think you have an idea that our world is perfect in many ways. And I have told you that we have different problems—of over-population and some disagreements over how we work with the elementals, for example.

George: Yes, you mentioned this.

We do not have wars or fighting, but we do have unrest from time to time, and this may surprise you, but we have had assassination—is that the word. (Affirmed) So there are political groups struggling for their points of view to be made.

George: We understand. We've had occasional assassinations ourselves.

It's not common, but we have had it. And so, it is something that cannot be dismissed.

George: But nevertheless, people have the collective good sense not to go to war over disputes or over annoyances...

There is enough love from the majority of us to not allow war.

George: So again, 'love' is the key to that matter.

But there are those who are prepared to take life, if they feel it helps their cause.

Rod: Do you have armies fighting people, to protect one against the other?

We have something, which has evolved from your 'armies', but it no longer functions like that. They are like a group who rescue people—deal with natural disasters—are available for many different activities, depending on what is needed at the time.

Rod: Almost like a United Nations here I should think...

Yes. They understand medical as well as natural disasters. They can—they understand how to fight, but it is not a main part of their training.

Sarah: What would happen to the assassin if they catch him?

If this person is caught, they would be placed in confinement for a time.

Sarah: Do you have special prisons like we do? Do you need them?

We have something like a prison in the sense that it separates them from the world, but it is not meant as a punishing place.

George: And are they left to their own thinking, or would they be subject to what might be considered to be helpful learning for them?

They will have many who will try to help them. They are not so many to deal with—it is less common in our world. But they are always those who, for some reason, are unhappy with the way things are, and are prepared to act without regard for another. So they need to be watched over carefully and if possible, finding out why they have chosen that pathway—and if they can be encouraged out of it in this lifetime, as opposed to waiting for the disappointment when they move on.

Sarah: Salumet has told us that you should never take a life, so all of you must be aware of that as well...

It is something that we would hope everyone is aware of, but when you have mass populations, it seems there are always some individuals who choose another course other than the one we recommend.

Sarah: Sometimes they say when places get too crowded you get this kind of thing. Maybe it's partly due to the overcrowding on your planet, do you think?

There are many possible reasons. That is one that has been voiced at certain times with certain people.

Rod: Reading between the lines, you seem to know how many people we've got in prison here...

I have looked through the memories of this one and I do not know the numbers but...

Graham: It's about one in 800 in this country—I've just done the calculation, about one in 800 in England at the moment.

I am aware of your problem with prisons and the scale of it. It would seem to be a problem, which has not been tackled very imaginatively, can I say?

George: Yes, I agree.

Graham: I think they're trying to find alternative methods to punishing other than going to prison—allowing people to reform outside prison, giving them the opportunity to do so, which is perhaps a step in the right direction.

George: Yes, we're trying. We've still got quite a long way to go. Would you like a break? Would you like a piece of music at this stage?

That sounds a good idea—yes, thank you.

George: I think we mentioned the theatre before. We have 'musical' shows, and these are often centered on a story; it can be any sort of story. Occasionally it's taken out of politics and there was one musical in fairly recent times called 'Evita', and it concerned the government of Argentina, one of our countries. Juan Perón was its president, and his wife Evita was First Lady, and assisted with running the country. She was in charge of social welfare, and she was much loved by the people. She departed this life before her husband and 'Don't cry for me Argentina', was her song: ♪ ♪ ♪ ♪. (The song was played for Bonniol)

It's a little easier now, to listen with these ears ... and that one was able to sound the words a little more easily than in some of the songs.

George: Yes, sometimes our musical shows are little bits of political history like that, but any subject can be taken. But that is quite a heart-warming little song, and it has been very, very popular.

Sarah: When you say it's easier for you to listen to, is it also easier for you to relay back to your 'audience', can I put it that way?

Yes. It's not that I relay exactly. They experience it with me--we share the experience.

Sarah: And they enjoyed it as well?

I'm sure they enjoyed it too, yes.

George: So is it as if they were here with us?

It is for them, as it is for me—yes. They would be listening with me to your words. I speak for myself but when you speak, they are able to listen. We all listen together. So it makes it even more a meeting of worlds.

George: Could I ask, have you all listened to a Master who visits another planet—have they experienced what was experienced tonight before in your planetary travels? Or is this a first?

It is a first for me. I would imagine it has been done before, but it is a first for me, and something very special. I have listened to your Master before, but to have him come into the discussion is something I will cherish.

George: We are delighted that this has happened and we shall equally cherish this evening for that reason. But I hope that we will have even better communications now that we have improved our link.

George: Wonderful.

And I'm sure we will. But for this evening perhaps I have spoken enough.

Sarah: And we have a saying: practise makes perfect, so we'll keep practising then.

George: It's been a very good evening...

I look forward to receiving more from you.

Graham: We'll do our best.

Would you like me to send to you as well?

Sarah: That would be very good, yes. (Affirmed)

I will be sending you something.

Sarah: Are you going to send the same thing to all of us?

I think that would be easiest for now, yes.

(Thanks + farewells)

George's notes:

This was a very special evening. It was at the start of our meeting of 25th April 05 that we suggested Bonniol might like to deliberately come early and be in session with Salumet, on a future occasion. On 18th July 05, we checked with Salumet that this would be acceptable. Now it has transpired!

Armies: Our Earthly evolution has recently seen a condensation of regiments and some military reductions. There have been peace and non-nuclear proclamations. These are first steps. We have sometimes discussed amongst ourselves what next? Perhaps a single United Nations World Task Force—more of a disaster rescue unit. Such a unit would perhaps preserve and make better use of existing skills—transportation, engineering, medical, policing etc. worldwide. Perhaps on TV it has already happened in some measure—Thunderbirds Are Go!

~3rd April 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am pleased to join with you once more.

Lilian: We are very pleased too.

(Everyone echoed these sentiments)

George: Yes, welcome. I think an apology is in order, because I gather the music we played last time was disturbing (Music was played for Bonniol whilst Salumet was working silently with Eileen)—we heard that from another, so apologies for that.

Do not concern yourself my dear friend. It has been noted and I have to say it did not cause too much disturbance to this instrument.

George: I'm pleased to hear that. Also I'd like to say how pleased everyone was that you joined in the discussion with Bonniol, and he too was delighted. (Yes.) Thank you for that.

He was faltering a little and I did feel at that time that interruption was perhaps necessary.

George: He used the word 'cherished'. We all cherish that occasion when we were all together. Thank you. Yes, it only goes to show, does it not, how much connection and communication is possible between all, when it is needed.

Paul: We're so lucky to have that here.

Lilian: Very!

There is no point in always having philosophical views if you cannot then expand the consciousness—it would be a fruitless task I feel. And you should, my dear friends, thank yourselves, because without you and without the dedication that each one of you shows, you cannot move forward. I offer only encouragement to you.

George: Thank you again. (Affirmed)

I feel this time that some upliftment is needed for some of you and therefore that will be forthcoming before you leave the room this time. I know that when this is given in times past, you are aware of the difference in the atmosphere before you leave. (Agreed) Therefore this time you will feel a great upliftment. (Thanks expressed) Now, although it is good to join with you once more, because the instrument has some physical problems with her throat, I will not indulge her too much in the matter of the speaking voice, therefore my dear friends, for this time if you have questions, I will take them and try to satisfy you with an answer.

Sarah: I'm sure I know the answer but I will just ask anyway. When people are ready to pass over back to spirit and they're not in a very good physical frame of mind, they don't know the people who are perhaps coming to visit them, it's still important to visit them because the spirit would recognize the other spirit as well.

Of course—of course! When the time comes to discard the physical overcoat, whether they can speak or communicate matters not, it means only that the spirit is closer to home. Therefore their awareness is heightened of all things that are happening and they would of course recognize who, on this side of life, is speaking to them. In fact I would say to you, they would probably be more aware than when they would be more physically aware. Does that answer your question?

Sarah: Yes, thank you very much.

George: Could I mention two synchronicities that I've come across? The singer, Gracie Fields, was on the deck of The Queen Mary, on one occasion, with her music director, when he dropped his spectacles over the side of the boat. He couldn't see to work without them. Later they went down to the ship's shop to see if they might have something that would help. On the way they passed a notice that referred to a pair of spectacles that had been found. They were rather surprised but went along to enquire, and they were indeed the music director's spectacles that had been found. It seems that, at the time when he dropped them, someone in a cabin below put his hand out of the porthole to see if it was raining and they dropped into it. So that is rather a nice synchronicity and the music director was able to continue his work.

(Chuckles)

I am pleased to hear the laughter from you, but all too often do these, what you call 'synchronicities', these happenings should not surprise you, because have you not learned by now that you are watched over, safeguarded so often throughout your physical lives, (Agreed) and this is a case in hand of probably his own angel taking care of him for some particular good reason.

George: Yes, that feels right.

But you see, these stories are sent for people to stop and to think.

George: The second one I was going to mention was quite different. It was about a ship that sank in the Menai Straights and of about 70 people, there was just one single survivor. His name was Hugh Williams. That was in the 17th century. During the 18th century, there was a similar happening: there was just one survivor from a ship that sank and the name was also Hugh Williams. And during the 19th century, exactly the same thing happened again with one survivor—Hugh Williams! So that one is rather strange and I haven't been able to think of a reason, but you've just given me one actually. (Yes.) I was going to ask you if you could tell us more of the nature of synchronicity.

It is meant to make you think. That's why, all of what you call mystical happenings, occur. It is not to make you go 'Awe!' like so many do, but it is for the spirit to come forward and to analyse all of these happenings, to be reminded in one sense of what they can accomplish whilst clothed here in these bodies upon this planet.

Paul: That's an excellent demonstration that the universe is not governed by chance events.

That is true, but be careful that you do not always assume that any happening is from our world; there are sometimes within your world, happenings which are created by the physical side, by the human nature. So do not always say: this is a mystical happening—be aware that there has to be some balance. Do you understand my words? (Affirmed)

George: I have a picture that the true synchronicity might be seen as the interaction between the two universes, (Yes—always.) and this would be a guided interaction.

Yes, of course. Anything in your world, such as you mention, always has a purpose. It may not be obvious to you at the time, but in hindsight, most people see the common denominator and all becomes clear.

George: And it might be simply to start us thinking...

Most definitely—as do all events, which happen in your world; from the time you are born till the time you are reborn—all events within your life are usually there for some good purpose, for some reason and that is why, and I will take your example of one survivor of many, that I may add that that one survivor had a continuing purpose throughout his life and therefore he would have been saved for that purpose. I hope that is clear to you.

George: Yes. Thank you very much.

Lilian: Can you take any more questions? (Yes.)

Sara: I do have one question. I know that you've talked about the question of lying before Salumet and we've said that lying is not a good idea. A friend has a dilemma at the moment in that her employer has prevented her from moving on by giving a very bad reference. She feels there's justification for lying in this situation. I've encouraged her to have faith that the universe will support her to move on if she tells the truth. (Yes.) I just wondered about your comments, because she wants to progress.

Yes. Of course, that is a human failing, that in some way you humans feel that some wrong-doing as you see it, must have some form of retaliation to put matters right. I would say to your dear friend: that must never be so.

Sara: Yes, I feel that too.

You must encourage this one to do what she knows—what is right from the heart, and that is always to be truthful and to be true to herself.

Sara: And in some way when these things happen, I think we have to take some responsibility, even though we can't always see (Yes.) every reason why it has happened physically. There is usually a reason.

It is for this purpose again that she is faced with this dilemma. She has to make a choice. She has to recognize that the action has created within herself this dilemma, and the dilemma is created by her self, not by the person who has written or said the words. Do you understand?

Sara: Yes. I have been telling her that thought is energy—I did tell her this a long time ago, and I know that the thoughts towards this person have not always been what they could have been.

Yes, she must learn to transmute all of this energy.

Sara: I think also, potentially it's a big turning point away from old ways of thinking that don't serve any more.

Yes, it has served a purpose for this very thing.

Sara: It has been a big shock.

But all of life is a shock if you like to use that term.

Sara: Yes, lots of learning.

Lots of learning, lots of learning.

Sara: Continuous learning.

Continuous, yes. But you cannot move forward unless you learn all of these things.

Sara: And to look inwards.

And to look deeply within oneself, of course—yes, the answer lies with her and all that you can do is to support and encourage.

Sara: And ask for help for her.

Yes, you can do that also, and hopefully she will recognize within herself the strength to disregard these negative thoughts and to allow the spirit within to come forward.

Sara: I feel there is a lot of hope here, because she has generated a lot of support from people, because she does have a lot of the time a loving personality and I feel that she can be affectionate and giving.

But if she were to exude her own generous thinking and spirit, then she would not need backup, she would be the one to give off this aura of truth and honesty. And it is like a mirror effect and it can only be beneficial to her and to all who surround her.

Sara: Yes. Thank you. I know this will be very helpful, because if she can actually read this and see it, I feel it will make some impact.

Yes. Sometimes that is all that is needed, because you human beings tend to withdraw inwards and do not see the wider picture as I am always saying to each one of you: you always must look to the wider picture.

Sara: Yes, thank you. That's very helpful.

I will take one more question only this time.

Paul: I've got a question. I was reading a book and it talked of different star constellations and certain animals from this planet coming from these stars—the Pleiades was one, and I'd also read in other books, I think there's an idea from certain people that humans as well came from certain stars like the Pleiades. This doesn't make any sense to me, because—well our physical overcoats must be of the Earth anyway and our spirits would come from the pure energy that cannot be from anywhere, (Yes.) from any space as such. So I wonder if they're talking more along an astrological influence of these star systems?

That is what it sounds like, yes. Of course you are correct: Spirit has always been. You are all divine parts of all creation. So that cannot change. What changes is where spirit decides to take on physical form in whatever manner it chooses. So, human form was decided for this planet alone, in the form that you now behold, of each other. You are physical human beings that belong to this earthly planet, and as you now know, there are many, many planets with different life forms, but which are activated by spirit. Therefore there are many I am sure who have many theories about what happens within all of creation, but I have to tell you my dear friends, many of these come from vivid imagination.

Paul: Yes, that was my impression. I wondered if there was any significance to this Pleiades constellation, because it seems to occur in many books, but maybe they're just repeating words that started off in someone else's imagination.

Let us take the word. Where do words begin? How do you come by words that you know? Can I place the question out to you all?

Paul: We learn from our parents and from people around us.

And from books and from the words of others—but what you have to do my dear friends is to digest all of these words and then from within you must understand and accept what you feel to be true. There are of course many constellations within many universes and here we are going further than I would intend for you. Mind projection has been brought to you from another planet—a far distant planet, but let me say, there is far too much spoken of other universes which really most human beings could not know. So I would say, be careful of what you accept, but also to understand that there are galaxies within this system, which eventually will come to be known, but not at this time.

Paul: Yes, it sort of comes under the term of 'New Age' information, which—some of it's okay, some of it's a bit faulty and that's why we are so lucky to have this...

You must always be discerning in your attitude to information. As I said when first I came to you, I bring to you the truth, as I am aware of it. I am by no means perfection, but what I wish you to do is to listen and to dissect, and what you do not wish to understand or to accept, then you must disregard. And I would suggest to you my dear friends that that applies to all reading matter.

George: Could I ask for clarification on the multiplicity of universes? Would I be right in thinking of different universes as coincident, but each based on different vibration?

All is vibration my dear friends, all universes are 'conjoined'. Does that simplify it for you?

George: Conjoined—yes. Thank you! That was beginning to dawn in my mind. Yes, that feels comfortable.

We will expand as time goes on, but I feel my dear friends that it is better for you—and I use one of your earthly expressions—that you keep your feet firmly upon the ground. There is all of time to expand your consciousness. I hope you would agree with me... (Agreed)

Paul: We have all the time in the world...

Now my dear friends I hope I have been helpful to you. (Affirmed + thanks)

Therefore I will take my leave of you, but know as always you are within the scope of my love and the blessings that come to you from our world. (Thanks + farewells)

George's notes:

Many universes: 'Conjoined' is an interesting choice of word, subtly different from 'coincident'. To coincide means to occupy the same portion of space—but spirit has no space dimensions, so that the word is not quite right. To conjoin however, means to join or to combine. Space does not enter into the word definition. Therefore 'conjoined' is much the better word.

Menai Straits synchronicity: The days also agreed: 5th December 1664, 5th December 1785, 5th December 1860. On each occasion there was just the one survivor named Hugh Williams.

~17th April 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you once more my dear friends.

Lilian: We're very pleased to have you. (Affirmed)

There is much I wish to tell you in the weeks ahead, but it would be appropriate for more to be here with us. So therefore for this time only, I will speak to you thus: I have to tell you my dear friends, how happy we are, the way you have become such good ambassadors for spirit and this applies to all of you. In your own individual ways, you have created a great wave of knowledge, which has touched the hearts of many. So firstly I repeat our great thanks and love to you.

George: It's very nice to hear that. I think we all feel that this year will be a very good year and so much is now coming to fruition, in terms of the written word, in terms of the computer discs that Paul has been working on and we feel there's so much being placed on discs and in the written word and we should this year, be able to take a huge step forward in presenting this material.

Yes. Not all of your earthly creations are bad. In fact you are finding some good in your technology.

(Agreed) Yes, and your world as a whole has much more awareness of what surrounds you on this beautiful planet, because there is so much that man can take advantage of. And as I have told you previously, there is much to find within the waters of your world.

Sarah: We look forward to finding out a bit more about that.

Yes, but as always, again we must be patient and all good things will come.

George: And I think in relation to the water that includes our ongoing energy resource, which I think you said something about, as energy, will eventually come more from the sea.

Yes, it has to be so, but as always with human kind, you have to somehow believe that the knowledge comes from yourselves. (Amused chuckles) Although as you well know my dear friends, much is inspired not only from our world, but from people such as yourselves, who are devoted to the truth.

George: Yes, the idea that it comes from ourselves, seems almost like a cosmic joke now.

Yes, I understand, yes.

George: We have become so much more aware of the sources of knowledge and inspiration that particularly comes to us from spirit. (Yes.) This is much appreciated.

Sarah: You were thanking us Salumet for passing on the word, but I can only say that it's your inspiration and those in spirit, that has inspired us to want to pass it on. It seems the natural thing to do now.

Thank you for those words my dear friend. That of course is our purpose, to gather together those of you who are willing to listen to truth and who are willing to stand up for truth and also who are willing to spread their truth. On many, many occasions, in this planet alone, have we tried to inspire amongst humankind, elements of truth, which somehow have been corrupted and changed. But I am sure not only from what I say, but from your own recognition of humankind, that you also can see a quickening and an awareness throughout your world. It is there for all to see, but our object is to try to spread the truth even further at this time in your evolution—and much is being done.

George: Yes and perhaps we should not overlook the development with Bonniol, which in itself I feel, is a further help to us in spreading the truth (Yes.) and presenting a particular slant of interest to people. It's so nice that we are being able to compare our own progress as physical beings on a physical planet, with another group of physical beings on another planet. (Yes.) It seems somehow to reinforce everything, in making those comparisons.

Yes, you have very aptly, led me into the introduction of my next words, which were to say, why as a group, you have been introduced to such knowledge. Because my dear friends, you have been ready to receive, you have been ready to accept, and you are now ready to give forth that knowledge also. And I am sure in some way, you will find disbelief, but it matters not, because as I have told you on many occasions, if only the seed is sown, then you have achieved what you are meant to do and we cannot ask more of you dear people.

Sarah: Are there many other groups having visits from other planets?

There are many groups throughout your world, who have contact with other beings, who can speak as you do, with a certainty and a knowledge. The way I have introduced you, is slightly different, in as much that your visitor comes through another, whereas with lots of groups, it is through trance work, but this is a conscious effort within this group.

Sarah: What was the word you used...a trance group?

Paul: Trance 'state'...

Yes, they receive information in that way. But of course we had been speaking much of 'mind projection'. So, as it is not easy for each here to project mind easily, we felt it was a very good exercise to combine both things. But to answer your question, 'yes' many people would clarify knowledge of other life.

Sarah: Yes, that's good.

George: It's interesting too that it comes to us by this other method of communication, (Yes.) which apart from anything else, helps us to understand the nature of mind, which by and large on this planet, is rather poorly understood.

And still it is. (Yes.) Yes, you will never fully understand the workings of the mind, because after all, mind is spirit, therefore there must be limitations in your understanding.

Sarah: So only when we return to spirit will we fully understand it?

Fully understand, but of course as we continue forward in our knowledge, your understanding will become a little greater, of course it will. But to fully understand the mind, you must belong in spirit. And even then, I would have to say, it would take some considerable time for the understanding, because you see, it is a natural part of your spirit to use the mind, without fully understanding the mechanics of it.

George: Yes, at least we are becoming more and more aware, that 'mind' is so much exterior to the physical brain.

Oh, of course, it is I would say, almost separate. There is a union of course, but the mind exists on its own merits—it does not need a physical body to function.

George: I know that in the past many have credited the physical brain with far too much.

Yes of course, but it is their lack of knowledge, which brings forth these kinds of words. They do not understand, they only see a physical being and nothing, nothing else; so of course their thinking is dulled. Now my dear friends, I have one more thing for you this time and I would like you to look deeply within yourselves, because I bring to you a question, a question which I would like you to think about and to answer. And the question my dear friends is this: What with all the knowledge that you now have, and with the truths which I have brought to you, what do you now feel is the purpose of your earthly life this time—past, present and time to come? (Pause) And again I feel your silence.

Paul: I'm thinking, to sort of put the record straight, on the spiritual meaning of life. To set the right—what others have done in the past that's been forgotten or changed—we can put it in such a way now, with the technology we've got, such that the truth stays and can grow and reach all those people that perhaps missed it, or didn't receive it properly.

I understand your words and of course that is the purpose that you recognise for time to come. What do you feel has been your purpose in a more human and personal sense?

George: Life is a journey and it's a journey towards greater perfection of spirit, which seems to be learnt through these physical bodies.

Of course, but do you recognise your purpose this time?

Sarah: My immediate thought was your little story about the diamond and trying to make ourselves better and I was just feeling a need to be less selfish, and so become a selfless person—that 'you' perhaps don't count so much, that you can just give rather than take. I think when I first came onto this Earth it was a 'take' and now it seems to be changing to a 'give'.

Yes, now you are beginning to understand my question. Of course each one of you has the knowledge now to give of the truth and to allow others to partake of your truth. But as individual human beings, you came here with a purpose and this was part of your purpose, but there also was a human learning as well, to enrich and to enlarge your spirit. That is what I speak of and yes my dear friend, I would put one question to you: Where does that feeling come from?

Sarah: It must come from within. It's just something I feel now...

It is something you know.

Sarah: Ah right.

Yes. It is a knowledge that brings itself to the fore. And now that your understanding has grown, you see yourself in a much different light. Yes, that was a very good answer and as always I do not promise life to be easy, but it will be a life enriched with knowledge for each and every one of you.

Sarah: Thank you.

George: As a child, as a young person, I seemed to feel that the horizons one looked to were so much closer then. The horizons today are so much more distant and that expanse to the horizon embraces so much more knowledge and awareness.

Yes, I may say to you my dear friend, that even as a child, you exuded a knowledge, which captivated others and that has been one of your life's purposes.

George: Well thank you, yes there were moments, (Yes.) I was not a paragon of virtue all the time.

(Chuckle)

I did not say that you were, but the purpose that brought you here, you have endeavoured to carry out, in the best way you know how. And these purposes in life, have lead each one of you to come together at this time, for the purpose that we have spoken of. But I would like you to ponder in your meditation state, what that human element, what that purpose has been. Whether you have achieved it, or are yet to achieve it, the recognition will be instantaneous for you. As the lady has said, it is a 'knowing', not a wondering, not anything else, but a true inner knowledge.

Lilian: Well I remember you saying to me, that I was learning tolerance. (Yes.) I remember mentioning my mother at a time when we were both finding life difficult and yes I can see that hopefully I've become a much more tolerant person.

You have my dear friend, but you still have a way to go.

Lilian: Oh! (Chuckles) (Yes.) Yes I can see that too.

Sarah: Talking of mothers, my mother always used to go to church right up to not so long ago—2 or 3 years ago, and now you said when you get dementia, you start getting nearer to spirit, but now she's saying, she doesn't think there is a god at all. So from all her life believing there was one, she's now deciding there isn't one. I don't know if that's because she's not thinking...

Yes, she is becoming not well in the human form, which creates the human thinking. But spiritually she will be moving towards that all-knowing. Whether she is aware of it or not, I can tell you that she will be moving closer to going home, (Said with great gentleness) to the joy of returning home. But she still has to endure the physical life, with all of its problems and all of its disturbances. You cannot change that for her.

Sarah: She's looking forward to leaving this physical life, I know that much. I hope she's looking forward to another life unknowingly, because as I say at the moment, she's thinking there isn't one.

No matter what you think physically, you can never deny your spirit, because that is your existence, that is the part of you that continues, that is the part of you that is reborn. You cannot change, so do not be too concerned.

Sarah: But what about these spirits that don't know they've died and they're not moving on? Can you just again tell me, why then, if their spirit is all-knowing, why when they've passed over, they don't get the all-knowing? Is it something to do with when they left they were determined they weren't going to...

Because my dear friend, they still retain their free will. (Oh yes.) You remember my words now? (Yes.)

They still retain free will and if their beliefs have 'forgotten', to put it in a casual way, if they have forgotten that they are truly spirit, then they stay close to this Earth vibration and that free will, that free thought holds them back. They hold themselves back, but help is always available to them.

Sarah: They've just got to accept it, (Yes.) when they're ready...

...when they are ready to release earthly feelings and realise their true being. I hope that has helped you.

Sarah: Yes it has, thank you.

George: It might seem a curious question, but if I were to ask you if there are many conglomerates such as yourself, would your answer be that all is connected anyway?

Yes.

George: Yes I thought it might.

Of course, how can we not be connected? It would not make sense?

George: Yes, so we cannot really talk of separate conglomerate beings?

You can speak of separation to a degree in this spirit side of life, but as you progress and you belong to the fuller aspect of life, then you cannot be separate, you are part of the whole. You understand? (Yes.)

Separation comes only when you first enter our world and there are still many of life's lessons to be learned.

George: Yes, I was just seeking a further impression of yourself having...

I have noted your curiosity and at some stage I will try to explain to you, but it is difficult to explain non-human phenomenon as opposed to the physical elements.

George: Yes I think it was partly from having knowledge of 'Seth Two', who also described himself as being part of a conglomerate.

Yes, 'conglomerate' is a word we use mainly for your understanding.

George: Yes, I see that all would be connected anyway.

Yes, but the greater part—there can be no separation as such. (Thank you.)

Sarah: Is this a physical question? Did you have to 'work up' to the position that you are in?

Work up?

Sarah: Yes, you know, did you start lower and have to work up to get to...I think it's a physical question. (Chuckles)

I understand your question my dear friend. I feel the word you are looking for is 'progression,' progression of the spirit. (Yes.) Yes, that is correct. As time—and again we enter the physical word 'time,' as you continue in spirit, when the knowledge has become great enough, then yes, the spirit progresses.

Sarah: And you did too?

No.

Sarah: No...I understand that we do, we progress, but I wondered if you had?

Not in the sense that you understand. Of course, all of existence is progression, that does not stop, that does not stop. Always we are growing, as I too am growing in this situation with yourselves, with this teaching. It is a progression, it is a progression for this aspect of spirit that I am.

Sarah: Why are there these different aspects of spirit, if I could say—you are, to put it in physical wording, a much higher spirit than us and than we will ever be. But why are there those—I understand we need you to teach us, so perhaps that's your purpose.

Lilian: Why do we have higher and lower ones do you mean?

Sarah: Yes, if we are all part of the whole, why are there these different...

Because the whole is not static, it is ever-expanding.

Sarah: So...yes I do understand.

It is like the small child who is learning. Until they reach such time, as they feel they know all there is to know and then suddenly they realise they know very little and they move forward. So is all life—all life is ever-expanding, knowledge is ever-expanding.

Sarah: I understand that, but why did you start off, being a higher knowledge, a higher being?

As a being who has never existed upon this planet, that is what you mean?

Sarah: As you are a spirit, you didn't start off as a meagre, as a lower spirit, if I can put it that way, spirit, and work up or progress to that? (Yes.) You started off your existence as a higher being?

That is your words 'Higher being'—I just AM. I cannot explain it to you in simple words, but there are beings who have always been, not to the extent of the Creative Force, but there is energy which has mutated and changed, as all of creation changes. We are in difficult waters here.

Sarah: Saying that now that makes sense to me actually, what you've just said.

I am pleased, because always this is the problem, to try to put non-physical conditions into physical language—it is not easy.

Sarah: But what you said then, I can understand that.

That helped you? (Yes.)

George: I think Jesus found a similar difficulty (Yes.) and I recall the phrase, 'I am that I am.'

Yes, it is something that I feel as human beings, is too difficult for you to comprehend. But yes, not all energy has trodden this earthly pathway.

Sarah: Yes I understand that, yes.

As do the Angels—they have never trodden this earthly pathway. It is a difficult subject.

Sarah: But that does help a lot. Thank you for that and I'm very glad that you are as you are, because without you, we wouldn't be able to progress—so that's very good!

George: Yes, why should it be an assumption that life begins on a planet (Yes.) and progresses from there? One could say that this is an assumption that is made by a mind that needs to expand more, shall we say?

You—I will say to you once more, as human beings you are at the bottom of the scale. (Agreed) And I do not wish to sound disrespectful to you, because human achievement does much for the spirit. But it does indicate that there is much growth needed.

Sarah: Yes. When I asked you just now about progressing, I knew that you hadn't been physical, I meant it purely in spiritual terms. (Yes.)

George: But surely human beings are one way, one method of progression, but we should never view it as the only way.

Of course not. All of existence is progression—all is expansion.

Sarah: I think we may have gone over this a little bit before, but all our aspects don't necessarily have to have a physical learning curve? (No.) Only this one part, perhaps some parts?

Some parts yes. No, not all aspects need to return to physical overcoats—of course not.

Lilian: So what we call the 'Higher Self' that aspect would be...

Your Higher Self is your spirit.

Paul: And that spirit already is in a sense, is it—quite 'high up'?

That is the all-knowing part of you.

Paul: And that doesn't wear the physical overcoat, does it, that just stays spirit.

Lilian: That's what I was thinking.

You can call it 'Mind,' you can call it an aspect; it is that part of the being that helps to activate all areas of your existence. It is that part of you that is all-knowing and can help you to go forward.

Paul: So if it's all-knowing, does that mean that it's part of the Great Creative Force?

Everything is part of the Creative Force. You cannot say otherwise.

Paul: It's just that when we're involved in the reincarnation cycle, we're perhaps the furthest removed from that purity?

Yes, yes.

Paul: But we're still connected to it.

But it causes confusion, when you try to make a scale of spirit. It confuses your thinking I feel. You must just see yourself as that point, and part of the Creative Force. You must look upon this lifetime, this human lifetime, as part of your growth and not a part of you that is any the less, of spirit.

Lilian: That's a good idea.

You are kind of placing the human form to the very bottom of the ladder, which in a way you are, as far as learning, but not as far as your spirit goes. (Agreed) You have to find the connection at all times.

Sarah: So all spirit is equal, in...

When it is pure spirit.

Sarah: Yes.

George: The material being is just a...

Yes, it is nothing...

George: It is just a method of...

It is a method of growth, yes.

Sarah: So we choose to come here, because simply because that is what we need for our learning?

You have chosen to come, because that is what you feel is best for your spirit.

Sarah: Yes it's not that we've been given this thing it's that we've chosen. (Yes.) So the other beings on other planets that are far more advanced or intelligent, or whatever word you'd like to use...

It is just part of their evolution, within the whole scope of existence.

Sarah: And whilst they're away from their hold in spirit, that's how they are, but once we return to spirit, we are all equal?

You will still have the knowledge there, but as I have said, you retain freewill, which can hold you back in a sense. But you have the knowledge to progress and go forward. I hope that has helped you, I know it is difficult.

George: This evening has been a nice cosy chat and we are very grateful for that.

Sarah: I've found it very interesting, it's helped me a lot.

If it helps to reinforce your thinking, then my dear friends, it can only be good. You are more than what you think you are.

Sarah: It's just a shame the whole planet don't know all this, isn't it? If we could get it to all of them in one go, it would be brilliant.

Paul: Well we're gradually telling them all, passing on the whisper.

George: We're back to the object of our project. (Yes.)

Sarah: We've got to get it to the world leaders—that's what we need to do.

Paul: We'll do that next week... (Chuckles)

George: As I see it, it doesn't really matter which level becomes aware, because even if the leaders don't become aware, they'll be dragged along.

Paul: And also, the very fact that we're understanding it now and thinking along the right lines, our thoughts alone must be sending out waves.

I will use my favourite words before I leave you this time: You have spoken, and to SEND your thoughts, to UNDERSTAND your thoughts and to PASS ON those thoughts, is the most powerful tool that you can possess. There is the power of the word, there is the power of your own one-to-one communication, but you cannot have better than your THOUGHTS, because as you now know, there is no distance involved in thought projection. And that is part of your way of sending your thoughts. You have now taken for granted my dear friends, the healing thoughts, which you send every time you meet. You do not question, you do not analyse how these thoughts reach our world and how these people are helped; but indeed it happens. So, again I will leave you with that word: thought.

We all gave our deep thanks for this particularly enlightening evening.

~1ST May 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As we join together this time we offer thanks for all communications and connections made this time in the name of the Great Creative Force. We give thanks for all that we are. That having been said, let me say to you my dear friends: I intend to speak to you all whether your numbers be few or many next time concerning those beings who have never trodden the earthly pathway and the connection that they have with each planetary force and vibration. We have not spoken about the planetary forces before, so this for you my dear friends, should be new territory of learning. Therefore we will consider that information for next time. Because we are few in number, (5 sitters) I feel it would be appropriate this time to help those from our world who are in need of your help. This is also something which will be connected to my talk to you next time: how you are used, my dear friends, in the use of healing. Much has been spoken about healing, but I do not think I have discussed with you in what way you are used as individuals. Therefore I will leave you this time and allow those who need help to come forward.

Lilian: Yes, we'll do what we can to help them.

Paul: Yes, and we'll look forward to next time.

We will endeavour to try to use as many within this room as possible. There are many who are awaiting your voice and your help. I leave you as ever cloaked and bathed in the love of spirit, knowing my dear friends that you continue forward in your knowledge and your work.

Sarah: Could I just ask before you go Salumet, you said that there are those waiting to come—all those who are going to come this evening, they are aware that they are going to come, they are not just ones who are going to be brought because they think they are ready to come.

There will be a mixture and those from our side will endeavour to bring those most in need. But remember also my dear friend that these dear ones are so confused.

Sarah: If we know that they know they are being brought back that puts a slightly different slant on it. When they don't know they are coming, sometimes it can be quite difficult.

That is the purpose of your good work.

Lilian: I'm sure with help with your side we shall be able to help.

They would not be brought to you unless we thought they could be helped. Of course there are many who still refuse to accept, but their vibration is lighter for just being here with you. So you see, no matter what happens within this room, those we bring to you will receive the help that they need.

Lilian: That's encouraging.

Rod: Presumably this is over a long period—not just tonight but over the coming months, to send our healing to those people.

My dear friend, your thoughts for any other human being is great and it is never forgotten. Not only does it help with your own spiritual growth, but every good and light thought that you send for another is a gift to you. Yes, I would say always send thoughts of help for those in need, because as the others may understand but you may not, unless we are asked for help, we cannot intervene, we cannot interfere in another's life without being asked. So it is most important for those thoughts to be sent.

Rod: Yes—on a daily basis.

That my dear friend is entirely up to you and how you think—but on a daily basis is indeed very good.

Lilian: Well, thank you for coming tonight and we look forward to the next meeting.

Paul: Just a quick one on-thought, on what Rod was saying: is it okay to send general thoughts out to mankind or is it better to be specific to certain people?

Thank you for your question. Of course your thoughts can be more general than for individual people. Have I not told you that any thought is never wasted? And after all, collective thought is powerful and in the same way an individual thought for many is also expansive. We can use your thought for many and utilize it thus.

Paul: Ah—good...I quite like to do the 'many' thoughts as one.

Yes, we know your thoughts shine brightly for all of your planet. (Thank you.)

Now I must take my leave this time and allow those in need of help to step forward. (Thanks + farewells)

Good evening. (Welcomes)

You may remember that last time I said that I would speak to you a little more deeply about what you call 'absent healing' and also the planetary forces which surround you.

Lilian: Yes, we're looking forward to it.

We have begun this time, by asking for help for many in your world, who are in need of some help. You know and understand that your thoughts are powerful, but I wonder if you understand just how this operates from our world. As human beings you think much of space, when in fact in our world, there is no such thing. Therefore as the connection is made to us, those angelic healing beings, already have those people amongst them, in an instant. I want you to dwell upon those words just for a second. As you speak their name, so our angelic healing beings have them in their midst. And because of their knowledge and wisdom, they are able to see for themselves, what problems these dear ones have. The healing angels come to you, in the vibration of colour and light. What you may not know my dear friends, is these healing beings, take from each one of you, a little of the healing colour, which is necessary for healing to take place. And they are the ones who will distribute these rays to those in need. So therefore can you see the workings of healing and how each one of you are responsible for healing to take place? You are connected by your colours of light, not only on this planet, but on many others—it helps with planetary evolution. Do you have any questions at this point?

Lilian: Yes could I ask one please? I remember questioning you about my youngest granddaughter and you said to put it into the hands of the Creator and all would be well. Well I do ask for healing for her, but what would the difference be?

She would be receiving help, but it may not have the outcome that you desire. She will be given the help that is sufficient for her in this incarnation. Do not always assume it will be a physical healing—you are closing your mind to the wider picture.

Lilian: Yes—it's difficult to see when it's a child...

No, no matter whether it be a child or an adult, healing is given to all who ask for it, but healing is on a much deeper level than the physical being. You touch the physical, you touch the emotional and you touch the spiritual. But do not doubt that she does not receive help.

Lilian: Yes, I'm sure—thank you.

I know you wish me to say that her physical life will be free from all things that you consider not to be good, but again my dear friend, you do not judge, you do not know what she has to achieve in this lifetime. It is making her stronger spiritually. I hope that helps you. (Yes.)

George: You mentioned the involvement of a colour; is there any connection to the colour healing that is done on Earth—is that an earthly equivalent of what you've just described in spirit?

Yes, colour healing does take place, but what you must remember, is that the instrument using colour, is giving of their best, although they do not have that wisdom that the healing angels have. Therefore it will be down to those beings, to bring the right proportion of colour for that person. In every room where there lies a healing thought, you have an angelic being of healing. If only you could but see with the inner eye, you would see a shining being of light in every room; and many of them are recognised by the colour vibration, which they use—so all is connected. What I wish you to try to think about is this connection between all things. You do not have separate healers in this world and you do not have separate entities in our world and separate angel beings; each has a part to play in a united way. I do not feel my dear friends that you can understand the grandeur of the scheme of all things.

Sarah: When you talk about healing colours Salumet, depending on what needs healing, is there a separate colour for that, or is it a combination of colours?

All of life is colour—it is that you cannot see it, unless you use that inner eye, that inner knowing, which you all have. If you could see a human body from within, from the spirit, you would see that you are made of many colours. But it is not so much the colour, as the use of the vibrations and which vibration is used. Those angelic beings come on the vibration of love, which is one of the most powerful rays. Do you understand what I am trying to communicate to you?

Sarah: Yes I do, yes thank you.

Yes, there is much spoken about angels, there is much that is misunderstood also. There are two kinds for you to understand, whilst in this world. We have those angels, or 'planetary beings' as I would prefer to call them, because they come from the heart, they come from the source of all love. They abound on all planets that have form. And here we enter deep waters, but your understanding has grown because of the mind projection brought to you from another planet. You cannot fully understand or grasp, I feel, the evolution that is taking place on many other planets, because until now, you have not had any connection to them. But I assure you my dear friends that those who inhabit other planets, are as well aware of the planetary forces as you are here on this Earth.

George: Yes we are beginning to feel this pattern that runs throughout the Universe and it's been so good to be able to compare notes with our friend who visits.

But it is just a small drop in your ocean, that you have had communication in this way. What I want you to try to focus upon, is the connection between all things; the love connection, which ties you all together. I would like you to try to recognise the workings in your everyday lives, of these planetary forces, which are here to help each and every one of you, and they come as I have said, from the source of all knowledge. Do you have questions at this point?

George: The source of all knowledge being the creative principle?

Yes. Yes and these planetary forces, these angelic beings, belong and come from that source. They themselves have never had form as you would know it, but they are capable of changing form as they wish. I have told you this previously, (Affirmed) but it is most important for you now, my dear friends, that you begin to understand that there is no space, that all is one, that all is joined and all is striving towards the centre of all love. (Pause) These may sound simple words to you, but they have the most powerful meaning for each one of you, for every human form upon this planet, as it does in every inhabited planet in this Cosmos. All is connected.

Sarah: So when you think spiritually you can begin to understand. When you drop the physical overcoat then you begin to understand.

You must use your inner eyes and you will begin—not to see, but to sense and to feel and to be.

George: There's a question I would like to ask if I may. Is one of the differences between the angelic beings and yourself that they assigned or connected to a particular planet?

All angelic beings of the higher order are connected to all planets. But there are those advanced angelic beings, who are connected to the human form and they are the ones who help, in the everyday living in your world. But the planetary forces who are the angelic beings, who are 'masters' if you like of Karma, who are masters in love and organisations—they are the ones that have not existed in any human form, or indeed in any form on any planet. So there are differences, it is just a matter of form. Is that helpful to you?

George: Thank you, yes.

Sara: Can I ask a question? (Yes.) You mentioned that love is one of the most powerful vibrations in connection with the healing angels. (Yes.) What are the other most powerful vibrations?

Wisdom and I would say to you mercy—mercy in the sense of understanding.

Sara: Thank you.

That helps you?

Sara: Yes it will, in more ways than one. (Good.)

George: Does that connect to forgiveness, the mercy?

Ah—all of these words come under the umbrella of love, as does the negative feelings and emotions, they all come under one umbrella. But the vibration of love is the most powerful that you can use and it is that vibration, which brings to you the angelic healing beings. I feel that I would like you, my dear friends, to consider my words and to now think a little more widely, on how healing works and of those planetary forces, which are used for that purpose. I want you to think about space and how wrong that is for the correct picture in all things.

George: Yes I feel very much immersed in the tremendous beauty—yes space doesn't come into the equation.

No, but mankind is so immersed in thinking about space, but it is now time, my dear friends, for you to dismiss this from your vocabulary. There is much for you to ponder upon this time I feel. And let yourselves FEEL, rather than think.

Lilian: Yes, I was just thinking how we are surrounding by love, aren't we—by all these different beings.

But you are a powerhouse of love. Every individual here is a powerhouse for love and therefore you must raise your own vibrations continually.

George: We seem to be immersed in this greater powerhouse.

Yes, you must see yourselves as being the connective energies. You understand?

Paul: In the sense that perhaps we are the ones to instigate the healing?

Yes, we need your help of course—but without your help it would be more difficult. You understand?

Paul: Yes, these beings won't do it until we...

They need your connection—yes. But do not underestimate your own beauty, your own inner beauty that is used for healing. Each one of you strives for it and it is up to you and your own responsibility also, to make sure that you are constantly striving to raise your own spiritual gifts. And I feel for this time that I must take my leave of you.

George: Could I just say that when angels have appeared in visions in the past, these visions, as described, don't seem to particularly relate to space. They may be huge, they may be small, they may be light, but I suggest these visions, they don't really appear to relate to space, on reflection...

But they do on the planets that you have no knowledge of. They would be viewed in a much different way, although their love and energy would be recognisable by their colours. Remember I have told you they can change form, they can present themselves to you with the human face, if you like, surrounded by great light and beauty. That is the way that they show themselves to you as human beings, but they can change form, as they so desire.

George: Yes, they're clearly not fixed in space.

No, again you must look at the WHOLE of existence—you have to find that connection between all things. As you feel the closeness and the connection within this room every time you meet, try to then expand that feeling to all of existence. Now I will leave it to you to think about this and when the time is right, we can take it a little step further. (Thanks expressed)

~29th May 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you all once more my dear friends. As we begin this time, I want to say a warm welcome to the gentleman of logical mind, but who is willing to place that to one side for the betterment of his understanding. As always, my dear friends, it is better for any individual to come within this room, and hopefully to feel and to know and understand the difference in the energy that surrounds you, and of which you are part. It is important for every individual to come to know for himself what there is to know and experience, and to have a fuller understanding of life beyond this life. Now my dear friends, as always when we have visitors to this group, I feel it is essential for times of questions and answers, in order, not only for those who seek more knowledge, but for you also, my dear friends, that I might reiterate things said in past times. So, if you are happy to do so, we will continue with some questions.

Lilian: Thank you. I know that Jim has a question. Did you have one George?

George: Would you like to go first Jim?

Jim: Yes. I've been so impressed by what I've learned through George and the book and the understanding that I've gained through the messages from Salumet about spirit. I have friends who are in total disbelief, and I'm trying to talk to them and tell them of the good news about spirit. Can you give me some advice on a simple way, if there is such a thing, of talking to them to convince them of the reality of spirit?

Yes, I understand your question. Let me say this to you my dear friend: as one who has for many years had a logical mind and has now come to the realisation that there is more to this life than first was thought. Let me say this to you: that those who have disbelief—you cannot convince them otherwise, because you see my dear friend, they are not spiritually ready. You can of course speak with them, you can tell them what you feel and what you innately know, but you cannot convince another to accept truth. This is what we have been endeavouring to do for many years now, and what happens, as I have told all of these dear friends here, is that you can only lay the seeds, and when the time is right for them, that seed will grow into understanding and the seeking of knowledge. What you wish to do is admirable, but I understand how you feel, that you want everyone to have that grain of understanding that you have achieved. I would say to you my dear friend, continue to tell others of what you know, and allow them to come to their own conclusions—and do not judge them for their reactions. I hope that helps you.

Jim: Yes it does help me and I'll remember what you say. Thank you.

Lilian: George?

George: Yes, I've heard from Jetté recently (A Danish friend), who has sat with this group and she has sent a fascinating story by one: Mellen-Thomas Benedict. It is an account of he who died, in care, with cancer, and he had a wonderfully developed mind, and when in spirit, he asked questions. And it seems he was given what amounts to a tour of the universe, far back to the 'big bang', and he describes going beyond the big bang, to the 'energetic void'—it is described as, and then he returned. It seems he was dead for at least 1.5 hours in our time, and he was expecting to be reborn as a baby, but no, he was returned to his old body. And with full memory of what had transpired, he was able to write his account and I must say that the account given is very much in line with your teachings—also in line with the information given by Bonniol. I felt I would like to say this and to me, I feel it is a very true account, and I wonder if you have any further comments on the idea of returning to the big bang and beyond and what is described as the 'energetic void', or if you have any comments at all on that account?

Of course, I understand your question. Let me refer to the individual here mentioned. Let me say this to you: he was indeed one of many to have had this experience, shall we say. When someone comes to our world before their time, they are privy to much within our world. He obviously had a task to achieve, and returned to the physical body. You, my dear friends, know full well, because of our many discussions, of what has happened. We have discussed the big bang... (Pause due to coughs)...I apologise for causing distress to the voice of the instrument. Let me continue my dear friends... beyond all of existence, there is a pattern of energy that you do not know of as yet. It is a pattern of energy that all souls strive towards, no matter where they have lived in physical form. That is why the mention of Bonniol's information comes into play, because all physical beings are striving towards a greater goal—to that universal force, which you all belong to. (Pause) As I speak my dear friends, I feel this energy, which I also come from, as a whole unit. And because I am speaking of such energy, I now am blending with it—this has not happened in this group before. But the very mention of the energy raises me to a higher degree of energy, and I have to struggle to remain with you. But this energy force is far beyond all-knowing knowledge at this time. It is not appropriate at this time to try to describe this for you, but the very fact that someone has returned and been shown such things, can only confirm my words to you over time.

George: Yes, this certainly is felt, having read the document.

Yes, yes—there would have been a very good reason for his full memory on return to the physical.

George: Yes, I should also have said that he returned with full remission of the cancer.

Yes, of course, you cannot come within those energy fields and return with physical ailments. It would be impossible, because when you are—forgive me, I am feeling this energy pulling. When you return from that energy field, it is like a cleansing, and of course most people have left the physical garb behind when any experience of this kind takes place. So I hope that has enlightened you just a little.

George: Yes, it has indeed and I appreciate, we can't understand about the energies, but I think from what has been said, we are beginning to feel that there's the physical universe, there's the spiritual universe, but perhaps there are a number of what we can only describe as spiritual universes within each other.

Yes, of course—it is a much wider picture, and to explain to you energy of which you have no knowledge, would be like—how shall I describe it to you—looking for one grain of sand on a beach. It would be almost impossible at this stage of your knowledge.

Lilian: So when you leave us for a few weeks, is this the energy that you go back to?

Yes, I return to the part of me that...those words are not correct, let me rephrase that for you: I am one aspect of the whole, and the whole would then be regenerated by the energy fields from which I come. And of course I need to have those breaks in Earthly time in order to recharge that energy, if I may put it that way to you.

Sarah: You said that we're not aware of that energy yet. Will there be a time when the physical being will be aware of it without going into spirit?

No, it is impossible. Not all spirit are aware of this energy.

George: On those rare occasions when you have been speaking to us and another has wanted to also speak, might I ask, would that have been another aspect of yourself?

No. On those occasions it is—how can I say—like a surge of power to help me, but it is not another aspect. I am the only aspect of the soul who has been able to come to this physical world.

George: Thank you. That clarifies that.

Lilian: Very interesting. Did you have a question Sarah?

Sarah: I was just thinking when Salumet was saying you are a conglomerate of beings...

Yes, but I am the only aspect that is empowered, shall I say, to return.

Sarah: So it's really like a bit of back-up you're getting...

Yes, yes.

Sarah: Some years ago, somebody came through Sue to say that there was going to be somebody of similar sort of teaching to you, who would come through her. Is that going to happen, or have things changed since? Do you recall that?

Yes. Let me say this: that when communication takes place, there are many from our world who wish to make connection. But I can say most definitely to you, that there will not be communication within this group by another of my energy. There may be communication by others, but they will not be of this same energy—if that is clear to you.

Sarah: Yes. Thank you.

There are many who wish to communicate, but not...at this level.

Sarah: No. That's fine and we're very happy with your teaching Salumet! (Chuckles) We don't feel the need of anymore!

George: We'll take that as read, to use an expression.

Yes, I appreciate your words, and of course I would be aware if I was not accepted by you, and would therefore withdraw from you. Do not worry I am quite aware of all of your feelings.

Sarah: That's good. I wonder if you could clarify some words I have given to my daughter. She got very angry yesterday, and I said anger wasn't a good thing to have, it was a negative thing. And she said: well, it's an emotion, and you said to me that you have to have a balance of good and bad, and so I'm having an angry emotion. So I really didn't know what to say. So, what should I have said to her in reply to that?

Yes, of course the reasoning behind the anger is most important. Of course people have emotions, which you call anger, which in fact sometimes they are being themselves. The angry emotion which I speak of, is when it hurts another. If it is directed to another human being, then that emotion is most definitely negative. And it would be for her a good thing to try to control any negativity because of course she is prone to deep and angry feelings. But if it is a feeling to allow her only to express herself without desire to harm another, then that is fine.

Sarah: Oh right, thank you.

After all, it is only a label is it not?

Sarah: It is, yes.

So, perhaps you can dwell upon those words, and think for yourself what the meaning behind them is. And in that way, you can see both positive and negative viewpoints, because of course, she is correct—all life is balance; you have the light and darkness and that must always be balanced.

Sarah: Yes, that's why I was confused, because when she said that, I thought well that's right, it is that, but I could see that to have anger that affects somebody else is not good...

Yes, anger directed to another will always rebound, in the same way as your thought-waves will rebound. If you think again, my dear friend, about the spiritual aspect rather than the physical emotions, then you will find the correct answer for her.

Sarah: Thank you very much for that.

You note that I do not give you the words to say, because this is a lesson also for you.

Sarah: Yes—I have to find them myself, yes.

George: But if she recognises the balance, then perhaps we could say: you are teaching her well!

Lilian: Yes, we forget it's a two-way thing. Talking of children, you know I mentioned my granddaughter—I think the last time you were here. (Yes.) Unbeknown to me, she read the transcript and the little bit about her, which surprised her mother, and her mother said: how do you feel about that Catherine? And she was very happy to have read that.

Yes, as I have said to the gentleman at the beginning of this meeting, the seed is there to be sown—and the time is right for her to begin to think about other things.

Lilian: Yes. Thank you.

So do you see my dear friends, how all of life is connected—and when we continue to discuss these things, that you see the connection more clearly? (Agreed)

Lilian: Yes. Any questions Paul or Rod?

Rod: Yes. You may have been asked this before, and forgive me if I repeat it. I saw a programme last night—the Da Vinci Code—and it was surmised on this programme that Christ had married or had a lady friend and had a child, and this was debated one way and the other, and I thought: well it's quite interesting and why shouldn't he have done like the rest of us? Has that question been asked? Is that a fact or fiction?

I would say this to you: that Jesus the Christ still walks upon this Earth to help, in other forms, and of course, when he came, he came in physical form to teach many of the truth, in the same way as many others have trodden this Earthly pathway. I would say to you, this 'story' as you call it is part truth, part fiction. We have discussed Jesus the Christ many years ago, and without me returning to that subject, perhaps you may find within the transcripts, my answers to many questions—if our dear lady could arrange that for you. (Yes.)

George: Yes, the answers are there. Could I just add that I think this book, the Da Vinci Code—yes, it is a work of fiction, with also historical facts built into it. And it may well be that the interest in this book is one of the factors which is affecting—I could put it this way: it is affecting the influence of the formal church today. I think there are various things that are affecting the old established formal church, and it may well be that the interest in the Da Vinci Code story, is quite a big important factor in the present time. Yes, I thank you my dear friend for those words, and of course, I have spoken to you about religion also and as I have said earlier, there is a time in life when seeds that have been sown, grow in order to give truth to mankind. And perhaps at this time, that story is one which will make people stop and think just a little more deeply. So again you see, the seeds are being sown in many ways, to discover what is the truth. But of course you must remember that Jesus the Christ was one person upon this planet, of one religion, which has been abused by many in their writings. I, my dear friend, would wish you to look at the larger picture of life, and not any one individual religion. I hope that has been helpful, but I am sure our dear lady friend will find for you, my words on Jesus the Christ.

George: Of course, our eyes have been opened also by the knowledge that there have been or there are religions and different Masters who have been to other planets.

Yes, of course. Again it is always the wider picture that you strive to understand. In that way, you will open more fully to the truth. Man has so much to learn, but he cannot learn with a closed mind.

George: And it's good to look beyond this single planet within the creation.

Yes, yes. It would be ill fortune indeed, for you to centre all of your thinking upon this one planet.

Indeed, it would do much harm to your spiritual unfoldment, to be so closed in your minds.

Now, my dear friends, I think for this time, I have spoken with you enough. I would just say to you, that if you are happy, we have one rescue this time—you are happy for that to happen? (Affirmed)

And as I leave you, remember always, I leave you enclosed within my love and the knowledge, which I bring to you.

Farewells and thanks were followed by the rescue which concluded the evening.

George's notes:

1. Jesus references: 18th July 1994, 23rd June 1995, 27th November 1995, 26th March 2001, 13th August 2001, 12th November 2001

In the present transcript there are several comparisons to the sowing of the seed, and one is reminded of the parable spoken by Jesus concerning this.

2. Coughs: There is a very marked difference between the voice of Eileen and that of Salumet, and the throat may get a little 'tickly' at times. A cough is not produced often, but when there is a cough, Salumet seems to be able to deal with it, and usually needs to give attention just the once.

3. All-knowing knowledge: This may seem a quaint term, but 'all-knowing' is a state of knowing to which Salumet and the light-beings of spirit aspire to. They know the workings of the universes and are not shackled by time or spatial factors.

4. Energy effect/blending: Speaking of or being overtly consciousness of the higher energy seemed to draw Salumet and there was a small voice change, with the words becoming 'sharpened' or crisper where italics have been used. (And there was an early Bonniol communication in which he seemed to be drawn and had a little difficulty when speaking of another planet. The condition cleared when his thoughts were returned to Earth-Aerah communication.)

5. Wider picture: We are clearly encouraged to look to the wider, more universal picture in our thinking. The creation extends far beyond one book, far beyond one planetary religion, far beyond Earth, far beyond this galaxy and the creation is much more than just the physical universe. There is no need to be of blinkered mind! The pea that stays in the pod can have comfort but no future. We have now gone full circle and have returned to the parable of sowing the seed!

~19th June 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As always my dear friends I am pleased to join with you once more. This time I would like to say to you on a more general note than usual about the state of this, your planet Earth. In times past, mankind has made life most difficult for himself. There have been many causes of course, but mankind was on a journey of destruction. When first I came to you my dear friends, I did say to you that many of us from our world had come to give to you the truth. That is what I and many, many others are attempting to do at this time. I would like to place before you a more positive energy and say to you that even though mankind as you might see it, is still very destructive, I can tell you that on the whole mankind is beginning to recognize his true self.

George: Yes, I get the impression that these days there are more people who are frowning upon the few trouble spots that we still have, and I just have the feeling that the consciousness regarding that is better. Yes. I would like you to consider each country within this world and how more open-minded individuals have become, where mankind is now able to speak out, to say what he truly feels, and this can only be good. And of course with the communication that is possible in all areas of your world, then these things are much more available to all of man. So what I wish to say to you my dear friends, is to take heart, and although there will be many incidences of what you would call violence or disruption within your world, always remember that in the wider picture of life mankind is slowly beginning to understand, and all nations are beginning to pull together in the voice of reason and understanding; that to have this world as it should be, mankind must at last take some of that responsibility. Therefore my dear friends take heart that these things are happening in your time.

George: It is very good to have your words on that Salumet. I think many of us feel this change in our hearts, but it's so good to have your words.

Not only can you know that these changes take place, but you know by the power of your thought that you can help to change and alleviate the many difficult areas. Is that not so?

George: Yes. I think we are all working on that in our small way.

Yes, it is good that you be reminded and not always to dwell on incidents which mankind considers to be destructive, because remember as you dwell upon those thoughts, then your thoughts will become reality, and therefore you will join this pool of thought of destruction. You understand? (Yes.) Therefore at this time, I feel in apt to gently remind you my dear friends.

Lilian: Yes, it does help.

George: It's better that that other more positive thought becomes the reality.

Yes, yes. And it may seem that I repeat myself so often, but in so doing, it reiterates what I have previously told you. Have you any questions about what I have spoken?

Lilian: I was wondering, say, in the past when things have gone wrong and there have been wars and so on, is a lot of that the power of our thoughts or is that mankind just taking the wrong pathway?

Be careful with your judgement! Partly it is part of the Earth's evolution and partly it is mankind himself, of course. He has a great responsibility, but as with all planets with all that exists, there is an evolution which has to take place also.

George: It seems very complicated to us; I mean, with just the Iraq war or the Iraq unrest that continues—there's been influence between governments and there's our own nation who has voted in our present government and there are our various feelings trying to influence decision-making and it's all very complicated!

Of course, but life on this planet is complicated. Mankind has always felt in some way that life upon this planet is most troublesome, and yet each spirit is only too willing to return to this planet, because of the learning abilities which are here for them.

Lilian: I was wondering about that.

So you see, there is much to learn.

George: And I guess the ultimate goal—that too is attractive: something to work towards by returning to this planet.

Again, it is part of the growing awareness of the spirit—yes. Have you any more questions?

Jan: I have a concern. I've been sat here trying to ignore it, but it won't go away.

That is why I am here, to help you.

Jan: My concern is a very human one, rather than—I know I should be looking at it spiritually but I'm going to talk to you of the human element. Many people are concerned of the migration of people from different countries into other countries that are becoming saturated and far too overcrowded, where they leave their own countries behind for looking for work and for a better life, which everyone can understand on a spiritual level, but what worries me is what happens in the future when everybody migrates to a certain area, what's going to happen to those other countries left behind?

That can never happen. There will never be migration from one country to another, where one country is left desolate. That will not happen.

Jan: I am thinking of Africa in this instance.

But remember that each country has a karma, and karmic effect will take a toll on every country upon this planet. What you speak of, of course, is a human concern, and this I understand my dear friend, but I can only answer you in a spiritual way. It is up to mankind to learn to adapt to all that life brings and in that way to bring forth the spiritual knowledge which is within, to create within this world a kind of humanity that is good for all of mankind. There is not one person or one nation who is above another. You realize how diverse peoples and lands and countries are within this planet and therefore it is for mankind to learn tolerance and love towards his fellow man; and yes, we understand that humankind finds difficulty with this, but that is part of your learning.

Jan: So we are all learning a very valuable lesson at the same time.

Yes, yes. It may not feel comfortable in human terms and many people are not comfortable with many things in your world, but that is part of their learning.

Jan: So I shouldn't be concerned, because...

Well, I would say my dear friend it is always good to think, because in using your thoughts you can create much better things, but as I have said previously, the more you are positive in your thinking, the better results you will have and the happier your life will be on this Earth.

Jan: Okay, thank you.

George: I think one aspect of this is that certain countries will be seen as more attractive and people will flock to them and there's some danger that those countries will become rather over-crowded, but on a positive note, perhaps we can see that as setting an example of good living and hopefully other countries will follow in that.

Yes, I am afraid my dear friends that still mainly within your world there are materialistic ideals, which cannot be erased in the blink of an eye.

George: No, I think we have to see that as a really major problem—the materialism.

Yes, that is part of—and I will say carefully, 'problem', but it is still a major factor in your world today. But I have spoken of material things in the past and you know well my views on it, but of course this time I am being much more general and speaking about all of your planet. You understand? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, it's very good for us I feel, to compare our materialism with certain other planets, including Aerah who have much, much less materialism.

Yes, only because they have grown spiritually. The problem existed of course, as in many other planets—it is part of learning, it is that part of you that is less spiritual, may I say, but it has to be encompassed within you—the understanding has to become the reality.

George: Yes, and perhaps it will be good for us to see spirituality and materialism as a kind of balance and know that we have to keep it in balance.

Always there must be balance—yes, all of life must be in balance. Remember you cannot have light without dark—remember my talk about this and many other things. You, as beings, are in balance—the human element and the spiritual being, must be in balance at all times if you are to survive upon this planet. You understand what I am trying to tell you?

George: Yes and helping us in our survival was, I think I am right in saying, the first part of your mission.

Yes. If I can help but one of you to come to a fuller understanding of who you truly are, then I feel that my work has indeed helped. And of course I am most fortunate to have encountered so many people of like mind, who come together as you do and are willing to listen to truth. Of course, as I have always said to you, I do not expect you to accept my words without thinking in your own way, but as I know, and I appreciate how much you have come and how much you have grown together.

George: I'm sure I could speak for us all in saying that we do accept your words and I think also we are the fortunate ones!

Jan: I wish it were just easier, at the click of a finger, to live the way that you speak without having this human cloak. I find it so nice—I can be looking for example in a book or on TV and wanting and being able I think in my own little way to see the wider picture and feeling that I'm connected to everybody and everything and then all of a sudden something will happen and the human element starts again. If we could only brush that aside, life would be so wonderful.

Yes, but you are much too harsh on yourself. You must accept that indeed you have this human element, as you call it, and yes you have failings as many do, but that does not reflect upon your spirit, because deep within you know what is good and what is true. So do not be harsh, you can only but try your very best and we would not expect more of you. As long you are true to yourself, that you recognize that indeed you are spirit with a learning to do, then you cannot do more in this lifetime.

Jan: I understand.

And again, I return to the word I use most often, the power of your thought.

Jan: Yes, I think I've experienced that in my personal life quite a lot just recently, and rebounding thoughts—bad and good thoughts have come back to me in many different ways and I try to amend things that I feel I may not have thought in the right way.

My dear child, it is the trying which is important, it is the understanding that is important. Of course you may fall down at times, because you are clothed in this human garb, but the recognition is what is important. Because you understand that some of your thoughts are not, shall we say, spiritual, but you recognize this and that, that my dear friend is the most important thing for you.

Jan: So the recognition is part of the growth; (Yes.) every time you recognize you grow that little bit more.

Because in recognition, you are trying to change.

Jan: Yes, right.

You understand?

Jan: Yes, so you may make the same mistake over and over again, but as long as you recognize it each time.

And try...

Jan: And try...

Yes. You have made many mistakes, not only in this lifetime, but in many others and sometimes you bring with you those failings. So you see it cannot be wiped out in an instant. That is what you have come to learn. You understand?

Jan: Of course, yes I do entirely, thank you.

But don't be so hard on yourself.

Jan: Or any of the others in the room, we all must learn that, not be so hard on ourselves.

Yes, and your hardest task my dear friend is in being judgemental. Try to be non-judgemental in all aspects of life and then you will find your own life will become much easier. But thank you for your question and I hope it has helped you.

Jan: It has tremendously, thank you.

Sarah: You saying 'non-judgemental', I was just thinking that the text that George gave us to read about the person who had so-called 'died' for an hour and a half, (Mellen Thomas Benedict) when he came back, all he could see was love in everybody, he just felt love for everybody and I thought, well, those are just the very words that Salumet has been telling us we have got to find.

Yes. It is only when you discard this human cloak, if you like, and truly recognize yourselves as spirit that you understand really what great love means, what not judging another person means, and to have had that kind of experience remains, because it is so vivid and I am sure there are many people in this world now who have experienced similar things and have returned to your world as much better people. It is only that they have recognized themselves as beings of love. But that is not available to many in this world without some kind of event such as you mention.

George: No, I imagine the mind has to be developed to some particular degree before it can question in the way that that one questioned, and before that event can happen.

But that is why my dear friends, it so important that you cultivate your meditating time, because when you go into meditation, then you are closer to our world, the spirit is closer to our world and all questions can be asked. You do not actually have to leave behind the human body for this kind of knowledge.

George: Now that is an interesting and profound thought.

But it is possible for all of you, it is just that it has never been considered, but if you ask the many people within your world who meditate for much time, they will tell you that it is quite easy to be within the human frame and yet the mind is free.

Jan: Richard, my son, as you know who comes here sometimes, (Yes.) at the weekend he described his experience that he had at home as being with the nature spirits. (Yes.) I'm sure that he'd like it and we all would like it confirmed that he was correct, although we believe him 100%, that the nature spirits were with him.

When next he comes, I will speak with him and I will tell him what is happening at this particular time, but I will speak to him when he is here.

Jan: Okay, thank you. I will tell him, but he is digging his heels in a bit, but obviously he's on his way...

Yes, his awareness is becoming much greater. He has resisted to an extent, but contact has been made and it can only go forward provided he remains open to it.

Jan: And he's perfectly safe on his own, isn't he? (Yes.) He is protected at all times? (Yes.) He doesn't need us to be there with him?

You can reassure him, once contact is established, then we do not fail you unless the mind so wishes and blocks us from them and of course then there can be some problems. But, no, he is okay, I think you would say.

Jan: Thank you very much. I'll tell him.

Lilian: Any questions Jim?

Jim: Well, I keep thinking about the very large number of human beings upon this planet—a number like 6 or 7 billion souls on this planet. Do all of the things that we hope for within this group for ourselves, are they true for everyone? It seems such a big number. It's mind-boggling, the scale of the spiritual existence of human beings. I haven't really formulated a question, but ...

How large is the cosmos?

Jan: Infinity and beyond.

Yes. You are speaking of one small planet where people exist in human form, but in spiritual realms, space means very little. Everything is part of everything else, and I know this for you is difficult when first you are looking into many aspects of spirit, but let me just reassure you my dear friends that although you call it 'mind-boggling' I believe you say, the mind is never boggled. (Laughter)

George: It's a human thought. (Yes.)

Paul: Brain-boggling...

The brain becomes confused, but the mind is forever free and you may speak of numbers, but there will come a time when the many aspects of spirit becomes much clearer to you and really that only happens when you return and revert back to a spiritual being.

George: Yes, I had the thought that there are more angels associated with this planet than there are human beings, because for a start we each have one guardian angel...

Yes, you are one tiny speck of creation—you really are. Imagine my dear friend the tiniest of ants sitting in the middle of this room. What do you suppose his aspect of the world would be?

Paul: Very small.

And you are but one tiny part of all existence.

Jan: One grain of sand, on a beach.

One grain of sand.

Jan: In the whole universe.

There is [sic] many comparisons that you could make, but it is—and I understand the question from our dear friend, that in your search for truth, all of these questions are very confusing.

Jan: That question has been put to me by many people who are just starting to think the way we do. If all of us have been here before and there are souls before us, etc., etc., it's very difficult for them to actually understand. They imagine rooms and rooms I think of people bumping around with each other—and of course, like you say, there is no space.

Yes, you are looking at existence with a human form and that is why it is difficult to understand the essence of just existence. All that exists now has always been. We have gone this road before also, but it is a very difficult subject to convince people of. But as you well know, the time will come when suddenly these questions become unimportant, because there just is this understanding and knowing of what life is. But I always say question, if that is what you need to grow and to try to understand. The understanding will come, but as always with development, it takes time.

Jan: Why, Salumet, would somebody who has never really thought of life in a spiritual term before, suddenly start seeing what they describe as their guardian angel and spirit people around them—they can actually see them. Why would that manifest itself to somebody who may not in their knowledge—of course their true self could be a totally different matter, but their own human knowledge, aware of what's happening to them. Does that make sense?

I think there is a saying within your world, and I will use it to simplify that question, and it is this: when the pupil is ready, the teacher is there. There comes to every individual within this lifetime as a human being, there comes some point within their lives when they are ready to accept some knowledge.

Jan: Is that everybody in this human life?

Everyone is given the opportunity—whether they recognize or accept that opportunity depends on each individual. Remember always my dear friend the interference of your freewill, because it plays such a large part in your existence in this planet. But every individual is given the opportunity to seek and to search their own spiritual being to find the truth, and it is then when these happenings, or the seed is placed within their mind, that they then begin to search and question.

Jan: I'm asking this because I am preparing myself to talk and help this person who is very frightened at the moment. I haven't met this person at all, it's a telephone conversation I have had with them and they will get back to me I am sure—I wanted to have the right answer for them (Yes.) and you've answered that. Thank you.

And of course remember, I have spoken—all actions are placed either in love or fear and sometimes it is perhaps the fear of death or some 'tragedy' as you may call it, but I would not use that term. It takes something like that for the spirit to wish to seek.

Jan: That's clear, I can understand that—I can help her now if she calls me, if she's ready to call me.

Yes, you will find the words. Ask to be helped and guided and you will be.

Jan: That's great. Thank you.

Now my dear friends I feel I have reminded you enough this time. I hope that my words this evening will trigger within you those ideas and thoughts which are sitting within your heads and that you will give thought to them, and perhaps, although I have spoken these words before, it will renew your interest and help you to go forward with new ideas, to continue to help others, and as our dear lady friend has said, to find the words of comfort towards another human being. In this my dear friends, I will leave you always cloaked within my love, and to know that as we leave this time, we thank you for all the help and the knowledge that you impart to others. (Thanks + farewells)

George's notes:

It might be interesting to reflect for a moment on how world consciousness has changed since Salumet began his mission in June 1994. The nuclear threat has diminished. East–West relations have continued to improve. Perhaps 'people power' has become more noticeable. Aspects of materialism are being questioned. The environment has become a front-line issue. Alternative energies are fully seen as necessary. Smaller and more fuel-economic cars are encouraged. Recycling is the first step towards a non-wasteful economy. Sensible diet is being seriously thought about. The media are beginning to account spirituality just a little more. The Internet is bringing unity to the whole world. The Planet Aerah communications help us to see our connection to the entire universal creation. Science detects and explores the world's collective consciousness. These are a few of the recent changes that come to mind.

~26th June 2006~

Our list of names given for healing was lengthy this time, and Salumet's initial words aptly followed on from this:

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time, we are pleased to feel the love which emanates from each one when asking for help for others. I would like to begin this time by offering some thoughts to that Great Creative Force from which we come. We ask that all conditions that come to us are accepted with love and as tests in this our earthly lives. We accept that these conditions are part of our spiritual unfoldment. We thank you for the intelligence to understand these things and the power that may be used to change the conditions of our lives. We also give thanks for that power of will which enables us all to overcome diseases within this world. But to do this we have to have an overriding will, power of the will and thought—the vibration must be much greater than any of your diseases which exist in this world. We have my dear friends understanding now of all of these things and it is appropriate on this evening of many healing thoughts given that we return the thoughts to the Great Creative Force, that within yourselves you recognize the power within. When we have finished speaking this time, I feel it would be most appropriate for each one of you to recognize where you stand on your own spiritual unfoldment and therefore to offer words and thoughts of what you would like now to achieve. I hope my dear friends you can agree to do this, this time. (Affirmed)

Lilian: If we sit quietly and put forward what we would hope...

For each one to speak out so others may hear and understand also what is trying to be achieved by each individual. You may be surprised by how many comparisons there are between you, but it is something I feel would be good for you at this present time. But for now I will take any questions that you may have for us.

Lilian: I know Richard has got one. Would you like to start Richard?

Richard: Yes, Salumet, you said when I wasn't here last time, that there was something you would be able to explain to me?

Yes. We have been told of your latest experiences and we are pleased to hear of this, but what I wish to say to you my dear friend is this: that from an early age you have been bombasted by thoughts and actions from our world, because always your life-plan has been that you may follow the spiritual pathway. No matter what your physical life enfolds before you, always you must follow the spiritual pathway. We have spoken and I have told you that the time is right for you to grow and this you have agreed with. (Yes.) Yes.

Richard: I'm still very confused as to what to do about that.

Yes, you must first of all have my dear friend, acceptance that indeed what is happening is from our world, and although you are happy to have these happenings, there is a degree of non-acceptance deep within. (Yes.) So firstly you must find within yourself that acceptance and that you can bring forth the words of spirit, because you see, my dear friend, you can be used in many ways spiritually. But as always, again your freewill will always come into play, and the danger is that you will place your physical lifestyle before the spiritual, but it is possible with our help that the two can go hand-in-hand.

Richard: Should it mean a great change in my physical lifestyle?

No, not necessarily. As I say, it is possible to lead your physical life and still allow the spirituality to come forward. We will only make the opportunities when you are ready. We cannot interfere in your life. We can try to guide you, encourage you, but we cannot interfere. But what you experienced before was in fact an aspect of your own self with the help of the elementals and the angels which surround you.

Richard: More experiences like that would be helpful.

Once you accept, then we can give you more; it does not work the other way. After all, why should we give you these experiences if you are not prepared to accept?

Richard: I agree.

You agree, but you still find difficulty in acceptance, but we will help you every step of your way. But of course, as you know and which you will, we feel, find difficulty with, is in giving of your time.

Richard: Yes, I definitely see a difficulty.

Yes, but there is a way and there is a pathway for you to follow.

Richard: I will try my hardest to find it.

We will help you, we will. (Thank you.) All we ask is for you to be open to all that we say, to all that you hear, to all that you feel—and the more that you accept, the more that we can give to you. (Thank you.)

Was there any question that you wish to ask of me?

Richard: No I don't think so. Actually, there was one: The aspect of myself which you mentioned, (Yes.) would that be one called, Simon, my twin?

It is the aspect of you spiritually. Physically that was your connection, spiritually there is that connection also, but it is more than that. Is that helpful to you? (Yes.)

Lilian: Yes, thank you. Any more questions, anyone?

George: Yes. I would like to refer to some work that our Russian neighbours have been doing very recently...Professors Golod and Krasnoholovets have been building quite large, hollow pyramids out of glass fibre and plastic, up to 44 metres high. They are two good scientists and they have conducted a number of experiments, and two of the interesting results are firstly that water as it cools to very low temperatures, minus 40 degrees Centigrade, it doesn't freeze! And another factor, seeds kept within the pyramid for a period then germinate to give a crop yield that is between 20 and 100% greater than would normally be. Now this sounds like an energy effect and rather like the energy of the crop circles that we talked about some time ago regarding the increased crop yields from the seed. So, I think we are beginning to have an understanding of the energy that is collected or enhanced by the aligned pyramid shape. Would you have any comments on that?

Yes. I understand your question. Always—not always—I beg your pardon. If you go back to the time of the ancient civilizations, they were much more aware of energies than you are at this present time.

George: Yes, I think some of us are just beginning to realize that.

Yes. What is happening with your Russian friends and their pyramid experiments is not new knowledge, but is knowledge that has been regained and is now beginning to be understood by men of your time.

The ancient Egyptians in your world, in particular that race, had much more knowledge of energy and vibration and space travel—we have touched lightly about this before.

George: Yes, I'm sure we remember your words on that.

Yes, but perhaps you could think of many bodies that have survived at sub-zero temperatures without freezing. When you speak of the water which reaches certain temperatures and still does not freeze, it comes under the same energy. And I would say to you, your analogy of the experiments and your crop circles are indeed related to that same energy. It is an energy not fully understood as yet, but I have to say many are being helped in this field so that the understanding is greater and that these, what are termed 'mysterious happenings', can now be collected and collated together in understanding. The energy used is indeed of a higher vibration than currently known in your world. But, do you remember my dear friends, when I told you that 'sounds' have their own vibration and that one evening you made the sound within yourselves and you could feel that vibration within. Do you remember? (Yes.) In the same way, the shapes of many things have their own vibration. There are many people in your world now, who find benefit from being within the shape of pyramids, because of the energy which is created within. And if you think of the shape of the pyramid, you will begin to realize my dear friend that all lines reach to a pinnacle as if the energy is being drawn upwards to a higher vibration.

George: Yes and I can say that radar does detect a column (Yes.) of some kind of energy reaching—I think the figure was 1,000 metres above the large pyramid.

Yes, and beyond, you will then find that the vibration becomes even finer, but that is something not to be understood at this time. It is important for your scientists in your world now to recapture knowledge long lost.

George: Yes. And there is mention of meditation being enhanced within the pyramid structure.

Of course, because as the energy reaches and goes from the top of the head, what is happening, but it reaches for the pinnacle. Can you see, because the energy is drawn upwards and becomes even more refined? (Yes.) So, perhaps my dear friends this would be something for you all to consider this time, the shape of the pyramids and how the construction is ever upwards and perhaps I will hear your thoughts next time.

Lilian: And of course they have been found all over our planet in days gone by.

Yes. The ancients were much more adept in their knowledge of these things.

Graham: Did the ancients actually have a name for the energy associated with pyramids?

Not that I can tell you. Of course they would have found a physical name for their own use. But, um—yes, of course they would have a name.

George: The Russian scientists are theorizing on this and the name they have devised—they explain it in terms of what they call ‘inertons’, these being energy units which divide—but that’s part of their theory at this time.

Yes, I have to say, if it is helpful then put a name to these things, but what I would say to you my dear friends: have the knowledge and the feel for these things—names are unimportant; it is the recognition which is important.

George: And I think we recognize from the work done that the energy penetrates many things and alters their character in some way.

It is part of the scheme of life. It is just because it is the unknown to you as humans at this time. It is nothing extraordinary, in fact I would call it most ordinary.

George: Yes, yes. One nice thing is that the political relations between East and West are so improved now, and this sharing of knowledge is a very nice thing that is coming out of that.

As it should be, do you not agree, (Yes) because mankind should be sharing with his brother, because all knowledge belongs to all people?

George: Yes, and we can really appreciate the good work that these Russian scientists are currently doing—and thank you for giving us your further words on all that.

Yes, well I will look forward to the remarks brought to us next time and whoever is absent will be asked at a future time. So this is something which we must discuss a little more of, now that the topic has been raised.

George: Thank you for that—wonderful!

Paul: It is interesting that a lot of the more ‘simple’ people like the Native American Indians, they had their wigwams (Yes.) constructed in that sort of shape.

Again, another very good example of the recognition of energy available. There really is, my dear friends, much in your history if you return and go back to ancient times; although the Indians that you speak of do not go as far back as those ancient civilizations of which I spoke previously, but their spirituality was great, their knowledge was full of understanding and acceptance. But this is an opportunity for each one of you to think deeply about this matter.

Now I feel that we should go around each one of you this time to allow you to unfold from within what you would say to that Great Creative Force about your own knowledge and unfoldment. And with those words, my dear friends, I will withdraw from you this time, but I will be listening to the words sent out by each individual. As always, I leave you within the light of love, I leave you with the many thoughts which we have discussed and I leave you always with the anticipation of our next meeting. (Thanks + farewells)

We thought a while, and each gave our thoughts on how we see ourselves and what our further aims should be.

George’s notes:

Re Russian pyramid work: Internet: If you do a Google search on Prof V Krasnoholovets, it will produce an 8-page document entitled: ‘The Great Pyramid as an Aether Wind Trapping Site’. A search on: Russian Pyramids produces other useful information.

Pyramid effects that have been observed:

Water does not freeze.

Razor blades are sharpened, (compared to ultrasound polishing).

The vertical column extending above and detected by radar was 2 Km.

Salinity of water decreased.

Altered resistance of carbon materials.

Effects on animals and disease incidence.

Human aura is brightened

Foods stay fresh longer.

Domestic pets thrive well in situ.

Patient's burn areas heal faster.

Meditation enhanced.

Plants grow faster in early phase.

Structural changes in materials.

Can cause nausea in too much pyramid environment. Compare crop circles!

Seeds ... crop yields increased. Compare crop circle wheat!

Immune systems are enhanced.

Pathogenic strengths of viruses and bacteria reduced.

Radioactivity decreased.

Crystalline materials kept in pyramid, then transferred to surround jails, reduce crime.

Pyramids have been aligned to the pole star (which effectively aligns the other pair of sides to planetary rotation). The Russian pyramids are built to phi ratio and are described as having 70-degree slope. The Egyptian pyramids are less steep and to pi ratio.

~17th July 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you this time.

Lilian: We are very happy to have you.

When last we met, we spoke about the energy and the pyramids and I remarked to you that when we came together once more I would ask you about your many thoughts on this subject. But because we are few in number, I will leave my discussion about the pyramids for this time until we have more in numbers. But nevertheless my dear friends we can discuss amongst ourselves what the individuals here have gathered from thinking about that energy within pyramids.

George: Yes, gladly.

I am sure that you have given thought to those words and are indeed happy to discuss this amongst yourselves. (Agreed)

Lilian: Bonniol, he talked about different shapes that give energy—plants and water. (Yes.)

George: Yes, I remember you talking to us about making a sound vibration within ourselves—to have the feeling of this—and I rather fancy that the energy of the pyramid is like a ‘micro sound’ form of energy—a higher vibration than what we think of as sound-in-air. I feel there are two parts to it in a way: shapes have their energy, I can see that, and the pyramid going to an apex will have a sort of condensing effect as the sound rises to the top and beyond, but also the orientated pyramid with two sides facing the east-west direction has a collecting effect of energy I feel from its passage through the ether, with the rotation of the planet. So I think there is a collecting effect within the pyramid and an effect from the shape in refining that collected energy. So I feel that there are those two aspects to it and it’s a higher vibration which can get into things and modify structures. There’s one other point: the pyramids made on the Earth are of two different side angles. The Egyptian pyramids are built to the ‘pi’ ratio and the Russian pyramids are built to the ‘phi’ ratio, which is a steeper incline of side, so I rather suspect that the angle of the pyramid is quite flexible, but the orientation of the pyramid is very important.

Paul: I think the Central American pyramids are a different ratio again.

Of course the shape dictates the way the sound vibrations are used and as sound becomes more refined, then it reaches the point of not being audible to human ears—you cannot take one without the other. When you experience the sound within yourselves, remind yourselves of what you then felt. Can you remember?

George: Yes. I felt an on-going vibration within self.

Yes, until you became as one.

George: Yes, perhaps a better word than ‘on-going’ is a ‘resonance’.

Yes. What you should have felt was that sound energy being refined until you became unaware of the human form and you became as one with the sound energy. So you see, all shapes, all sounds go together and, after all, is not the human form in some shape? And where does the sound rise to? Were you aware of these conditions, or was it just a little too early for you to recognize what was happening? Yes, I feel that it was.

George: Yes, I was not aware of the sound rising to any particular place.

The sound will always rise to the pinnacle of the shape, to that point within the shape that allows that sound to vibrate at a higher degree.

George: So with ourselves it would rise to the top of the head... (Yes, yes.)

Lilian: How about a round shape, because in nature, the planets and so on, are often round...

Yes, you would have a vibration which would be surrounding the whole shape of the circle—no beginning, no end, but there would be a crescendo of sound and vibration.

Lilian: I was thinking of the energy that needs to keep the planets in place—it must be tremendous.

Yes, of course, but that is something that we cannot discuss at this particular time. I feel that to speak of shapes and energies is what you are now ready to receive.

George: I was wondering about a perfect cone on a round base; (Yes.) that would have its energy-enhancing effect, but perhaps it would not be a collector of energy in the same way that a pyramid collects?

No, of course not—because of the base, that would change the energy frequencies. There is so much that can be spoken about energies and while we speak of energies, my dear friends, have you become aware of the talking going on within your world of harnessing the waters of the seas? (Affirmed) I did tell you previously that that was the way forward.

George: You did indeed, yes.

Paul: There is so much energy there.

Yes. May we ask now for someone else's thoughts about the pyramids and the energies?

Paul: I was giving it thought, but I couldn't get much past the idea—it seems like it's a chamber then, like a musical instrument for producing certain vibrations, which—I guess it's got a very pragmatic use for the Egyptians and the ancient people. I think you indicated in the past that—I understood that the pyramids were involved in the travelling to other stars.

Yes, as the gentleman, my dear friend here (George in an earlier session) has noted that certain shapes and sides of the pyramids relate to those of other planets for the purpose of space travel, which was not unknown to those ancient civilization.

Jan: Were they (Egyptians) visited by other planets? (Yes.) They were—that's how they gained most of their knowledge?

The knowledge was innate within them, which would make it easier to accept other cultures from other planets. Their knowledge was indeed far superior to anything on this planet at this time.

Jan: At that time, or this time?

Far superior in their time.

George: And I think I can say that in addition to the pyramid energy that we talked about and how it becomes enhanced, I think I would be right in saying that there were further structures in granite and rocks (Yes.) within the Egyptian pyramids to further enhance and develop the energy.

Yes, you are correct and this is something I will discuss with you when we have more people to listen.

Yes, of course it is not only shape and sound but texture, and remember, as we have said, all things have their own vibration. You all, my dear friends, are nothing but vibration.

Jan: What came first in the ancient Egyptians, for example their thoughts—to entomb their dead so that they could pass into spirit more freely, in their belief that they take all their possessions with them...

That came to a later civilization. The knowledge of which we speak was innate within them.

George: I think we are speaking of a time which is 10,500 BC or thereabouts.

A little longer, yes.

Lilian: Our friend who visited last week from spirit who lived quite a long time ago when the (later) pyramids were being built. He was aware of the energy in water and the food.

As were all of those people—this knowledge belonged to all of that civilization. So you see it was normal to them, but gradually that knowledge was lost.

Jan: Why was the knowledge lost Salumet?

Because of the karma of the people.

Lilian: They didn't want to listen, I suppose.

Materialisation [sic] (Materialism?) was beginning to take hold. There are many, many reasons, but the downfall of many civilizations was caused by man's own ego and although that seems too simple, that is the basis of many, many civilizations' downfalls where mankind assumes a role of being the 'creator'.

Jan: Was that part of creation's—was that part of man's freewill or was that part of our evolution that we had to lose that to come full circle which I am sure one day we will. (Both.) Both...

Yes, both; yes.

George: I think what we are talking about having lost would come under the heading of 'spiritual attributes' (Yes.) and while one can write down material things, can keep records, and the records don't necessarily get lost, but spiritual attributes can get lost, through our deviation from spirit. Would that be fair comment?

Yes. I...

Jan: So the wealthier they became and the more natural minerals and gold and everything else they found in the Earth—that became their downfall.

And their beginning of abuse of all things spiritual.

Jan: Including themselves.

Yes, mankind basically, in simple terms, has lost his way; but as you well know my dear friends that is being reversed gradually in your world.

Jan: In our lifetime this time—the people in this room—we’ve just been talking about how many years before Christ? 10,000 before Christ did you say?

George: Well, Salumet says more than 10,500. (Yes.) But haven’t we come a long way spiritually in the last 100 years even?

As human beings, let me say it to you this way: You have always been spiritual beings, but you have been in the dark as far as recognizing those spiritual gifts. And perhaps ‘gifts’ would not be the correct word this time ...

Jan: They’re attributes as you put it, aren’t they?

Yes, they are innate within you, but the recognition of who and what you are over time, has become lost. Mankind’s focus has been placed in areas of living which are not spiritual, (Yes.) but slowly, as mankind has become more aware and able to accept and understand his own way of thinking, he can rationalize more easily that which he knows to be true, and at this time in your evolution you cannot deny what you know to be true. So, yes, you could say that you have ‘turned full circle’ I believe your words were.

Jan: I believe that one day we will, but I don’t think we are there full circle by any means yet.

I would not be here if that were the case! There is much, much work to be done.

Jan: The other thing is we are developing at a very fast pace.

Yes. In this one of your centuries, the whole of your planet has become much more aware, because of the great effort from our world to come to you in many forms and to help you to know and understand who and what you are.

Lilian: We are very grateful to you.

George: Yes, we are very grateful.

And I have to say my dear friends, apart from all of the other information given, that is what is the most important part of our coming to you, that each one of you, whether it be within this group or in the many, many others throughout your world, it is to recognize and to know that you are spirit and that you have the abilities of spirit at your call.

George: We are making contacts with other people around the world who seem to be active in presenting spiritual information.

Yes, much, much is being given.

George: Can I mention a new contact that we have just made or would that be a digression?

Of course, if you wish.

George: There’s one Victor Zammit in Australia who is a retired lawyer and he’s presenting evidence of the continuing life in spirit. He’s very active and has a website and his findings are going out to the world. I know he has several times sat in with a group and there is David Thompson who is a medium in the Australian group and he seems to be very good at materialisations. He has materialised Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and the materialised form shook hands with Victor Zemmit and he was most impressed with this. I wondered if you would have any comment about the idea of shaking hands with a materialized form?

But there should be no doubt within your mind my dear friend that this can take place.

George: Oh no, there is no doubt in my mind!

Firstly, I would say this to you: that that form of mediumship is becoming quite rare today, because very few people are prepared to sit as diligently as the one you have mentioned to allow this phenomenon to occur, But I would say to you, ‘materialization’ is good for all of your senses, because not only can you touch, you see, you experience the whole form of those who have gone—they can speak to you, therefore your hearing senses are in force and there can be no doubt when this occurs that spirit is indeed.

George: So, if our friend Victor is impressed in this way and in turn recounts this to the world, this is a useful presentation of evidence, can we say?

It has already been presented to your world by many people, but let me say that as long as you have sceptical people, the most amazing what you call 'evidence' you will not shake their foundations; but to those who are seeking, it is the kind of evidence which cannot be disputed. But again, as human beings, there are always doubts and suspicions and as in all forms of mediumship, it takes personal experience sometimes for people to truly accept. So, do not be surprised that this wonderful evidence is ridiculed by some, but I would say, apart from healing, it is one of the best forms of mediumship as far as giving evidence goes.

George: I can perhaps add that there has also been a materialization of the jazz musician Louis Armstrong with him singing and the sound can be played through computers today so that the evidence—I take your point that there will be many who will remain sceptical, of course, but the evidence itself and its presentation are I think becoming more impressive.

If you are a seeker of truth, then of course you would be impressed, but as I have said my dear friend, the past century of your living here on this planet has produced much evidence in the form of materialization and still people wish to deny what they see with their own eyes.

George: Yes, you are absolutely right, of course.

But I would say that this type of mediumship should never be lost and we are trying to encourage those who are capable of it to develop and come forward, but of course it takes many years of dedication from our world and from the medium involved.

Jan: Going back to the subject of energy, Salumet, is the ancient practice of Feng Shui altering the energies within our own environment? (Yes.) Obviously that would be of a similar but very much smaller—same vibration as we mentioned of the pyramids, wouldn't it?

Because everything has a vibration, not only human beings, everything vibrates at a different speed ...

Jan: Even a man-made material?

Yes, everything that exists vibrates. What you are speaking of is recognizing the best use of the energies available, whether it belongs to a light bulb or to a vase or whatever.

Jan: So we can all experiment within our own environments, can't we? (Yes.) We don't have to necessarily follow what somebody else has tried.

Yes, you should have that inner feeling for what is right and that would be a much better way to go, and not only be aware of the outer energies, but what is far more important is that you recognize that inner energy; and that then, my dear friend, returns you back to energy within the body and would help. You understand?

Jan: Yes I do.

Yes, that is a good way to go.

Jan: That's something I am interested in I'm definitely going to really try to mediate and concentrate on that.

Yes, it would be far better that you regain your own finely attuned instrument, and then you can become aware of all forms of mediumship which surrounds you within this lifetime.

Jan: Yes. It's a human feeling, but I feel very frustrated sometimes, which is a negative feeling I know, but all the information that is within, you have to spend so much time—it's the giving it the time...

Yes but the knowledge is worth waiting for.

Jan: I think it's the excitement rather than frustration, it's an excitement. Richard and I were talking about the knowledge that you have given us. He said that you could be sitting within a group of people on a train or bus and suddenly have this overwhelming sense of 'I know, I know' and you want to shout and share that knowledge, (Yes.) but you know you have to be one step at a time and tread carefully. I know exactly how he feels.

Yes, but my dear friend you must learn how to harness what you call your 'excitement', you must harness that energy within, and then whatever comes from within is what is supposed to happen in your lives. It will be a natural emergence of spirit—but I understand your words and I understand your impatience, if I may use that word, to create a situation of your knowing and your knowledge.

Jan: I'm sure we have all felt that, haven't we?

Yes. Does anyone else wish to comment?

Lilian: Sarah?

Sarah: All I was going to say was that just letting gradually the information come out or the knowing come out and I do find, although I have a tremendously long way to go, but I am beginning to—just suddenly things—I think, ah, I'm beginning to see things differently. The light is beginning to dawn, perhaps I should say that—just various things.

That is the kind of words I like to hear. If but one or two of you feels that the knowledge gained is helping you in your expansion of knowledge, then that is so good to hear.

Sarah: It's good to feel, too, so thank you!

But is it not just a recognition of who you are?

Sarah: Yes, I'm sure it is.

And not only who you are but who you have been and the whole form of your spirit. That is what you are giving out my dear friends, not only of who you are in this lifetime, but all of the knowledge that has been gained in times gone by. All of that knowledge is within you and it is there for you to use at any time that you choose.

Jan: I definitely feel that those people—I can only refer to those people in this room—I know that they are all used as beacons of light, if that's the way to describe it, (Yes.) many, many people come to us, do they not? You've said, haven't you Sarah?

Sarah: Yes.

Jan: People are drawn to you.

And can I say also my dear friends that people are drawn to your lights, even without your knowledge; they would be attracted to that spiritual light without your knowledge. So you see, your work as channels of lights are spreading all of the time.

Jan: I've begun to recognize when those other like-minded people that you may not even have met before, you're very much drawn to—I'm drawn to them as well (Yes.) and in conversation, it comes out—it's amazing, they're on a level and you know, we understand—few words are needed to be exchange.

Because your spiritual lights are compatible, shall we say, you are drawn together. That works also with those people, and I am sure you recognize also that there are certain individuals whom you feel you cannot approach or become too close to. (Agreed) That is the energy pull between opposites, yes, so instead of coming closer together you feel you must stay ...

Jan: ...avoid.

Yes—that is a good word.

Lilian: So we shouldn't feel guilty about this?

No, but what you must not do is to pass judgement, but to step back and to leave the situation as it is.

Jan: So it's still nice to smile and be pleasant, but...

Yes, but be careful of any negative thinking. So you see again, all of life is energy.

Jan: You can't get away from that word—that's how we started and that's how the conversation is still.

Yes, you are now beginning to realize that thought and energy patterns are as one and how you use those energies in the way of thought is most important to your spiritual well being.

Now my dear friends I feel for now I have spoken enough, but we will continue when we have a fuller group together in order that my words are heard by them also.

Sarah: They will get a copy of what you said today anyway.

Yes, but it will give them the opportunity to ask any questions before we move on to something different.

Lilian: Well thank you again, it's been very interesting.

George: Yes. It has been a very interesting evening and I'm sure we will all of us look forward to some further discussion of the pyramid energies.

And you see also my dear friends, that knowledge is built in the same way as energy—a little at a time becomes more refined. And that is what you are all achieving my dear friends. So as I leave you, again I say to you, place yourselves in the love of the Great Creative Force and all will be well. I also remain close to each one of you and will try to help each one of you as needed. (Thanks + farewells)

George's notes:

Energy from sea: The internet indicates much activity. The UK has eight possible 'tidal barrage' sites and off-shore turbines are the other likely development.

Egyptian pyramids: Earlier discussions are detailed in the Salumet book, pages 62 – 67, that took place over the period 1995 to 2003.

Evidence for life after death: The Society for Psychical Research was founded in 1882 and over the years, many books and papers have been published. So, for the last 124-years huge quantities of evidence have been presented. This has been much valued by many of open mind. A notable early work was 'The Survival of Man – Sir Oliver Lodge (1909), 379 pp. But as Salumet says, there will always be some who remain sceptical.

Victor Zammit's website: A regularly updated, interesting site: www.victorzammit.com

Just prior to the meeting, Graham had been talking about strange flight patterns of butterflies that had been observed, and this had sparked our interest.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you once more my dear friends.

Lilian: Yes it's great to be together.

I would like to say to you this time: I was aware of your discussion about your butterflies and rainbows and I would just like to say to you that the butterfly in your world is indeed used for showing some people that there is more to life than first they thought. After all, if you think about your butterflies, have they not gone through their own metamorphosis into the second stage of their existence? (Agreed) Therefore you can begin to see some connection. Yes—that is why the butterfly is used so often for these things.

Sarah: That's interesting because I remember watching a programme of some famous people who were visiting an old house in Italy and whenever a black butterfly appeared, there was an awful lot of spiritual activity within that house. It wasn't very nice spiritual activity, but it was always when the black butterfly appeared that that activity started.

Yes, but the association was with the colour.

Sarah: Ah right.

You see?

Sarah: So the black was not such a good colour.

The negative energy, yes—so remember my dear friends, be aware of all of nature's dealings with you, because within nature herself there lies many invitations for you to recognize the working of spirit.

(Agreed)

George: Butterflies are certainly very beautiful and a joy to be with. (Yes.)

Sara: Rainbows always bring joy and I think a feeling of hope as well.

And also the energy from the colours; remember we have spoken of colour vibrations and this too plays its part. So I have deviated a little this time, but I felt that it would be good for you to think a little more deeply about all of these things.

Lilian: Could I just say that last year I had a caterpillar—quite a large caterpillar. I looked it up in a book and it was an elephant hawk moth caterpillar and no way did I ever think I would be lucky enough to see the moth, because of course they come out when it is dark, but I did, in the garden not so long ago under a lilac bush. I wondered if that was coincidence or...

It is only that your awareness is now greater to all of these things; therefore you are more aware of what is happening around you.

Lilian: I did feel very, very lucky.

Yes, of course, and that is as it should be. There are many, what you call 'wonders', my dear friends, which are everyday happenings in our world, which are given to you in ways that you can recognize. If you are not fully aware of spirit as we near you, then we show you what you can and will understand, or at least gives you the opportunity to think about these things. You understand? (Yes.) Therefore my dear friends always look with those spiritual eyes. There are many ways in which we can touch you.

Sara: Yes, I had seen this metamorphosis symbolism recently when my friend embarked on a moth project at school with children, and I saw how the moth for her had many meanings, because she was going through a change herself. It was very interesting.

Yes, and of course she could recognize the many changes.

Sara: She's very aware in many ways and now she's wearing butterflies all the time—and I think she is aware of how important the change has been.

It is a good analogy, do you not feel? (Yes.) Yes, of course.

Now my dear friends, before we embark on further talks of energy and vibration of which I have promised you, we have one more exercise for you this time. I hope that each one of you will feel the energy which is you, which belongs to each person; and as we continue on this short journey, I would wish you my dear friends to speak among yourselves of what you experience and for this one time, we ask after this exercise, that there be some rescue work and we are attempting to try to use as many of you as we can. Therefore my dear friends open up your hearts to those who are in need. You can be used, you must not be afraid, because you are always, always protected. When you have experienced what I am about to tell you, we will then go on next time to what I have to say about pyramids and their energies and discussions we will have amongst us. I would like each one of you my dear friends to imagine yourselves, to use that spiritual mind to feel yourself within the vibration of a pyramid, to become that structure, to feel what the physical body is feeling and also to feel and understand with the spiritual mind what is happening. Do you have any questions before we proceed?

Sarah: We are going to be within the pyramid, not part of the pyramid?

To begin with you must feel yourself within, but I want you to become part of that energy, to express what you feel and what the mind is also experiencing. You understand what you are trying to achieve? (Affirmed) And as you begin to have these senses of vibrations, towards the end of your experience I would wish that each one of you joins together as one form of energy. Therefore, I leave it with you my dear friends for this time. There is much for you to achieve, so open up your hearts and your minds. I will leave it with you, my dear lady friend, (Lilian) and when this is complete, we will be with you for some rescue work. (Thanks expressed)

George's Notes:

There followed a period of 10-minutes silence as this exercise was pursued. We then discussed the feelings experienced. These included sensations of energy-blending, being drawn upwards and a feeling of freshness at the pinnacle of the pyramid. One of us visualised pyramid sides and a desire to rotate a little into favourable position. There was a feeling of smallness in relation to the greater expanse of energy. Mind seemed to diffuse into the greater energy shape and become part of it, all very difficult to describe. There was mention of dreaminess and following dream sequence.

Four rescues followed, through Eileen and Sarah. All were able to move on, thanks to Lilian's gentle encouragement.

Our dear friend Leslie was always drawn to the rescue work when he presided. He too then joined us for a chat, via Eileen, explaining that he just could not stay away with 'rescue' work going on. There was typically much humour as we talked, and we mentioned the several plants that were passed on to us that continue to thrive, including 'aloes'. We referred to the aloes he'd left behind and he declared that he hadn't been issued with any of those. And I quickly had to say: 'aloes without an aitch ... aloe variegata!'

I think I can say we are often aware of Leslie's presence, but it is so good that he also has a physical word from time to time.

~31ST July 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come to you this time, I feel that there is a great depletion of energy amongst you. This we will try to rectify before you leave this room this time.

Lilian: Thank you. I think it's all the hot weather that we've had.

I would say to you my dear friends that you must allow yourselves time to rest both physically and resting the mind. The two must go together if you are to remain physically strong and spiritually alive. Again, I will reiterate for you that you are in full control of this housing which you call the body. Each goes hand in hand—the physical and the spiritual mind must be in complete balance if you are to be strong. I feel my dear friends that sometimes as we are gathered here together, your thinking is strong, your awareness is high, but then as you enter back into your physical lives, much of what you know is forgotten.

Lilian: Yes, very true.

So I am gently reminding you my dear friends the importance of balance in your lives. I wish also to say to you that next time we come together I wish to speak with you about a subject that you have waited for and that will be: the energies available, and to the existence of the civilization of what you term the Egyptian race. So, I hope when we come together next time, you will have your questions ready for me and I know that you will find much of interest from what I have to tell you.

George: Yes I'm sure we shall.

Now, I will take questions, but for a short time only, because this time I wish to work with the instrument that I am using. But there will be just a little difference this time inasmuch as I will allow some retention of memory as she returns. Therefore as she returns to you, she will remember some happenings.

Lilian: She'll be thrilled.

We will leave the rest of the time to whatever is planned for you. Therefore...

Lilian: Before I ask the others about a question, may I ask one on behalf of Jim who was unable to come tonight? He's come two or three times, but he's poorly at the moment. He had been thinking a lot about your talking on thought and he was curious as to whether you had picked up the thought that he had sent to you—I don't know what the thought was. I was to ask you this if I had the opportunity. (Yes.)

George: I think the background of this is he is trying to piece together a structure for what is happening. Yes, he is seeking for answers, of course, and I entirely understand. But of course my dear friends, you know full well that my purpose is never to generalize. But in saying that, of course you know and understand that your thoughts are known to me, but it is not my intention to acknowledge every thought that comes to me. And what you have to remember is that, apart from the times when I come close to you on this Earth, I am returned to that pure energy from which I come. And although the thoughts will come to me from each individual, there are those in my world who will answer your thoughts and prayers. That is not to say that I dismiss those thoughts—not at all—but you have to understand the workings and the structure of energy.

George: Yes I wondered about that. There must come into the pattern: appropriate placement of thoughts. Yes, of course. And although I receive the thoughts, I am not that energy that is able to create for you the answers. But if your thought is strong enough, as you know, it is always received—but your answers may not always come as you wish. I accept the thoughts, but my sole purpose is not in recognizing them, and if that my dear friends sounds rather dismissive to you, that is not my intention. I blend with the energy from whence I come, but others will take charge of those thoughts. Can you understand what I am trying to tell you?

Lilian: Yes.

George: Yes, I think we're beginning to see a certain beauty in this as opposed to an awkward complexity, shall I say. We have our complexity of things in the physical side to our living, but I feel it has to be a little bit different from that in spirit.

Yes. You will not fully understand, you cannot, and again I say to you, the difficulty lies in trying to find words to explain non-physical happenings. It is almost impossible for you to understand the laws of all energy. You see, when you send thoughts, you recognize them as physical attributes when indeed they belong to the spiritual energy of life. So you see, the matter is quite complex. (Yes.) I would say only to the gentleman involved, to carry on searching, to continue to send his thoughts to me if he wishes, but he must try to recognize that outside of this room I am but energy and not the physical association that he thinks I am.

George: Yes, I think that has to be seen as a very widespread error in our thinking.

Yes and because he is seeking, he feels because I possess a voice in these meetings that it is like sending a thought to another human being.

George: Yes, that really does help clarify, I feel.

It is a complex matter, but I will say once more that any subject that becomes personalized, I will always try to be kindly in my answers but firm in the fact that that is not my purpose.

George: Yes thank you for that. Perhaps we should see personalization as not always appropriate?

It is not always appropriate. I know I have given help sometimes personally, but if you remember well, I have stated that there are many who walk in your world who can help with these personalized matters. My task is on a different energy vibration. I hope that will help your gentleman friend.

George: It is helpful to all of us, thank you.

Lilian: Any more questions?

Sara: I have got one actually. I don't know whether you will wish to comment on a personal situation, but I know somebody who has asked if I can ask you for advice. She's been having a very severe test recently—she's called Ros—with her partner/her husband who has completely changed character recently. She didn't really understand what the cause was. We explored all possibilities because it was so strange; we didn't know if it was caused by drugs he was taking for his illness or even we wondered about spirit possession, because he became almost vindictive towards her when previously it was not the case. We wondered what caused it or whether it was wrong thinking over a period of time. I wondered if it would be possible for you to give any guidance.

Again I will say, this is not my task, but I do accept your question because you are fearful for your friend—yes, you are fearful for the gentleman in question.

Sara: Yes I am.

It is not for you, my dear friend or your lady friend to question the actions of another. What I would say to you is this: that rather than try to find answers and explanations for his behaviour, is for her to look within herself in order that she may deal with a changed situation in their lives. Once she can accept that she cannot be responsible for his actions, she will then begin to help not only herself but she will help him. So I would suggest to her that she steps a little way back from the situation and changes her own way of thinking about the situation.

Sara: That is very helpful, thank you.

This applies to each one of you my dear friends—when life seems tougher for you or you cannot find the answers you are looking for, the fault lies with you, not the situation or the other person. But I would suggest that you continue to support her whenever possible, because your worlds can be healing for her. (Thank you.)

Now, my dear friends, I will not leave you because I wish to work with this instrument. I ask only that whatever work is here for you this time, that there be no loud voices for a little time. As always I leave you with much love, with upliftment in your lives and with the understanding of your own greatness.

(Thanks and farewells)

George's notes:

Perhaps there is an important issue raised here. The spoken words of Salumet SEEM like they are from a personality, because he has used voice expression ... so that we can understand his message. But his true 'self' is of course pure energy, as is the case for all light beings. Our impression of God too, is not a 'head and shoulders' physical figure. The Creative Principle must also be viewed as pure energy. And in one sense, the closest we materialised Earthlings can get to the word of God, is to listen to a being of pure energy.

~7th August 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you this time. Your laughter before I came has helped to raise the energy within this room, so I thank you all my dear friends. As I told you last time I would speak with you about the ancient civilisation which—(Eileen coughed) ... I said that we would talk about the ancient civilisation known to you as Egypt and about energy in as much as you will understand. Much has been written and said about your ancient civilisations, much of which is incorrect. And I know to this day there is much puzzlement about the structures that you call pyramids. We have spoken recently about smaller versions of the pyramids and the energies which they contain within. But let us go back in time to that time when mankind had much knowledge, when that Egyptian race should have been leaders of their time in the way of spirituality, but of course, that word would not have been known to them.

George: Might I ask if that would have been the time of Osiris?

We go further back, we go further back in time, when many from our world came to advise and to help this planet to become—I will use today's phrases for your understanding—to become more spiritual in nature. The people of that time had much knowledge within. They understood much of the way of nature in your world. Much was made of the Earth, the Fire, the Air and all that was natural in your world. They also had the abilities of spirit in as much as they recognised the transmutation of energies and how energy could be used to benefit mankind. They understood what man has now lost. I would say when first they began to build—and I say to you: the knowledge came to them from within, from that innate understanding, but it also came to them from other beings from other planets. So, you understand my dear friends, how much knowledge they had before them. As they began their structures, their building work, it was for the purpose of 'travel' and 'time' and to be in alignment with the sun and the planets at that time. These structures were not for, as used in later days, as burial mounds for their pharaohs. That comes later and I will explain a little to you. Within the structures that they built would be a chamber that would be used by all—man, woman, child and even the animals of that time. It was used like today's people would use your cathedrals; for upliftment, for healing and to gain knowledge. Within these structures there would be one who would be willing to teach, who had come to this planet for that very purpose. Therefore these buildings were always in alignment to nature. And, as we have spoken briefly, the energies within pyramids is most powerful. I will hesitate at this point for any questions that you may have at this point.

George: Yes, regarding those who came from elsewhere, the names that I have are 'Osiris' and his queen 'Isis', and there was a son 'Horus'. And it is my information that these were the last of that biological line from elsewhere.

Yes, that information is correct. That is why I said we go further back, because they were indeed the last in that line.

George: Yes, thank you.

You understand?

George: Yes, and there is a connection there that I wish to ask about. The Egyptian pharaohs that followed, there is one source which claims that they are incarnations of Horus...

Yes, we will discuss this—yes, this is where problems begin to arise. From a race of great knowledge, mankind suddenly realises that he can have status. In that land at that time, because they had abundance of good earth, water, air and such to be used—as well as limestone, granite and all of these material things.

George: Yes, and which would have been wonderful materials for construction...

Yes, and which were indeed used for the later pyramids, but the pyramids of which I have spoken were constructed both spiritually and manually, whereas the later pyramids had mainly manual workers.

George: Yes, it's wonderful to have that confirmed. (Yes.)

Paul: Is that where sound comes into it, to help with the construction of the pyramids?

Sound of course was used, and the sounds were used in the hieroglyphics later used on all structure—on the pyramids, on papyrus, on stone, in many ways, and I believe you probably will know that the coding on these drawings and words—pictures, were to do with sound—connective sounds—I will explain as we go along. So we have reached a time when pharaohs decided that they were gods, and some I have to say were reincarnations, and you know about this subject, and will accept now that some pharaohs were reincarnations of previous, what you like to term, 'gods'.

George: Yes, I was wondering if there was a parallel there with the fourteen Dalai Lamas that I believe are reincarnations of Buddha...

Yes, the same kind of situation, but with the Egyptian race, it is a slightly different situation. Let me explain this to you: as time progressed the pharaohs realised that they could amass great wealth and it is shown on their drawings that the more cattle they could have, the wealthier and more outstanding they became. Therefore materialism started to creep into their lives. But their downfall was that they began to think of themselves as infallible and that they themselves were godheads; and slowly, slowly this created many, many downfalls—many pharaohs came to no good.

Paul: It sounds much like what was said about Atlantis.

Of course—it is the same, it is greed of mankind, it is a denying of that inner knowledge, yes.

Lilian: So the people that came from the planets, would they have visited other parts of our planet?

At that time, no, because the Egyptian lands and the building of the pyramids was for distance and travel. It was a point of unison with the sun, the moon and the stars, and pyramids were built to face north, south, east, west. But the details, and indeed they were so accurate, came from those space travellers at that time.

Lilian: Would they have looked similar to human beings?

At that time, I would say, they would take the form so the recognition would not make the people fearful, and this is where we bring in 'energy', the vibration, and how—you remember I have taught you that it is not static, it is ever-moving and energy can transmute itself into whatever, and especially the higher energies, the higher vibrations that come from our world, in the same way as I have told you about the angels, can change shape, can become whatever they wish and this is what indeed happened at that time. I am sure my dear friends, this all sounds very fanciful to you in this day and age, but I want you to realise that that civilisation had great, great knowledge.

George: Yes. There was one ancient historian who referred to those visitors as 'gods' and differentiated them from the ordinary people.

Yes, because they had powers which surpassed, may I say, what the Egyptian civilisation recognised. So to them—and of course you must remember that although they had great knowledge, this also became coupled with superstition, which became another part of their downfall.

George: Yes. Could I ask another question (Yes.) which may relate to the energy? An old name for the pyramid complex was 'Rostau' (Yes.) and Rostau means I understand: the shaft to the Duat, the Duat being the sky-map of stars. (Yes.) Now would that shaft be the energy shaft that rises vertically from a pyramid? Yes. It is that light energy which has been given those names. It is the spiritual energy which is created within. Yes.

George: Yes, I thought there would be a connection. (Yes.) Thank you.

Paul: Could I just ask you: is the spiritual energy connected to the Earth's energy that forms in these pyramids?

Of course, but you must realise that the Earth energy is dense. It is the same energy but it is denser because it belongs to the Earth; in the same way that you as a human being are much denser in mass than someone would be who exists in spirit, but it is all the same energy—it has to be, because we are connected to all things. Is that helpful?

Paul: Yes, it's becoming clearer, a little.

Yes. Energy, my dear friends, will always be perplexing for you, because as I said last time, trying to put into human words something which is nonphysical is the most difficult task that we encounter.

George: This is all fitting together very nicely, and a title given to Osiris was: 'Lord of Rostau'.

Yes—yes. You have researched well my dear friend. Your knowledge is admirable and I congratulate you on it. But I am here to try to clarify any queries or questions that you may have.

George: Thank you. It's wonderful to have confirmation, because there is so much information, and it's a matter of trying to pick the correct information.

Yes, and you must use your inner feelings for this to happen.

George: Yes and another factor that came up was the connection to the star Sirius. (Yes) That is the star that has been mentioned in connection with this.

Yes. But of course the problem today in your world is that, as time continues, then the stars and planets become a little out of sync—is that how you would say it?

George: Yes, that's wonderfully expressed, yes!

That also you have to take into consideration. But let me continue a little further. There came to that civilisation, many pharaohs—good, generally kind people, but who became a little misguided about their purpose in life—and then the materialistic side of life came to be. And then, because of their great ego, they decided that they should have pyramids as pharaoh's resting places, which they so became, and in fact, some of the pyramids were built with manual labour and also the help of spiritual knowledge, because within that land they had all the resources to hand, and of course they had that great river which today I believe you call the Nile. So they had water, they had manpower, they had granite, they had limestone, and they had rock.

George: And I believe they had a more favourable climate than they have today...

Yes of course. Everything was in their favour for these structures to be built. So, that is when, I would say, about 9,000 years, because I know you like to stick to times (Chuckles) ... about 9,000 years before Jesus the Christ.

George: Yes. That also fits beautifully with certain information, which is by no means generally accepted on this planet.

I assure you my dear friend, it is around that time that the pharaohs decided, because they thought they were gods, that they should have a special burial places, and also that their cartouches should be specially made for them with the information for which they felt they had become great. I do not know if you are aware of this, but there are many in existence today, to show of these things.

George: There are many cartouches...

Yes. (Yes.) Yes, and of course, the hieroglyphics used—because you have to remember also, at that time, papyrus was very, very expensive, although the Nile produced much, much had been used in former times, so by the time we come to this era, papyrus was most expensive and so other forms were used to draw their pictures, which tells a story and which also brings us to 'sound'. And I can tell you that the Egyptian race used the sounds of 'oh', 'eye' and 'pee'. But they had a way of phrasing words by using sounds to put together, to shorten the examples of what they were relating to what they thought were the gods, because remember the superstition, because they had become a race filled with superstition and how to please their gods and their pharaohs. And the pharaohs had overcoming (overriding?) power of the people at that time. But still, that civilisation had an abundance of great wealth. Their lands became farmlands. The grape became most important and they learned how to harvest. There was much going on in their lives. But they did reject what they should have been doing, and that was spreading the word about spirit, the energy and the ability to tell time, and also the ability to travel in space.

Paul: Did you say the ability to tell time?

Yes. Yes, the pyramids were used for time.

(Salumet's voice was fading)

Paul: How would that work?

Jan: Using the sun?

Yes.

Jan: Like the sun dial?

Yes. (Pause) I feel for this time, the energy is depleting a little.

Jan: Salumet, before you go then, may I ask a travel question that sort of links to energy and travel? One of my grandmothers who's now in spirit, she used to say that she would be taken in her dream state to fly, and one of the places she used to visit were the pyramids. (Yes.) I'm really interested to know the energy source in her dream state that she was using, and if she was correct. She'd fly all over the world...

Because the pyramids still retain that element of energy, many peoples—I have to be quick I am afraid this time, because of the energy—she would have been drawn to it. As there are many places in your world that people wish to visit in their sleep state. Sometimes it is to the top of the highest mountain, which again, in a form is a pyramid, and ...

Jan: Thank you. (Thanks expressed)

George: Salumet, this has been a wonderful evening and a very important evening, for us and for all who read the transcripts. Thank you so much. (Thanks/appreciation expressed by all)

I will try to say some more next time.

George: Wonderful

Lilian: Yes, we look forward to that.

As Salumet withdrew this time, we were left quite spellbound. One came through and quietly asked if Sara would conduct us on an inspired spiritual journey—a journey that gave us more awareness of our feelings within.

George's notes:

Scope: The data given confirms and considerably extends the facts given in SALUMET ... His Mission to Planet Earth, pp. 62-67.

Time: An understanding of time would have been important in space travel as well as in agriculture. The Egyptian 'star clock' was based on 36 star-groups in the heavens. And Salumet refers to stars being 'in sync'. One full cycle of Earth precession in fact takes 25,920 years, so that the stars get perfectly back into their same sync as seen from Earth just once in 25,920 years. (We are perhaps more familiar with the 12 zodiac houses, but the Egyptians divided further into 36 for their calendar.) There may well be more said on the time connection next time.

Written language: Salumet touches upon a very important development here. It was Thoth who was associated with writing. The hieroglyph form continued for many years, and Salumet indicates that a simpler form became necessary. Hence the development of what is known as cursive script. From hieroglyphs came hieratic, demotic and eventually Coptic and Roman and Greek alphabets. So the Egyptian hieroglyphs represent the mother of our written language. The important discovery of the Rosetta stone (1799), bearing hieroglyph, demotic and Greek script made translation between the forms possible for modern mankind.

Dating: The date of 9,000 BC for the origin of the Great Pyramid is a little more recent than the date of 10,450 BC given by Graham Hancock, derived from state of weathering and other considerations, but not too far different. The date of 9,000 BC is in line with the statement of Herodotus that 341 priest-kings (pharaohs) followed Horus if their average life span as pharaoh is taken as 25 years

Rock: Having mentioned granite and limestone that were so important in pyramid construction, it seems odd that Salumet should separately mention 'rock'. I think this would be the bed-rock on which the structures were built. It does not matter about the type of rock for this of course, just so long as it is a strong foundation to receive the huge weight. We shall see about this in due course.

Energy fade-out: It occasionally happens that the power fades at the close of a session, and it just goes to show how dependent we are on the available energy.

'Egyptian Mythology': Perhaps the main factor in all this is the endorsement that this is a factual cornerstone of Earthly history, including the origin of our ability to write and division of the heavens into star-groups for purpose of time measurement. A dictionary definition of myth is: traditional narrative involving supernatural or fancied persons ... fictitious person or thing or idea. And there is much on the internet listed under the heading: 'Egyptian Mythology'. But this matter is just as real as Troy; also once very similarly regarded as mythic until Heinrich Schliemann dug it up. Osiris, Isis and Horus were real flesh-and-blood beings who made their mark on Egypt in ancient times and this has had its knock-on effect for our own society today. And we should not overlook the fact that the Egyptian race had already developed their spirit potential within, to a degree that led to and made possible this eventuality that happened around 9,000 BC. And there is no need to spend money on an air-ticket when 'astral-projection tours' are available in sleep-state!

~21st August 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to be with you this time. I have to say to you my dear friends that there has been amongst you a little unsettlement spiritually with some of you. We hope that we can help this time to rectify these conditions within those who are feeling not quite themselves. (Thanks expressed) This time I would like, instead of speaking to you, I would like to place before you my dear friends one question that I hope you feel you can answer with all the knowledge of spirit and with truth and honesty. Whatever you feel we would like to be spoken aloud in order that each one here can hear the spoken word. My question to you my dear friends is this: 'Who are you?' Three very simple words, but let me say to you, when you think about these three simple words, you should have a sense of purpose and knowing within and although it might sound easy, I feel my dear friends that at this point in time it is a question that each must ask of himself.

Lilian: So it's, 'what am I?'

'Who am I?' Yes. Also, before I withdraw this time, I would like you all, my dear friends, to consider which part of understanding, of awareness, you would like me to discuss with everyone in this room. Do you understand? And I will take one topic at a time whenever we meet in time to come. Therefore, I say to you, now will be your opportunity to think deeply about what you do not fully understand, because my dear friends you know that not only is my purpose in bringing you knowledge, but in trying to help each one of you to become much more aware. And with these words, I ask, 'who are you?' Try my friends to be honest and to express yourselves freely, and if I may say, you may even find that your own human emotional side may come to the surface. I will leave it with you dear lady. (Lilian) I will work quietly with this instrument whilst you continue with this self-awareness. I leave you as always surrounded with much love and light.

During the next 20-minutes or so, each one in turn expressed their feelings as to identity. The various notions embraced personal identity, objectives, connection to spirit, being a minute part of creation and Creative Principle etc.

Salumet then returned:

I have to say just a few more words this time. I have listened to your words carefully my dear friends and I have to say to you that for the most part, your understanding of yourselves is still based in the 'ego I' of the material world. Did you notice how often the words 'I, I, I?' And of course that is the way of your language. But what I would wish you to think about as who you are, how about 'I am love', 'I am all-knowing', 'I am you as you are me'? That realization of leaving behind that material individual and seeing your true spiritual selves as that spark of divinity which brings you all together, that is the 'I' I would wish you to cultivate. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Sarah: You said 'I am love', all spirit would be love ...

To a degree.

Sarah: Right, that's what I was going to say, because I was thinking that ...

Yes, to a degree. It is a forward path, but you are all sparks of divinity and that cannot be anything other than goodness and love, and it is only human lifetimes that can change that. You understand?

Sarah: So if you do good things, you increase energy, you increase love. Likewise if you do the opposite, you deplete all that...

Yes. Remember, I have said that energy expands, is not static and so therefore it is always at the will, especially of you humans on this planet. But you have to, my dear friends, rise above the human thoughts and always, as our dear gentleman friend expressed so succinctly I felt, that you are part of a much, much wider energy. You are energy, you are love and you have all the knowledge.

George: Yes, we probably all feel it but it's difficult sometimes to express in words.

Yes. There is this time almost a tangible energy within this room and because of going inwards and trying to express your true selves, you have helped to create the energy here, so imagine my dear friends if each time you came together, you recognized the power of the energy that you are, how much greater would be spiritual happenings within this room. It is something to work towards.

Paul: Sort of things like, disengaging from your personality.

Yes. You must—you must if you are to truly know yourselves. I have expressed those words to you so often and I feel sometimes I am like, I believe you call: a record that sometimes becomes stuck.

Paul: I think that we forget too quickly though, so we need reminding.

Try to put aside the human thinking and to just be; then your recognition will become greater. I hope my dear friends it has given you something else to think about this time. (Affirmed)

Paul: Yes—something to aspire to.

You are doing that of course. But to recognize your awareness is good for that growth and understanding. So instead of thinking too much, I suggest that you feel—feel and the understanding will be greater.

George: Yes I think we are somewhat in awe of your succinctness, Salumet. We can't match that!

As always, your words are most kind, but I do not come to look for recognition. You know full well, my dear friends that is not my purpose. My purpose is to help you in your understanding of the knowledge that has been lost by humankind. And remember, this is not new knowledge; it is truth that has always been.

George: I think there is sometimes this feeling of 'I have been here before'.

I can assure you, you most definitely have—as you well know, but what you do not know is how many times or the length of your existence on this planet—and really that does not matter. But this is a lifetime that each one of you has chosen to return and to recognize that knowing that you have lost. And that is why my dear friends, when you accept my words, you feel a degree of understanding, only because it is knowledge that you already have innate within you. You understand? (Affirmed)

George: I think I for one, have been a little confused in the past about the ego thing, which you mention and I have felt it to be something useful and something that can be used in organizing and presenting ideas and thrashing through things, and I guess there comes a time when that has to be put aside.

Yes, I do not wish you to deny your humanity, after all you are cloaked in human form and you must use that housing which you have been given; you must look after the human form and all that goes with it, including your brain. So, do not try to dismiss that part of it, but remember it is only a covering. That is all I say to you.

George: And the ego is all right as long as it doesn't get above itself, to use an expression...

Yes. I would agree with those words.

Rod: Would I be rude in asking: we've been back a number of times you say—have we progressed in coming back this number of times?

I would say to you my dear friend that the word 'progression' can be a little confusing, because after all, individual lives are meant to teach something to you and even those who have led what you term 'evil lives' or lives which you would not term 'good' have indeed learned something. And all of that learning is retained in spirit—nothing is ever wasted. So I will answer your question the way that I feel you need to know the answer—and yes, most people progress and if it helps your understand to believe it in that way, then that is fine by us. No life is ever wasted.

George: I think the difficulty for us is that the progression is not just along a single road but along a mass of roads.

Yes. Many veins to lead towards one road, many lifetimes leading to the same goal and many lifetimes to reach the top of the ladder, which then you will find will then extend even more and you are forever seeking. Then it becomes even more confusing to the human brain. We ask only in any lifetime that you try to adjust to human life, because, as you all know, life brings to you many problems and difficulties, and for others it is a smooth pathway, but that does not mean that one life is more difficult than another; only that it is taking different directions. You understand? (Affirmed)

Rod: And those around, I suppose, are affected?

You do not come to this life without first knowing who you will become in contact with. There is a pact you make before you return to human form, to be with those with whom you can learn the most and help the soul to progress. Sometimes you choose more difficult lives than others, but in every lifetime there is always experience that is before you to learn and that is never wasted. I hope you understand.

Rod: Yes. I'm beginning to understand it. It's a large task; I didn't realize it's such a task really. I thought it was an easy thing to be in life, but to progress on...

It is not always easy, but it is worth what you achieve.

Sarah: When you say we know the people who we are going to become in contact with, who we progress with ... it wouldn't be everybody that we have come into contact with, it would only be just a few, the main people we have come into contact with...

Yes. Of course and as all things, as the branches of a tree, there are not just a few main branches; those main branches have smaller branches leading from them to create that formation of the large tree. Yes there are I believe you might say, 'main players', main players who provide within the structure of your lives the opportunity for the experiences that you must have. And of course, you cannot live on this planet and not encounter many, many peoples. Of course you must realize, you oft times meet peoples that you instantly back away from; that is because you are not blending well together. But that does not stop the meeting, because my dear friend, it is another lesson for you to learn. It gives you the opportunity for understanding, for forgiveness perhaps. You see?

Lilian: Yes, forgiveness is a big part of lessons we have to learn, I imagine.

Rod: Probably one of my biggest puzzles, Salumet, is forgiveness, because karma keeps coming in, and I just don't understand that. Karma and forgiveness doesn't seem to go hand-in-hand and there must be something deeper in this that I cannot understand.

Karma and forgiveness—you do not feel you can forgive?

Rod: Oh, yes, very much so.

Why do you ...

Rod: But then you say that people come back onto Earth and they suffer through karma and I assume that is because they've done something bad in their previous life.

You must not judge my friend. Why do you assume that it must be bad? Karma is only dealing with what has not been dealt with in another lifetime. It can be a fear, it can be unforgiving attitudes. It is not always that you have done wrong—I do not like to use that word, because all of life is light and darkness. Karma only means that you must do what has been left undone. That is the simplest way to look at karma.

Rod: That's a big help.

Karma is only a word used by people in your world who at times would like to control others by explaining actions in their lives as being 'bad'; karma is not bad, it is 'unfinished business'.

Rod: I should love to read this passage out to my wife, because that's always been a bit of a problem between my wife and myself, trying to argue that one out. So thank you very, very much for that.

There is no need to argue my dear friend.

Laughter

Understanding—understanding of...

Rod: A friendly chat ... sorry! (Chuckles)

I forgive you!

More laughter

Perhaps now your friendly discussions can be looked upon with different eyes.

Rod: Yes! I'm so glad you've said that.

Sarah: When you said—when the twin towers in America, the planes were flown into them and they were wrecked, you said that was karma.

Again, when we speak of karma, it is not karmic just for individuals: there is karma that belongs to places and to countries and to planets. Again, you are generalizing about a word that is much misused in your world.

George: I think one expression of our language is 'political karma'.

Of course. You have to recognize again the power of thinking and you know my dear friend how powerful the thought is.

Sarah: Yes.

Yes, you all understand this now.

Sarah: You have taught us well.

Yes. So you then have to see the bigger picture behind thought, and there are many people who have thought in a lifetime and carried those, shall we say, 'damaging thoughts', for want of a better word. But that has to be resolved at some point. That is when in the next lifetime they will pay, as you would say, their karma. It is only unfinished business.

Sarah: Thank you very much.

Rod: This cosy chat has sort of brought me a lot closer to you Salumet. I thought I was close before but...

We do not wish you to be too close just yet?

General laughter

I am happy to answer any questions that you may have, but we are not ready for you.

(Rod laughed a lot at the cosmic joke, and was happy to learn that at 84 years of age, his current life continues)

Rod: That is rather nice to know. I am hogging this a bit but when I started with coming to you it was due to meeting Sarah when she said, 'But we are only a young planet, Rod'. This—what, a young planet? Now, was that meeting, as you said just now, one of those things that had to happen? Was it a planned meeting from your side?

There comes time in individual lives when their pathways take them down a certain road and you have to understand, as all my dear friends here do, that you have a freewill; but opportunities are placed on your pathway throughout your lives and it is then dependent upon whether you make the right choice or not. The opportunity was placed and you accepted that road, to come—as I might add, you should have—to come to listen and to learn.

Rod: Thank you very much from the bottom of my heart. Thank you.

As you will realize that every individual within this room has taken many years of Earth life to come together once more. Their daily lives are quite diverse, but they have been placed in a position where they have had the opportunity, in agreement with their choices, to come together once more. So yes, opportunities are always there throughout everyone's life.

Sarah: May I ask: was Rod one of the monks in our monastery?

I have to say he was not. But they do not all have to have been part of that community. There have been other lifetimes.

Sarah: So we have known each other before in previous lifetimes?

You are all of the same soul group. This is something you will understand when you return home to our world. And now my dear friends, I really must depart from you this time. I could not leave without saying to you how much I appreciated your thinking, but I did feel that I had to readjust your thinking just a little.

George: We gladly listen to your words on that. Did you wish us to voice suggested topics for further discussion?

Yes, if you will. Tell our dear lady friend, who will, when next I come to you, will tell me and we will find the time to discuss whatever you wish to discuss.

Lilian: Maybe your instrument will have a question as well.

It is entirely her choice.

Thanks were given to Salumet for the visit.

George's Notes:

Perhaps we are beginning to see, or 'feel' ourselves, as less fixed within the planetary biology and somehow less dependent upon it. That other domain (of our more subtle knowing) is forever ongoing and free from all those awful hiccups that we encounter from day-to-day as part of an entirely material fabric. 'Eye' is an important part of the biology. The 'ego I' is a useful part of our physical being, just so long as it doesn't get out of hand. But the 'I' of spirit, of divinity, is all-powerful and forever. It embraces all, and the one you see is the one you be. Our connection to that more fundamental 'I' can always of course be strengthened to good purpose, and Salumet is helping with this.

~5TH September 2006~

There was a longer delay than usual before Salumet came through this time:

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Before I continue, I ask please that you remove the bracelet from this instrument's arm.

Lilian removed Eileen's bracelet, as requested.

Thank you. I would ask you my dear friend if you will relay to this instrument to please refrain from wearing anything which is magnetic like the bracelet.

Lilian: Yes we will. I'm sure she will be happy to do that.

It is to do with the energy, of course.

Sarah: Was that what the delay was with you coming, Salumet? Were you having problems with the energy in the bracelet?

It was interfering and it was a little difficult to raise the arms of the instrument.

[When Salumet is about to come through, his instrument's (Eileen's) arms begin to rise up and then stay raised for the duration of his visit.]

You may even find that the voice this time seems a little different because of this.

Sarah: Yes. It is a little bit quieter, not quite so clear.

George: Having removed the bracelet, is there still a residual energy from that.

Yes, but I will clear it in one moment.

George: Is there something we can do?

Thank you, but no.

As I come to you this time, the energy with such a small number is good this time and because of this we feel it appropriate to take advantage and to allow those close to you to try to use that energy in whatever way they can. I, of course, will continue to work with this instrument and therefore ask that there be no sudden loudness. Again we ask only that you have open hearts and minds to what is available to you. And of course I cannot come to you without asking if you have pondered my words of last time.

Paul: Who are we?

Lilian: Yes, I have thought about it.

Sarah: I'm afraid I didn't.

No. No matter, there is much time for you all to come to know yourselves well. And before I take my leave, you have some topics that you wish me to discuss in our next meetings.

George: Yes please. I'm afraid I haven't given a lot of thought to what was said last time, because this is the time of the year when the children are home from school and we have been enjoying the company of grandchildren this week.

Which of course brings great joy—so we cannot deny you joy within your lives.

George: So sometimes the spiritual thinking is put on hold for just for a short time. As to topics, we have spoken on synchronicity several times. It would be nice to have words on the orchestration of synchronicity and how this comes about if that is possible.

Yes, I understand. Perhaps we can discuss that for you next time. (Thank you.)

Lilian: I know the question you asked: 'Who were we? Who are you?' So the next morning on the telephone I put it to my daughter and she said that off the top of her head she would say she was an energy and she would then eventually join a greater energy. Would that be a fairly good answer?

It is apt, yes, of course, to recognize as I told you, not to recognize the 'physical I am' but the 'spiritual I am' and of course she is energy as we all are. So that is a good starting point.

Lilian: She will be pleased. I will tell her.

Paul: It has also been said that energy is thought, so you could say that we are a collection of thoughts.

That is a good analogy. Yes, that is along the lines which I would wish you to take.

Sarah: May I just ask a question on behalf of my son, Salumet?

Of course.

Sarah: He said that he had an elderly lady in her 80s who'd had a lot of problems, a lot of illnesses, but she was still walking into the city and walked into the city to see him to talk about business. She suddenly started talking to Ben about how her grandfather had told her that family didn't come from this planet; they had been chased through wormholes by the enemy and the enemy had gone in the sea and they had gone on the land. There was a bit more to the story but that was the gist of it. Would that be true? I think you have talked to us about people from other planets coming onto this planet and that perhaps we didn't mix, but I wondered if you could just say a few words about this for me.

Of this particular story, I would say that is exactly what it is—a story from those gone, whose imaginations have been fed by things heard and elaborated as time has continued. I hope that answer is satisfactory.

Sarah: I'm sure it is. I was dubious so that sounds fine to me.

But do not in any way ridicule that person's hopes or that person's views, because if it has brought comfort to her, then so be it.

Sarah: I'm not sure how much comfort it actually did bring to her, because she was told that the enemy had gone in the sea and that her family had gone on the land and that she wasn't to travel over the sea, because the enemy would get her. So in actual fact she confined herself to Australia, she had been all over Australia and she had lots of money so she could have gone all over the world, but she had actually only stayed in Australia for fear of going over the sea.

Yes and her fear has kept her captive. That is why at this stage of her existence you cannot change her thinking. She will find in time what is true.

Sarah: Thank you very much for that.

Now I will leave you because there are those waiting who wish to make impressions upon you, whether it be words or pictures or feelings, but my dear friends I ask only that you express what you feel.

Lilian: Yes we will. (Thanks + farewells)

~25th September 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As we come together this time, we give thanks to the Great Creative Force, we give thanks for bringing us together once more. (Pause) As we come together this time, I am sure that you remember my words of last time, when it was put to me that we may speak on particular subjects and our dear gentleman friend asked that we might discuss 'synchronicity'.

George: Yes.

Yes. I am of course happy to have discourse upon this subject, so do you have a particular question for me?

George: Well, I do have a question as it happens. I've been in correspondence with Elaine, whose husband John passed to spirit last year. And before he passed, Michael from New Zealand telephoned, and Elaine asked Michael if he would like John to try to contact him after passing, and Michael said he would very much like that. More recently, Elaine wrote a letter to Michael recalling that moment. And within about an hour of writing, Michael booted his computer, which was malfunctioning, and written across the screen was: I AM NOT DEAD. Because it was malfunctioning, he re-booted and again the message on the screen: I AM NOT DEAD. There is a rational explanation for the origin of the words, which were part of a music album advertisement. But the timing was amazing and Elaine asked me to see if you have any comment on that and what was in her mind, I know is: would John have had any part in that apparent synchronicity?

I understand your question—thank you. Firstly let me say: do you remember my past words to you that communications from our world were altering, and that much more use would be made by electrical gadgets?

George: Yes, I recall your words.

Yes. That is my first statement to you. What better way to make contact with a loved one or an associate than to use the energy of that electricity. (Yes.) So I say this to you now, that of course, what you call 'synchronicity' was in fact, straightforward communication from our world.

George: Yes—thank you.

What I term synchronicity is just very slightly different. (Yes.) Of course, these are the words you would be expecting from me, because you see, to simplify, 'synchronicity'—and remember again, these are Earthly words—synchronicity in the true sense proves that there is a parallel world. (Yes.) Yes, I know that you understand this, my dear friend, but not all within this room would understand so clearly.

George: Some of us like to think of it as two universes, (Yes.) the physical and the spiritual, and at times there would be a particular connection or signal—I'm not quite sure how to describe it.

Let me again say to you words I have used many times, and that is: 'energy', energy to which you all come from and belong to—and you know full well my dear friends, that even within your world, your scientists now know how to what they term 'split atoms', which of course is energy. (Yes) So, why is it so surprising to those of you who know and understand our world that these energies, which have always been—and again, I repeat myself in saying that there is no past/present/future, but just 'is'. But energy can be transmuted in many ways, and a 'true synchronization,' as I would explain it to you, is when two parts of energy from the same source, re-unite in some form or another.

George: 'Re-unite'—yes.

Does that make sense to you?

George: Yes—thank you.

It shows itself in a pattern of separateness when in fact it has always been joined together.

George: Yes, and we've probably got a peculiar idea about: 'has always been'. (Yes.) When you say that past, present and future, are one...

This is why, my dear friends, it will always be difficult for you to truly understand the explanations for these things, because you have not in this lifetime, experienced that separateness, or that rejoining of energy.

George: Yes, I suspect the phrase: 'has always been' is a phrase to aid our understanding as it stands at present, but...

Yes, but it is difficult...

George: But if that time is all one, then it's not quite to that meaning... I find it difficult to express myself.

As you do...so do I.

(Chuckles)

Always this is the problem.

George: Yes, we appreciate you're endeavouring to express yourself in our terms that we will understand.

To explain to you in simple terms of understanding, brings to it a few problems, but always I endeavour to take the simple pathway for your own understanding.

George: Yes, that is appreciated. Thank you.

And as always, and as you well know, as time continues, that understanding becomes a little fuller as time continues forward, and what was once most confusing, suddenly becomes quite clear. And I do feel that this subject is a little beyond your understanding and capability of understanding at this time.

George: Yes, but it has helped enormously and I imagine that as Elaine's story is of a direct communication, I imagine that John might well have had some part in that?

The one you call John would have been aware of the thoughts and the emotions of his loved one.

George: Yes, I have further details that make that clear—very clear.

Yes and that is how from our world, we are prepared and ready for all of these occasions.

George: Thank you, and I know that they were a devoted couple—very close.

Yes, which helps in the communication, of course.

George: Yes, and I shall communicate this transcript to Elaine, and I know that she will be most pleased to receive (Yes.) your words on that.

I would like to mention, perhaps another example of true synchronicity, as I view it. We have spoken about how the spirit can be far away in another place, speaking to another person, while the physical body is somewhere else and occupied. That is an example of separateness although belonging together. Do you understand my meaning?

George: Separateness in the sense that the mind...

The energy can separate, but comes together.

George: Is separate from the material body. (Yes.)

George: Yes, I see. Thank you.

I feel I have to say to you, that all of your lives—all of your physical lives must be associated with synchronicity, otherwise we would not exist as we do. It is the natural laws of life and existence.

George: I think you're saying that it happens all the time, (Yes.) but we just are particularly noticing those special examples.

Yes. Once the awareness and knowledge come to the forefront, then you say: Ah! What is this! When, in fact, you are surrounded each day by such happenings.

Sara: Yes, I've noticed that names and birth dates are very often—well think of them as synchronistic. But I think that the dealings that you have with others, whether they are difficult or easy, I feel that these connectors that make you more aware of the links between you and others, I just think they make you look more closely, and I think about past connections, (Yes.) other connections from other lives, which have either caused it to be easy or difficult.

But do not forget, my dear friend, that there are those who stand close by—your helpers, your guardian angels—all people in our world who stand close to help you in all matters; and in one sense, this influence comes from them. They also have a hand in these everyday happenings. You understand?

Sara: Yes I do. They are very much meant to happen... (Yes.) I do see that and obviously the difficult links are simply to be worked through and understood...

You must, as a whole, accept what life brings to you. But you must not exclude the help that is available to you, because there is so much help available, there is so much love to be given to you, from loved ones in our world. But as always, your responsibility lies with your selves, but perhaps, after this discussion, you will look at happenings and events with new eyes.

Sara: Yes I'm sure.

With—I repeat myself so often—with your spiritual eyes. And then you will see your understanding grows much, when this is done.

Sara: Yes, I see.

Have you any more questions on this subject?

Jan: When somebody is in a coma and their spirit leaves that body well before the actual physical heart stops beating, is that similar to what you were talking about—the synchronicity of the spirit being in one place...

Yes, it is, yes—an example—yes, it is the separateness of the same energy. But in the case you are speaking of, there is connection until that cord is severed, and spirit is free—you cannot put apart physical happenings and spiritual happenings.

Jan: I guess they're one anyway.

Yes. Again, what has been has always been.

(Lilian then asked if anyone else had more questions)

Graham: Last week I was finding my teaching rather hard-going. I work with children who have special educational needs. I was finding it all a bit much, towards the end of last week and I asked for help and the difference was amazing! I knew I was surrounded by love and friends and helpers, because suddenly it all seemed so much more manageable and less difficult than it had done before. It was a very powerful example of what we are surrounded by and again, the link between the physical world and the spiritual world.

Yes—I would like to comment just a little on the word 'link'.

(At this point Jan began to experience some profound form of healing, which Salumet soon responds to)

You, my dear friends, are first and foremost spirit. You cannot 'link', because you already ARE. So, when you say 'link', what you mean is that you are allowing that spiritual part of you to (Salumet's delivery slows, probably reacting to Jan's ongoing experience) be up—that spiritual part of you...

Forgive me my dear friends, for this interruption, but there is much intensity within this room this time.

And just for a short time, I ask that each of you feels that love and energy, which is present at this time.

Please attend dear lady (Lilian) for this one. (Jan)

Lilian: Do you wish to speak?

Jan: Just pass that feeling around.

(Sara visited each in turn and Jan then gave thanks for her experience.)

When you feel such intensity of spirit, you begin to understand my words, 'Past, Present, Future are as one.' And you will find on these occasions that sometimes the emotional body finds difficulty in containing itself. But I would say to you this: That in times such as these, to allow them forward. It is different from physical human emotions that most of you suffer from. This intensity of emotion brings with it knowledge and an experience of love, which you may not have in your everyday lives. And I feel that on these words, my dear friends, I will leave you to continue with whatever is here for you. (Thanks expressed)

George: A wonderful evening—and that is an understatement.

I will be most interested next time to see what kind of reactions you feel from this evening. As always, my dear friends, I bathe you in love from that Great Creative Force to which we all belong. (Thanks + farewells)

~ 2nd October 2006 ~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I hope that our talk last time was of interest to you all. (Affirmed) Before I continue this time, would one of you choose a topic of which you would like me to discuss with you next time? (Pause)

Paul: Yes I was wondering, could we have something on altered states of consciousness?

Altered states of consciousness—yes of course. We will give our next meeting over to that conversation. Do you wish it to be in connection with anything in particular?

Paul: I was thinking of alternate realities...

Yes, you just wish to expand your mind and your thinking—I understand. So, as we come together next time we will discuss that for you. (Thank you.) This evening we will have some questions, for you.

Lilian: Yes, I think Jim has a question for you. He's written it down—is it ok if we use a torch in the corner of the room to read it?

Yes, I will make some changes.

Lilian: Thank you.

The light was shielded and kept minimal.

Jim: When I read the question in the transcript 'who am I', I realised I know very little apart from the 'ego I'. I've learned that I am spirit temporarily dwelling in my human body and will at some time in the future, return to the spirit world, which I must say I know nothing about. Your suggestions that I am love, I am all-knowledge and I am energy, lead me to the conclusion that I need instruction in these basic concepts. If I am all-knowledge, the answers possibly should all come from within; also 'I am energy', leads me to think that the physical energies I know of, for example: heat, light, electricity, magnetism are not what this is all about. Would it be possible to define 'spiritual energy' in the way that other energies are defined? In addition, George has now given me the transcripts of meetings since the first in 1994, so there is a great deal for me to learn from this source. Your advice on how best to proceed would be very welcome.

Thank you my dear friend. You, as we know—as this planet is a young planet, you, my dear friend, are young in terms of understanding, as far as others within this room are more knowledgeable. You will not understand every idea or concept that has been placed before you in one second. It is a gradual build of knowledge, knowledge which has always been, of course. But to you who are clothed in the human garb, you need to be constantly reminded of indeed, who you are. And when you speak of spiritual energy, your scientists, even at this present day, are beginning to understand the refinements of known energies. But spiritual energy cannot be fully understood whilst you inhabit this planet, because you see, spiritual energy belongs indeed to a different dimension of energy. Are you following me?

Jim: I am following what you're saying.

Yes. I have spoken much about life in our world, which is of course pure energy. I will say to you briefly, my dear friend, that you already are spirit, and this I feel you accept now, as well as physical matter. When that overcoat is placed to one side, and you come to our world, there are many levels of spiritual energy; many that I could discuss with you, but as of now I have not discussed it even with my dear friends in this group. But, because of your interest in spiritual energy, we will make one evening dedicated to that topic. It is a refinement of the energy, which exists already. It becomes more and more refined, but I will discuss it with you in a more understandable way, that you may understand what spiritual energy is. I am sure you will understand my words when I bring them to you, because what you cannot at this time fully understand, is the complexity of the levels within spirit. Most people upon this planet know only that you come to our world as spirit and that you progress, but they are not aware of how you progress through those spiritual energies, and this I will discuss with you. Are you happy with that?

Jim: Yes. There's plenty there to think about—yes.

I suggest that you do read what has been spoken, and you will come to some understanding. (Yes.) But you will not understand it in one moment. (Thank you.) But I would suggest to you that of course you also begin to know and understand who and what you are. And once that understanding comes to fruition, you will wonder why you had those human egos in place, because the beauty of your true selves will bring to you all of the inner knowledge that you possess. I want you my dear friends, to take command of your physical lives, in such a way that the spiritual part of you, which you are now, will be so strong that it would almost seem that you belong in our world. But, of course, you know that can never be, with all of your human frailties and fears and worries, but it is possible, my dear friends, for you to be in command of your own true spirit. And this, I urge you, urge you, to think about most carefully. And my dear friend, I will give you more on spiritual energy, for your understanding, and how it works within our world. (Thank you.)

George: Yes, I'm sure we all look forward to that.

Lilian: Would you like another question?

I will take another.

Lilian: Did you want to comment on the Nevada Desert George?

George: Well, yes...we had a most interesting meeting with Bonniol last week also, and it seemed to develop into a three-way discussion, involving Jan's clairvoyance. She was shown various pictures and it was mentioned through Jan, that the beings, who accompanied Bonniol, had previously visited a region of Earth known as the Nevada Desert. I was aware that there are interesting ancient rock pictures in that region. I obtained a copy of these, and Jan had already made drawings of the beings who accompanied Bonniol, and I found that the drawings on the rocks in the Nevada Desert are very similar, in particular they have larger-than-human hands and considerably wider-than-human heads. I really intended talking further with both Jan and Bonniol on this. But, would you have any comment to add? We would be very glad if you have.

Indeed I do have a comment, of course. It never ceases to amaze us that you as human beings, feel that you are some kind of select race, when in fact as I have told you many times, there is more to all of existence than this planet Earth and to which you now have some further knowledge.

George: I think we're becoming more and more aware of this all the time.

But I have told you my dear friends in past times, past/present/future are as one, and that all things that we would speak about, would indeed be given or shown in some other way. As you now realise, many of your ancient civilisations on this planet, had much superior knowledge, than you do today. And by their way of demonstrating what they know, today it has become a source of knowledge for those who are seeking. Therefore my dear friends I say only: why do you continue to be so surprised?

George: Well, it's not just surprise, I think there is also delight there, (Yes.) that these visitors in the past, have made their mark in this way.

For you all now to discover in your own time and in your own way—and again, we have returned to our topic of last time, of 'synchronicities'. So, that is the few words that I tender to you this time.

George: Thank you. It's very nice to have your words on that.

Now, I will continue to work with this instrument. I will tell you, my dear friends that we are attempting other things through this one, but for the moment that is all you need to know. Therefore, I ask once more for quietness, as much as you can and that as I depart from you this time with my love, I will ask our dear lady, (Sara) if she will take you on a journey, that will bring to you some form of information, which each one of you is in need of at this particular time in your lives. So, my dear friends, until next time, I leave you surrounded in my love.

Lilian: And our love goes with you.

A few minutes passed and Sara then, with the inspiration received, guided us through a meditative journey.

(Audio version freely available on website: <http://www.salumetandfriends.org/16.html>)

Sara's guided meditation/journey:

We are going on a journey deep into the heart of ourselves. We are going for a walk in the moonlight, dark but for the glow of the moon. You are walking near a lake, and you are alone, completely alone. You are walking along a pathway, which continues for a little while, and in the distance you can see the lake. As you walk along you are thinking about your own life, and thinking about what things you might like to change in your life ... what works for you and what doesn't work for you. Is there anything in your life you would like to change or stop completely? Is there anything that doesn't serve you anymore, that used to be good but no longer gives much to you and your development? There's your reflection in the lake. You are going to sit ... you find a place to sit, just on the edge of the lake. And the moon is shining on the lake. You look into the water ... and as you look into the water you become aware of what needs to be changed. You stare at the water and the ripples on the water. You look deep into the water and what you see is yourself. You sit and you reflect, and now you go within and see what you can see.

Pause

Your pathway is clear ahead. Can you see where you are going? Do you know where you want to go? Is there a sense of direction and purpose? Is there anything in the way? Are YOU in the way? Does the way you took look clear?

Pause

You sit in the moonlight and draw strength ... gather within yourself. Try to feel a sense of what your purpose is, and know that you can achieve what you want to achieve, and you only need to decide to do the things that need to be done.

Pause

Breathe in deeply and feel that peace in the magic of moonlight, and feel that you can do whatever it is that you want to do ... that your heart tells you that you would like to do. And there is no hurry. You have a sense of balance and peace within yourself ... balance means no stress or rush. All is well, and there is plenty of time. And if you're ready, you can leave the lake. Take your greater sense of peace and calm back with you and keep that inside you.

George's Notes:

1: Nevada Desert petroglyphs: The particular features shared by the rock pictures and the drawings from Jan's interplanetary clairvoyance were: wide heads, large hands, 3-fingers per hand and slim bodies. Salumet seems to view such comparisons as 'old hat' and is amazed that we should be getting excited! Well

I guess that's typical of 21st-century Earthlings ... we haven't quite wised up to a more orthodox 'universal' pattern of thinking, but we're trying.

2: Energy: Much has been said on this and more will shortly be said. Our scientists know more about some forms than others, and not all scientists agree. There is one whose work has not been so well regarded as it should perhaps have been over the years, largely on account of his pursuance of 'ether theory'. I speak of Sir James Jeans (1877-1946). It seems a pity to be sending out too much blank paper with the transcripts, so here is a quote that is elegantly descriptive of how physical energy is distributed in the Universe:

'The tendency of modern physics is to resolve the whole material Universe into waves and nothing but waves; these are waves of two kinds; bottled up waves which we call matter and unbottled waves which we call radiation or light. If annihilation of matter occurs, the process is merely that of unbottling imprisoned wave energy and letting it fall to travel through space. These concepts reduce the whole Universe to a world of light, potential and existence, so that the whole story of creation can be told with perfect accuracy and completeness in the six words, "God said, 'Let there be Light.'"' –Sir James Jeans.

All is energy as we have heard several times, but to think of it as bottled (atoms / matter) and unbottled (waves / light) seems a beautifully simple way of regarding the difference. And of course, the initial creation of light would have been immediately followed by the bottling process to create matter.

~20th November 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am so happy to join with you once again my dear friends.

Lilian: Yes, we are very happy to have you back with us.

I have been mostly occupied with matters in our world, which you would not understand of, but which needed me to return and to join with council there. But although it must feel like some time to you all since last I spoke, of course you understand it is but a moment in time.

Sarah: Yes we do understand, but it still seems like a long time to us. (Chuckle)

I know and I have been aware of your thoughts towards me on many occasions. For this I thank you my dear friends. It is good to know that you can extend your love without the voice of one who comes to you; it shows how much you have grown. I see that we once more are quite short in numbers, but of course it matters not to any work that we have to give to you, but of course it is satisfying to know that many hear the words given out to you within this room. What I have to tell you this time my dear friends, is that as we approach your yearly end and when I naturally return to my own home, it is important for you to know that there is still much for me to give to you. But I have to inform you that the time has come, when we need you to lift your own spiritual beings, to be used in any manner, by those of us in our world. I told you a little time ago that I would be working with this instrument for other things and this I repeat to you. She will not be aware of what is happening, but I can assure you I am working closely with her on many levels, not only in the confines of this room, but at all times in her daily life. And we hope to bring to you, over the next few years of your earthly time, much more phenomenon. (Excitement expressed by sitters) But of course there are many things to consider, not only my working with this instrument, but with the permission of all of you within this room, because without your continued support, these things would not be possible. But let me assure you dear friends that we hope that your loyalty to us will be duly rewarded, in as much as we can help you in your own spiritual growth, because each one of you has a different spiritual mission. I know that you know of that and have sometimes wondered what is your place within this group. And let me tell you dear friends that it has been a testing time for many of you, but I can now reveal to you all that your loyalty will be rewarded.

Sarah: That's very nice to hear, but I have to say rather like you, we don't do it for any reward we do it because we want to learn from you.

Yes we understand that you seek not any gratification. But nevertheless my dear friend, there are so many within these groups, who have only their own ego in mind. But that is not so here and that is why it is possible for me to use this voice-box and speak to you in a loving way and hopefully in an understandable way, because all matters spiritual are not easy to understand fully. But I have tried and I have been assured that our mission is going forward and that brings great joy not only to me, but to those in our world who are watching closely.

Sarah: It's very nice for us to hear that too.

I think for this time, if you have any questions or doubts that we may discuss them.

Sarah: You said just now that we should open ourselves up for any use that spirit can make of us. Can you give us a little idea of what extra we might expect?

In time to come? Yes of course I will, only because you have the desire to know, not because it is important. But do you wish me to speak of you personally, or as a group as a whole?

Sarah: I think it would be interesting for all of us to know what you have in mind. Am I speaking out of turn? (Support/agreement given by other sitters)

You see what I mean by the goodness within this group that each one is concerned for the other and that is what we desire. Because in order to produce more phenomenon for you, not as evidence, because you do not doubt, but because it is a part of your spiritual development that you have these things. You may find that some of you are used by other beings, to bring greater knowledge to this group. It may be that we will try to use more individuals, in producing different procedures such as 'apports' and such like. But all of these things, every sitting, is an experiment between you earthly beings and us in spirit. It is a two-way thing. That is why we must continue in love, in listening to what I bring to you and in your own endeavours to become more spiritually aware. Although your understanding of my words is great, your own ability to develop is just a little slow and our desire is that each one of you ask for help in your spiritual unfoldment. Do you understand? (Affirmed + thanks)

You all have spiritual gifts and it is your own responsibilities to develop these gifts to the best of your abilities. We need more than one evening a week that is what I am trying to say. We need your dedication, we need your understanding and we need your love. And when the time is right, you may be amazed what we can bring to you. Is that helpful for you?

Sarah: That's very nice to hear yes, thank you very much.

Paul: I think it would be a wonderful thing to get some kind of phenomenon. The knowledge is the most important thing, but somehow the experience would...

Sarah: Compliment it?

Paul: Yes it certainly would, yes.

Therefore we must all work towards these things.

Sarah: We did find when we had the experience with the being that Bonniol brought over and Jan who had the clairvoyance—that was very nice for us to have that.

Yes, it is what you term, 'evidence' for yourselves, because always as human beings you doubt. And that is not a fault, it is just part of your human nature. But sometimes we know, you need to have some kind of proof. But we will not provide it just because someone demands it. Why should we—there is no need, we do have nothing to prove.

Lilian: Basically we have to earn what we receive.

You only get what you are entitled to. So if you decide that your spiritual knowledge has gone far enough, then that is all that you will receive. So you must always strive to recognize and understand more. My words I hope, have brought to you a little greater understanding of your world and yourselves. But the time has now come, where you must work upon your own spiritual natures.

Sarah: Yes I must say your words—your teaching has been so good, I think for all of us, but I can speak for myself that in everyday life, I can hear you saying things—now Salumet said...

Yes, but what we need to strive for now, is not what Salumet has said, but what you feel and know and understand from within, without thinking the words; to have that 'inner knowing' of all things spiritual that there is no doubt that what you are trying to achieve is right, because you know from within that it is right.

Lilian: I think we're probably a bit like children—it's nice to have the encouragement from you.

Yes, but I have to say you must never fully rely on my words. It is now time for the children to be a little more grown.

Lilian: Yes I see what you mean.

All children will remain children if you allow them. But you must help them to grow and understand and become their own person. And that is what I am encouraging you now my dear friends to do. That to go within and in doing so and developing, you will become a much stronger unit, which can then produce many things from our world.

Rod: Yes. I suppose I've been thinking along a different line myself. That my job was to spread the word to friends around me hoping that they would take it on board. I'm afraid I haven't found many of those friends who have taken it on board—I've stumbled a bit there, but this gives me another direction to go into.

The best that you can do my dear friend, is to show by example, the way you live your life and I assure you that people who surround you will see that difference, that light that shines from within and they will say, 'What does he have that we do not?' Only then is it time to use words to help them on their way. They have to be ready to accept.

Rod: I hope I can achieve that.

If you have sown one seed, you have done well—you cannot ask for more. You will find that throughout the rest of your life that somehow those in need will be drawn towards you and you can use the words to convince them, but only when they are ready to receive.

Rod: Thank you for those words.

In the same that way we waited patiently to come to you in this room and in another room. But we had to be sure that the mix of people was right.

Rod: Oh!

(In 1994, when Salumet first spoke, it was said that they had waited a long time for the 'right' people to join the group, before these teachings could begin.)

Lilian: It does amaze us Rod.

Rod: Thank Sarah for that—thank you very much for that.

(Sarah first introduced Rod to Salumet's teachings—they live in the same village)

Sarah: It's obviously meant to be Rod—only passing on the words.

Rod: Yes exactly.

And now my dear friends for this time I will depart. But I have not forgotten that we have specific talks to come and we will discuss them before very long. But for the rest of this evening, let us see what comes to you, from those others who are waiting so closely by to you. Open your hearts, allow that love to enter and you can be pleased with what has been achieved this time. As always I leave you bathed in the light of love.

(Warm thanks expressed by all)

There were other speakers, including Ruth, Leslie's second wife and a 'rescue,' both through Eileen. Leslie tried to come through Sue towards the end of the evening, but the power was getting low by this point.

George's Notes:

The term 'Apport,' refers to something or someone disappearing and reappearing in another location.

Bonniol has recently indicated that this is how one group of extra-terrestrials have visited the Earth in past times.

~27th November 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you once again my dear friends. It is good to see so many of you together this time. I would like just to say that as you approach your yearly festivities, how much love is felt at this time of year. What I would wish to say to you is this: You know that all of existence is energy and we have spoken of energy on several occasions. But I wonder my dear friends, how aware you are when it comes to that energy of love and how different and pure it feels. I would say to you at this coming time of your year, when so many people are unconditionally giving of themselves, to try to become aware of what difference that energy is and becomes. I am sure that you would find that you are exhilarated by that awareness. It is something for you to ponder on I feel.

George: Yes I must say, I was considering the energy here tonight, which I'm trying to put the right word to it—I thought 'Powerful,' but that is not the word, because this energy is so easy to be with, (Yes.) yet it is felt and as you say, sometimes the love energy does seem different again.

It is the purest of energy. Think of the mother with the new-born child and you can feel the expression of that unconditional love. But what I would like you to try this time is that during your coming weeks, to FEEL from other people, not only of like mind, but of strangers, of people who you come across in your everyday lives. Try to feel that love energy which comes from them, not towards you as an individual, but the awareness of that greater energy which is exuded. Do you understand? (Affirmed) I feel my dear friends, a great need for you all at this present time, to raise your understanding and awareness. I touched upon this last time, with those who were present and I know my words have been read, but I would like just to reiterate some of those words and to say to you that from this time, it is necessary for you all my dear friends, for your consciousness to be raised in all areas of this work. I know each one of you does very good work when it comes to sowing seeds, when it comes to speaking of people in need, but now we need each one of you to raise your own vibration and that must come from each one of you and only then will we be able to give you so much more; not because it is necessary for your growth, but because in this work, we must always go forward. I am sure you understand. (Affirmed) So I am placing some responsibility onto your own shoulders and I am sure that all of us in my world, will attempt to help and support and to convince you of many, many things and phenomena, because my dear friends, you have earned it. But we must not come to a stand-still, we must continue to move forward. (Pause) I hope my dear friends, as I have been speaking of love this evening, that each one of you feels the love that is surrounding each one of you at this very moment of your time. There are many with you for that purpose.

Lilian: Yes I'm sure we all do.

Now, I feel for this time I will take some questions from you and then I will continue to work quietly with this instrument.

George: Would I be right in thinking that in raising our awareness, this will be through meditation, through asking and through that inner feeling that seems to rise up?

Yes, you have to give a little more of yourselves outside of this room. You have to allow that spiritual being to become more prominent in your everyday living. If you wish to make progress that, my dear friends, is what is needed. You have to live a life of example as well as question what this work is about. You understand?

George: Yes thank you.

Jim then had a question prepared which he read out using a small flashlight:

Jim: I now regard myself as a student, as you advised me that I have a lot to learn. I've been reading transcripts starting June 1994 and I'm very grateful for the opportunity to ask questions. On the transcript dated 14th August 1995, Les Bone was expressing the hope that transcripts would be published and you Salumet said at the time, that the time would come, when the information would be gathered, put down and distributed. The transcript that I am reading is an embodiment of what was then said. Some of the information could be regarded as direct teaching for all who read it. Some it appeared to me, was directed to the group present at the time. On this occasion, you asked that persons in the group place their hands on yours, or actually on those of the instrument (Eileen) for 10 seconds and then to return to their seat, to feel the energy given and later to tell Les Bone what was felt. This was done. As I read this I thought to myself, I would like to experience such direct contact as this. Could it be done for me? And finally, in January 1995, you said you had listened to the thoughts that came to you during the period since the previous meeting. Should I personally regard myself as one of the group in this sense, that is, would you listen to my thoughts? Thank you.

Yes I thank you for your question. Yes, when first I came to you, much of what I had to bring was new to the group and in fact I feel that I might say, some of my teaching was against the beliefs of some. But that was part of my coming, that we had a group who was not only prepared to listen, but who use their own thinking, their own inner knowledge to judge my words, whether they chose to believe my teachings or not. And you may think is that not foolish, would it not be better to choose people who would believe every word that is spoken. But that was not to be my choice. I of course came from a higher source, where much has been discussed before I came. But to return to your question my dear friend, I will take your last question first and say to you, that all who enter this room, all who come before us to listen to my words, is indeed included in what you term 'this group', because we could not allow anyone to enter this room, with any form of negativity. And I know the others will remember my words that I had told them: many would come and many would go. But all who come have left with some knowledge. So yes your thoughts, as with every person within this room, I do take heed of. But it does not mean that I will express those thoughts to you, but I will try to help in whatever way is allowed. Also my dear friend, if you feel a great need to place your hands onto this instrument, hopefully you will feel the same energy that the others did in time gone by. Therefore I say to you, if you wish the opportunity, to take it now.

(Jim then approached)

Very lightly, no pressure on the instrument's hands please. Place them flatly on the palms and feel the love and the energy which comes to you. (Pause)

This gentleman has healing hands.

Jim: I need to reflect on this.

Now do we have more questions this time?

Graham: I was reading an early transcript, because I too am starting to read from the beginning again and I've realized how much I haven't understood and have forgotten and it's a worthwhile exercise—it really is. You gave some advice to a member of the group at the time not to do a particular trip. And the following week that person came back and said they did heed your advice and they didn't go on the boat, but nothing actually happened—the boat didn't sink or anything. And you said that if they had gone on the trip they would have broken their leg. This was fascinating and it made me think that there are many, many potential realities in our futures. I was wondering if you could say anything about that, because it's an area I don't really understand?

Again we speak of something which is most difficult for you as human beings, because 'time' of course, is past, present and future. We come to an area which most of you find difficult to understand. But if past, present and future are as one, then future has already been—I'm looking for the correct word of understanding. Your future plans have already taken form, but your own freewill in this world, can change those things. I believe we spoke about this briefly, when one member had the wrong gender of child (See 25th January 1999) and I explained that the thinking and the freewill of the individual can change what is about—your 'possibilities', let me phrase it that way for you. You all have a life path, but it is influenced by your freewill. Therefore the formation of future plans—and I use those words only for your understanding—your future plans can be changed and indeed that is what happened with the warning, that I was protecting that individual, but of course I cannot interfere with your freewill.

Graham: So the only thing that happened then was that she did in fact not break her leg (Yes.) and the other potential reality of her breaking her leg, was never more than a potential reality? (Yes) Fascinating... I hope it has simplified it. (Yes.) It is a difficult topic and not one that many human beings fully understand. There are so many possibilities—that is a good word, 'possibilities'.

Graham: Yes, thank you for that, that's very useful.

Jan: Salumet, on a similar subject, you told me, I think it was possibly a year ago now, that the reason I was in so much pain was that I was on the wrong path. And I knew I was in several areas of my life, (Yes.) One of which I put right was the fear regarding my husband. The second one recently has been my job. Within a couple of days of leaving that job, the pain in my foot has now completely disappeared.

Thank you, you have confirmed my words and no better explanation than a physical happening. Always when we speak of responsibility for health so many people feel that health conditions are an outward happening, when in fact all health issues start from within. It may take many of your earthly years, but it still comes from within. So my dear friend, continue on the correct pathway and I will endeavour to help you all that I can.

Jan: Thank you. I knew I was on the wrong pathway. I just needed the right opportunity to come off of that one.

Yes you needed just a little ... (Push?)—push yes of course. I hope the ‘push’ was gentle enough.

(Laughter)

Jan: Thank you yes, it was gentle enough, but again my freewill, the doubting afterwards came, but I have been trying very hard to think that that was in the past and I now have a new chapter and to move on.

That has always been throughout your living, the doubt in your mind and only you can control and change.

Jan: Yes it's the self-doubting, not doubting anything other than myself. (Yes.) And I do try and work on it.

That is good for you.

Jan: But to be pain-free—I can't tell you how liberating that feels. Well Graham knows—if I had to write one chapter on anything I had learned, this would be it. (Graham has made a remarkable recovery from a neuro-degenerative disorder known as ‘Dystonia,’—proof to us that healing can occur, when we are prepared to change, or as Salumet has said in the past, ‘When the spirit is touched.’)

And it shows how much you have grown in one year.

Jan: Yes, thank you.

George: There is an interesting channel called Gregory Possman, who would appear to channel Jesus or perhaps an aspect of Jesus, or several aspects...The word used is ‘We’ and not ‘I’ as if it comes from more than one. It talks of Jesus and travelling in the east and being coupled with Mary Magdalene and there being 4 children and it all seems very real and a very convincing channel and I wondered if you would have any comment on that?

There has been much spoken in your world on Jesus the Christ and we have spoken at length I feel upon that subject. But I will simply say this to you, that when Jesus the Christ came on his mission and that is why he came, he had a mission to accomplish in the human form—but I hope by now my dear friends, that you understand that when you are clothed in human form, you have human frailties as you would call them—not I. He came to this Earth plane to live life as a man, albeit with many spiritual gifts.

Therefore why does it amaze you that he acted as a human man?

George: Yes I'm personally very happy with that.

Yes, he lived life fully, as a human being I can tell you this, it is fact. Where mankind has gone wrong with Jesus the Christ, is to see him as something he was not and he would be the first to reiterate these things to you. And yes, the essence of Jesus the Christ has returned many times to relate the truth of his human life here, upon this Earth.

George: Yes so in the channelled work, to use the pronoun ‘we’, would be correct and acceptable?

If he was channelling the essence of Jesus the Christ, then yes there could be many aspects, therefore the word ‘we’ would be used. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes that is and it just seems such a very convincing channel and that Jesus should have children, I'm very happy with that—I see no reason why not and I think you imply that Jesus has been placed on such a pedestal that such a thing, many would wish not to acknowledge.

Yes, it is abhorrent to many, to think that the son of Christ, as he was called, could actually function as a human man. And after all, that is what he was, he was clothed in human garb and lived a life as you all do. And how many of you here know of your true spiritual being? You do not, but whilst you are here you function as a human being. So I hope that has helped you with your question.

George: Yes I felt it was something that would be good to be aired largely for the benefit of those reading the transcripts.

I will say to you my dear friend, that no matter what the truth, whatever is said and given by Jesus the Christ, it will always be denied whilst there is so much bondage to Christianity. You understand? (Yes) That people will always be reluctant to believe truth, in the same way as it has taken so long for all of us who come to you to help you to understand what truth is. But we have come to a stage in the Earth's existence, where mankind is now thinking for himself and realizing that he is more than human form. So I hope those words give you a little more to think about.

George: Yes indeed and when masters incarnate, then as you say, they are both teacher and human—simple as that.

Yes, it is as simple as that and that is what all people must recognize. When you come to this planet, no matter what your spiritual being is, whilst you are clothed and live a life on this planet, then all of your spiritual existence beforehand, cannot take the place of life here on this Earth.

George: Yes, that's very helpful, thank you very much indeed.

Now I think to continue, and while I continue to work quietly with this one, that our lady friend, if she will take us on a journey of peace and inner knowledge, if she is happy to do that?

Sara: Yes.

I ask also please dear lady friend, that on returning, a little quietness just for a short time.

Lilian: Yes.

Sara then took us on a meditative journey, before Bonniol arrived—audios of Sara's journeys are available from website, as are the Bonniol transcripts: www.salumetandfriends.org

~11th December 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Let us begin this time with prayer to that all-embracing universal power of love. As we join together within this room, we ask as instruments of spirit that those who stand close by and those who await a spiritual opening—that we be given any knowledge or information in the name of all that is truth and love; this we ask in all humility. We give thanks for those who have requested healing help for others, and with these words, I ask that our time together in this room be of upliftment, of help, and indeed of great love to each one here. With those words, my dear friends, I am happy to join with you once more.

Sarah: We're pleased to have you with us.

Lilian: And we shall miss talking with you while you are away—if you understand.

I am never far away my dear friends. I am but one thought away from each one of you, and although you may not be aware of our presence, let me assure each one of you that you are forever within my circle of love. (Thanks expressed)

George: Thank you. I wanted to thank you anyway, for being with me last Monday morning when I had an interview with Barry Eaton, and I asked for help on that occasion and I felt you were with me—thank you for that.

There is no need my dear friend for thanks, after all you are an emissary of spirit. You have done much to give to all people the word of truth; for this, we give you our thanks.

George: We all do our best.

Yes indeed, but I wish to say to you this time, that I have spoken much of individual development. And of course, you are all individuals on a very individual pathway of opening to spirit, and that is as it should be. But, when you come together in this room, there is a connection with you all which proves most important to the work and the truth that I bring to you. So therefore again, my dear friends, I say to you: please dwell on your responsibility for your own spirit. Strive ever forward to try to achieve all that you can whilst you inhabit these bodies. It is not only for your benefit, but for the soul's growth that I ask of you these things. And we have seen much growth in these past few of your months, and although you may not recognise or understand it, the growth of each one of you is within and it shows to us who come to you each time. Therefore, this evening, I want you to once more look within—to think of your meditation with love each day, because without the quiet mind you will not progress. And the quiet mind, my dear friends, is what you are trying to achieve in your everyday lives. I understand, for some it is not easy, that the wars of the world bear heavily upon your shoulders, but you have now at your fingertips much more knowledge than before and it is apt for you to continue to move forward on that road which has been laid before you. After all my dear friends, you have already made the choice to grow spiritually when you took this pathway. I have never promised it would be easy, but it has given to you the responsibility for your own souls, and that is most important. So, do you have questions on anything I have said this time?

George: There is a question which we all want to raise in view of a happening last Monday. To begin with, on the Sunday, I listened to a Barry Eaton programme and he was interviewing a journalist who has written a book on Steve Irwin the Australian conservationist, who had died 3 months earlier. On the Monday morning, I was interviewed by Barry Eaton concerning the Salumet book, and some of your words will be beamed out to the world, as a New Year message I think, in due course. And that Monday evening, Steve Irwin was mentioned in our prayers, and following that, he seems to have come to us, and we all had a conversation. And I got the impression that he is very much an animal conservationist at heart, and there is a big programme of work for him in spirit relating to that. I was wondering if you would be able to comment on any of that, and confirm that it was indeed Steve Irwin who came to us?

I understand your question my dear friend. Firstly, let me just say this to you: no matter the status of any one person whilst you inhabit a physical body, no matter their status on this planet, they are but one soul in a sea of souls, and when these souls come to our world, they of course remain close to the Earth plane for some time, especially around their family and friends; that you know and understand. (Yes). But, in the same way as those who come to spirit, stay close for a little while, also there remain those from our world who seek to gratify themselves by pretence. And I have to say to you, my dear friends, that the person who came to you was really not the one that you hoped it to be. But in saying those words, I wish you to know that anyone within this room, is open to what we would term 'mischief and although these circles are strictly governed, we do not always have the right to stop those souls who are determined to use an open channel. Therefore, I have to say to you that this was not the gentleman—but the medium is not to be blamed for this, because these mischievous spirits are so determined to have their day.

George: Yes, we appreciate that sometimes one slips through.

Lilian: I remember you saying that before.

It does not happen often, but it does happen and remember that, because the name, as you so rightly have said, has been mentioned before the actual meeting—then that mischievous one was ready and waiting.

George: Yes, in a sense, we attracted him.

Yes, you attracted him in the calling of the name.

George: Well I'm very pleased that you have straightened us out on that Salumet, because we shall not be contacting his family now.

I would wish to also state to you, my dear friends that if any communication, no matter which one is used, if there is doubt or suspect, then I think you would be right in rejecting that communication. And after all, I have said to you on many occasions, that even if my words do not sit comfortably with you, then you must reject them until such time as they are acceptable. But let me just reiterate that I am not of 'mischief.

Laughter

Sarah: Salumet, would you have come through last week, had that one not come through? (No.) You weren't going to come anyway? (No.)

Lilian: So when that spirit goes back to spirit world, are they put right in any way and told that they really shouldn't be doing this?

They will remain that way until they see common sense, I think you might say—until their own realisation is greater.

Lilian: I see.

In the same way, as in your world you have people who enjoy being mischievous and they cannot change so easily, so too do we have souls who are a little mischievous sometimes.

Jan: Since this spirit came through myself, it throws me a little that when I am on my own and meditating, that it's that easy. I know you say I am protected...

You must always first ask for protection before any meditation or sitting takes place.

Lilian: That's a good idea.

Jan: I haven't done that before.

Yes, you must always ask that any communication from our world is brought in love and is given in the name of the universal good.

Jan: That spirit last week came with such emotion that he did fool us, (Yes.) but the following day, mum (Lilian)—we had a conversation and she said that she felt unhappy...

Lilian: Yes, and he left in this room afterwards a great feeling of—uneasy, wasn't it Sarah?

Sarah: I was very uneasy about it.

Which is a very good indication that the communication was not genuine.

Lilian: We must remember that.

Sarah: So if on another occasion, any of us should feel ill at ease with the communication, should we say at the time we're not happy?

You can voice the opinion later of course. If you are unhappy then seek help from those in spirit to remove any unwanted information, and that spirit has to then depart from the medium. But I would suggest my dear one that you always ask for truth and protection before you begin, and that although we clear this room at the end of every session, that you can close yourself down as a channel. That is just as important.

Jan: I do feel after you've spoken to us this evening, that it was an important lesson for everybody in this room—I think we've learned from it.

Yes, hopefully all events will teach you something. (Yes.) Yes, but do not doubt your ability in any way. Those mischievous ones do sometimes slip past.

George: It struck me that 3 months for a return to a group by someone of this general nature seemed a rather short period. The ones I know of have taken considerably longer than 3 months.

Lilian: And have spoken of their families...

Yes. Communication is a difficult one—time has no meaning. A soul who is aware can return in a very short time. Whether they wish to do this is entirely of their own making. So time really does not come into it.

Lilian: Following that spirit, there was a gatekeeper that came through. I think we found that quite amusing, didn't we?

Once a soul has entered with the emotional and spiritual body of a person here on Earth, it is difficult to remove them, although you are protected as a group, and of course, if that person was indeed meaning any kind of evil or darkness, then of course there would be concerted effort to protect you, but the ones I speak of are not evil people, they are not beings of darkness—they are just souls who are mischievous. There is a great difference—in the same way as you have a mischievous child, you would not want to be rid of the child, but you would wish to teach and instruct the child that that is not the way to behave.

Sara: Salumet, I remember a few years ago, my son attracted a mischievous spirit in his daily life. (Yes.) So I know that this happens in our daily lives sometimes. Is it a good idea to ask for protection for our children, for those who are especially open'?

Yes, of course.

Sara: Because I imagine some people are perhaps more susceptible—are more open...

And more sensitive...

Sara: More sensitive and open, yes.

You can, in the case of children, call upon their own guardian angel to stay close by to them, which they do in any case, but if the child is particularly sensitive then asking—and remember I have always told you, you must ask for the help. If you ask for help on behalf of the child, then it will be there.

Sara: Yes, I often ask for angelic protection for the children. (Yes.) The guardian angel is probably the one to speak with about it...

Yes, as long as you are asking for help it will be available. But of course, you can also surround that child and the dwelling within to be completely protected by love.

Sara: Yes, that's a good idea, thank you for that.

It is something you should all do in your everyday lives.

Sara: Is it sensitivity in children that can make them very easily influenced, because I see it in my son.

Yes. There is a great sensitivity there.

Sara: Yes, and I feel he can go in all directions, because he is sensitive and open.

He will never conform.

Sara: Yes, I can see that!

And remember that he is an individual soul who has a pathway and it...

Sara: It is part of his life.

Yes, and you must of course restrain him at times, because of the very nature of being human, but at the same time, the connection with his father will always be strong.

Sara: Good! And it helps.

Although I feel at this stage, probably the mother is a little more lenient.

Sara: More lenient, (Yes.) perhaps too lenient, (Yes.) okay, thank you for that.

Chuckles

Sara: It helps me because I find it very hard to know sometimes if I am too lenient or too strict.

Do not be too concerned. Let your feelings guide you.

Sara: Thank you.

Are there any more questions this time?

Graham: I was going to ask you about teaching actually—the very subject you were just talking about. As a schoolteacher it is so difficult, the judgement as to whether you are being hard on children or too lenient. I'm working in a school at the moment with a gentler environment from any previous school I was at—personally I feel more comfortable with that. (Yes.) But I do witness sometimes, amazing behaviour from the children who I teach. It begs the question as to how much we should go with it, or stand our ground to those who are not good enough. It seems a very difficult tightrope...

Yes, of course. Again, because of the human conditions you are drawn, and because of your own sensitivity and knowledge you are drawn, but again what I would say to you, my dear friend, is to be guided by your inner light, to become more aware of your inner feelings, and then you will make the right choices—you will never get to be 100% correct.

Laughs

Otherwise you would be joining us!

(Extended laughter)

But I can tell you my dear friend that the direction you moved into is a very good one for your growth.

Graham: Thank you. Yes, I do enjoy the job. I do find it sometimes a strain on my nervous system. But I do understand I'm growing because of it.

You are doing it for challenge. (Yes.) Yes.

Graham: And because it's something worthwhile and I feel it's worth the effort.

Yes, and to see the results with those children are what brings happiness to your heart.

Graham: Yes, and this affection of the children—they have lots of learning difficulties—I was taken by the school, my very first day by the warmth and openness of these children. It really took me quite by surprise, and it's what makes the job such a joy.

And remember they are individuals, as you adults are—remember I have told you in times past, that children are but small adults and should be treated with respect. (Yes.) Of course there must be some restraint at times, but it can be done with love. And that is the most important ingredient for all of you human beings, not only to learn to give, but also to receive and that is the receiving that brings joy to your heart.

Graham: Yes, thank you for your words Salumet.

Sarah: I was talking to someone the other day, who hadn't really had any contact with anybody who believes in spirit or comes to these groups, and he asked all sorts of questions, and one of the questions he asked was: How is it determined whether you come back as an animal or a human being? It made me think that if we are supposed to be descended from apes—an animal—and we are human, where does the boundary lie? Could you give me a few words that I could use for this person Salumet?

I will indeed my dear friend. You will not return as an animal!

Sarah: I did tell him that—but if we were once animals—maybe we were not ever animals...

That is part of the physical evolution. It does not change what has become within. As you have grown, as evolution has taken place, mankind has grown in spirituality. You cannot interchange with the animals and human beings. That does not occur.

George: Can we see the physical being as evolved to become a suitable vehicle to receive the human spirit? Yes, yes—all animals evolve also. We have discussed the animals which are kept as pets, and it is only love energy which brings that closeness. But those animals who have loved and give love, have evolved more than the animals of the fields—of the wilds, as you call them. They will return to the 'group energy' of animals, but the individual pets who have evolved with love will continue as individual pets and animals

Jan: I have two dogs now, who have returned.

Yes, because of the love bond.

Lilian: What about the animals that are badly treated by us—maybe as pets or...

They will return to the animal energy in our world. There is a 'group energy' in our world where they will return.

Lilian: I was thinking about the cat that I have adopted. It's taken a while before it has become friendly with me.

Yes, because you have given love and the animal feels that love, and therefore grows and becomes much more receptive to you. (Yes.) It is love which unites you all.

Jan: Salumet, why have my two pets come back with the same condition that they had before? Both have the same medical condition that they had previously.

Only for recognition purposes. They do not have those conditions now, but in the same way as human beings return to conditions that they passed with. It is only for recognition purposes.

Jan: Ah! So it works! It is recognised. Thank you.

Now, my dear friends, I know my words are beginning to sink in with you this time, and I feel it would be appropriate to go on a journey of stillness and quietness, and to find within yourselves that inner love, that inner source of pure love, which, after all, is what you have come from. And I feel it would be good for you this time to go quietly within, and if our dear lady would like to take you on a quiet journey, then that also would be most helpful. Before I leave you my dear friends, I will not be with you for some weeks, as I will now return to that part which you would call 'home' and I will call 'my soul life'. Until we come together once more, my dear friends, I keep you all safe and within that love which encompasses you at all times.

Lilian: Thank you, and our love goes with you. We'll save our questions for when we meet again.

Sarah: And we wish you well in your return again Salumet.

Paul: And we look forward to another year.

George: It's been a wonderful year and we look forward to another.

George's notes:

This session marks the end of Salumet's teaching year. He returns at this time to that deeper spirit domain that is 'home.' It has been his practise to return to us again sometime in January.

Mischievous ones: In spirit there are controls and gatekeepers. As a result of their good work, hiccups are fortunately rare. During the past 12-years, I recall just one other 'impostor' and there was one that jumped the queue on a 'rescue' evening. When there is some uncertainty, it is a huge asset of course that we have Salumet to refer back to for guidance.

Time intervals and séance: Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle returned to his group after 10-months. Leslie, who founded and presided over this group returned after 21-months. Each was of course positively identified without any doubt whatsoever. (We were not in such fortunate position to make positive identification from prior knowledge in the case above). Since the occasion of the mischievous one I have 'chanced' to read of FWH Myers who died in 1901, joint-founder and president of The Society for Psychical Research, and close friend of Sir Oliver Lodge. He returned in séance with positive identification after only 1 month following death! His memory was apparently still patchy at that early stage. But as to identity there was no doubt.

Perhaps it is also worth noting that The Society for Psychical Research has, through its authors produced volumes of evidence during its 125 years of existence. The scientific evidence that has accumulated for telepathy, the world of spirit, spirit communication and mediumship must surely now be described as positively overwhelming. Just one single book: The Survival of Man, by Sir Oliver Lodge (1909) 379pp was really quite sufficient in itself!!!

~27th November 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you once again my dear friends. It is good to see so many of you together this time. I would like just to say that as you approach your yearly festivities, how much love is felt at this time of year. What I would wish to say to you is this: You know that all of existence is energy and we have spoken of energy on several occasions. But I wonder my dear friends, how aware you are when it comes to that energy of love and how different and pure it feels. I would say to you at this coming time of your year, when so many people are unconditionally giving of themselves, to try to become aware of what difference that energy is and becomes. I am sure that you would find that you are exhilarated by that awareness. It is something for you to ponder on I feel.

George: Yes I must say, I was considering the energy here tonight, which I'm trying to put the right word to it—I thought 'Powerful,' but that is not the word, because this energy is so easy to be with, (Yes) yet it is felt and as you say, sometimes the love energy does seem different again.

It is the purest of energy. Think of the mother with the new-born child and you can feel the expression of that unconditional love. But what I would like you to try this time is that during your coming weeks, to FEEL from other people, not only of like mind, but of strangers, of people who you come across in your everyday lives. Try to feel that love energy which comes from them, not towards you as an individual, but the awareness of that greater energy which is exuded. Do you understand? (Affirmed) I feel my dear friends, a great need for you all at this present time, to raise your understanding and awareness. I touched upon this last time, with those who were present and I know my words have been read, but I would like just to reiterate some of those words and to say to you that from this time, it is necessary for you all my dear friends, for your consciousness to be raised in all areas of this work. I know each one of you does very good work when it comes to sowing seeds, when it comes to speaking of people in need, but now we need each one of you to raise your own vibration and that must come from each one of you and only then will we be able to give you so much more; not because it is necessary for your growth, but because in this work, we must always go forward. I am sure you understand. (Affirmed) So I am placing some responsibility onto your own shoulders and I am sure that all of us in my world, will attempt to help and support and to convince you of many, many things and phenomena, because my dear friends, you have earned it. But we must not come to a stand-still, we must continue to move forward. (Pause) I hope my dear friends, as I have been speaking of love this evening, that each one of you feels the love that is surrounding each one of you at this very moment of your time. There are many with you for that purpose.

Lilian: Yes I'm sure we all do.

Now, I feel for this time I will take some questions from you and then I will continue to work quietly with this instrument.

George: Would I be right in thinking that in raising our awareness, this will be through meditation, through asking and through that inner feeling that seems to rise up?

Yes, you have to give a little more of yourselves outside of this room. You have to allow that spiritual being to become more prominent in your everyday living. If you wish to make progress that, my dear friends, is what is needed. You have to live a life of example as well as question what this work is about. You understand?

George: Yes thank you.

Jim then had a question prepared which he read out using a small flashlight:

Jim: I now regard myself as a student, as you advised me that I have a lot to learn. I've been reading transcripts starting June 1994 and I'm very grateful for the opportunity to ask questions. On the transcript dated 14th August 1995, Les Bone was expressing the hope that transcripts would be published and you Salumet said at the time, that the time would come, when the information would be gathered, put down and distributed. The transcript that I am reading is an embodiment of what was then said. Some of the information could be regarded as direct teaching for all who read it. Some it appeared to me, was directed to the group present at the time. On this occasion, you asked that persons in the group place their hands on yours, or actually on those of the instrument (Eileen) for 10 seconds and then to return to their seat, to feel the energy given and later to tell Les Bone what was felt. This was done. As I read this I thought to myself, I would like to experience such direct contact as this. Could it be done for me? And finally, in January 1995, you said you had listened to the thoughts that came to you during the period since the previous meeting. Should I personally regard myself as one of the group in this sense, that is, would you listen to my thoughts? Thank you.

Yes I thank you for your question. Yes, when first I came to you, much of what I had to bring was new to the group and in fact I feel that I might say, some of my teaching was against the beliefs of some. But that was part of my coming, that we had a group who was not only prepared to listen, but who use their own thinking, their own inner knowledge to judge my words, whether they chose to believe my teachings or not. And you may think is that not foolish, would it not be better to choose people who would believe every word that is spoken. But that was not to be my choice. I of course came from a higher source, where much has been discussed before I came. But to return to your question my dear friend, I will take your last question first and say to you, that all who enter this room, all who come before us to listen to my words, is indeed included in what you term 'this group', because we could not allow anyone to enter this room, with any form of negativity. And I know the others will remember my words that I had told them: many would come and many would go. But all who come have left with some knowledge. So yes your thoughts, as with every person within this room, I do take heed of. But it does not mean that I will express those thoughts to you, but I will try to help in whatever way is allowed. Also my dear friend, if you feel a great need to place your hands onto this instrument, hopefully you will feel the same energy that the others did in time gone by. Therefore I say to you, if you wish the opportunity, to take it now.

(Jim then approached the instrument)

Very lightly, no pressure on the instrument's hands please. Place them flatly on the palms and feel the love and the energy which comes to you. (Pause)

This gentleman has healing hands.

Jim: I need to reflect on this.

Now do we have more questions this time?

Graham: I was reading an early transcript, because I too am starting to read from the beginning again and I've realized how much I haven't understood and have forgotten and it's a worthwhile exercise—it really is. You gave some advice to a member of the group at the time not to do a particular trip. And the following week that person came back and said they did heed your advice and they didn't go on the boat, but nothing actually happened—the boat didn't sink or anything. And you said that if they had gone on the trip they would have broken their leg. This was fascinating and it made me think that there are many, many potential realities in our futures. I was wondering if you could say anything about that, because it's an area I don't really understand?

Again we speak of something which is most difficult for you as human beings, because 'time' of course, is past, present and future. We come to an area which most of you find difficult to understand. But if past, present and future are as one, then future has already been—I'm looking for the correct word of understanding. Your future plans have already taken form, but your own freewill in this world, can change those things. I believe we spoke about this briefly, when one member had the wrong gender of child (see 25th January 1999) and I explained that the thinking and the freewill of the individual can change what is about—your 'possibilities', let me phrase it that way for you. You all have a life path, but it is influenced by your freewill. Therefore the formation of future plans—and I use those words only for your understanding—your future plans can be changed and indeed that is what happened with the warning, that I was protecting that individual, but of course I cannot interfere with your freewill.

Graham: So the only thing that happened then was that she did in fact not break her leg (Yes) and the other potential reality of her breaking her leg, was never more than a potential reality? (Yes) Fascinating... I hope it has simplified it. (Yes) It is a difficult topic and not one that many human beings fully understand. There are so many possibilities—that is a good word, 'possibilities'.

Graham: Yes, thank you for that, that's very useful.

Jan: Salumet, on a similar subject, you told me, I think it was possibly a year ago now, that the reason I was in so much pain was that I was on the wrong path. And I knew I was in several areas of my life, (Yes) one of which I put right was the fear regarding my husband. The second one recently has been my job. Within a couple of days of leaving that job, the pain in my foot has now completely disappeared.

Thank you, you have confirmed my words and no better explanation than a physical happening. Always when we speak of responsibility for health so many people feel that health conditions are an outward happening, when in fact all health issues start from within. It may take many of your earthly years, but it still comes from within. So my dear friend, continue on the correct pathway and I will endeavour to help you all that I can.

Jan: Thank you. I knew I was on the wrong pathway. I just needed the right opportunity to come off of that one.

Yes you needed just a little ... (Push?) —push yes of course. I hope the 'push' was gentle enough.

(Laughter)

Jan: Thank you yes, it was gentle enough, but again my freewill, the doubting afterwards came, but I have been trying very hard to think that that was in the past and I now have a new chapter and to move on.

That has always been throughout your living, the doubt in your mind and only you can control and change.

Jan: Yes it's the self-doubting, not doubting anything other than myself. (Yes) And I do try and work on it. That is good for you.

Jan: But to be pain-free—I can't tell you how liberating that feels. Well Graham knows—if I had to write one chapter on anything I had learned, this would be it. (Graham has made a miraculous recovery from a neurodegenerative disorder known as 'Dystonia,' -proof to us that healing can occur, when we are prepared to change, or as Salumet has said in the past, 'when the Spirit is 'touched'')

And it shows how much you have grown in one year.

Jan: Yes, thank you.

George: There is an interesting channel called Gregory Possman, who would appear to channel Jesus or perhaps an aspect of Jesus, or several aspects...The word used is 'We' and not 'I' as if it comes from more than one. It talks of Jesus and travelling in the east and being coupled with Mary Magdalene and there being 4 children and it all seems very real and a very convincing channel and I wondered if you would have any comment on that?

There has been much spoken in your world on Jesus the Christ and we have spoken at length I feel upon that subject. But I will simply say this to you, that when Jesus the Christ came on his mission and that is why he came, he had a mission to accomplish in the human form—but I hope by now my dear friends, that you understand that when you are clothed in human form, you have human frailties as you would call them—not I. He came to this Earth plane to live life as a man, albeit with many spiritual gifts. Therefore why does it amaze you that he acted as a human man?

George: Yes I'm personally very happy with that.

Yes, he lived life fully, as a human being I can tell you this, it is fact. Where mankind has gone wrong with Jesus the Christ, is to see him as something he was not and he would be the first to reiterate these things to you. And yes, the essence of Jesus the Christ has returned many times to relate the truth of his human life here, upon this Earth.

George: Yes so in the channelled work, to use the pronoun 'we', would be correct and acceptable?

If he was channelling the essence of Jesus the Christ, then yes there could be many aspects, therefore the word 'we' would be used. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes that is and it just seems such a very convincing channel and that Jesus should have children, I'm very happy with that—I see no reason why not and I think you imply that Jesus has been placed on such a pedestal that such a thing, many would wish not to acknowledge.

Yes, it is abhorrent to many, to think that the son of Christ, as he was called, could actually function as a human man. And after all, that is what he was, he was clothed in human garb and lived a life as you all do. And how many of you here know of your true spiritual being? You do not, but whilst you are here you function as a human being. So I hope that has helped you with your question.

George: Yes I felt it was something that would be good to be aired largely for the benefit of those reading the transcripts.

I will say to you my dear friend, that no matter what the truth, whatever is said and given by Jesus the Christ, it will always be denied whilst there is so much bondage to Christianity. You understand? (Yes) That people will always be reluctant to believe truth, in the same way as it has taken so long for all of us who come to you to help you to understand what truth is. But we have come to a stage in the Earth's existence, where mankind is now thinking for himself and realizing that he is more than human form. So I hope those words give you a little more to think about.

George: Yes indeed and when masters incarnate, then as you say, they are both teacher and human—simple as that.

Yes, it is as simple as that and that is what all people must recognize. When you come to this planet, no matter what your spiritual being is, whilst you are clothed and live a life on this planet, then all of your spiritual existence beforehand, cannot take the place of life here on this Earth.

George: Yes, that's very helpful, thank you very much indeed.

Now I think to continue, and while I continue to work quietly with this one, that our lady friend, if she will take us on a journey of peace and inner knowledge, if she is happy to do that?

Sara: Yes.

I ask also please dear lady friend, that on returning, a little quietness just for a short time.

Lilian: Yes.

(Sara then took us on a meditative journey, before Bonniol arrived)

~11th December 2006~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

Let us begin this time with prayer to that all-embracing universal power of love. As we join together within this room, we ask as instruments of spirit that those who stand close by and those who await a spiritual opening—that we be given any knowledge or information in the name of all that is truth and love; this we ask in all humility. We give thanks for those who have requested healing help for others, and with these words, I ask that our time together in this room be of upliftment, of help, and indeed of great love to each one here. With those words, my dear friends, I am happy to join with you once more.

Sarah: We're pleased to have you with us.

Lilian: And we shall miss talking with you while you are away—if you understand.

I am never far away my dear friends. I am but one thought away from each one of you, and although you may not be aware of our presence, let me assure each one of you that you are forever within my circle of love. (Thanks expressed)

George: Thank you. I wanted to thank you anyway, for being with me last Monday morning when I had an interview with Barry Eaton, and I asked for help on that occasion and I felt you were with me—thank you for that.

There is no need my dear friend for thanks, after all you are an emissary of spirit. You have done much to give to all people the word of truth; for this, we give you our thanks.

George: We all do our best.

Yes indeed, but I wish to say to you this time, that I have spoken much of individual development. And of course, you are all individuals on a very individual pathway of opening to spirit, and that is as it should be. But, when you come together in this room, there is a connection with you all which proves most important to the work and the truth that I bring to you. So therefore again, my dear friends, I say to you: please dwell on your responsibility for your own spirit. Strive ever forward to try to achieve all that you can whilst you inhabit these bodies. It is not only for your benefit, but for the soul's growth that I ask of you these things. And we have seen much growth in these past few of your months, and although you may not recognise or understand it, the growth of each one of you is within and it shows to us who come to you each time. Therefore, this evening, I want you to once more look within—to think of your meditation with love each day, because without the quiet mind you will not progress. And the quiet mind, my dear friends, is what you are trying to achieve in your everyday lives. I understand, for some it is not easy, that the wars of the world bear heavily upon your shoulders, but you have now at your fingertips much more knowledge than before and it is apt for you to continue to move forward on that road which has been laid before you. After all my dear friends, you have already made the choice to grow spiritually when you took this pathway. I have never promised it would be easy, but it has given to you the responsibility for your own souls, and that is most important. So, do you have questions on anything I have said this time?

George: There is a question which we all want to raise in view of a happening last Monday. To begin with, on the Sunday, I listened to a Barry Eaton programme and he was interviewing a journalist who has written a book on Steve Irwin the Australian conservationist, who had died 3 months earlier. On the Monday morning, I was interviewed by Barry Eaton concerning the Salumet book, and some of your words will be beamed out to the world, as a New Year message I think, in due course. And that Monday evening, Steve Irwin was mentioned in our prayers, and following that, he seems to have come to us, and we all had a conversation. And I got the impression that he is very much an animal conservationist at heart, and there is a big programme of work for him in spirit relating to that. I was wondering if you would be able to comment on any of that, and confirm that it was indeed Steve Irwin who came to us?

I understand your question my dear friend. Firstly, let me just say this to you: no matter the status of any one person whilst you inhabit a physical body, no matter their status on this planet, they are but one soul in a sea of souls, and when these souls come to our world, they of course remain close to the Earth plane for some time, especially around their family and friends; that you know and understand. (Yes). But, in the same way as those who come to spirit, stay close for a little while, also there remain those from our world who seek to gratify themselves by pretence. And I have to say to you, my dear friends, that the person who came to you was really not the one that you hoped it to be. But in saying those words, I wish you to know that anyone within this room, is open to what we would term 'mischief' and although these circles are strictly governed, we do not always have the right to stop those souls who are determined to use an open channel. Therefore, I have to say to you that this was not the gentleman—but the medium is not to be blamed for this, because these mischievous spirits are so determined to have their day.

George: Yes, we appreciate that sometimes one slips through.

Lilian: I remember you saying that before.

It does not happen often, but it does happen and remember that, because the name, as you so rightly have said, has been mentioned before the actual meeting—then that mischievous one was ready and waiting.

George: Yes, in a sense, we attracted him.

Yes, you attracted him in the calling of the name.

George: Well I'm very pleased that you have straightened us out on that Salumet, because we shall not be contacting his family now.

I would wish to also state to you, my dear friends that if any communication, no matter which one is used, if there is doubt or suspect, then I think you would be right in rejecting that communication. And after all, I have said to you on many occasions, that even if my words do not sit comfortably with you, then you must reject them until such time as they are acceptable. But let me just reiterate that I am not of 'mischief.

Laughter

Sarah: Salumet, would you have come through last week, had that one not come through? (No) You weren't going to come anyway? (No)

Lilian: So when that spirit goes back to spirit world, are they put right in any way and told that they really shouldn't be doing this?

They will remain that way until they see common sense, I think you might say—until their own realisation is greater.

Lilian: I see.

In the same way, as in your world you have people who enjoy being mischievous and they cannot change so easily, so too do we have souls who are a little mischievous sometimes.

Jan: Since this spirit came through myself, it throws me a little that when I am on my own and meditating, that it's that easy. I know you say I am protected...

You must always first ask for protection before any meditation or sitting takes place.

Lilian: That's a good idea.

Jan: I haven't done that before.

Yes, you must always ask that any communication from our world is brought in love and is given in the name of the universal good.

Jan: That spirit last week came with such emotion that he did fool us, (Yes) but the following day, mum (Lilian)—we had a conversation and she said that she felt unhappy...

Lilian: Yes, and he left in this room afterwards a great feeling of—uneasy, wasn't it Sarah?

Sarah: I was very uneasy about it.

Which is a very good indication that the communication was not genuine.

Lilian: We must remember that.

Sarah: So if on another occasion, any of us should feel ill at ease with the communication, should we say at the time we're not happy?

You can voice the opinion later of course. If you are unhappy then seek help from those in spirit to remove any unwanted information, and that spirit has to then depart from the medium. But I would suggest my dear one that you always ask for truth and protection before you begin, and that although we clear this room at the end of every session, that you can close yourself down as a channel. That is just as important.

Jan: I do feel after you've spoken to us this evening, that it was an important lesson for everybody in this room—I think we've learned from it.

Yes, hopefully all events will teach you something. (Yes) Yes, but do not doubt your ability in any way. Those mischievous ones do sometimes slip past.

George: It struck me that 3 months for a return to a group by someone of this general nature seemed a rather short period. The ones I know of have taken considerably longer than 3 months.

Lilian: And have spoken of their families...

Yes. Communication is a difficult one—time has no meaning. A soul who is aware can return in a very short time. Whether they wish to do this is entirely of their own making. So time really does not come into it.

Lilian: Following that spirit, there was a gatekeeper that came through. I think we found that quite amusing, didn't we?

Once a soul has entered with the emotional and spiritual body of a person here on Earth, it is difficult to remove them, although you are protected as a group, and of course, if that person was indeed meaning any kind of evil or darkness, then of course there would be concerted effort to protect you, but the ones I speak of are not evil people, they are not beings of darkness—they are just souls who are mischievous. There is a great difference—in the same way as you have a mischievous child, you would not want to be rid of the child, but you would wish to teach and instruct the child that that is not the way to behave.

Sara: Salumet, I remember a few years ago, my son attracted a mischievous spirit in his daily life. (Yes) So I know that this happens in our daily lives sometimes. Is it a good idea to ask for protection for our children, for those who are especially open'?

Yes, of course.

Sara: Because I imagine some people are perhaps more susceptible—are more open...

And more sensitive...

Sara: More sensitive and open, yes.

You can, in the case of children, call upon their own guardian angel to stay close by to them, which they do in any case, but if the child is particularly sensitive then asking—and remember I have always told you, you must ask for the help. If you ask for help on behalf of the child, then it will be there.

Sara: Yes, I often ask for angelic protection for the children. (Yes) The guardian angel is probably the one to speak with about it...

Yes, as long as you are asking for help it will be available. But of course, you can also surround that child and the dwelling within to be completely protected by love.

Sara: Yes, that's a good idea, thank you for that.

It is something you should all do in your everyday lives.

Sara: Is it sensitivity in children that can make them very easily influenced, because I see it in my son.

Yes. There is a great sensitivity there.

Sara: Yes, and I feel he can go in all directions, because he is sensitive and open.

He will never conform.

Sara: Yes, I can see that!

And remember that he is an individual soul who has a pathway and it...

Sara: It is part of his life.

Yes, and you must of course restrain him at times, because of the very nature of being human, but at the same time, the connection with his father will always be strong.

Sara: Good! And it helps.

Although I feel at this stage, probably the mother is a little more lenient.

Sara: More lenient, (Yes) perhaps too lenient, (Yes) okay, thank you for that.

Chuckles

Sara: It helps me because I find it very hard to know sometimes if I am too lenient or too strict.

Do not be too concerned. Let your feelings guide you.

Sara: Thank you.

Are there any more questions this time?

Graham: I was going to ask you about teaching actually—the very subject you were just talking about. As a schoolteacher it is so difficult, the judgement as to whether you are being hard on children or too lenient. I'm working in a school at the moment with a gentler environment from any previous school I was at—personally I feel more comfortable with that. (Yes) But I do witness sometimes, amazing behaviour from the children who I teach. It begs the question as to how much we should go with it, or stand our ground to those who are not good enough. It seems a very difficult tightrope...

Yes, of course. Again, because of the human conditions you are drawn, and because of your own sensitivity and knowledge you are drawn, but again what I would say to you, my dear friend, is to be guided by your inner light, to become more aware of your inner feelings, and then you will make the right choices—you will never get to be 100% correct.

Laughs

Otherwise you would be joining us!

(Extended laughter)

But I can tell you my dear friend that the direction you moved into is a very good one for your growth.

Graham: Thank you. Yes, I do enjoy the job. I do find it sometimes a strain on my nervous system. But I do understand I'm growing because of it.

You are doing it for challenge. (Yes) Yes.

Graham: And because it's something worthwhile and I feel it's worth the effort.

Yes, and to see the results with those children are what brings happiness to your heart.

Graham: Yes, and this affection of the children—they have lots of learning difficulties—I was taken by the school, my very first day by the warmth and openness of these children. It really took me quite by surprise, and it's what makes the job such a joy.

And remember they are individuals, as you adults are—remember I have told you in times past, that children are but small adults and should be treated with respect. (Yes) Of course there must be some restraint at times, but it can be done with love. And that is the most important ingredient for all of you human beings, not only to learn to give, but also to receive and that is the receiving that brings joy to your heart.

Graham: Yes, thank you for your words Salumet.

Sarah: I was talking to someone the other day, who hadn't really had any contact with anybody who believes in spirit or comes to these groups, and he asked all sorts of questions, and one of the questions he asked was: How is it determined whether you come back as an animal or a human being? It made me think that if we are supposed to be descended from apes—an animal—and we are human, where does the boundary lie? Could you give me a few words that I could use for this person Salumet?

I will indeed my dear friend. You will not return as an animal!

Sarah: I did tell him that—but if we were once animals—maybe we were not ever animals...

That is part of the physical evolution. It does not change what has become within. As you have grown, as evolution has taken place, mankind has grown in spirituality. You cannot interchange with the animals and human beings. That does not occur.

George: Can we see the physical being as evolved to become a suitable vehicle to receive the human spirit?

Yes, yes—all animals evolve also. We have discussed the animals which are kept as pets, and it is only love energy which brings that closeness. But those animals who have loved and give love, have evolved more than the animals of the fields—of the wilds, as you call them. They will return to the 'group energy' of animals, but the individual pets who have evolved with love will continue as individual pets and animals

Jan: I have two dogs now, who have returned.

Yes, because of the love bond.

Lilian: What about the animals that are badly treated by us—maybe as pets or...

They will return to the animal energy in our world. There is a 'group energy' in our world where they will return.

Lilian: I was thinking about the cat that I have adopted. It's taken a while before it has become friendly with me.

Yes, because you have given love and the animal feels that love, and therefore grows and becomes much more receptive to you. (Yes) It is love which unites you all.

Jan: Salumet, why have my two pets come back with the same condition that they had before? Both have the same medical condition that they had previously.

Only for recognition purposes. They do not have those conditions now, but in the same way as human beings return to conditions that they passed with. It is only for recognition purposes.

Jan: Ah! So it works! It is recognised. Thank you.

Now, my dear friends, I know my words are beginning to sink in with you this time, and I feel it would be appropriate to go on a journey of stillness and quietness, and to find within yourselves that inner love, that inner source of pure love, which, after all, is what you have come from. And I feel it would be good for you this time to go quietly within, and if our dear lady would like to take you on a quiet journey, then that also would be most helpful. Before I leave you my dear friends, I will not be with you for some weeks, as I will now return to that part which you would call 'home' and I will call 'my soul life'. Until we come together once more, my dear friends, I keep you all safe and within that love which encompasses you at all times.

Lilian: Thank you, and our love goes with you. We'll save our questions for when we meet again.

Sarah: And we wish you well in your return again Salumet.

Paul: And we look forward to another year.

George: It's been a wonderful year and we look forward to another.

George's notes:

This session marks the end of Salumet's teaching year. He returns at this time to that deeper spirit domain that is 'home.' It has been his practise to 'return to us again sometime in January.

Mischievous ones: In spirit there are controls and gatekeepers. As a result of their good work, hiccups are fortunately rare. During the past 12-years, I recall just one other 'impostor' and there was one that jumped the queue on a 'rescue' evening. When there is some uncertainty, it is a huge asset of course that we have Salumet to refer back to for guidance.

Time intervals and séance: Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle returned to his group after 10-months. Leslie, who founded and presided over this group returned after 21-months. Each was of course positively identified without any doubt whatsoever. (We were not in such fortunate position to make positive identification from prior knowledge in the case above). Since the occasion of the mischievous one I have 'chanced' to read of FWH Myers who died in 1901, joint-founder and president of The Society for Psychical Research, and close friend of Sir Oliver Lodge. He returned in séance with positive identification after only 1month following death! His memory was apparently still patchy at that early stage. But as to identity there was no doubt.

Perhaps it is also worth noting that The Society for Psychical Research has, through its authors produced volumes of evidence during its 125years of existence. The scientific evidence that has accumulated for telepathy, the world of spirit, spirit communication and mediumship must surely now be described as positively overwhelming. Just one single book: The Survival of Man, by Sir Oliver Lodge (1909) 379pp was really quite sufficient in itself!!!

~22nd January 2007~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time I am happy to see so many of you come together. As you know my dear friends, when I depart from your presence and return to my rightful home, I come to you much refreshed and uplifted.

George: It is certainly wonderful to have you back again and we all give you a very warm welcome.

You need not express that in words—I know my dear friends. It is good to be amongst you and although time means nothing in our world, to you it may seem quite some time, but I have been aware of you all my dear friends in your everyday lives. And I would like to begin this start of your new earthly year by just saying that this year there will be much talk amongst politicians in this world on a national and a global expression to incite more peace within mankind. So I would say to you, this is what I would call a most important year, just in as much as these people are speaking on a deeper level. So, that I hope has started this one of your earthly years on a much more promising note.

All were happy to hear this news.

George: That is very good news.

It is a start—it is not a result, but it is important that mankind understands each other. I have many things with which we will discuss together, but not this evening because we have others who wish to come this time and I will be happy to work silently with this instrument. So I will say to you my dear friends for this first coming together of this New Year, I will answer any questions and then allow the others to come, but next time I would like to discuss with you a specific subject. So if you are happy, that is what we will try to do this time.

Lilian: Thank you. If I could ask just a quick question—we did a rescue last week and this person was obviously in a dark place, but showed signs of wanting to come out into the light—being channelled through Eileen. After we had finished the rescue, she said about this peculiar noise that she had in her ears and we both wondered what this was.

Yes, I understand your question. Let me just say this to you, that when a spirit is so involved and in darkness deep within, they become isolated; they are isolated from all others and they are isolated from those of us who can help them in our world. Therefore they become like a single unit with only their own darkness and expectations. The noise that the instrument was experiencing was part of that spirit's darkness; it was part of that spirit's expectations of what they imagined they should be having. That might sound strange to you, but when you come to our world, you will automatically gravitate to how you have lived your lives and what you bring with you. And, much as I dislike saying it to you, there are many who come to our world bathed in darkness. Until such time as they recognize within that they no longer wish to be that way, only then can the love which we give to them in our world be felt and only then will we, if necessary, return them to you for help. But the noise is not a common factor; it was only part of that individual's darkness.

Lilian: I see yes—she had certainly never experienced anything like it before.

Yes, it can be distressing to those who are not aware of these areas of darkness in our world, but I have to tell you my dear friends that it exists. It is what you on earth call 'hell'—it is your own hell, not anything created by us, but it is created by the individual. I hope that helps you.

Lilian: Thank you.

Rod: Self-imposed wound...

Self-imposed, yes, by the way they have lived their lives and are not ready to accept, because all of you are responsible for your own actions, your own thoughts—and every thought, as you now know my dear friends, creates a reality. So of course I hope it makes you think just a little more—that is why I oft times tell you never to judge, because in judging you in some way are creating some negativity. Do you understand?

Lilian: Yes, I hope we were able to help this person because he wouldn't speak.

They would not have brought the spirit to you if you could not have helped in some way. It is only when they recognize that spark of light of love that we are able to step in and help them more, and as you know, sometimes we have to bring them back to you who do rescue work, because they are still attached to these earthly planes, much closer to you than to us. That is why it is necessary for rescues to take place.

George: There was another rescue, also with no speech and two names were given—Holly and Jessica, and I think we know that two little girls died in traumatic circumstance—this was reported in modern terms. We felt that it was simply an unlocking from trauma, we felt that was the purpose of the unspoken rescue. Are you able to help us with that?

I know my dear friends because of your love and the kindness that you feel towards other that you feel that explanations are necessary, but there are so many who need help and it is not possible always to give explanation as to why they are helped in certain ways. But of course because of the dramatic way in which they came to us, there is still with them that thought of brutality, which is easier released again by those of you in this world who know and understand and are willing to help. But yes, I can say to you, they would not have been returned as children through any medium in the normal way, because we have to, if you like, assess each individual situation as regards the way that we might help them best.

But yes you are correct, and much help has been given to those two. And again you know and understand that names are not always necessary. Whoever we bring to you for any kind of rescue work—names, places dates, these are unimportant facts—what is important is that the soul feels the love which is within this room, the love that will send them forward into the love of those in my world who will continue with that help. So as much as I understand your curiosity to know a little more, and I will try to help you, I would like you to realize that it is unimportant.

George: I'm sure that helps in our understanding to know that.

Yes, only those who can be helped by you, or mostly I would say, not everyone accepts the help and still remain in some mist of uncertainty, but mostly those who come, go forward. It is a most important part of spiritual work that this is done. I know within your world there is still some controversy about rescue work, but I would say only this to you my dear friends, that for every individual that is helped, your own spiritual growth is such that it is magnified two-fold each time you help an individual. So, not only are you helping others, you are in fact helping yourselves and for this we will be always grateful to those on the earth plane who continue to do this most important work.

Have we more questions this time?

Rod: I was going to say, I feel that there are probably not enough of these people who do the rescues around. We are pretty thin on the ground, aren't we?

I believe you may not know that sometimes when a rescue takes place, it is not only one individual being helped but many, many, even hundreds of people who are there to be helped; except in the cases where we have just spoken, where the soul is so deeply immersed in their own darkness—they are individual rescues, they are the difficult ones that those who help would find—they would find those individuals quite a task. That is why we must choose carefully those who are willing to do this work.

Lilian: There was an article in one of our daily papers two or three weeks ago, very well written about rescues—so well written.

Yes, it has been known about for a long time, but even those you call spiritual people, will deny that this is a good thing to do. It is and it does stem from fear, which of course we fully understand. That is why it is so helpful when we find groups such as this one, where every individual can help in their own individual way. It is not only the instrument when the spirit comes through that individual, but it is every member of this group that is helping—we are using their energies even if they are not aware of it. So you see, it is a group healing.

Rod: That's great to know.

George: I gather that following the Tsunami in Indonesia, many have been helped in that they were given direction. That is nice to hear and I gather there was some awareness of what was referred to as ghosts.

(Yes) People have worked in that area and I think many who did not know the direction to go have been helped there.

Of course, what you must realize my dear friends is that when we have so many come home to us in so many numbers, then we are prepared and the help is available. When people pass suddenly, as you have described, they are not individuals who belong in darkness, but they are lost, they are confused and it is easier to reach them; but when we speak of individuals such as the one the lady has mentioned, that is an entirely different situation. But you do know this. There are many souls who are lost and confused.

All they need is a little guidance.

George: Yes, it is like in the Indonesian situation, all they need is a traffic warden to direct them!

Yes. I like that—a traffic warden; thank you.

(Chuckles)

Rod: We do not like them very much, but...

You do not like them?

Rod: They do a good job...

Sara: We are afraid of them!

(Laughter)

But I like it, I like the expression.

Rod: All those people out in Bagdad, I think something like a hundred have been killed today. It seems to go on daily. I just worry about their spirits—but now that you have said that, perhaps they're helped and they go through rather easily, I hope so anyway.

I would just like to say my dear friends that the majority of people in your world will pass easily, will recognize loved ones who will be waiting for them. It is only those individuals who have wasted a lifetime in such negative ways—in what you would term 'evil ways', but I would prefer to say misguided ways—but nevertheless have committed deeds against mankind which places them in places of darkness within their own being; but the majority of people have nothing to fear.

Rod: That makes a big difference, thank you.

Paul: Have you got time for another question?

Yes my dear friend if you so desire.

Paul: Sometimes I read of people we call Shaman doing rescues and just occasionally, they are quite unusual because they call it 'soul retrieval' or 'spirit retrieval'—I am not quite sure, but sometimes the process involves—they describe it where someone's spiritual soul has been 'taken' by another person, a misguided Shaman or someone that's somehow managed to...I think they sometimes say they use a gourd or something to steal someone's soul.

Yes, I understand. There are many descriptions, there are many people in your world who claim many things. I will tell you from my own knowledge what I feel and it is kind of not accepting responsibility. It is easy to say that someone has had the soul stolen from them and many explanations can be given for this deed and that is what some—I will not say all, because many Shamans are doing very good work; but you have to accept that there are so many creeds, so many religions, so many ideas within your world, that sometimes it is most confusing. No one soul can be stolen, because you are responsible for every deed, every word, every action that belongs to you. You can be influenced by another but they cannot steal your soul—that is yours—that cannot be altered in past times, in present times or in future times. Do you understand?

Paul: Yes, I think so.

It is a form of thinking that they have developed. It is their way of trying to help, which of course must also be understood—they are doing it for good reasons but they are at times a little misguided.

Paul: And perhaps sometimes the one that thinks their soul has been stolen, they've got a belief that that can happen, so it is a little bit of wishful fulfilment.

The power of the thought—again I return to that phrase: the power of thinking. I would say to you my dear friends, in every aspect of your lives, stop and think about thought, about why people do deeds, why people think the way they do—they are influencing themselves with the power of their own thinking. Do you understand?

Paul: Yes. It makes total sense that no one person can have so much power over someone else to be able to do that.

They may influence but they cannot steal.

Sara: And people give their own power away, allowing themselves to believe things which are not true.

Yes, it is all to do with thought—yes. It is most powerful and when I first came to you my dear friends I told you that I thought the power of your thinking is the most powerful tool that you will ever possess. And it applies to all things in your lives. I hope that has helped to clarify it for you.

Paul: It certainly has, yes—thank you very much.

I feel now that I will take my leave of you and allow those others to come; but as always, I leave you my dear friends with much love, I ask that each one of you be uplifted in your daily lives, that each one of you recognizes from within that power that you possess, that love that you possess and above all, the knowing of who you are. And with those words, I will leave you.

Lilian: Thank you, it's been lovely to have your words again.

(Thanks + farewells)

~29th January 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you once more, I feel much joy with you. It is always good when those vibrations are raised and that energy exudes from each one of you. If only you could see and feel what I do, you would indeed be most happy. It is not often this way, therefore I feel it is most apt this time to tell you.

(Thanks expressed)

Now, I would like to address the young gentleman who asked if I would speak to you about 'alternate realities'. I will try to clarify for you if I can some of your questions or doubts.

Paul: Thank you.

So, rather than devote a full evening to this topic, and as you are the one who is most interested, let me just say to you: what was your particular query about this subject?

Paul: Well, I've been thinking a lot about shamans and the parallels between their work and the medium's or spiritualist's work and the sort of work we do here. And I can see that there are some similarities, but it seems like with shamanism there is often more an exploration of alternate realities. When they are performing healings or sometimes when they're training their apprentices they seem to send them to other planes of existence, where they sometimes encounter beings who probably are not physically human...

Yes...may I stop you? I believe we spoke last time about this slightly...

Paul: Yes.

Now let me say this to you my dear friend that indeed there are other realities of which you are not acquainted. Alternate reality—and I will simplify this for you: all of your Planet Earth is an alternate reality. It is a human reality, but the true reality belongs in spirit. Therefore remember when I discussed with you, that everything that happens on this planet and other planets, always has a spiritual counterpart. Can you remember? (Yes) Yes, and have I not discussed with you my dear friends, how your thoughts become reality? (Yes) Yes. What I would like you this time to understand is that you as human beings are living in shadow, and the alternate reality to this planet is one filled with love and light, but is exactly the same, for your understanding. So in many areas of life there is always an alternate reality.

Paul: And it seems like these alternate realities, they're just different states of consciousness ...

Being...

Paul: ...being...

Yes, that is the key phrase I would say.

Paul: I remember reading about someone called Ruby Plenty Chiefs, who was able to raise an object in her hand, and when someone asked her how she levitated this object, she said she suspended her agreement with gravity.

She made agreement with her higher self. (Ah.) You understand? It matters not what human words you use. I wish all of you to understand—and again I am repeating words: you are already spirit, clothed in human form. All of these capabilities are within your grasp...and still my dear friends you are surprised by these little things. You each have the power of your minds and thinking, you have the help of your higher selves. And I use that phrase because that is a term used by you human folk—and always this is the difficulty. Throughout all of existence, not only this universe, but in all universes, everything has an alternate reality. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Paul: Yes, I think we get too bogged down—that's why I don't like science very much, because it tries to lay down physical laws as if they're rigid when they're not.

No, how can you have rigidity when all of existence is ever expanding? You cannot.

George: I gather that one new word that has come into science recently is—as opposed to 'Universe', the new word: 'Multiverse'.

Multiverse—I am not aware of that at this moment in time...

George: It would seem to cover the idea of numerous universes.

Yes. We could have told them so, could we not!

(Laughs)

But again you see, as always, we are restricted by the intellectual thinking.

Sarah: Going back to the alternative...

Not 'alternative', 'alternate'.

Sarah: Alternate—when somebody rises up—my son, when he was ill, he rose up and looked down on himself—now that's just his spirit coming out of his body looking down, isn't it?

Yes, that is just the freedom of spirit from the human form. You all do it, you are just mainly unaware of it. But as you know, many people have control of their own spirit form and can easily and readily leave the body at any time.

Sara: We know someone who is trying to become a shaman—shamanic techniques—and one of them was to release negative emotional memories, and they tied themselves up and screamed and shouted and made a lot of noise, and it struck us that it's more of a physical approach. You can do that through mind and meditation—even through writing perhaps. But with the mind, you can actually achieve that release through meditation just as easily, but perhaps they don't have the same belief, so they use a very physical approach, which is obviously going to help them if it feels right to them. Would you agree?

I congratulate you on your clear thinking, and yes of course, there are many approaches to our world and every individual comes to us in their own way. And as you know my dear friends, there is so much diversity of words in your world that it matters not what is said or what is done, but what the outcome is.

Sara: Yes, that is what I thought.

And you are all going in one direction. But yes, I would of course say to you, use that power of thought in a quiet conducted manner and you can achieve the same status.

Sara: Yes, I think it's probably less tiring...

(Laughs)

Yes, yes. I think I would most probably agree with you.

George: When the thought produces the reality, one can look at it in reverse and say: behind the reality is the thought. Is that thought part of spiritual counterpart?

Of course, the thought is only formed after it has been formed in spirit. There is always the connection, you cannot separate them. That is why I say you as human beings are living in an alternate reality, because the real, if I may use that word 'reality', is not here, but in spirit.

Lilian: It is the shadow...

This is the shadow, yes. But it is still a reality in your own thinking, and you must always look at all things in that way. And of course 'thought' is the most powerful energy in existence. Each thought has already existed. Does that help you? (Affirmed)

Paul: So it's useful to think of this reality as an alternate one...

Remember when we discussed about all things medical and how new cures came and how things are discovered, and I told you that all of these thought-forms have already been formed in our world, (Mm) so the thought is given before it is received by the human mind—the human brain—the thought needs the human brain to work. Do you understand?

Paul: The thought needs the human brain to work...

Whilst you are in human form.

Jan: As a processor.

Yes. No of course, thought does not need the brain—thought will exist without a brain, but for it to follow through, that structured thought must be used in a human form; it must be utilised in that way. You understand?

George: Yes, the brain is the transmitter for thought.

Yes, you are much more forward with your words than I. Even now, I stumble with your human words.

George: We still consider it most remarkable that you speak to us in words that we can understand!

Yes, and of course I too am using a transmitter, if you would like to view it that way.

George: Well, these transmitters are extremely useful, and I guess it is the way of connecting spirit world to this reality.

It has been that way for some considerable time, but now we are using other methods that I told you of when first I came, through your radios and your televisions and your speakers—all of these things are coming to fruition and being recognised by your scientific community.

George: Yes, perhaps it would be true to say that, like the human brain, these things have become sufficiently sensitive for your use...

I would like to think that everyone's brain was that sensitive (Laughs)... but I cannot agree wholeheartedly with that one. But yes of course, I am being amusing! (Laughs)

Paul: Is that why healing works, because it's not us healing, but our brains perhaps are being used as processors?

No, no, no, no. Let me explain that healing always comes from the source of all life, but it needs instruments to be used for the purpose. Healing comes from spirit, touches the spirit of the healer, who then passes on to whoever is in need. It is spirit touching spirit. It has nothing to do with the human brain or form. Remember, I have told you that all conditions—illnesses, sicknesses, are created by yourselves, and it is spirit that has to change those conditions in the human form, otherwise there is no healing. If the spirit is not touched there is no healing.

Paul: The illness is simply a message that our thinking is incorrect?

It is on an energy level. Try always to think of illnesses as—what I termed to you before as 'dis-ease'—dis-ease of the spirit that the human form has created. I know that will always be difficult for you to understand, but that is the truth.

George: Yes, one little area that I find puzzling is: illness and disease are rather different from the common cold which is just transient, and I suspect that one is not subject to spirit.

Jan: Environmental...

No, no my dear friend, you cannot separate anything. If those who catch cold or whatever, they are vulnerable to those outside influences. Why do some (get colds) and not others if it is environmental as the lady says? Everyone should be prone to these colds or flu or viruses or whatever you call them.

Paul: They relate to our stress levels...

Yes.

George: So in an ideal situation we shouldn't ever catch a common cold?

No—if you are strong in spirit. But as you know, you humans are not perfect—and we know and we understand. But I am speaking more of deep-rooted disease.

Jan: What happens if—for example I was speaking to my sister today—we have the same inherited condition—surely that's on the same level...

It is because you both chose the same parents with the same human conditions.

Jan: Well that makes sense!

You choose parents with genes, with disabilities, with many, many issues. So that is why sometimes it affects more than one family member. Try not my dear friends, to separate these issues. It is basically that you are responsible for all things that come to you. Whether that is hard to accept, I cannot change that for you. But if you are strong in spirit, you will find that it is much easier to throw off these negative energies. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

Sara: And can they throw them off completely?

Of course!

Sara: That's what I thought. I imagine the challenge is for them both to do this—to find a way?

Yes.

Lilian: But people that abuse their bodies, like with drinking or smoking—that again is their own thought...

They have their free will, yes of course.

Sarah: I was just thinking of a friend of mine who died of breast cancer. She was actually—I thought she was quite spiritual, although on a different path to me. She actually died of the disease—that was because she wasn't quite strong enough in spirit, was that?

Originally yes—once disease takes over the human body, it then becomes difficult, especially if that person is not strong spiritually to resist disease.

Sarah: So once you've got it then you've got to be very strong...

Yes, you need to—you need to go within, you need to cleanse from within. And again, because you are human, you have human frailties and are not always able to do what you inwardly know is right.

Rod: So with meditation and thought, one should be able to heal oneself a lot better.

Yes.

Sara: I think you can become more self-aware with meditation and recognise when your thinking is not clear and hopefully stop the vulnerability from starting.

In meditation you are in contact with that higher self and all of those angels and helpers who are there to help and guide you. Therefore meditation is your first tool.

Sarah: If you have a disease that is caused by what you've done in a previous life, before you come back, will you know that you're going to get this disease?

Not necessarily, but you may be attracted to the same conditions. You will be attracted—it is not the people that you choose, so much as the conditions of life. So if you have not 'cleared' it in one life, then you will choose it again.

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

Rod: Could I just ask you: would you say meditation is superior to a prayer? I pray every night, but I just wondered whether I should meditate every night?

It is a form of meditation, but in the meditation that I speak of, you leave behind that human thinking. You go within to that part of you that is all-existing. Therefore my answer to you my dear friend is that meditation on a deeper level is preferable to uttered prayers, for your own help. Prayer for those in need of course will always be recognised. But if we are speaking of disease and illness, you really should go deep within.

Rod: Thank you very, very much.

George: Returning to 'separate realities', (Yes) would you advise seeing the ether realities with the elementals as separate realities?

I do not see any reality as separate. We are all as one, just shall I say 'different,' but never 'separated'. Do you understand?

George: Yes—all parts of the one...

Yes. It is a difficult subject to discuss. That is why I asked our dear gentleman friend what his own thoughts were, rather than try to explain a topic, which in your own words would feel most uncomfortable and not easily acceptable.

George: Yes and the scientists of this world would be very tempted to put the ether beings into separate boxes or separate realities, because that's the intellectual way.

Of course, but they are learning slowly. We must give credit to them, just in as much as they are now beginning to listen to us, and much influence is being imparted to them. So they are making tiny steps towards progress.

George: Yes. So would it be reasonably proper for us to view two universes intermingled—the spirit and this reality, (Yes) or would you recommend that we think in a more complicated way than that?

I wish always for you to think simply, in order for you to understand. Spirit is intermingled with all of you here now, because you are spirit. Spirit is not a separate place—to use your word. Everything is intermingled.

Paul: Is it better then to think of just one reality?

One reality...

Paul: But simply, as our consciousness grows, we'll see so much more...

Yes, your understanding will grow with it, yes.

George: And to think of it as 'two universes' is a very scientific way of thinking, (Yes) which one doesn't really approve of perhaps...

If you are part of that Creative Force, how can you then be separate? Every droplet in a sea forms a whole. Every tiny drop of water belongs to the whole. Do you understand? You do not look to the water in the sea as separate droplets, you see it as one whole do you not? (Agreed) That is how I would like you to try to view this energy called 'Love' ... or 'Creation' ... or 'Universes'. Think of it in just one loving thought.

George: You've presented an analogy which cannot be denied.

I thank you for your words my friend. I hope my words this time have helped a little in your understanding. (Agreed + thanks)

Sarah: Could I say one thing to you Salumet...I had a note from my son—he said he hasn't been reading the transcripts very much, because he's been very busy. But he did read the last transcript and suddenly he felt very uplifted at reading your words, like that lovely feeling just before you go to sleep. He said he's sure you would know that he is grateful to you, but he would like me to just say to you: thank you very much. Yes, I thank you kindly. I need no thanks, but it gladdens me when I hear that somehow my words have helped in some small degree.

Rod: May I just say, another one I always remember is when you end your discussions saying: I bathe you in love. That just feels very, very nice—a lovely term.

Yes—thank you. I of course always surround you and bathe you with love. It gives you the feeling of the love and warmth which surrounds each one of you at all times.

George: I was going to say it seems to last quite a long time.

Yes, the more aware you become, then the more lasting that feeling becomes. And with those words my dear friends, I will take my leave and as always, I thank you once more for listening, and hopefully digesting those words, which always are intended to help you in your own way of understanding, because as always, each one of you is on your own spiritual pathway. And with that I will leave you. (Farewells + thanks)

George's Notes: This session clarifies and reiterates a number of truths for us. Not least the true nature of disease (however trivial) and how deep meditation may cleanse or protect us from all afflictions. And how we each have a brain that is a very useful portable transmitter, and how thought powers all.

Concerning reality, we might compare Plato's very similar analogy. If in the darkness outside a cave people danced around a fire. And if people within the cave could only ever see the shadows of the dancers on the back wall, then to them the shadows would be their reality.

~5TH February 2007~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come to you this time, there are those who wish to thank you for those healing thoughts for the animals of your world. Sometimes the creatures of your Earth are forgotten, so I will say 'thank you' from those who are dealing with those healing thoughts. As I come closer to you this time, I feel the need to say to you how calm and peaceful this room is this evening. I will, on this occasion, speak with you on any subject you wish, but I also would like to say this to you my dear friends that it would be most apt this time if our dear lady friend will take you for a journey of seeking those higher beings that you have not yet met if she is prepared to do this, this time.

Sara: Yes, I can try.

Yes, you can do it—do not doubt.

George: I think we're giggling because we're not sure who is doing it!

Each one is supported in whatever takes place in this room. You are all loved and protected and we know that you feel this great energy whenever you enter this room.

Sara: I never feel I'm alone when I do the journeys—I always feel inspiration and the presence of others.

Yes, of course. We would not leave you alone. There will always be someone to help you.

Lilian: When you speak of 'higher beings'—that's not angels?

No.

Lilian: That's not our higher self?

Possibly your higher self, but not the angelic beings but those who have gone before you and have grown a little more than yourselves.

Lilian: I see.

Until you make some contact, you will not have that differentiation between them. You understand? (Yes)

Now my dear friends do we have any questions this time?

Lilian: Yes, I think Jim has a question for you, if that is alright, but he's going to need the torch (flashlight) to read out, so we will do our best to keep it low.

Jim: During six months of 2006 last year, I received medical treatment for cancer. I also asked for and received spiritual healing here at Kingsclere. My doctor has just told me how very well I have responded to the chemotherapy and that I'm much improved. I had a strong feeling that I was being helped, which I can only describe as a spiritual experience—something I really felt inside me and I'm very grateful for this. My first question is: Am I spiritually on the right track to continue not only in healing, but also in making the progress you have told us is the prime purpose for our earthly life? And next, I'm faced with having to make a decision about the possibility of hip surgery, nothing to do with the cancer. What is your advice?

Thank you, I understand your questions. Firstly, let me say this to you my dear friend: you would never have entered this room had you not placed one foot on the spiritual pathway. That is my first reply to you. And of course as now you are beginning to realize when contact is made with our world, we do not let you go so easily. Therefore, our words at this time in your life are most important to you and, in accepting our love and in trying to understand truth, you are indeed my dear friend walking the pathway of spirit. Always remember that with your freewill, you can deviate from that pathway, but by holding strong to that truth, to that knowledge, you cannot go wrong in your healing. I place the responsibility back onto your shoulders, because, as the others fully understand, we cannot live life for you; we can only uplift you, guide you, enfold you in our love, but you must take some responsibility for your actions. As to your second question, I would say that the doctors in your world are there for a very good purpose in helping mankind and although there are many doubts and fears, they are there to help their fellow man. Therefore my dear friend, I say this to you: if you go forward with this operation, you may rest assured that by making contact with those of us in spirit, you will be helped, things will be made much easier for you and your recovery time will be so much quicker. This already you are having proof of, so I would say to you, go forward, be clear in your endeavours and do not allow any fear to enter that part of your consciousness that would make you afraid. Keep it from your mind and all will be well. Does that answer your question for you?

Jim: I feel I couldn't have asked for a better message from you than you have given me and I understand it. That is important.

Jim: Thank you very much.

Yes—our love is with you, do not be fearful. Are there more questions this time?

George: I have several from past matters. There are one or two loose ends from the session on Ancient Egypt. I don't know if it would be proper to raise those at this time?

I intend to devote some time to that matter so we will not use the time this evening, but I assure you we will discuss.

George: Oh, thank you. Yes, that would be wonderful because on that occasion the energy began fading and there were one or two little loose ends. It would be wonderful to devote some time to completing that.

Yes. I do not forget.

George: Thank you. Now, sometime ago you asked us about understanding ourselves, to go within and find out about ourselves and I know I didn't give you an answer concerning that. So perhaps I could say something now. In going within I found it very difficult to think in terms of myself without also thinking in terms of others and other connections—in fact as I thought about it, I couldn't really think about self without thinking about the entire creation. I don't know if that was your intention in asking us to partake in this exercise, but it occurred to me then that a model to aid the thinking would be an orange and I started thinking in terms of the deeper spirit being the interior of the orange which is all much the same, yet there is structure there. I feel it's perhaps a little bit like this in the deeper spirit—there are as you say conglomerates and light beings, angels and soul structures—like the flesh of the orange, they're not very rigid structures. Then it seemed to me that physical beings are rather more like the peel of the orange, which experiences sunlight and things happen within the peel. The peel and interior are interdependent and the freewill of the physical beings would happen in the peel of the orange and some good would come out of the various interactions and pass onto the interior. So if one saw this as a model for the universe, then only good would happen in the interior and that could progress, but all the freewill and any risk would happen in the peel. I felt it was a model that I could understand. I just wondered if you would have any comment on that?

Indeed I do my dear friend. Firstly I admire your analogy of life. One question to you: what happens with the orange that is bad within?

George: Well I don't think this could happen in the spiritual analogy.

Yes, of course. I understand where you are coming from. Let me say, when going inwards, in finding that true self, in whichever way is most comfortable for you, then that is fine. The important part is that you feel part of all existence and, yes indeed, there is a fluidity in all of existence, in all of life—nothing is static. We have expressed the fact that energy is ever growing, so in a sense your orange analogy is a little stiff in as much as I can see restrictions in the peel of the orange. I would suggest that the orange stripped of its peel is more in tune to that spiritual part of the energy, where it can expand and grow further apart and yet still belongs to that one unit. Do you understand what I am saying?

George: Yes I understand...

I am trying to simplify it for you in your own language.

George: Yes, it has to be more fluid than the fruit.

Yes, it has to expand, but if that is your way of going inward and being part of the whole, then I am not one to tell you otherwise.

George: Yes, it just seemed to be a model which allowed badness and deviation to only occur in the peel and not pass to the inner spirit.

Yes, that is fine and well for you. However you go inwards, that is part of your own experience, that is your own fulfilment, but in quieting the mind, in going within to that all-encompassing quietness, that is where you will find your true selves. And truly, only when that quietness is there, will you begin to understand what you are about. I hope that helps you.

Jim: Can I ask a question again? Salumet, have you ever met Jesus? I just wondered about that possibility?

I am aware of the one you talk of. I do not acquaint, because I am from another source, but I am aware of his name and what he has created in your world. Yes—does that answer your question?

Lilian: Did you have a question Graham?

Graham: Yes. It's a question that has been raised before, but I wanted to take the question a little bit further this time. It's a question about personality. We are all very different beings and all behave and conduct our lives in very different ways and I think the question was I asked of you once: does personality come through before we're born from spirit world? And I think that you answered at the time that 'no it doesn't—that the physical conditions in which we live mould development of our personality'. Am I right in saying that so far?

Yes.

Graham: Then we go on through our lives and eventually we pass back to spirit world and I guess there we do, at least for a while, take our earthly personality back with us into spirit world.

Yes.

So we carry on much the same way but of course we develop and evolve on that side of us as well. Why is it that when we do come back into our next lifetime, why is it that we start again with the opportunity to develop a new personality. Is this to enable us to move forward without any restrictions which are personality that we have at that time may impose on us?

I understand your question my dear friend. Sometimes personality from past life does come with another incarnation, but that is only because conditions of past lives have not be resolved. They are few and far between. Remember my dear friend that when you reincarnate, it can be another aspect of soul which is returning. So it is that all memories cease in order that the lifetime which you have chosen can be fulfilled without any—how would you express it—hitches. You understand?

Graham: Yes.

Is that helpful to you?

Graham: It's enormously helpful, yes, thank you. It's something I've pondered about before and yes, I think the bit that I wasn't understanding, was the fact that when we come back for a new lifetime, it's a new aspect of our soul that is given the chance to develop and go forward. Yes.

In the same way that I come from a conglomerate of beings, the soul itself is made of many aspects—we have spoken about this before—and that is what you must try to remember.

Graham: Yes, thank you. That's so clear, I won't forget that explanation, that's very clear, thank you.

Sarah: I don't know if this question has been asked before: if you go to any other groups, Salumet? If you say you come from a conglomerate, do the other parts of this conglomerate, do they go to different groups like you do and then you assist sometimes if you know something more than that particular...

No. I am but one part which has agreed to return at this time.

Sarah: Ah right.

No, we are not separated in many groups.

Sarah: And do you go to any other groups or is it just us?

I come only here, but at times I do have some influence, but, no, I do not speak through another's voice box.

Sarah: We're more than honoured. (Agreed)

Jan: I have a question, Salumet that I think relates to clairvoyance, maybe. And the reason I say 'maybe' is, in my everyday life I think sometimes people look upon me as being, not strange, but rather arrogant because when they're talking to me, I get true pictures of what they're telling me and for years I thought it was just my imagination but as times goes on I think it's more clairvoyance, so I find myself answering them before they've even told me. Does that make sense or is it purely... Is it part of my development?

It is part of you, not development. What I might suggest to you my dear friend is control, not that you can change what you feel and what you clearly see, but you must have restraint when dealing with another person. And that applies to all gifts—there must be an element of control if you are not to allow it to overtake your life. Do you understand?

Jan: I think so.

Yes. Try to focus without speaking and then...

Jan: But even when I do that, I can still see vividly and I have empathy for what they're telling me—it's more than just somebody telling me a story or a problem, I feel it. I feel it more so in recent years than I ever did before.

Yes. It is part of you. It is something that will become stronger as it is used, but I say 'have control in using what you see and the words that come to you'.

Jan: So you're not asking me not to see.

No. You are clear-seeing—you have that gift, do not doubt it, but just have a little control over it or use it in a more controlled manner.

Jan: I understand.

You understand.

Jan: Yes I do.

Sarah: It's been very helpful actually, her clairvoyance, when we have Bonniol through, because she's able to see things that perhaps Bonniol can't explain to us.

Yes. That is why each one of you have...you are spirit, you should be using the spiritual aids that you all have. It may be that another may not see so clearly, but can still feel what the other person is saying and have that same understanding without the clear vision. You understand? (Affirmed) You all must develop those spiritual gifts as you call them. They are not gifts, they are your right—they are what you are. But it is up to each and every one of you in this lifetime to continue to use these aids of spirit—I prefer to call them aids, rather than gifts. The Great Creator does not give gifts, because you are part of Creation. Do you understand? (Affirmed) You are all part of Creation—you are not a gift, you are part of it.

Jan: I think on Earth we use that term very loosely, don't we? We talk of 'oh, it must be a gift' or 'they are gifted'.

...When it is so natural—yes, you are correct.

Now my dear friends I feel it is now time to allow our dear lady friend to take you on your journey for this time. I will leave you and, as always, know that I am near at all times, know that those in spirit who come close to you are with you when you need them. Do not be afraid my dear friends to ask for help for yourselves.

(Thanks + farewells)

~26TH February 2007~

Lilian: Welcome Salumet.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come to you this time there is with you a sense of pressure within your energy field; so I will begin slowly this time. As always, my dear friends I am happy to join with you once more.

Lilian: We are very happy to have you back again.

Your thoughts of healing are taken and your concerns for your wider world are most appreciated, as is always, your thoughts outside this room. We have watched each one of you closely as you approach your everyday lives; your consideration for others—that innate love which you feel for those in need, not only human, but also the animal and vegetable kingdoms. It shows to us my dear friends how much you have grown and I hope always to remind you of this, because even although you are not aware of your own spiritual growth, we can see that over time that light quickens even more brightly, and for this we wish to thank you.

George: It is very good—very reassuring to have your words on that.

Lilian: And we're grateful for the teachings that you bring—it helps us along the way.

Yes. For this time I will not be with you too long, because we do not wish to place any unnecessary fatigue to the instrument this time.

Lilian: Yes, we understand. (Eileen had been unwell)

You would do well to understand that communication with our world is natural, but there is always consideration for the human form at all times, but even more so with this type of communication. You understand? (Affirmed) Therefore my dear friends I will answer anything for you and then will proceed to work quietly with this instrument for the rest of this evening.

Lilian: There is one question I think we're all interested in hearing. Will you start, Sarah?

Sarah: I know you've told me I shouldn't worry about communications that come through me aren't real, but we did have one the other day and he said that we are already preparing for our passing over to the other side and that when we go over to the other side we would be surprised at the thoughts we've been having over here. Can you just say anything about that?

George: Yes... I think this, Sarah, originated from another group and it came via a soul aspect of the person in that other earthly group. I think I'm right in saying that.

Sarah: Yes, I had completely forgotten that.

Lilian: Which was completely new to us...

Yes, I understand what you are saying, but there would be no need for another aspect to be involved so closely with one lifetime. So your question is... what are you confused about?

Sarah: Well, I think first of all that somebody came through me and said that somebody from another group wished to make contact with us and then this other person came through and because this person was still alive, it was a spirit that was doing the talking for this person who was still alive. Then the message was that we are already preparing for our passing over to the other side with our thoughts that we're not aware of. Is that right?

Lilian: Yes, they had teachings from someone, say, similar to you in their group, only maybe different teachings and this was one of the teachings they passed on.

Can I just clarify one thing for you?

Sarah: Yes please, thank you.

When spirit returns to earthly form, that has been their decision. The other aspects of the soul remain just that. There is no contact whilst you inhabit these human forms, with other aspects of the soul; that only takes place when you return home and then all is made available to you. So, therefore, yes, all is placed before you, all conditions of that lifetime, which of course include any thoughts that have been sent forth, because you understand that thoughts remain and are real and are reality. So therefore your thoughts are made available to you, but not any more so than the whole of your living. All is known anyway, so I would say to you my dear friend that when communications take place, you have to at some stage of your development be just a little more discerning with whom you are making contact. You understand?

Lilian: Yes.

I do not say that this is incorrect, but what you are being given I have to say was from someone whose knowledge was in some way a little limited.

Sarah: Yes, well that's why we were keen to ask your opinion, Salumet.

But don't doubt the communication aspect: that is real. But what I would wish you to do now as you each develop more clearly, is just to be a little more discerning of those who come to you. If you are in doubt, place the question before us and you should have the answer immediately. Do you understand?

Sarah: When you say 'place the question before us'...

Send your thought to us and have it—I believe you would say, 'clarified'.

Sarah: I think that's why probably we were keen to ask you because maybe it just didn't sit quite comfortably with us.

Lilian: No it didn't, did it—we were just puzzled.

Sarah: That's probably—we got the answer already and we didn't need to ask you!

I can assure you that there are many groups throughout your world who would be taught all of the things that I am teaching you, because when first I came to you, did I not say that this had been a chance for us in spirit to come at this time to teach many truths—nothing new, but to remind mankind of what has always been. So therefore it must make sense to you that there would be many, many more being taught these truths.

Sarah: Would there be by any chance, because this communication who came through said it was from someone who was living already—might there just be a chance that they wanted to make contact with us because they had been made aware that maybe we had a greater teaching than they had, or is that just...

That is not correct. Why would they not make human contact? That is the question that you must ask.

Lilian: That's what your instrument said actually when I was talking to her.

I would only say: what is most concerning as far as I am concerned is that they are involving other aspects of the human form and that is not so.

Sarah: I think it was just because somebody from another group wanted to make contact with us and in the meetings they would have to do it via another spirit—that's not good then, you're saying?

Another aspect, I believe you said.

Sarah: Well I think George said that but I don't think that's quite right. I think it was, what I understood, it was somebody from another group who was making contact with us but because they were still alive they had done it through a spirit.

But it is not sensible, would you not agree, for this to take place?

Sarah: It did seem a little strange, I have to say.

Yes. I would not be too concerned provided you understand that some communicators are not as advanced, if I might use that word, as they sometimes think. They do not wish to deceive, but they, themselves, do not have that knowledge to give, and therefore as people become confused in your world, so sometimes our communicators get confused in our world.

Sarah: Would there be a way if I were just to say mentally not to have this sort of communication—would that be apt to say that?

Your communication should begin at the beginning as you join together to ask that you receive only that in love and truth, and that of course you know each of you are protected. But to do it individually is wise also.

Sarah: But then of course this one was doing it in love and truth probably but it just wasn't quite right.

That's why I say: do not doubt the communication aspect, only sometimes what is said.

George: Perhaps one could see it as an experiment: like the general run of experiments, some are sensible while some are very questionable.

Yes. All have their own views and I will not say motives—that is incorrect. But they feel that their advice to you is correct when sometimes it is a little wayward. Perhaps that is the best way to describe it to you. I hope that has helped in some way.

Sarah: Yes, thank you. Well all I can say is: 'thank goodness we've got you, Salumet!'

Lilian: Yes. That was going through my mind. Yes, thank you.

I believe you already have communication with others who are having information from us along very similar lines and I am sure they did not need another communicator from our side of life. The communication has been made by our dear friend here.

Sarah: Which dear friend is this?

The one known to you as George. He already makes contact in the earthly sense with those of like mind, does he not?

George: Yes.

Yes. And that is much more appropriate my dear friends for those of you in this world.

George: Yes. Are you able to take another question, Salumet?

I will take one more only.

George: Could you clarify for us the difference between 'mind projection' and 'astral projection'? We're aware of some differences. I think the mind projection involves mind or brain connection, and I think astral projection can occur during sleep state (yes). Could you clarify that area for us, please?

Yes. Astral projection is a solitary endeavour. Mind projection requires another mind. That is the utmost point to make (yes). There is no point in having mind projection if it is not taken up and received, but the spirit can make astral projections by itself and travel throughout all of eternity as a solitary unit.

George: Yes. So could one say that astral projection is like the first part or the outset of mind projection?

Yes. I would suggest to you that is a rather clever way of looking at these two things. Mind projection is on a much more spiritual level although all of you can do it when it is created and used properly. Mind projection is what is used in our world all of the time; there is no need for words. It is a mind-energy (yes) and it becomes much more refined as you move forward in our world.

George: Yes, and I take your point about it being more spiritual and that connects with it being shared (yes); not only perhaps being shared by the two people principally involved but also shared by the 'support' groups, if I could use that word.

Yes. There will always be those in spirit aware of any thoughts. There are those who are called thought-keepers but I believe you know all of this. But, as I have tried to tell you in times past, you have to begin somewhere with mind projection because, remember my dear friends, you are spirit. You must always remind yourselves ‘you are not human, you are spirit clothed in human garb’ and if you constantly remind yourselves, mind projection should become much easier for you. It is the human element of man which holds him back—he is afraid in his own limited way of what is available to him. You understand?

Sarah: Are people who contact deceased—people in spirit communicate with them to pass on messages to us—is that a form of mind projection?

It is used of course. It is more a blending of—we will use the term ‘mind’, but it is more a blending of energy; it is slightly different. When you use mind projection, you are sending to another. When mediums here make contact with our world, the energies are used differently.

Sara: Salumet, can I just ask: If I’m sitting at the piano and I suddenly receive some inspiration, and I can suddenly play a new piece, that I’ve never played before straight away, is that mind projection? Is somebody projecting that to my mind?

That is a form of mind projection, yes, because you are not aware of any connection or you have not as you say in your world, ‘tuned in’, then you are open to mind projection.

Sara: Because I’ve been really amazed sometimes by that but as far as I have been aware, I’ve just been feeling very relaxed.

Yes and you have opened up to receive from our world.

Sara: Presumably if I ask for more in meditation, that would be given, and I sit more...

That is possible—I will not say it is necessarily true that you will receive more. It will depend of course on whoever is trying to inspire you.

Sara: Right—then the other question I wondered is: I feel there are different people with me sometimes because my playing is very different (yes). I noticed this weekend, I played twice; the second time it was a very different experience.

Yes, there are a group who come to you.

Sara: Ah, thank you. That does answer the question.

Yes, there are a group of five.

Sara: Five! Um! That’s very interesting, thank you.

Now, are you happy with your answer, my dear friend?

George: Wonderful, yes. I’m sure that’s clarified things beautifully for all of us. Yes, that’s wonderful.

Now I will withdraw this time. I will work quietly with the instrument (Eileen) and leave it with our dear lady friend (Lilian) to continue with whatever is in store for you.

Lilian: Thank you again. Thank you for coming.

As always, I leave you surrounded by my love.

General thanks

George’s Note:

So astral projection is a solitary no-limits tour, while mind projection also is unlimited, but it is a meeting of minds which allows dialogue or inspiration, and it is with involvement of guides.

~5th March 2007~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I join with you this time I wish to say ‘thank you’ to our dear lady friend (Lilian) for dimming the light just a little.

Chuckle from Lilian

Our connection grows strong when your awareness has come forward to meet my thoughts. As always, I am happy to join with you once again and was happy to note your awareness of the needs of many (Before Salumet came through, the group had given thanks for spiritual help given to those in need.) and my dear friends, you could not do this unless your own consciousness and awareness had grown. I was most interested in our dear gentleman friend speaking about raised consciousness within your world and this is true. (Re being more aware of other life forms sharing our planet, such as the elementals) I have told you on many occasions that our purpose this time is to bring truth and that you people on this planet to recognize that truth. I also have told you that this cannot happen in your lifetime; it is a step by step, slow progress, but nevertheless it is happening, and all of us in my world are pleased to see this progress.

Sarah: We are very pleased to hear, too, that it's happening.

I would just like to stay on this subject for a little while longer and to tell you my dear friends a little of progress that is being made between our world and yours. Not only is the consciousness of man being raised—and I would say it is partly being raised because of the life of many good people upon this Earth who show their love and their knowledge by example—that is a way forward, to show by the way you live your own lives. But what we in my world are trying to achieve now is to alter all of the 'stuck' knowledge that is within your DNAs. This is little known at this time, but there are those upon your Earth who are gaining knowledge of this particular aspect of change. I feel some questions at this point...

Graham: Could you expand a bit of what you mean by DNA and stuck knowledge in DNA?

In the same way as all conditions of your life are within your DNA pattern, so also are thoughts.

Graham: Gosh, that's interesting!

George: Does this change connect to a noticeable degree in genetic change?

Not particularly. It is something that has always existed but mankind down through the ages in many areas of living has become 'stuck'—I believe that is your common word—and it remains so. Rather similar to those of you who reincarnate with problems from past lives, so too does humankind come with DNAs which are stuck.

George: So I think you're saying that there's a particular spiritual connection to the DNA helix.

Of course, of course, although it has the physical connotations, all of spirit has to be involved in these things. That is a way forward to release people from past thoughts and actions. It is something for you to think about and I will bring more to you when you have pondered those words.

George: Yes, I imagine it is not quite like wiping a slate clean. Perhaps that's ...

That cannot be.

George: No (Chuckle)

That would be much too easy, would it not?

George: Yes, but it is a factor that would make our way forward a little easier.

Changing your lives and thinking and to become that more spiritual being.

Sara: Re-programming the mind with better thoughts, more positive thoughts.

Yes, that is exactly what it would achieve.

Sara: So that clearly relates to what was said recently about the fact that any condition can be overcome, not necessarily taken away but overcome by the power of thinking.

Yes. Again it demonstrates the power of the mind. Do you see how thinking joins in all aspects of your lives and how powerful it is? (Yes) It is that part of you which will always exist. Therefore, that is something for you to think about and I will await your questions next time. But it is a little more knowledge that will come from many angles, from many countries, because we in spirit are working with many in this work.

George: Yes, I'm sure it is true to say that we have not really thought about a DNA link.

No. It is something that is very new to your knowledge I know, DNA, in the amount of years that it has been discovered, but of course in our world it has been known forever—so it is not new. So I hope my dear friends it has given you a little more to consider.

George: Yes indeed.

Graham: DNA is linked with our future evolution (yes), so if we're stuck with past consciousness in our DNA which we have at the moment, if we can let that go and move forward with our spiritual learning and awareness, then we will physically evolve as well.

Yes. Would you like to sit here?

Much amusement

Graham: I'm not quite qualified yet!

You started this conversation and now you have given a very apt explanation. It just shows how much you have all grown. Now, as I leave that with you, I will answer any queries you may have this time and allow others to come. Do we have questions this time?

Sarah: I would like to go back to something you said just now, Salumet, about your mind/thought always exists. Does that mean that each aspect of us that comes back here has its own mind and thought that continues to exist always with that aspect?

When you return here, you have the ability to join with the other aspects of yourself in spirit if you so make that connection, but when spirit returns to this Earth plane, that is an entirely new life and thoughts will be made whilst in that lifetime, because most people have memory erased for that purpose—because if you brought with you all knowledge, why would you be here?

Sarah: Exactly, yes.

You understand?

Sarah: Yes.

So no, knowledge is available through the angelic beings if you like, with whom you can make connection, not with your other aspects directly.

Sarah: But I was just thinking that each aspect that comes back, it will have its own mind, its own thought. Yes, for that lifetime.

Sarah: Ah. But when you said it's with you always, when you return to spirit...

Thought is always there, it will return to that energy field. You are thinking on a physical level my dear friend—you have to let go of that way of thinking.

Sarah: It was just when you said it's always there, I was thinking that the next aspect will have its mind and its thought—but that all goes into a thought pool...

Energy cannot be rid of, but we have what you call an 'energy pool' of thought. You understand?

Sarah: Yes. I understand that, yes.

I am sorry if I have led you to believe wrongly.

Sarah: No, that's fine. No it's nice to have the confirmation. Actually all these questions always give you a little bit more information, a little bit more understanding. So, yes, thank you, that's fine.

That is what I would wish to encourage in each one of you: to use that thinking, to make connection with us in order that we can help you, not only in everyday life, but in understanding yourselves.

Sarah: Thank you.

George: You referred to my physically making contact with various people last time and I felt afterwards perhaps I should have taken up that point. Yes, I do write to a number of people—I don't always get replies, but I hope perhaps seeds have been sown, but yes, it would be nice to get more replies to letters. I sometimes wonder if I'm doing it in the wrong way...

You do what you feel is right my dear friend. Continue and, as I have said, only one seed sown is a job very well done. You cannot expect more from humankind. Some are quick to take up any contact, but others will always be less happy to make response. But do not be concerned about this—all will fall into place.

George: Thank you for your advice, that's nice to have.

Now my dear lady friend (Lilian) I will leave the rest of this evening in your most capable hands.

Lilian: Yes, and thank you for the information tonight, very interesting.

It is good sometimes to make you think just a little bit more. And with those words, I will leave you. I surround you all in that great light of love. I ask that it bathes each one of you in love and in truth, and until we come together once more, I ask that each one of you be given the help that is needed.

(Appreciation expressed + thanks)

George's Notes:

Salumet's words: 'there are those on your Earth who are gaining knowledge of this...' Once again a topic has been introduced from spirit of which we in the group had no prior knowledge. The following two pieces plucked from the Internet may be of interest, the first dated three days after the Monday meeting! Parts that seem to particularly align to Salumet's words have been picked out in bold:

1. From ... NEWSFINDER, 8 March 2007, posted by Fotopoulou Sophia: The human DNA is a biological Internet and superior in many aspects to the artificial one. The latest Russian scientific research directly or indirectly explains phenomena such as clairvoyance, intuition, spontaneous and remote acts of healing, self-healing, affirmation techniques, unusual light/auras around people (namely spiritual masters), the mind's influence on weather patterns and much more. DNA Can Be Influenced and Reprogrammed By Words and Frequencies Russian DNA Discoveries In addition, there is evidence for a whole new type of medicine in which DNA can be influenced and reprogrammed by words and frequencies WITHOUT cutting out and replacing single genes. Only 10% of our DNA is being used for building proteins. It is this subset of DNA that is of interest to western researchers and is being examined and categorized. The other 90% are considered "junk DNA". The Russian researchers, however, convinced that nature was not dumb, joined linguists and geneticists in a venture to explore those 90% of "junk DNA". Their results, findings and conclusions are simply revolutionary! According to them, our DNA is not only responsible for the construction of our body but also serves as data storage and communication. The Russian linguists found that the genetic code, especially in the apparently useless 90%, follows the same rules as all our human languages. To this end they compared the rules of syntax (the way in which words are put together to form phrases and sentences), semantics (the study of meaning in language forms) and the basic rules of grammar.

2. Re book: The Biology of Belief: Unleashing the powers of Consciousness, Matter and Miracles ... Bruce Lipton...Dogma of DNA finally dissolved!!!, April 19, 2005. Well it's about time! For those of you who have been plagued by the dogma of DNA (genetic determinism or fatalism) will find this book beyond inspiring! We have been told by western biology that the DNA is at the heart of who we are, with the DNA in the cell nucleus being the brain of what activates and makes the cell function and control the rest of the body's activities. From this model (actual called the 'DOGMA OF DNA' in Biology teachings) ALL life is DNA in motion and we are genetic beings with all our diseases and traits (physical & mental) pre-determined. This model/paradigm has become a key part of the very structured and defined mechanistic biological pharmaceutical medicine we see dominating the West today (sigh). BUT in this book Lipton has flipped this notion upside with the profound discovery that the DNA in the nucleus is in fact is NOT the brain or determining factor of the body. Lipton deconstructs the dogma by showing the mem-BRANE of the cell is the brain that is driving and determining the cells activities which equal the rest of the body and its functions. The key here is the signals that are received by the cells mem-BRANE. These signals consist of input from the environment but mainly the thoughts of the individual. He shows that when we become response-able and can pro-actively use our thoughts to cohere with the cells activities we have profound influence over their behaviour. THOUGHTS INFLUENCE BIOLOGY, now who chooses your thoughts?? When one controls the signals they control the cells and this changes everything we thought we knew about cell, the human body and ultimately dis-ease. I found this book to be an important piece of the 'beyond the BLEEP' new science information that truly shows how 'our thoughts control our reality'. The BLEEP opens up the dialogue but with not much advice on how to now engage this perspective. Lipton's book is a beacon for it truly shows how this revision of perspective can radically empower YOU to know how and why you are able to change your life. Unlock the power of your mind as it is a key piece of opening up to higher levels of operation internally and externally. The Biology of Belief is almost beyond belief as it is a part of the next phase of the new sciences that are dogma shattering. This book is a leap forward: knowledge is power - self-knowledge is self-empowerment - all you have to do is believe it! It was 1953 when James Watson, Francis Crick and Maurice Wilkins discovered the double helix structure of deoxyribonucleic acid, that we now call simply DNA. Much has progressed in this field in the last half century! The two above items representing East and West as they do are in keeping with Salumet's 'many countries' being involved.

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As we come together this time, the energy is good. You, or some of you, may feel a difference this time. Try to be aware of this surge of energy and feel what is round and about you.

George: It seems to be building as you speak.

Yes, that is good that you feel it so. By being able to differentiate between the powers of the energies used, it shows your own enlightenment to what is about you. My question to you my dear friends: do you have any questions about our last meeting before I continue onward?

George: Before questions, perhaps I could say that I looked at the internet two days after the last meeting, and I found two items that relate to thought modifying DNA and there is some interesting information, and one of those items was posted on the internet two days after our meeting. The DNA was described in one of those reports as 'like a biological internet'. I think the meaning there is that the information can be put into the DNA and information also comes from the DNA to have its influence.

Yes, that energy, whether going in or out, is transmuted. Yes, you are correct. But it is not new as I have told you—it is only that it is beginning to enter the consciousness of man that it is now becoming more available to human thinking.

George: Certainly there is the evidence on the internet that, as you say, it is entering the consciousness.

Yes, that is the purpose for it and of course that mankind might have better control of his own spiritual being.

George: Yes, it is openly declared that thought and words have that influence and...

As you well know my dear friend—that I have told you on many of your years now.

George: Indeed, and I think that thought can come from the individual himself, or it can come from a healer, or it can come from those in spirit, or as I think you were saying last time, it can enter from deeper spirit. All those thought places would, I think, have their effect.

Of course, your words are completely right.

George: Thank you, it's good to have your confirmation on that.

I applaud the fact that you have gone on and found for yourself what is being made available in other areas. That, my dear friends, will and should satisfy your own need for what you would call 'proof'. Do you not agree?

George: Yes, I happily accept it and I think a number who read our transcripts will see that as proof and find that reassuring.

Yes. It is up to them to consider our words and whether or not they are happy to accept truth. We are not here to force anything upon anyone, but rather to encourage deeper thinking for oneself. Yes?

(Agreed)

Sarah: That actually was what helped me in the beginning to want to come to the group, because those words—not knowing very much in the beginning—when you said that you didn't want to force anybody to do anything, it was that that encouraged me, because so many of the religions say 'you must do this, you must do that and you must do the other' and you were just different. So that was good.

Yes. All knowledge my dear friend is within you and as much as we come to help and to inspire and instruct you, it is far greater that you look within in this lifetime and find yourselves. We want you to use the freewill that you have wisely, and that is what you are accomplishing now.

Sarah: Going back to the DNA, Salumet. In changing it with our thought, will that actually show up on the physical DNA? I was only wondering, because people who've committed crimes have been trapped through their DNA and if the DNA were to be changed in some way, would they still be able to recognize that person?

Yes, each one of you has your own individuality stamped within the DNA and although it can be transmuted, it is not to such an extent that the physical individual could not be recognized. You understand?

Sarah: Yes I do, thank you.

Jan: It's not a question, but I'd just like to share with the group what my son, Richard, told me a couple of days ago. I think, Salumet, you have touched on it in the past. He filled two cups with water and wrote on a sticky label on one cup the word 'love' and on the other cup the word 'gratitude' and put them in the fridge overnight. The following morning he drank them and throughout the day he felt an overpowering love and gratitude. He told me that water has a memory. I wondered if you could give me your comments on that.

Yes, because within water lies all of life's energy as it does within human beings. You are structured mainly from fluid—water as you call it—so of course all things are filled with the energy of that overpowering being, if you like, known to you as love. Is it not true that you may have two people—one who is filled with love, one who is filled, not with hate, but let us say, with some disquiet, and is negative. Which of those two human beings will remain the healthy one?

Jan: The non-negative.

Yes, yes. So in all aspects of your life you should exude love and of course gratitude to that Great Creative Force from which we all come.

Jan: I was absolutely amazed, and I know I shouldn't be but I was amazed by it—he was so filled with the joy that he felt—he does anyway, but he said he was absolutely filled up with those two emotions all day.

Yes. It should also apply, not only to your water, but to the food you eat, to the people in your lives, to the animals in your fields—all should have that love extended to them.

Jan: Yes. He went on to say that when, as you know, we prepare our meals and we cook, that if you are preparing a meal in love, then the meal will obviously taste a lot better (yes) than if the meal is prepared with discord—and that happens on a daily basis, if you're hurried or not feeling too happy...

Yes. Unfortunately within your world the female of your race has much responsibility when preparing food and drink for those youngsters for whom they care. If only they could but realize that love in preparation and in serving food and water or whatever, would serve your young people and help to sustain them for the rest of their lives, because, as you know, children learn mainly from the parents to whom they have come.

George: Yes, I have a feeling we really should be re-thinking our school meals system. (Yes)

Jan: Which has started, George, hasn't it? People are thinking ...

George: At a physical level really. I don't think the spiritual level has entered into food systems yet—on a family level yes, but nothing more.

But you have allowed me to continue most aptly to what I wish to say to you this evening. It has led very nicely to my topic.

Jan: I think he was meant to tell me then.

Yes, of course. And it is this my dear friends, that I am sure some of you are aware that since the beginning of this millennium there has been much spoken about children coming into this world who are much more spiritual in nature and who in fact have come to this planet to bring much knowledge. This my dear friends I have to tell you is what is happening now, that as we progress through the next one thousand of your earthly years, much change is coming to mankind, mainly through those small children who have spiritual gifts and knowledge which will in many cases astound the human race. These children come with much knowledge and I am sure that over your next few years of earthly life you will be made aware, whether it be by mouth or through your media, there are many children who bring to you much love and truth and they are and will be the forerunners on this planet to help to make the change in human consciousness.

George: Wonderful! So we could think of this as an injection of different from the usual, soul material.

Yes, it comes from our world. When first I came to you I told you my dear friends that this time we could not—I use your earthly word 'fail', but that is not to say that we have failed, but that mankind has strayed just a little from the spiritual pathway. But I wish to tell you this evening my dear friends to watch out for these children; they will appear in all parts of your world, they will deliver to mankind the love, the hope and the change that is needed for mankind to go forward.

Sarah: It sounds as if people are going to take them seriously, because quite often adults don't take children seriously, but it sounds as if these are going to make a good impression.

They will have that factor of belief that adults in your world will see from example from these children, just what they bring to this world. So my dear friends remember these words, because you will have them clarified as I have said.

Sarah: That's good to hear.

Paul: I expect some of them will have gifts to the fore which people will be able to see as well.

Yes. But their spirituality will shine forth from them. It will not be denied. These spirits or souls have come for this purpose, but it has been decided that it is the children who shall take the forefront of this knowledge, because children have an innocence and a beauty which many adults lose.

Paul: It would be very fitting to let the children lead the way. (Yes)

Sarah: And obviously they are going to choose the right parents.

Yes, all conditions will be suitable. But it is one way forward, not the only way, but one way.

Sarah: It will be very exciting to see that in our lifetime.

Lilian: We did watch (on TV) a story of a little girl—she had cancer—a cheerful little thing, and what she went through ... but she still remained cheerful. The mother was pregnant with another baby and the little girl had said to her mother, 'don't worry mother, wherever I am, I will help you with the new baby'.

Yes. A spirit with much knowledge, yes.

Lilian: Yes. That impressed me, I must say. She did die, but ...

A small example of a child who knows the truth, and is bathed in love. There will be many cases, exceptional cases of children.

Lilian: The mother will obviously repeat that story as well.

The mother could not deny the words of the child; and how can a small child know of these things unless it is truth. That is what you must ask of yourselves, not you of course my dear friends, but those who have lost their way, who do not know what to believe—and children are always a great gift to humanity. And now my dear friends I will leave you and I will for a short time continue to work with this instrument. As always I will look to our next meeting and I leave you all within that great love of the Great Creative Force, which is part of all things. (Thanks and farewells)

George's notes:

DNA: Perhaps we could think of DNA of the cell nucleus as an interface between spirit and material molecular structures. It seems that the changes mentioned are more subtle than the gross character that identifies an individual by the arrangement of physical DNA chemical compounds.

Water: The physical energies of water have always been intriguing. Firstly, the curious hydrogen bonding between molecules giving rise to the fixed 'ice' structure below 0° C, unless in the presence of pyramid energy; and to 'surface tension' that pulls a raindrop into sphere-shape. Secondly there are wave formation, whirlpools and ripple effects. Clearly it can hold other non-physical energies as well, and these interact with hydrogen bonding, as demonstrated by the crystallisation work of Masaru Emoto (Salumet 25 October 04).

Way Forward: It is becoming steadily clearer, that the movement projected from spirit to uplift this planet embodies a number of parts. Some may be listed as:

- (1). Teaching by masters such as Salumet
- (2). Easing the 'stuck' condition of DNA.
- (3). Introduction of children having spiritually 'sourced' soul origin (see also Salumet / Pia 27 June 05).
- (4). Influence from spirit towards political leaders and scientists.
- (5). Inspiration for striving individuals.
- (6). Revelations such as achievements of ancient civilisations and the Bible Code.
- (7). Extra-terrestrial and interplanetary communications that reveal Earth's true place in the pattern of creation.
- (8). Light signs reported worldwide (Salumet, 14 July 03).

One may see all these as facets of the one grand movement mounted from spirit to raise spiritual awareness on the Earth.

~14TH May 2007~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

It is good to join with you once more.

Lilian: I think we would agree with you.

I do not intend to stay too long this time.

Lilian: We understand.

But I am sure that the instrument (Eileen) will be pleasantly surprised that I have used her this time. But when connections are strong, they must be used. I would like also this time to welcome our new visitor (Julie) to this group and hope that she fulfils the needs that she is seeking. I also wish to say to the young gentleman, (Richard) at last he recognizes our spiritual connections to him.

Richard: Thank you Salumet. It's been a little while since I've been.

No matter as long as progress is made—spiritually it matters not how many visits you make.

George: I'm sure we are all delighted that there is such a grand reunion.

Yes. Always we are pleased to draw back within this group those who matter for the work which is necessary. Now my dear friends, I will take just one question before I withdraw this time.

Richard: Salumet, I'm sure you're well aware of what me and my mum have been doing this past weekend and we just wanted to know if it was correct, the correct route for me, if it was the path that I was supposed to be on.

You want confirmation from me? Let me say this to you both: whichever direction one chooses in a lifetime is a choice which you as a human being have made. It is not for me to come to you and say, 'you must follow that pathway' or 'you must not go on this pathway', but my dear friends you must know from within that you have taken the right pathway, because those inner feelings and knowledge are so strong that there can be no doubt. Yes, yes. Each one of you within this room knows what is right and what is truth for their own spirit; it is an innate knowledge that has to be fulfilled at certain times of your life. So I say to you my dear friend, if it feels right then you must travel forward and all help can be given to you by those who stand close by. I hope that is helpful to you.

Richard: Thank you—very.

I know sometimes my dear friends it would be so much easier for you if I were to say, 'do this, do that', but that is not fulfilling your purpose in life. You understand?

Lilian: Yes, I think we all do.

George: Might I just ask if you have any message for your instrument, Eileen?

(Eileen had not felt 100% for a while)

Only that what has been happening has a good reason, not only to slow her down, but there are changes in energies going on around her which have to be dealt with, but that she may find a little difficult at this time to accept. But all is for good.

Lilian: So these energies would be her spiritual journey?

Yes.

Lilian: I see.

Very subtle energies, both physically and spiritually.

Sarah: Those were the very words that Eileen has said to me, that all these things are for a purpose, so I think she will understand that very well.

All things have a purpose, whether you as human beings can accept or not, it still happens. Now as I leave you my dear friends to continue your evening, know always that I stand close, that I endeavour to help each one of you along your chosen pathways and what I wish to end with this time is to abandon all fear and place your trust in that All-Creative Force who will uplift you at all times.

George: I think we feel this central core of your teaching more and more as time goes on. Thank you.

Lilian: It's been lovely having you talking to us again. Thank you.

~4th June 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always I am happy to join with you. There was some interest last time when I mentioned energy. I would just like to say to you my dear friends that energy is never standing still; energy is all moving, all changing, at all times. What I would like to say to you this time is that by the end of this, your earthly year, each one of you will have gone through some form of metamorphosis. No matter what your station in life, you will look back upon this year as one of change, whether it be of your own making in your private lives, your work life or in general, or even affected by another human being in your life—each one of you will look back and see these subtle energy changes. So you see, it is not only of this instrument when I speak of energies and changes.

Sarah: Is that just us, Salumet, in this room or everybody on this planet.

I speak of this group, but of course there will be many throughout the world, who will be experiencing changes within their lives also—but no, I speak only of you as a group.

George: That's interesting.

Do you wish to make comments at this stage?

George: Only that this seems most appropriate and I've said on occasions that I feel the essence of life is 'change' and this I believe must begin with the energy change which you speak of.

Yes, and of course you cannot compartmentalize this, because, after all, the whole of your world is influenced by universal energy and I would wish that you look at the wider picture always—this I have told you on many occasions. Do not limit yourselves by limiting your thinking—always look to that wider picture.

Sarah: This energy change, is it because of what we've learnt and how we're progressing that it is going to happen to us, or is there some other reason?

Because of the way you are progressing, you will become much more aware of the changes within your lives. So the answer to you is yes, your awareness creates this all-seeing change.

George: I was recently reading about the lady, Helen Blavatsky, who about 150 years ago I think it was, she began a movement which resulted in the Theosophical Society which was continued by Annie Besant and Charles Leadbeater, and they did some very good work and their stated aim was to learn and become aware of life and of the universe, and it struck me from reading about all this, that this was an earlier version perhaps of what we are doing now—a parallel teaching, a parallel study in which they became more aware.

Yes. I would say only that this lady was at that time a forerunner of all things spiritual as far as the gifts of spirit matter, but indeed I have to say that the lady in question fell short of providing the way of life that should have been shown to match those spiritual powers that she had. But she became much wiser when she entered our world and could see her shortcomings; but indeed that society created many debates and a wider knowledge for many.

George: Thank you, I thought you might have something to say about that.

Sarah: I was reading about someone who paints people's voices. Now she must be tapping into their energy I suppose. Would that be right?

Yes, that would be the only way. It is the sound of energy that she picks up on—yes.

Any more questions this time?

Jim: I have a question I'd like to ask on a different subject: we hear about Madeleine McCann and her parents believe she's been abducted and they're not sure if she's alive or not. In spirit, some spirit knows the truth of this situation and yet her parents are suffering through lack of knowledge. Now in the interest of truth and love, would it not be possible for the answer to this question 'Is she alive?' be given to the parents somehow?

But why do you feel that we should interfere from our world? All actions which take place upon the Earth have a purpose. Now I would say to you my dear friend—and I know you have not been with us as long as some, but you have to once more look to the wider picture of life, and it maybe that before these two people came that they had somehow chosen to be in a situation of concern, and I think I am right in saying that what is noticeable to many in your world is that these two people have grown much in strength and hope and great belief in their own religion. From all things negative, there is always the opposite of positive. It is not for us in our world to interfere in any life, but what we can do if asked, is to help to influence that knowledge to come forward. We never refuse help, but we cannot step forward and interfere. It is one of the basic principles in our world. There are many, I can assure you, who will be helping in any way that they can.

Lilian: I remembered you saying that children who were being born at this time, around this time, their spirituality would shine forth (yes). I just wondered if maybe this child was one of them.

I would say to you generally, and I am repeating myself when I say that if you think of the brightness of a child and the darkness which also exists in your world, that is what is attractive to those in dark lives. It is the purity of that light which is the child. I would say, continue to ask for help and it will in some way come to some conclusion. (Thanks) But I know it is always difficult for you as human beings, especially when it is children, but you must always try to look at the wider picture and to give love, not only to the lost child, but those who have been responsible and to also pray for those people, because, my dear friends, whether you think so or not, they are in need of spiritual light and it is important that they receive help whilst they are here upon the Earth plane, than to come to our world in a state of darkness. I hope that helps you a little.

Lilian: Yes, thank you for that.

Sarah: Of course there are many children who've been taken, it's just that this one is in the limelight.

Yes, there are many what you as human beings call 'atrocities', but you would my dear friends, not be able to cope with life if you placed upon your shoulders the trouble of all people. You can only continue to pray and ask for help from that All-Creative Force who has all knowledge, all love, all forgiveness and encompasses you all in that energy of love.

Lilian: Did you have a question Paul?

Paul: I have got a question from Pia, our friend from Helsinki. She's practising a martial art called 'Daitoryn', an old Japanese self-defence. It is all about the energy 'Aiki' and she says she's trying to open up to this energy and know about it. The power of thought is involved a lot. Can you give her some comments on this activity and the Aiki energy?

Yes, I understand. Within your world there are many forms of discipline and that is what it is all about—discipline of the mind over the physical body—and I am sure that you all know of these disciplines which help the mind to focus and to create within the human mind that form of focus which then opens up to even greater ways of thinking. It is good for all of you to have some form of discipline which allows your mind to focus, because when the mind is focussed, then you are closest to us in spirit, in the same way as I have tried to tell you about your meditative state. The only difference is, is that in these, as you call them, martial arts, that the physical body is used much more to create this state of mind. I would say to this lady that any discipline can only be good. I would suggest that she relax a little more, that she is trying too hard to open up to these subtle energies, because that again is what it is and works very well with our topic this evening. Just allow herself to continue with this discipline and it will come. She is just a little too anxious about it at this time.

Paul: I will pass all that on, thank you very much. She receives the transcripts anyway.

Yes, she is knowing, this one—yes.

Now for this time I will leave you my dear friends. I hope my words again have brought to you some more things to think about.

George: Yes, they certainly have.

Lilian: They always do.

Yes, and that helps with your own growth. So my dear friends, as always I leave you, knowing that I am close to you at all times. I know you will endeavour to think upon my words this time and that when we meet again there may be some comments from you.

(Thanks expressed)

George's notes:

A note on the universal energy: Yes, we need to look beyond our material selves to those energy connections. As it happens, something got me going on a brief paper on the subject this last week, and it is more than likely that those in spirit have seen fit to lend a helping hand! It to me seems better than I could produce myself. Anyway, a copy is offered, to accompany Salumet's words of wisdom.

~25th June 2007~

Good evening. (Welcomes)

I am happy to join with you once more.

Lilian: It makes us happy too!

I would like just to say to you my dear friends: thank you for all your thoughts for others. And I would say to you that at this particular time there are many like-minded people who are sending thoughts for world peace on your planet—and we hear those voices. And I would just say to you that when there is such a concerted effort of love, it can only bring some good to your world.

George: That's very nice to hear.

Every individual's thought is of course heard if given in love, but when you have many, that energy increases and, as always, is heard by those of us in our world who can then try, as one of you here suggested, influence the leaders of your countries in the power of good. I would say this to you my dear friends: that I would like this time for some part of this evening, to work quietly with the instrument, but before that I will be happy to answer any questions that you may have.

Lilian: Thank you. Do you want to start, George?

George: Could I mention that recently three came through from spirit offering assistance to the group. One offered assistance in leather book-binding—we thanked him and were interested in the history of it, but it's not particularly appropriate to ourselves at the moment. Another offered extra clarity in clairvoyance, which we gladly accepted. And a third, whom we may know as Brother Michael, offered automatic writing, and he was concerned that we should mention this to yourself to see if this facility might be helpful at all. I understand your question. Let me say this to you: that all who come to this room come to you in love and hope to help each one of you only inasmuch as you try to help yourselves. As much as we can give, without your acceptance, it cannot go further. Therefore I say to you my dear friends you must always use your own freewill, your own understanding with anything that comes to you. We cannot force our wills upon you.

George: Yes. I got the impression he was just seeking your approval.

Yes. I approve anything that is offered in love, but we cannot offer help if you do not accept it and, after all my dear friend, that is why you have freewill—to make your own judgements, to create for yourselves that inner knowledge, that love that is given to you, to then create within yourselves a knowledge that becomes more spiritual in nature. So yes, my answer to you is simply: anything given in love and accepted in love is fine by those of us here.

George: Thank you that clarifies that for us.

Yes. In the same way that as each individual within this room is given help on a daily basis, you do not always sense that help, but spiritually you accept and take that help which is given: but then you must accept on a physical level, that help, in order that you may recognize those things offered to you. You understand?

George: Yes. I feel we're all becoming more aware of this.

Yes, you have to make the effort. It matters not how much we give if you do not accept and utilize those things. Are there more questions my friends?

Lilian: I was thinking about our friend Margaret who used to come and who is now suffering from the disease 'Alzheimer's' She's forgotten all about coming here and so on, but spiritually she wouldn't have forgotten any of it, would she?

No, her awareness is still there. The problem is on a physical level. In the same way as people who are ill or what you call 'dying', are totally spiritually aware of all that goes on around them.

Lilian: Yes—I guess I just wanted confirmation.

Rod: One thing I'm a little concerned with is when people like that pass over, Salumet, they have got to make for the light to be called over. I get a little bit anxious; are they aware of the light—do they get a little bit extra guidance?

When they come to our side of life, they come as spirit, not as physical beings—that is left behind.

George: So I think you're saying, in effect, the Alzheimer's or forgetfulness is left behind...

Is part of the old clothing, yes. It is a physical condition that the spirit can cast off at the time of passing.

Rod: So no matter how ill they are, they can go through...

It may be that they need some spiritual upliftment or healing, which is available to all who have been ill for some time, but we are speaking on a spiritual level when they come to our side of life. Do not be concerned.

Rod: No.

George: Are you able to take another question?

I will take one more this time.

George: I do name drop from time to time...

Yes.

George: They're usually people of some interest. There was one named Rudolf Steiner who—I feel he was one who would go within to seek information and he was known as a mystic. One of the things he did was to recommend a rather strange method for reviving, shall I say, worn out agricultural soil and kick-starting it back into activity. His recipe, or part of it, was to fill cow horns with manure and bury them in the ground for several months, then stir this mixture into water, stirring to the right and to the left and using this dilute solution on a very large area of soil so that one feels it was used almost homoeopathically. I rather fancy that he was developing the right bacteria to initiate humus production in the soil. Anyway, his method seems to work. I just wondered if you have anything to say about Rudolf Steiner, or that particular item.

Yes. Names matter not, as you know, but of course he would have been influenced in some way and the simple answer is, when you speak of burying the horns deep within the Earth—we have spoken of Earth energies and those who work with the Earth.

George: Yes.

So you see, although there is a simple explanation—he has elaborated in his own mind what has been given to him and made use of that information. But of course he would have been influenced as all people on this Earth are influenced in some way: your chemists, your doctors, your scientists—name any of them who create some new ideas, or you think is a new idea...

George: Yes—as you've told us several times! (Chuckle)

So always my dear friend when you read of these things or see these 'new' inventions, think spiritually and the answer becomes easy for you to understand.

George: I suspect you were implying that the elementals had been involved.

Yes of course, that is their task, but we need to influence some human beings to start the process off.

You understand?

George: But it makes interesting reading—his seemingly strange approach does work.

Yes. It matters not the steps that are taken, it is the outcome which is important, as you would probably agree.

George: Yes, indeed. Thank you for that.

Rod: It actually happens to ordinary people as well, Salumet, because my wife does crosswords and she comes out with something I can't help her out with and I can't read it, and suddenly she'll get a word—and she says 'I'm sure that's come from spirit, because it's come out of the blue'. So it comes out of ordinary mortals like us!

Yes. You are no different. If help can be given, we help, even in something as simple as an everyday occupation. All of you are available to influence and, after all, there are so many who are by your sides, hoping, not just to help in matters of everyday living, but to influence each of you spiritually. That is the important task.

Rod: That's nice.

But I know that each one of you within this room has felt at some time, help from our world. (Affirmed)
And once you recognize that help, you can then ask for more.

George: Yes, and not just words and ideas in writing, but the synchronicities (yes) seem to be important and seem to highlight things.

You must always take note of synchronistic views and see the relationship between all of these happenings, because it does come from us, but we do need you to recognize it for yourselves—and the more you recognize, the more we give.

Rod: I wish I'd known this earlier on in life. (Chuckle)

Lilian: I think we all do.

But it is not important when—the fact is that you have found yourself and you can now continue upon the pathway that you have started.

Now my dear friends I will continue to work quietly with this one, and allow the rest of your time to be used wisely.

(General thanks)

George's note:

During our period of prayer at the start of the meeting, Paul had voiced a request for guidance for our new prime minister, Gordon Brown, to which Salumet refers.

~9th July 2007~

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening. (Welcomes)

As I come close to you this time there is a gentleness and a purity about you that is so good to feel. Again my dear friends it gladdens us to know that your healing thoughts are now much more expansive than just for individual healing, that your love and feelings for your whole planet can only be admirable, but do not forget the existence of all life in many universes that exist. Although many of you feel that life on this planet Earth is harsh at times, let me just remind you my dear friends, that you human beings are on an upward curve of consciousness; and although that may not seem possible when you study individual problems in your world, on the whole this planet Earth is making good progress spiritually. So I would like you to remember this—remember my words and it will sustain you in your daily lives. The angelic beings from all other planets are working hard to help humankind and it is a little unfortunate perhaps, that the people of this time have lost that knowledge and consciousness of your ancient people. It would be worthwhile my dear friends, if you would strive to attain just a little of that consciousness which the ancients had. They, of course, were able to see these angelic beings, but they called them in your mythology 'gods' and although they may have seemed liked gods because of their great knowledge and help, they are in fact the angelic beings which have always been a part of this Earth planet.

George: Yes, I think there's been a tendency to refer to anything that is not human but seems greater than human, as gods.

Yes. After all, remember, you are gods in your own right, because we are all from the same source. But of course I feel you would think that not possible, but your actual substance is from the Great Creative Force. That is why in all of your religions mankind claims to be part of that god-like energy.

George: Image—yes.

Yes. So I say to you my dear friends, strive onwards to achieve evermore spiritual consciousness in your daily lives, in order that those spiritual eyes be awakened to all that is round and about you. Be part of the whole, do not have separation, but be love—do not only feel it, but be part of it.

Have you any questions?

Lilian: Could I ask one on the same subject? Why is it that some religions or cultures have sacred animals?

It is just part of their religious beliefs and remember that because of your freewill upon this planet, each man must choose what he feels to be right. Try not to pass judgement—they will do that for themselves, because you see, they do not feel that it is wrong to placate their god. You understand? (Yes) Although it would be against what you believe, it does not necessarily make it completely wrong in their minds. You understand?

Lilian: Yes.

George: I find it easy to feel that there are others close—I sense that there are others close with eyes shut, but I think I'm right in saying that the ancients were able to see angelic beings with the physical eyes.

Yes, because their consciousness was such that they had developed their gifts of spirituality. Yes, beings—perhaps today you would call them materializations in that sense. But yes, your ancients were much more aware spiritually.

Lilian: Would it be possible to see one of these, but not be aware of it?

You would have to be aware if you could see.

Lilian: I see.

You could not, not be aware.

George: Yes, I think there have been occasions when Mary and others have materialized before many people. So I imagine the materialization can be enhanced from spirit world so that many humans can sometimes see.

Yes. There have always been occasions for these events to happen in order that there is not doubt, but of course, as you know and understand, there always has been doubt. You cannot convince everyone at the same time, but that is the responsibility of each individual. You cannot change another's thinking for them. You can try, you can encourage, but you cannot change another until such time as their heart energy is open to the truth. I am sure my dear friends that each one within this room has come upon some person who, no matter what you say, no matter what proof you give, they cannot and will not accept it. But that too is part of the spiritual pathway. That is part of learning understanding and forgiveness of others. So I say to you my dear friends, in every area of life, give thanks to the Great Creative Force for that experience.

Jan: I saw someone who had a wonderful experience talking to somebody who he'd known for a very long time, who hadn't necessarily thought about the wider picture or any spiritual thoughts at all and suddenly you see them opening like a flower. I know someone in my family at the moment who's doing just that. It's a wonderful feeling that they started to question and ask and feel so differently.

Yes, the opportunity is there for all, but again because of the freewill given to you as human beings, that knowledge and that support can be denied. There is nothing that you can do, but of course, like the flowers in your gardens to watch it grow and blossom and become strong and beautiful can only gladden your hearts.

George: Yes, it amazes me sometimes that organizations such as the Society for Psychical Research. That has been going for something like 140 years now—an enormous amount of intellectual data has been amassed, but still, still there are doubts at every turn. The intellectual path to elucidate, or attempt to elucidate the nature of spirit is a very difficult path and very lengthy indeed!

Of course, but we are making what you would term 'inroads'. Slowly, slowly but surely and you must know my dear friends how many scientist now have turned away from the material data and have turned towards proving that spirit now exists.

George: Yes, as I see it, there's the rising spiritual awareness and there's the intellectual pathway, and the two seem to be coming together to a degree. Does that make sense?

Yes and if you look to the wider picture—that is why I said at the beginning that humankind is on an upward pathway.

Jan: I think we've all commented that we've felt that in our daily lives, haven't we?

Yes, as spiritual beings like you within this room who have accepted that you are more than a physical being; you can only continue to grow if you so desire. But again, that is why you are so individual, because of your free thinking.

Rod: I'm always a little surprised when they show a film about people living in the deepest of forests in Africa and most—well not most—they are always very spiritual and whatever they do is based on spirit, so they're well aware of it.

As were all your ancient peoples, because materialism had not taken hold. It is as you move towards material things that mankind has gradually lost these innate gifts. That is why you will find simple-living people are more aware spiritually; whether they know that or not, they are more spiritual in their outlook.

Rod: If you hadn't said what you said, I would've thought we were on an uphill path really, because everything is going that way, isn't it, in the world?

Yes, mankind has reached a peak of materialization that has to then continue on another journey and that journey is to return to know and understand himself and what he truly is. We are making great strides my dear friends, although there is so much fear in your world at this present time. If you were to stop and consider life now and that of many years ago when mankind wanted too much for himself—that is when the gifts of spirit began to fade into the background of everyday living.

Rod: That makes sense.

Jan: I wonder though if in the future if it's possible for us to recapture those spiritual feelings with the amount of materialism around us—as a planet.

Yes. I have said in years gone by, there is no problem with the materialistic things that you have, it is the love of these things, it is the false love and the attachment placed upon them that creates the problems. Of course there is a fine balance to be achieved.

George: I feel there has to be a process of devaluation of material things (yes) and possibly when the material things come up against floods or failures of various kinds, huge buildings falling down because they're too big really to stand up to the elements—perhaps these things assist the process of devaluing materialism.

It is a time for man to recognize past mistakes and, after all, if one man has so much money that he cannot spend it, but he gives much to others, then you cannot say he is wrong to have so much money, because he does not have the love of that money for himself—he uses that money to help his fellow man. So, you see, you must always weigh up before you criticize.

George: I think we recall the Andrew Carnegies of this world who were great public benefactors in this way—and Alfred Nobel....

And remember also my dear friend that sometimes these people are influenced in such a way as to achieve great wealth in a lifetime in order that they can be an example to others by helping others. So you see they are a very good example to many who would not give.

George: Yes, certainly when it's like that it's a process to be much admired.

Yes. So do not be too quick to say that all things material cannot allow you to grow spiritually—that is not the case.

Sara: Salumet, recently we've been reading a lot about manifestation—it's a subject that is quite popular at the moment—they call it cosmic ordering. Of course it'll attract many different types probably, but we have also started tithing because we read a book which we felt made sense. And yes we felt we would like to have more wealth, because we can do more with this wealth and I wondered if you had anything to say about tithing? People suggest that by giving away a percentage of your money to others who perhaps need it more, it just simply increases your own flow.

Yes. It is simply cause and effect.

Sara: Yes, cause and effect, give and receive.

Yes. If you truly give with your heart without looking for return, then the laws of all consciousness will return it to you. But what I would say is be careful what you ask for, because sometimes you are given and there is a much wider picture that surrounds it, and may not always be what you expect.

Sara: Perhaps it is better to simply not ask, but give—give but not ask...

Yes, I would suggest that is a much better way because what you give, you will receive, not perhaps in monetary terms, but you will receive in happiness or health or in the love of a family, and after all, these are much better gifts.

Sara: Yes. Thank you.

Rod: Just one question. Millions of people on the Earth are worried about the Earth heating up and flooding and they see a lot of harm being done with CO₂, and what have you. For some reason I'm not worried about this and I don't know whether I'm right or wrong, but I'm not on that side. Am I wrong?

You cannot change what has already happened, but what can change is your awareness in order to help your planet, and that awareness is already here otherwise there would be no discussions about it. So the awareness is there, but it needs to grow. But to you my dear friend, I say: do not waste your energy in worry and fear. Part of what is happening on this planet is part of its own evolution and that you cannot change; but of course there are many factors which all of you can help to change and to sustain.

Jan: By sending out our loving thoughts to keep everybody safe whilst this change is happening. This is what we can all do in our everyday lives, isn't it?

Yes, that is a much more productive view to the condition of this planet, rather than to be concerned and worried and fearful, because when you are fearful, when you are worried, you change that energy.

Jan: Vibration changes.

Yes. So, I say always to you: no matter how you feel, you have the power to change to love and hope and to continue with your lives in a fulfilling way.

George: Perhaps we could say that nature has the power to change if we allow her.

Of course that has sometimes been the problem where mankind has taken upon himself the attitude that he knows better, when it has not always been that way. But be grateful that the awareness is raised and that most human beings in your world are aware of these changes and what they can do to help. But, as I have said, part of it is an evolutionary change.

Sara: Salumet, is it reasonable to wish for things if they have an unselfish purpose behind them?

Yes of course.

Sara: Yes, because sometimes we think of future plans which would enable us to spread the word in our own particular way.

Yes. Whatever brings good that cannot be wrong, because I would say to you that you would understand immediately if the purpose of asking is not for the good of yourselves or others. There is nothing wrong in asking for help for yourselves. Do not be afraid to ask, but be careful what you ask for—that is my only caution to you.

Sara: Yes. I understand that material objects for their own sake often incite envy and don't bring happiness sometimes for that reason; but my feeling was, if you wanted a bigger house, for example, for purposes of teaching or healing, then I was thinking that presumably was a good purpose.

If it is right for you, but it may not just be given, it may be that you have to pursue in some way for this to be obtained.

Sara: Yes, I understand—dedication. Yes, I understand that. Thank you.

Now, I will take my leave this time. I hope my words have brought to you some element that will give you food for thought once more.

George: I feel it's been a wonderful, warm chat and much instruction contained therein, thank you.

Yes, and continue to send those loving thoughts for those in need. Do not forget those in our world who also need your help and thoughts. And as I leave you my dear friends, know that always I am aware of your lives, of your fears—because some of you do have fears, but that is a struggle for you to overcome. And I will ask our dear lady friend, (Sara) whilst this feeling of ease and love remains, to take you on a journey if she will.

Sara: Yes of course.

(Thanks and farewells)

George's notes:

1. Universes: Salumet has on several occasions referred to 'universes'. Physicists refer to several 'dimensions', which I think amounts to the same thing, and Salumet has on one occasion agreed that the universes are of different vibrations. With these references in mind it is clear that there are at least three that we know of:

- Physical universe of material form
- Spiritual universe of formless spirit and angelic beings
- Etheric realms of ether beings/elementals.

The Astral planes are really different again in that these seem to be realms of spirit having form ... a kind of half-way house between physical and deeper spirit.

2. 'Gods': Earlier mankind has referred to angelic beings as gods. Yes, Homer (8th-century BC) wrote of the gods interacting with humans (The Odyssey, The Iliad). It is clear that sight of angelic beings can result from our improved awareness; also such vision may on occasions be orchestrated from spirit ... and there are numerous examples of this on record, even in modern press reports.

3. Materialism: Again, materialism gets a knock, but Salumet is careful to clarify that it is the 'love bonding to material things' that is negative. There is no problem with wealth or material things per se. We should just not get besotted with selfish gain or with clinging to wealth and possessions irrationally. This seems to be the direction of the teaching.

4. Andrew Carnegie: Born in the year of Hally's comet 1835 and amassed a fortune from the steel industry in the USA. He donated $350,000,000 to a variety of foundations, endowed 2,800 libraries and was principle benefactor of Carnegie Hall, New York.

5. Alfred Nobel: Amassed a fortune from dynamite, a variety of patents and interests in the Baku oilfields. He left the Nobel Prize moneys for excellence in a number of disciplines and contributions to world peace, operative from 1901.

6. Upward curve of consciousness: Well that can't be bad. We have heard from Salumet more than once on this general pattern of improvement; also from Bonniol, via the input from guides who are so ever helpful with our interplanetary work.

Sara's Guided Meditation – Audio freely available from website: www.salumetandfriends.org

It is summertime and it's still very, very hot as you can imagine ... and you are on the beach and it's still warm after the hot part of the day in the afternoon, and in front of you is the sea. And the sea is very warm still and you walk along the sand with bare feet. In fact you are wearing swimming clothes ... and you just put your foot into the water and it's beautifully warm, and you decide to swim. The sea is very still and tranquil and you are alone. And you start to swim in that beautiful warm, tranquil water ... and you decide to swim out to sea and you enjoy the wonderful freedom that the water is giving you. And you don't feel tired. You feel refreshed as you keep on swimming gently in this wonderful warm water. And you smell the salty, sandy smells around you and feel the gentle breeze on your skin. And you feel a sense of freedom. All your cares have gone, and when you feel that you've had enough, you decide to come back to the shore. You come out of the water and pick up your towel, which is a very, very big fluffy, dry towel and you wrap yourself in it. And it is still warm, there is a slight breeze but the air is still warm. It cannot possibly be England. So, you are sitting on the beach now, wrapped up in this towel ... and you go into the silence ... and you give thanks, for the wonderful peace that you have in your life ... and give thanks for that peaceful centre where you can re-generate your energy, and draw strength from those around you. As your breathing deepens you become aware of those around you, and you connect deeply with them, and you thank them for being with you ... and then when you feel ready, you come out... You are feeling dry again now and the air is still warm. You walk slowly back across the beach and home again, without any cares, without any worries, without any burdens ... or fears.

~16TH July 2007~

Lilian: Welcome Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I am happy to join with you once more.

Lilian: We are happy to have you here.

Remember my dear friends that last time I spoke with you we discussed how this Earth planet is growing spiritually. (Agreed) I wish to speak just a few more words about this. I told you that more and more people are becoming much more aware spiritually, and that all of your world leaders are being influenced for good. What I wish to tell you this time is that as life continues, your medical doctors will become much more influenced from our world in not only dealing with the physical condition, but they are even now beginning to understand that there is more than a physical being; there are many accounts within your world of this happening. And what I wish to tell you my dear friends, is that in time to come, your medical doctors will not be treating the outcome of spiritual dis-ease, but they will begin to teach self-healing and that is what we are aiming for with these good and gentle people who wish to help mankind. That is not to take away from those healers already in your world who work with spirit in order to heal, but in time to come there will be healings of what you human beings would call 'miraculous'. So you see my dear friends, great strides are being made in your world for these things to happen.

George: Yes. Wonderful! For so long we've treated mere physical symptoms and not the root cause.

Yes, yes, but that way of thinking is gradually changing, because of the results of your 'quantum physics' as you name it and it now cannot be denied that there is more to life than the physical being.

George: It's good to hear that confirmation of that realization.

Rod: So our prayers should cover doctors as well, which I haven't included in my prayer list, but I can see that we should do that, and that will spread to the ordinary man in the street, won't it?

Of course, they are healers in their own way although, as our dear friend has said, until now only physical symptoms have been studied. But once the spirit is recognized then your medicine takes another step forward, but it is happening in a very small way now.

George: And a very big step.

Yes, a big step for humankind.

Sarah: I suppose it's just full circle really, because in ancient times they probably would have treated illness in the way that we are learning now.

Yes, yes. For many people, they had that knowledge, which I have told you on many occasions has been lost by humankind in the event of materialistic outlooks of life, and we have discussed this my dear friends. You have to keep material goods and wishes in their proper places if you are to survive spiritually.

George: Yes, I guess it's true to say that we need both but we must keep things in proportion.

Yes, it is difficult for mankind to return to a basic state of existence now that they have experienced so many materialistic values, but the two can abide together to create a wholeness in humanity and it can be used more wisely.

Lilian: I was just thinking about mentally handicapped children or disabled children in whatever way—we know now that it is good for them maybe to ride a horse or swim with the dolphins and that's a similar self-healing, isn't it?

Yes. Of course it is a form of healing and, yes, why should these people not experience the joys of earthly life? Why should it not be given freely to them, because you are not to know what that experience can create within the spirit?

Sarah: They take animals into old people's homes and those sort of places, because the very act of stroking the animals has a healing effect on them.

Yes. As I have said, all creatures and human beings belong to each other. You are part of each other because you are part of that great creation, therefore there has to be benefits from that coalition.

George: Can I mention here that there was a story in the tradition of the Hopi Indians about a white man developing materially and a brown man developing spiritually and the two uniting. And with the spiritual and the material developments coming together, there is a synergistic affect that's greater than either on its own. This suggests that there would be some advantage in developing materially as well as spiritually and then uniting the two. Have you any thought on that?

Yes. It has already happened in your world where races have come together, no matter what their reasoning, but it is a natural progression that you are all part of a brotherhood (yes!) and whatever qualities each brings to that partnership can only be fruitful spiritually. You understand? (Pause)
No.

George: I am lost at the moment...

Yes—you are speaking, I believe, of separation of one race against another; one more materialistic, one more spiritual and the coming together of these races creates what our Creator would call ‘unity’, unity of man. You understand now?

George: Yes, and the two together will represent a further progression.

Yes.

George: Ah, yes.

Yes. I am sorry if I did not explain it clearly to you.

George: No, I think it’s my wooliness! I’ve had a difficult week.

Well that is part, my dear friend, of being human.

George: Indeed, yes.

But you understand my words now?

George: Oh, yes and I must take responsibility for the human frailty factor.

Yes. And it is rather amiss to say that one particular race is more spiritually aware than another, because the knowledge is within everyone.

George: It is always there—yes I follow.

Yes. It is up to each individual to cultivate their own spiritual energies.

Now I will not speak further this time, because I would wish you to absorb my words of these two past meetings, because although the words are simple, they have great meaning for humankind in times to come and it would serve you well my dear friends to think just a little more deeply about what is available to you all. And with those words, I encompass you all, I ask that Great Creative Force for upliftment for all of you in your daily lives, that the spirit within continues to progress and that your knowledge and wisdom be always to the fore. I leave you all bathed in spiritual light and energy.

(Thanks and farewells)

George’s notes:

Recording: As we waited for Salumet, I noticed pigeons cooing outside. They are clearly present on the recording ... a testament to digital recorder performance ... also to my hearing aids!

Hopi Indian story: On checking, it refers to the ‘white brother’ and the ‘red brother’, which makes Salumet’s use of the term ‘brotherhood’ just brilliant. The general implication seems to be that the material development-plus-spiritual development, go forward together; also united peoples go forward together. We are all one.

Past Two Meetings: If Salumet declares these to be especially important, then perhaps we should recap the main points.

(1). We are on an upward curve of consciousness, which confirms what has been said by a number of forward thinkers of clear perception.

(2). There have been ancient peoples who could naturally see angelic beings with their physical eyes. Angels are an integral part of existence, and as the heart energy opens to the truth of existence, we shall again observe them in our presence. The universal beings are, as our selves, part of the whole.

(3). Spiritual value began to fade as adherence to self and material goods took hold.

(4). Materialism has already peaked. Perhaps this shows with ongoing high-street sales, three for the price of two offers, falling prices linked to Internet competition, charity shop / recycling boom, failure of kitsch and prestigious finish in the flood, fire, hurricane and tornado situations of climate change. Perhaps these things are all part of the materialism devaluation?

(5). Wealth is fine so long as we know what to do with it. It might even be good for humanity if key people have enormous wealth that they can use to good and unselfish purpose ... as has been observed for a few in the past. It is the misplaced love of, or attachment to, wealth and material gain that shuts down the spiritual awareness ... and there has been an excess of this in our recent past.

(6). It is time to recognise past errors, a time for giving, a time to recognise wholeness and a time to dispense with irrational fears.

(7). We are all part of the whole, all part of nature, all part of this planet and all part of the entire creation that extends throughout the universe. Each and every one is enjoined to the wholeness of existence.

There were further items including a rescue and Bonniol looked in very briefly at the end of the evening to say: hello. His few words of good cheer are included in the Bonniol transcript.

~30th July 2007~

There were seven of us this time. At the start of the meeting we, for the first time, included healing prayers for certain UFO abductees that we had heard about.

Lilian: Welcome to you Salumet.

Good Evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time I feel your strengths, your weaknesses—all that makes you human. Again we thank you my dear friends for all those endearing thoughts for those who are in need. I am aware of many questions within your thinking at this time. Therefore, and because there are fewer of us this time, I will endeavour to answer any questions you may have.

Lilian: Thank you. Would anyone like to start the questions?

Jim: I'd like just to make a comment on the transcripts of previous meetings which I read. In these transcripts I see the teaching of Salumet, and I try to remember everything and sometimes the message really gets through to me, and at other times I just don't understand what that teaching is about. Is there any advice that you can give me that would help me during my reading of the transcripts?

I would say to you that understanding will come at its own pace. That which you find difficult will soon become understanding (sic) with time. So, I say to you, my dear friend: have patience with yourself. You have come quite some way in understanding from whence you first came to us. Would you not agree?

Jim: There are things which really improve my life a great deal. (Yes) Your teaching on not making judgements and on forgiveness has been a great help in recalling my youth. And now, without making judgements, I can forgive those who, as a child, I hated—and now that hate has disappeared, and I'm much stronger for it.

Yes, because you are allowing that love, which is after all, the spirit speaking. You have it so much stronger within your life, and you, my dear friend, can feel that benefit most strongly. Life is about love, about giving, and also receiving. But as far as my teachings go, continue to listen or to read—whichever you find more useful, and I say to you, that understanding will come.

Jim: Thank you.

Lilian: What about you George?

George: Yes, I have one. Let me first give thanks for yet another book coming my way at the most appropriate time. You have spoken with us Salumet concerning DNA, and this particular book is a channel from a group who call themselves: The Pleiadians, and it seems a rather good channel, in that, as I began reading, I ticked the various points with a pencil that were totally in line with your teaching. And I found I was ticking every paragraph in the first 40-pages! That was wonderful. Then I got onto details of DNA, confirming that DNA-modification is a very important happening and it gave further details which I would like to put before you. There seems to be an upgrading in progress from double-helix to twelve, which seems rather a big jump, but the details go on to indicate that there's connection to twelve main chakras. We are aware of seven main chakras, and there is talk of a further five which are above and beyond the physical body and connecting to solar system, the galaxy and further out into the universe. I was wondering if you would care to comment on those further details regarding DNA?

Yes, I understand your question. I understand the slight puzzlement that you felt on reading this information. I have spoken to you briefly about DNA and felt that at that particular time, it was as much as you could take and understand...

George: Yes, I do appreciate that.

...for the whole of this group. Yes, I would firstly say to you, my dear friend that any confirmation of my words has been told to you previously—that whatever I tell you would be verified by others throughout this world.

George: Yes, it certainly is being verified.

Yes, and I hope you realise that the time factor is no small matter, although it has taken some years, you can see that the evidence is available to you. You would agree?

George: Yes, yes indeed.

Yes. We are not surprised by the connection and the information being given by this other group, because after all, why should we be the only group receiving information from, as you say, 'farther galaxies'—that would not make sense I feel. Therefore let us verify that information is coming to these people. DNA is a subject which is ever-growing. Mankind is ever-growing in his knowledge of what is round and about him—about the structure of the human being. And yes, I will confirm to you now, and I have told you in past times, that although many speak of seven chakras, or 'energy points' as I would rather call them, I have told you in previous times that there are many, many more, but just not known about at that time. Therefore, do not be surprised by this information, because you see my dear friends, that the human form is just one mass of energy. Therefore common sense would tell you, that to have only seven points within that mass of energy would seem rather futile. You would agree?

George: Yes I would and I do recall that you also said that what is happening on the Earth at this present time would reach out and connect with or be an influence throughout the galaxy and the universe (yes), and it just struck me that this seemed to be part of that mechanism.

Of course, when you speak of the expansion of the helix, reaching out to other galaxies that is the energy connection, which is needed for mankind to connect further and further. You understand?

George: Yes, I do...

And although you have mentioned a number of twelve, I will confirm for you now, that there are many more, but not known of at this present time.

George: And I know our science is aware that something like 10% of DNA has good purpose, and there's a further 90% which does not appear yet to have good purpose, and it is in some scientific circles referred to as 'junk DNA'...

May I interrupt and say to you, that your scientists will soon be considering another 30% 'good DNA'. That is to come.

George: Wonderful!

Remember that always the influence comes from our world.

George: Yes, wonderful, and the implication is that the other 90% will have proper application, as it was meant in the first place I am sure (yes). Equally, that part of the brain which is not seen to have application—that will also come into play, I'm sure.

You only have to think of all of those seers and mystics, as you call them in your world. They are using more than 10%. Is it not logical that this must be so?

George: Indeed. They are able to make the connections which utilise...

Yes, much more easily. But yes, I agree that on the whole, so much is not utilised. Are you happy with that?

George: I am very happy—it all seems to make so much good sense.

I am pleased that my words can help you (Thank you). But it is not an easy topic for most to understand. That is why it has been my purpose in a group such as this, that we go slowly, and in order for each one to digest such information.

George: Yes, and that is appreciated (Yes). Well, thank you for your answer to that question, which to my mind doesn't seem an easy question. But that is a very enlightening answer. Thank you.

Lilian then suggested that George ask a question which the group had discussed earlier:

George: I've been in touch recently with a lady: Hilary Porter, who has a history of being abducted by, shall I say UFO pilots, and she strikes me as a very strong lady who had fears and has faced those fears. And she now describes herself as an 'abduction agony aunt'. She helps others who have been abducted and gives them counselling. She's a new contact and she has asked for healing for those she helps, and I just wondered if you'd care to clarify. You have spoken on abductions in the past, and I just wondered if you'd care to further clarify that area of work.

Yes, we have spoken, again briefly about this subject. And yes, if you recognise, my dear friends, that there exist many Universes. If you can accept the existence of many beings on many planets, albeit that their knowledge be greater than yours, does not immediately allow them to be pure beings—that is the first point I wish to make to you. You know from your visits and your 'mind' information, that many things are possible; that there are beings outside your realms of understanding, who nevertheless are part of the great scheme of life. I told you that most of these beings mean you Earth people no harm. But as in your world there exists many races of people, all quite diverse in their looks, so too you must accept, that many planets produce beings who are of entirely different formation from yourselves. Also that among those beings there are those whose curiosity takes hold of them and that is where we come into Earth-beings being taken to their crafts, because of the interest expressed in trying to understand the makeup of Earth-beings.

George: Yes I can well accept that (Yes) there would be this tremendous curiosity. (Yes) They would be technically more advanced than ourselves (yes), they would be physical beings like ourselves, imperfect like ourselves.

Imperfect, yes that is a good word to use. I do not wish to say that they are not 'good' beings, but 'imperfect' is the word to use.

George: Also 'striving,' I guess, like ourselves—striving to find out.

Yes, to gain more knowledge of what is round and about. So I say to you that expanded knowledge does not always bring purity of character—this we understand. I would also like to say to you, that certain Earth beings are more prone to be taken, for many different reasons that perhaps at this moment in time, you cannot understand. But they are 'chosen' if you like, to be abducted, for very many reasons. And sometimes these other beings do not have the same emotional contact as you Earth beings, which therefore leaves many Earth beings traumatized by the experience. But open to all people, is the love and protection of spirit.

George: Yes, in which case there would not be so much fear generated and perhaps I could suggest that the main problem in this context is our own fear of an unknown situation. (Yes) Perhaps if knowledge of abductions was more openly accepted, then this would help in some measure to reduce fear. Would that be a fair statement?

Yes, after all, I have told you that it is either love or fear, which governs your lives and fear is negative to the spirit and it also blocks out the help that is available. But we cannot place all responsibility onto those people who are taken, but also responsibility lies with those other beings who are intent on having their own way. In the same way as Earth beings have to take responsibility for their actions, so too do all beings in the great scheme of life, from all planets, because they come under the laws of that Great Creative Force. I would also say to you my dear friends, that not all people who have been taken to foreign crafts, find the experience to be so dreadful and I am sure that in time, there will come forward many, who will tell of renewed knowledge, of finding spiritual gifts opened to them, that they did not have before. So again I say to you, look for the balance in all things.

George: Yes. The lady, of whom I have spoken, spoke of one who appeared to her, which I think would be her own Guardian Angel, who assured her that he would always be with her (Yes) and this I think went a long way to allaying any fears that she had.

Yes, once she has allowed herself that love element, that lack of fear, then those who can help will step forward. Yes and of course to ask for healing for all of these people, can only help. Has that been helpful to you?

George: Yes I think that must have helped us all, to understand this area of knowledge. Thank you.

There is the misunderstanding that expanded knowledge, such as many other beings have, makes them 'good'. But remember, they are imperfect. I use your word, 'imperfect.'

Rod: And they have free will as well.

Of course.

Sarah: I was wondering when you said they choose different human beings for various reasons, I was wondering maybe if spiritually they could be attracted to certain people and if that's why they abducted them. Or maybe it's not possible to pinpoint any reason?

When first I came, we spoke of darkness and light and opposites being drawn and the darkness always seeking light. Therefore yes, unknowingly they would be attracted to certain people for their light.

Sarah: Ah yes that makes sense, thank you.

George: Yes and the lady in question would seem to have a 'mind link' (Yes) to those people. She describes how she receives a thought from them in the first place and she knows when to look to the sky (Yes) and she has been able to send a thought back and they have shifted their position in the sky. So I think she must have a mind link, or an easy to achieve mind link?

Yes, that would have—as I have said to you, many people have found new qualities within themselves, that they suddenly can heal others, that their mind is much more alert. There are many good qualities to having some connection with other beings. But it is the fear of the people being taken, that they have to alter.

Jim: Does that mean then that there is no real basis for fear?

You should never allow fear to enter your lives, if you wish to be spiritually strong.

Rod: You said this 3 weeks ago Salumet. It's not an easy thing to get rid of. I think I've got to practise on that. I keep dragging it up and you've emphasized it two or three times in this conversation (Yes) and that's strengthened my thoughts even more I would think, on fear.

You will never fully achieve it whilst you are clothed in this physical body, but what you must attempt to do is to try to focus the mind on Love, not fear. It is an exercise if you like, that you can maintain throughout your Earthly lives. But you are human and we know it is most difficult for you. But it is achievable.

Lilian: So even if we have a fear of, for example, being on water, of our seas, thunder and lightning, we should be able to overcome that?

If you work on it yes, of course, but sometimes as I have also told you, these fears come with you from other times and are deeply rooted and at times, can take much work to overcome. But it is achievable.

Sarah: The instrument you're using, (Eileen) is very frightened of thunder and lightning. (Yes) So that's probably from a previous life?

No.

Sarah: It is this life, is it?

Yes, we have been working with her for many years, but there is only so much influence that we can give, because when it comes down to change, it is entirely because of your free will, that you must take action. We can only influence.

Lilian: Well I'm not terrible happy, I wouldn't say petrified, of being on the Sea, which I was on Sunday and I wondered whether that was from another life? Pause

Yes, I will tell you, you were a sailor. (Pause) But let me say this to you before I leave you. There are so many people in your world, who have these fears, no matter what—but it is their own inner fears. If only they would give those fears up to us, they would see their lives dramatically change.

General thanks expressed

Rod: So what you're saying is, if we could get these fears and throw them over the shoulder to you that would be a big help to us?

Or give them up to that Great Creative Force. Yes, because in doing so, you are saying: 'We are love, we are part of that Great Creative Force, which knows no fear.'

Rod: We were talking about this 'Great Creative Force,' Salumet, and now we talk about Universes—now that Great Creative Force goes out further and further out, in our minds...

It is all-encompassing.

Rod: I can't think of the question now, but this Great Creative Force cannot make a form. In other words when you have a meeting in spirit, with your echelons, he doesn't come to you in any form, does he?

When you move through the realms of spirit, 'form' does not exist, it is pure energy.

George: Yes the name that the particular author uses that I'm reading at the moment is 'Prime Creator'.

Yes, there are many names given.

George: With the implication that there are lesser beings or creators in-between. There would be 'Prime Creator' influencing secondary creators and so down through the—I was going to say 'chain of command', but perhaps that's not a very good word.

Yes, in the same way as you have the Angelic Forces, they are still part of the Creative Force, but are doing, to use Earthly words, a 'job of work', which they have been given.

Jim: On the subject of creation, (Yes) is creation and manifestation as discussed with Bonniol, are they in the same bracket? Is manifestation in fact a creation of a small object?

Yes, yes.

Jim: It is—that's interesting.

Paul then asked a question about bringing 2 people from his job to the group

Now I will take my leave of you. I hope my words this time have stretched your thinking just a little.

George: It's been another wonderful meeting. Thank you so much for this.

Enthusiastic agreement

I am always happy to join with you my dear friends. After all, my purpose has been to enlighten you all about the truth of existence.

Lilian: You've certainly done that. We are very privileged.

Enthusiastic agreement and thanks

As I leave, I leave with each one of you, the light of all knowledge.

Further thanks

George's Notes:

Book Reference: Re DNA and the teachings. 'Bringers of the Dawn' – Teachings from the Pleiadians, Barbara Marciniak, Bear & Co, Santa Fe, New Mexico, 1992. There is much agreement with Salumet; also with specific Bonniol statements, such as use by space-travellers of wormholes as 'way portals'.

Seers and Mystics: It is an interesting point that these special people manage to make more extensive use of what is available in the general human make-up. Those parts of brain and DNA that appear to be dormant, need not necessarily be so!

Teaching Method: Salumet returns to topics. It is often the case that greater detail is given second time around, and what has not been understood the first time, is better understood after more ground has been covered.

Abductions: This section is fairly self-explanatory. Two important points are (1) the abductions are for real and a natural, logical outcome of physical visitations (2) the love / fear balance needs to be carefully thought through; with sufficient love and understanding, experiences cannot be all bad!

Knowledge and acceptance are also important. If only the media would properly publicise the details seriously, then our open knowledge of it all should dispel much fear. Media owe it to humanity to come clean and do a proper job where UFOs, crop circles, extra-terrestrial communications and abductions are concerned.

~13th August 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time, I am gladdened by those healing thoughts once more and I would just like to say to you this time my dear friends a little more about your thoughts. We have said quite a lot about the process of thinking and how powerful your thoughts are and we have brought to you the opportunity to experience thought transference, which I know you find a little difficult. So, firstly my dear friends, I would say to you, to look inwardly to yourselves, to take responsibility for those thoughts that are with you at all times of your existence. It would be beneficial to you all, I feel, if you could focus more clearly on a daily basis of each thought that comes to you, to say to yourselves 'why did that thought come to me?' and 'what thought have I given out today that has benefited another human being?' And we all know that when you come together here within this room, then those thoughts do become more focussed in order to help others. I now ask you my dear friends to return the focus upon yourselves each and every day of your earthly existence, because once you have mastered the control of your own thoughts, then it becomes easier for you to transfer those thoughts to other people. Do you understand?

Lilian: Yes.

It is a great responsibility that you place upon yourselves when you take responsibility for each and every thought, but I have always told you how powerful your thoughts can be. But now is the time that you need to refocus inwardly to your own thinking and if you make great practise of this on a daily basis you will be amazed at how quickly and in tune you become with the control of thought. Have you any questions?

Rod: Are you saying that you would be inspired by spirit when you go within?

We can help, but the responsibility lies with each one.

Rod: I see, okay.

You and you alone, are responsible for your thoughts.

Lilian: I can see how very worthwhile that would be.

Yes.

Jan: So it is a case of practise every day—practise makes perfect, because we've got to recondition, haven't we? (Yes) It's programming our brain to think in a different pattern.

Yes. It is not so much the brain as the spiritual mind, but of course the more you attempt to control, the easier it will become; and when you have full control of those thoughts, then you become as one with spirit.

Jan: I almost want to say 'free'—it would be like a freedom.

Yes.

Sara: You can always share your thoughts with other people provided that you are not angry... (Yes) So, if the thoughts are balanced, if you feel balanced and you are calm, you can speak about something that perhaps has made you unhappy without causing offence. So that is a freedom.

Yes. It is a freedom of your spirit that you are in control. Of course, the brain comes into that part of thinking, but ultimately it is the spiritual aspect which should take control and when you are able to dismiss any inappropriate thought, then you begin to realize that you are the master of your own world. You understand?

Sara: Yes.

But, as I have said, within this room it is easy with the energy around you to be able to focus, to be able to give healing good thoughts, but when you are in your everyday, earthly lives and you are surrounded by much fear, disappointment and all negativities, it is a little more difficult. But you have the power to rise above and to take control of your own lives. So, at this stage my dear friends, I feel it would be appropriate, but of course as always it is entirely up to you, each one of you, to decide whether you progress or not.

Jan: You've been reminding us, Salumet, about this for some time now and ...

Yes, I must sound, like you say, a broken record—yes.

Chuckles

Jan: No, not at all, but you have been telling us for some time to bring our spirit lives to the fore.

Yes. You have spent some time listening to my words and for this I am most grateful, but also my purpose for you my dear friends is to see that each one of you progresses as much as you can or are willing to do.

General thanks

George: So you have set before us an exercise in experience and centring (yes) within ourselves.

Rod: This is new to me—thank you very much.

Lilian: So if we are out with someone and they say something, and I thought, 'ooh that was a bit annoying'... just let it wash over you?

You must not allow other's thoughts to intrude upon that peaceful aura that you may have.

Rod: It is very difficult when you're talking to somebody and they come out with something you know is terribly wrong, they talk about something...

But how do you know it is terribly wrong?

Rod: It is, and you feel terrible, but you are unable to tell them—perhaps you're not in the right place to be able to tell them and it hurts.

My dear friend you are young as yet in the ways of spirit. You would send love to the person you feel is doing wrong, but in actual fact the problem lies within you—and I know that statement you will find difficult to accept at this moment in time, but I am sure that the others can tell you that you must not judge another.

Rod: Ah yes, you've said that.

Yes. It is difficult, I know.

Sara: But sometimes it's easier to withdraw a little (yes) if they're beginning to give you uncomfortable feelings. Sometimes it's easier for you to withdraw—then you don't need to feel ...

That is where control of your thinking comes into play.

Rod: That helps a lot, thank you very much.

You cannot change another's thoughts, but you can your own.

George: Quite often conversations are physical and possibly intellectual and in that situation I find it always tempting to introduce a connection to spirit. It isn't always easy, but I find it's something I feel needs doing, if I can put it that way.

May I say to you my dear friends that I find the interaction between two human beings whose thoughts are not in unison to be most interesting.

Hearty laughter

If only we could take them and place them separately, that would be a much happier situation, but as always, you have the power within you to be in full control and to take full responsibility for your thoughts.

Lilian: So is it also a good idea to each morning, ask for help with the thoughts?

I would suggest, yes of course, you may ask for help, but again I say to you, you have the power and of course practise does help. You all, I have to say, have inappropriate thoughts at times, not intentionally, but because you do not know how to take control of those thoughts.

Jan: But I remember you once telling us that if you've realized afterwards that they're inappropriate and those feelings and thoughts are a (protective) shell for us, then that's part of the learning process, because you have to accept—you have to have those feelings that those thoughts are inappropriate or wrong, to go forward.

Yes, it is the first stage, recognition of the thought, of course. If you do not recognize the thought, you deny its existence. Yes, of course.

Jan: I think this is an appropriate point to ask this question. It's not from myself, it's from Richard—you know Richard, he is my son. (Yes) He telephoned me on Saturday night with an extremely interesting concept and he asked me to ask you. As you know, from an early age he has been bombarded with voices (Yes) and he wants to know—I forgot to bring my piece of paper, I'm sorry—he has learnt to shut out those voices at an inappropriate time in his busy life, (Good) but when he concentrates, they are very, very clear. He would like to know if the conversations he is hearing are aimed at him or whether he just picks up conversation from spirit around him wherever he may be. (Yes) Do you understand? Have I put that clearly?

Yes, I understand. If he is focussed at a particular time, what he hears will be those around him who wish to help. When he is amongst others, or inappropriate times as you call it, he is picking up on any energies which will be in and around. But when he is quiet and focussed, they will take that opportunity to try to help and also to focus his thinking to the spirit world.

Jan: Right—I haven't heard of anybody else having those experiences so I found it quite...

Yes they do.

Jan: Yes, I'm sure they do, but I haven't spoken to anybody else who's had them, so all I could say is, 'Wow Richard!' And he said that he can hear whether it's a gentleman or a lady, he actually hears the voice in his ears.

Yes, it is because he has now accepted that spirit is close to him always, but now he is taking control and not allowing them at every inappropriate moment to intrude upon his life.

Jan: I'm very proud of him that he's been able to do that because for a very long time it was as if his physical state was always in like a nervous breakdown sort of state (yes) because he couldn't shut them out.

Because he was controlled by fear. (Yes) As you know and as I have spoken often, either love or fear will dictate your lives. But he is doing well. Yes.

Jan: Thank you. I can tell him exactly that, that in his quiet moments they're actually trying—he is communicating with spirit, with him and when he's in a busy environment like a shopping centre when he hears them, he is picking up...

But those who are trying to help will then take control with him and help him and nurture him in the ways of spirit so that he will know when and what to do with these other intrusive voices. It is just being able to ground oneself at those times, and again it is practise and it is knowing that nothing can happen to him, whilst he is connected with our world.

Jan: I think that's precisely what has happened to him—the fear has now lifted.

It is that. Yes, yes. He can only go forward now.

Jan: And now he's excited rather than fearful.

Yes.

Sarah: There are other people who say they've heard voices and they commit crimes and they say it was voices in the head. Is this the same sort of thing—they're fearful and they're letting negative spirits come in?

Yes. Negativity will attract those close to this Earth plane who, as you know, not all people have the greatest purpose of goodness and they will be attracted to fear and negativity within others.

Jan: And you covered the subject of schizophrenia some months back with us and the cause...

Yes.

George: So it will be true to say perhaps that in an atmosphere of love and quiet time, one cannot go wrong really?

If your thoughts are pure, if your intentions are pure, then you will always be protected, but when you allow a window of fear or negativity, then you are opening up to more of the same. That is why it is important for each and every one of you to let go of fear.

Sara: Is this what we call clairaudience?

Yes.

Sara: Is it possible that our son will develop in this way, clairaudiently, because he does have problems concentrating sometimes at school and I know that he sometimes gets nervous at night time of noises or sensing. I sometimes think he is perhaps sensing or seeing things but not understanding.

Yes, he is sensitive, but he is more likely to see than to hear.

Sara: Clairvoyantly?

Yes.

Sara: Thank you.

Lilian: So when someone sleepwalks and they do strange things, they've even been known to kill someone—is that a thought they've carried with them before they go to sleep?

No, that is to do with an irregularity within the brain structure during the time of sleep. It is not connected to spirit in any great way. Of course there are cases when people can be influenced in their sleep state, but that is not the natural way.

Lilian: I see—it's to do with the brain and nothing to do with the thought.

Yes.

Rod: 'Love and fear' is something that you need to keep in your mind I think, because yesterday I had an awful fear come over me...

Yes. But you have survived it.

Much amusement

Rod: And I thought, 'hey, hang on a bit, this is something you were talking about and I've got to get rid of that', and I threw it up there and grabbed hold of the love, and that did help.

Yes. So you see, you have proof for yourself that control of the thought works.

Jan: You're an example of that (Rod)—well done!

Rod: It was a big help. So those two words, you've got to keep—they've got to be there, haven't they really, to be aware of...

Yes. Try not to focus on the word 'fear' because just...

Jan: The word makes you fearful.

Yes—(the word) can trigger off thoughts of fear. So be aware that it is a condition of earthly living, but not one that you will bow to.

Rod: It's a wonderful thing to be able to preach to people, if you can put it over in a nice way; friends you can—I've found that you can do this with friends and they readily take it on board, which is nice.

I would say to you my dear friend, the best way to live your life is by example. You do not always need words for others, because they will pick up on any goodness, any joy, any happiness that you exude.

Graham: I find that smiling helps. I feel despite you're annoyance towards somebody, if you smile it is difficult to remain annoyed while you're smiling—it goes right through you.

Yes. And it is apparent to so many people around that that one smile, that one genuine smile has the power to create that ripple of happiness in the same way as anger or fear or hatred has...

Jan: Laughter does the same.

...And laughter...

Rod: I was on my bike having a ride this morning and I met a lady coming along with a pushchair and she gave me a lovely smile and it lifted me and I was able to peddle up the next hill like a young kid.

Chuckles

Yes.

Graham: I think that smiling dissipates other people's fear. If they're concerned or nervous about something and you smile to them, you can see them relax—it dissipates their fear.

Jan: That's why the dentist smiles a lot. You go to the dentist, he smiles.

Laughter

Graham: Mine has a face mask on, but the eyes give the smile away...

Laughter

Can you see now within this room that talking of joy and happiness that you are all beginning to laugh and smile? (Affirmed) You understand the ripple effect that it has. So, my dear friends I will leave these words with you this time. I will always be interested to see how these words are put into action in this next coming week of your earthly lives.

Lilian: Yes, I'm sure we will try. Just before you go, there's a lady who has come over from New Zealand to visit her parents opposite, if there's an opportunity—she obviously interested and knows about what we do and has shown an interest. Is it okay if she comes? I feel it probably is.

Yes, I would be happy for her to come.

Lilian: Thank you. It is the time—she may not have the time.

Yes, I am happy for her to join with us. Now my dear friends as I leave you, I hope I leave you with that smile upon your lips ...

Chuckles

... and as I leave you I will continue for some short time to work with the instrument (Eileen) and I will ask our dear lady friend (Sara) to take you on a short, uplifting journey this time, if she is agreeable ...

Sara: Yes, that's fine.

... And then we will continue.

Thanks from all

Sara's guided meditation: It's the end of the day. You are sitting by the water and a boat ... a little rowing boat, and you get in this little rowing boat. You are on your own, just you. And you climb into the boat and the boat starts to move off ... it's a little magic boat and it's got a mind of its own, and it will take you on a little journey around the bay. It starts off slowly and as you sit in the boat you trail your hand in the water, and then you notice the ripples in the water ... and the water feels cool, and as you look into it you can see the darker depths below. You are drifting slowly still, and you are reflecting a little on the day and you are reflecting on how wonderful and how blessed your life is and has been ... and on all the wonderful little opportunities that you had in the day, to show your love to other people ... and for others to show their love for you. And you feel excited by the possibilities that lie ahead, and knowing that there is so much for you to do ... and fortunate that you don't ever have to wonder what to do with your day. And you know also that the pathway that you follow is leading you to greater and greater riches and you feel much excitement within you about the future and the present. And the warm sunset glow matches the warm glow within you, and you feel there is so much coming to you that is good. And you know also that all of the answers lie within you and all the wisdom that you need to access the better part of every day is there for you, and that it's possible to have it all. The magic boat is still moving around the bay and your hand is still playing on the water by the side of the boat, and you look still into the deeper waters and see how far you have come and how far you still have to go. And as your mind goes higher on your journey, it's still and describes the lower evermore. And so the compassion within you grows ever and deeper because your mind is no longer separated from your heart. So you do not view your fellow human beings with detachment ... yes it's detachment but not a separate entity. So, when you look into the water and you see the ripples spreading outwards, it's almost like your heart and the energy within your heart is forever spreading outwards to encompass yet more and more of your world and the world at large beyond it. As you look at the sun again, you almost become the sunset. You become one with the sunset and one with the water. And as you merge into these feelings, the magic boat has brought you back again to the shore and your journey is complete ... and you are complete ... and whole ... and strong ... and ready for another day.

~20th August 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always, let us extend a welcome to our guest this night.

Lilian: I'm sure she will find some benefit from sitting with us.

She feels just a little apprehensive this time.

Lilian: Is that right, Di? Do you feel a little apprehensive?

Di: I don't know that it's for me—I don't know—I'm very honoured to be here and thank you very much.

Yes. You are most welcome. Now my dear friends I wish to say to you this time a little about what was asked of me last time by our lady friend known to you as Jan.

Lilian: Yes—she's unable to be here tonight...

Yes—about the difference between thoughts and where they come from. As I have said on past occasions, the thoughts from spirit come slowly and repeat themselves often, whereas other thoughts come quickly and seem to be more intense with urgency attached to them. The difference only comes with time and with experience, and it is something that you have all experienced in your own way I am sure.

Lilian: Yes.

Yes. I wish to say also to you that, as we have spoken before about energy expanding/spirit growing, I wish to say it is now time my dear friends that you view your other fellow human beings in a slightly different manner. Do not look on anyone, whether friend or stranger, as that physical being but to learn to look inwardly and to feel that spiritual energy come to the fore, because in using your energy to seek that higher being from within, it allows that connection and communication between two people to have the strength of love and understanding. So many of you look to another and make judgement far too quickly.

Lilian: That's very true.

And now I feel you must go forward and look more closely to those who come before you because, as I have told you, there are no mistakes when it comes to those who cross your life path. It is then up to you, my dear friends, to think of the thought which comes to mind and to find the purpose of each meeting. Do you understand? (Affirmed)

George: Yes, I think we probably all have memories of particular people who have really stood out in our lives—personal contacts. I recall my youth when I was conscripted into the army and I met an older man (George Allison) and he was a regular soldier, in uniform. But he had such a kind heart and he was so willing to exchange views with we young national servicemen and a light seemed to shine from him. He is an older contact and, looking back, he was a very significant contact.

Yes. Therefore his love and light was extended to many people who have been impressed by him and his way of life. Therefore that memory remains with you strongly and has enabled you also to go forward with your own life.

George: Yes, I certainly have that memory—the more so because he was a Doctor Barnardo's boy and the army had become his family. So he was slightly unusual as well as having a good heart.

Not so; I have told you in previous times: that is why you must never judge another human being. It matters not where they come from or what material goods they have, what is important is what is within their heart and soul—that is what life is about.

Rod: You slapped my wrist last week when I mentioned that, but it's difficult: tonight a coloured gentleman came up to our door and wanted to buy the back of our garden and an immediate anger came over me. It takes a lot of getting used to, but I haven't got there and your words do come through—but initially I was wrong.

Do not be so hard on yourself my dear friend. You do struggle I know, to accept many words spoken here, but I am sure if you look back to the time when you first came to us, you will find much improvement within yourself.

Rod: I've been told that at home!

Laughs

Give thanks for all those blessings that you now have. And do not allow any failures, as you see them, because they are not; it is just a learning process for you.

Rod: Thank you.

So do not be so hard upon yourself.

Now, as always when we have guests, I will take the opportunity for any questions this time.

Jim: May I ask a question about the power of thought? I attempted to think about a particular subject—in fact it was three digits, three numbers, and think of everybody in this room and the idea of mind projection, and finding out whether I have the ability at the moment to succeed with this. I'm interested in what I can do to improve my performance, if I can put it that way, and I thought I would ask you if you would like to comment on how I am doing.

Your endeavours in whatever way you choose spiritually can only be beneficial for your own growth. As the gentleman previously, you sometimes try too hard to succeed when in fact you should just let things be, and when that air of calmness and acceptability is there, then you find you have greater success. But my words to you, my dear friend, is (sic) that you must strive for what you feel to be right for you. It matters not whether I approve or any other person around you sees your success, but that deep within yourself you know what you are doing is for the betterment of your spirit. Does that help?

Jim: Yes, it does help. I will remember what you said and I will keep trying.

Yes.

Jim: In my thinking, if I think about you, would you know that I was thinking about you.

All thoughts come to us, yes, of course.

Jim: This happens when I look at transcripts and read your teachings and often I can follow what you are saying as if I'm in this room.

Yes, well that is the benefit of being able to recall words that are placed upon paper, because, as you know, the human memory is not infallible.

Lilian: That's for sure.

Rod: It's fragile.

Jim: When we pass over to your side of this spiritual universe, what happens to our ability to memorize? Does it become better?

If you are speaking of physical memory, then it is obsolete, but spiritual thoughts of course remain with you.

Jim: I see. My memory, which I don't boast about, will improve in the next world then?

If you so desire.

Jim: I see—yes, I'm happy about that!

Lilian: Something to look forward to.

It is an existence of thought in our world, so whatever you desire, whatever thought you give out, that becomes your complete reality. You understand?

Jim: Yes, I do understand that—I feel I know what you are saying.

Yes. Sometimes my words do not always make sense to you within this room; sometimes that is why I repeat myself so often, because the human mind is liable to forget or to misunderstand what is said to it. So, it is most beneficial I feel that at times we go over the same ground of knowledge, because, as you well know, each one of you within this room is at a different level of development.

George: So would this mean that we remember spiritual information and feelings for various people, but we forget our mathematical tables?

If you wish to retain mathematical tables, you will.

George: Thank you.

Lilian: Have you any questions, Di?

Di: Yes, I would like to ask a personal question if I may. I feel, because my mother's is very ill, I just feel that she has already passed over, but the body is still on this Earth. I'm due to return back to my home (New Zealand) next week, is there anything else I can do to help her on her journey or is the journey her journey?

Of course you can help as each one within this room can help another human being. You can give loving thoughts to those in our world to make her passage easier and quicker for her, but ultimately it is dependent upon her freewill, when she decides that it is time. But yes, always loving thoughts will be received and help will be given. But as you may know, that as the spirit leaves the physical body behind, there is more time in our world than is spent in yours. So it becomes for some a more gradual process, but of course, continue to help with your loving thoughts; that is all that you can do. (Thanks) And do not be afraid of your own emotions, because you are holding back at this time and that is based my dear friend upon your fear, your fear of losing a loved one, which is of course natural to the human being. But it would be much better if you could deal with those emotions whilst she is still here. Do you understand?

Di: Yes I do, thank you.

Lilian: It's a very difficult time.

Yes. If only the people upon this Earth plane could rejoice as we do at the passing of your loved ones. We see it as a return home, to all that is real, but of course it is a slow progress for human beings to reach that state of acceptance—but it is possible and you all should strive to see passing to our world as a natural function of living, because those who pass are happy and they are greeted by all who love them, all who love them, not only family members, but those of us in spirit who have been with you for many lifetimes. But of course we know and understand that for most people that earthly and human comfort is necessary. I hope that helps you all this time.

General thanks

Now I will take my leave of you this time and allow any others to come forward. So, as always my dear friends, until next time we come together, I enclose you with my love and upliftment for all of you.

(Thanks and farewells)

George's Notes:

Following Salumet, an advancing one joined us through Sue. This was one who spends much time in the Halls of Learning, gaining in knowledge to pass onto others. He spoke of the huge privilege to sit at the feet of the master as on this occasion. He spoke of the tremendous light and the golden glow (as seen from spirit) in his presence ... and of the sound, the vibrations, music and bells that is just beyond description in earthly terms ... it is not really like any of them. And as he leaves the room it is just amazing. 'It is a very great spirit and I cannot tell you the feeling that is left behind on our side ... wonderful, wonderful, wonderful!' In spirit, it is stated to be much more an impression of energies felt within and understood rather than just the words. This one declared it to be the first time he had sat at the feet of the master and does not know if it will happen for him again. It was an overwhelming experience. But he will return to the Halls of Learning with the benefit of the experience, and things that were a little cloudy will now be much clearer. He also declared that we are all learning every minute of the day, whether we realise or not. Here, we have human fallibilities and have much to look forward to when we pass to the realms of light. It was a powerful message delivered with great feeling.

The evening closed with a cheery, light-hearted one via Eileen whom a few of us remembered as 'Annie'. Annie spotted several that she remembered, but most were new. She was more familiar with the group 14-15 years ago when it met in Leslie's house. She is aware that Leslie continues his work and we indicated that it would be nice if he were to drop by again—Annie too. With Salumet, Bonniol and the two further visitors, it completed a splendid evening.

~27th August 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always I am happy to be with you this time.

Sarah: We're very happy to have you again.

My words this time will be short because I wish to work with this instrument at this time, but before that I will answer any questions that you may have.

Lilian: Thank you.

I also would say to you my dear friends that I hope that you have considered what I said to you some little time ago about the subtle energy changes which were taking place around you—each and every one of you. And that could be a topic of discussion amongst your selves whilst I work quietly this time.

Lilian: Yes, that's a good idea.

Do we have any questions?

Lilian: Have you another question, Di?

Di: Yes, I have a question Salumet, about soul mates: If you could explain to me whether it's possible to know who your soul mates are in this incarnation, in the life we live now, and whether you connect with them and whether you ultimately end up with them when you are aware of who the soul mates are, or you have a feeling that's who they are?

Yes. You must be just a little careful when you say 'soul mates' as if there are (sic) a group. A true soul mate does not come in every lifetime; but I would say to you that you would be aware in an instant if you were to meet your soul mate in this particular lifetime, because that spiritual attraction is so strong that no man could keep you apart if that is your desire. But remember that soul mates can be anyone who enters your life: it can be a child, someone of the opposite gender, or sisters or brothers or anyone who co-exists in this life. I believe, and I know, that soul mates always have a very strong bond and I am sure that the group will inform you of my words about soul mates, which is now written down and is on one of your what you term 'discs'—yes.

George: Yes, I was going to say, the CD-ROM disc has an index and 'soul mates' is an item in the index.

Yes, it will help to explain further for you the meaning, the true meaning of soul mate, because you see, in this world 'soul mate' is used to express meetings with other people when in fact they are not soul mates. So I suggest my dear friends that you help our dear lady friend by issuing my words for her, rather than I continue with words at this time.

George: Yes, she has a copy of the disc to work through, in fact.

Yes.

George: But that will take some time.

Yes, but I hope it will be helpful to you.

Di: Thank you.

Lilian: So it's very unlikely that we meet a soul mate in our lifetimes?

Not unlikely, but do not assume that you will always meet your true soul mate. Unfortunately mankind is too quick to assume people are soul mates, when indeed they are but acquaintances or people who have planned to come into their existence in this lifetime.

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

George: Could I ask a question about the nature of spirit?

Yes.

George: We are familiar with the material world and the way we are all separated by space. In spirit, although there is a oneness, there are still individual entities, if I can put it like that. (Yes) There are soul bodies, angels and light beings and ones such as yourself. So I'm reasoning that there is a form of separation which does not involve space. Perhaps this involves frequency, but I'm assuming that there are other means of achieving individual entity, apart from space.

Yes, you are speaking about separateness.

George: Yes.

Yes. The problem my dear friend comes when you use the word 'space'. Of course, it is a physical word, but I fully understand what you are trying to say and yes, unlike existence here on this planet or any other planet where man co-exists in one space, in our world there are many graduations of time; and I will continue to use the word 'space' for your benefit, but in fact all is dealt with thought, and that is a separateness that exists in our world.

George: Are you saying thought itself has its own separateness?

Yes. You understand?

George: Yes, I'm beginning to get there.

It is not an easy subject to explain, but as you continue in the world of spirit, you know full well that identities and bodies, if that is the correct phrase, need to be used and all is thought connection. And in the same way that thought can in an instant transport you to wherever you wish or so desire to go, so too can that thought keep you as separate—I prefer to use separateness.

George: And we can think of thought as energy or a special form of energy perhaps.

Yes. It is energy, it is not a special form it is part of all that is natural. You understand?

George: Yes. I began by thinking that even in the physical world we have radio and TV (Yes) and sound all occupying the same space—so space is not essential to separation.

No, of course not. When you look at it from a physical viewpoint that is a good analogy—yes. So I hope you now use your thought a little more correctly.

George: Yes, thank you! That does help to clarify.

Lilian: Do you have a question, Sarah?

Sarah: Yes. Salumet, last week you talked about the physical mind. I was under the impression that the mind was spiritual and the brain was physical.

Yes. It was just a misuse of the words which can happen. Of course the mind belongs to spirit and the mind, if you like, in physical terms is called the brain. I apologize if I confused you.

Sarah: That's okay.

George: And again, would I be correct in thinking that a tiny part of mind is more or less fixed to brain so that tempts us to think of that tiny part as physical?

Well, you cannot separate the spiritual and the physical—they have to intermingle. They co-exist as one, but it is only when the physical overcoat has outgrown its use that the spiritual mind then moves forward.

George: Ah, it then becomes totally free.

Yes, again, it is a separateness. (Yes) You see the connection there...

George: Thank you—that does help.

Rod: You did say Salumet that by the end of this year we would all notice a difference—I forget the word...

Paul: A sort of metamorphosis.

Rod: That's the word—I had to look it up. Would we notice this difference?

You should become aware of any change within yourselves. Do not look for physical change, although that also can happen at the same time. As I have said, the physical and the spiritual have to coexist. One cannot exist without the other. But yes, I hope that you would recognise within yourselves that change.

George: Yes. I wonder if it might also show in our communication with others and attraction between ourselves and others?

Yes. That would be the purpose of any change, any unfoldment that you may have in order that spiritually you go forward, because what you do not wish to do is to stay at one level. All is available to you—all spiritual power and gifts of spirit are within. But although I can come to you and tell you what you are capable of, I cannot do it for you. That, my dear friends, is up to each and every one of you. You understand? (Several affirmed) But of course we bring the opportunities to you, and it is up to you to use that spiritual awareness at all times, to put to one side all fear and all negativity and to go forward with your lives.

George: Yes, we are all so blessed with your teaching and last time, there was one from spirit, who followed you, and he spoke of how your being and teaching, shall I say, presented itself to him in spirit and it sounded truly wonderful. He was obviously sensing energies and sound and light of which we are not aware ourselves, sadly. But it sounded a wonderful description.

Yes. I have to say my dear friend that I am most humbled when I hear words such as those you have just used. Of course I come to you on a mission of truth and love, and I have not always explained to you fully what this communication means, and how difficult at times it can become. But that is of no consequence for you; but to hear words as you have used them, I am indeed most humbled.

George: It just goes to show how these words are appreciated, not just by ourselves here, but by those in spirit as well, and that's a lovely realisation for us.

Yes, if only you could see the enthusiasm that is shown when the opportunity to learn is given to many of these souls. It is a wondrous sight at times to see such joy.

Rod: Is the learning in spirit by thought, or is it by reading books, or by what method?

It depends on where you are at certain times. Of course there are available to you many halls of learning which anyone can go to and there we have the most beautiful books with all knowledge within, but as you progress through spirit it is a different way of learning. Sometimes words are unnecessary, but for some, they like to hear spoken words, because that is what has always brought comfort to them. And spirit is a place of—whatever you need or want is available to you.

Rod: There's just one little thing: you did say when you are in spirit, you communicated in thought, I thought (Yes) and suddenly I felt that it must feel lonely, but I hope I'm wrong on that and you're not lonely, in spirit.

My dear friend: that is a word that is never used in our world. You cannot be lonely when you are surrounded by great love and beauty.

Rod: Ah, that's nice.

In a sense you are a little fearful of the unknown, but let me reassure you that as great joy is within your world when a child is born, that also happens in our world when you are reborn into that home from which you came. You are surrounded by love—you are never alone at any stage.

Rod: Beautiful.

Sarah: Salumet, going back to the mind—thought and mind: when the mind is released from the physical brain/body whatever, that goes into spirit and that is your thought. Am I right? (Yes) So when a baby is born and they have a physical brain and they have their mind again, this mind that comes, is that the spirit that comes with you? I am just a little confused on that.

You are seeing mind and spirit separately when in fact it is not. Mind is spirit (Yes). Yes. Try to focus and it will seem less confusing.

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

Now I feel, that for this time, I will continue to work with this instrument and allow the rest of your evening to continue.

Lilian: Thank you once again.

(General thanks)

And as I leave you, my dear friends, we ask and give thanks for all that we receive.

George's notes:

1. Time, space and separateness: Salumet refers to man coexisting in one space. This probably equates to the physical universe in which we physical beings live, having just the one pervading space or space-time. But in spirit, there are graduations of time, and clearly, aspects of soul have led physical lives at different periods through history. So perhaps these are the graduations of time referred to, and these will be within soul. Thoughts too, seem to be autonomous and have been referred to in the teachings and by Bonniol as 'living' and would perhaps be labelled in time.

2. Soul Mates: The references for Soul Mate are:

17th October 1994

31st August 1998

12th November 2001

And Soul Family 7th February 2005

There was some muted discussion as Salumet worked with Eileen followed by exchange with a control through Sarah, and then a rescue relating to a house fire to conclude the evening.

~10th September 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I am happy to join with you again this time. As I come close to you, I feel your energies and your love, also your expectations of your lives and expectations of your blossoming of spiritual attributes. For this my dear friends I thank you for your love and your consistency of wanting to become better human beings. I would like this time to discuss with you a little about your spiritual unfoldment and what you wish to achieve. I have spoken much about the power of your mind; I have spoken to you about all possibilities and what you can achieve, but this time I would just like to say that now is the time for you, not just to recognise spiritual attributes, but to experience first-hand these things. I hear you say: but how do we go about doing these things?

Lilian: Yes.

Yes. You go forward and in your meditative state you begin to realize and to take control of that mind which controls all aspects of your living. It is all very well to recognize with words what you can achieve, but it is the experience which will take you forward. Do you have any questions about this?

Pause

You all fully understand what I am telling you?

Jim: My difficulty with the words is the 'experience'—it's a spiritual matter. Sometimes when I sit quietly, I just think I'm in a silent, blank world; I have no feeling that I am getting anywhere. But I have to travel hopefully and follow the advice and just sit and wait to experience something—something I would dearly love to happen.

But my dear friend, your experience comes within that quietness, that vision which is before you, and only in those conditions can you begin to take control of your thinking and your life experience. It is within that meditative state that all things come to you. You must realize that experience is to find this quiet place at all times and at all stages of your existence. It is not easy—I know that my dear friend, but each one of you must endeavour to go forward in your own way. You understand?

Jim: Yes.

George: I get the impression your words relate in the first place to the meditative state, and I for one would need to dig more deeply there—and following that stage, that is then also an influence on what we do in our active lives (Yes). So it's that two part thing. Am I correct?

Of course, human living will be influenced by your spiritual status of course, but you must all endeavour to move forward; you cannot be content in just the intellectual knowledge of what you have to do—that knowledge has to become experience of the spiritual attributes. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes.

Rod: Yes, I think those of us who find it difficult to get into a meditative condition will just have to be very patient, and I have heard that it could take up to a year to get there. So, I think we need a lot of patience—people like me anyway...

There is no time limit. To go deeply into that state of existence takes all of your lifetime. It is not something you can achieve so quickly; it is ongoing throughout your physical lives and continues, I have to say, into our spiritual realms. So you see, it is appropriate for you whilst on this Earth to begin those spiritual exercises and practise to better go forward, to enhance your daily living. But again, as I have said so often, it is entirely your choice and however much you wish to progress, you must move forward in the state of mind. I feel your quietness and silence. I feel a little puzzlement with you also.

Rod: I am sorry I didn't know you were talking directly to me. I was mumbling under my breath—thank you—sorry about that.

There is no need to apologize my dear friend. Each one of you within this room is at a different stage of development. Some, of course, have been on this pathway for many years and some, we know, are new to spiritual ways—although that is not quite true because from the time you are born to this world, your spiritual growth has already begun, but unconsciously you move through life without realizing that you have spiritual 'back-up', I believe you might say. But what is more important is that, as individuals, you must move forward. Do not become complacent in what you know, because so many in your world feel that they know so much when in fact they know so little. So, never allow your ego to come to the fore, but to work and strive tirelessly for your own spiritual growth. It matters not what another is doing, but I do feel, and this room is a fine example, of people at different stages of development, but who are also very united in their goal. So, you see, it can work. And that is what I would wish you to consider this time my dear friends: to think just a little more deeply about moving forward.

Rod: You've convinced me to be more—I'll have a bash every morning if I can.

Jan: Don't beat yourself up over it, though Rod! That's only defeating the object.

Rod: No. I'm always worried about someone coming in and waking me up from it—I don't know why—barging in, in the middle of it. It can only be Daphne but...

Sarah: Put a note on the door.

Rod: Yes.

The most perfect time would be before your sleep state, but most people find this difficult because they find they drift to sleep rather than to enter that state of peaceful existence.

Jan: Much easier if you are an insomniac!

Yes, I do believe that could help. Yes. Do you have any questions?

Rod: Just going back on what you just said about doing it last thing at night—now I have tried this and you are right, you do go into a sleep, but I just wondered if there was any gain there. I presume there isn't a gain if you do go into a sleep...

I would say to you that you have sent the thought out to be in that state of existence, so you do not lose anything, but it is far better that you have some awareness of what is happening, that you gain control of your mind, of your thinking, of your actions. But it is entirely up to each individual to find time which is suitable and right for them.

George: Yes, I do use the evening time. I do find that my awareness is sometimes intermittent, so it's as if I have periods of unconsciousness and periods of being aware.

Yes. But it is all working towards 'control' and that is what you must strive towards. But if you do not give of the time, how can you make that progress? How can we come close if you are not allowing it to happen?

George: Returning to the ego for one moment; it doesn't seem to realize just how much knowledge is simply not worth knowing!

That is why it is called 'ego'—the physical part of the intellect/of the knowledge/of the knowing—humankind cannot differentiate between what is unsuitable and what is true knowledge. Man has always found it difficult to recognize that his own ego must be placed to one side if he truly wants to develop spiritually.

George: I'm very pleased to hear you say that, because I've noticed that some scientists can become fascinated in some backwater of knowledge, which just doesn't lead anywhere.

Yes, but do not be too harsh, do not judge them...

George: I'm being a little judgemental! (Chuckles)

Because they are striving to work out for themselves this phenomenon which they call 'ego'—because some of your scientists do not see further than the ego, they do not see the spiritual aspects of mankind so clearly. So...

George: That's another clarification, thank you.

Yes.

Sarah: I was just thinking, Salumet: you said to us in the beginning you likened us in spirit to a rough diamond and you take a little bit off and polish it and it becomes beautiful and goes back. When we go back into spirit, when we reach the highest point—when I say ‘highest’, we are probably talking about vibrations, lighter vibrations—does the whole of our spirit have to be together to move on? Does the part that is the many facets—do all the many facets have to join together first before they can move on, or can one facet go it alone, as it were?

Yes, one aspect can always still at that stage make individual judgements or movement or decision, yes, but still remain part of the whole.

Sarah: So, in order for—what I am trying to say is that when we’ve got rid of our physical garb and we’re in spirit, in order to move on to the highest point that we could possibly get to...

You will never reach the highest point, because it is not known.

Sarah: No, but what I mean is, the highest level that we could ever attain, let’s put it that way; would the whole group of facets would have to move together?

No, you are becoming confused and ‘bogged down’, I believe you would say, with physical thinking. Yes, when you reach the point of being energy, you are absorbed into the whole, but there is still an individuality within that energy. We are reaching difficult topics for you to understand.

George: But it is the soul’s progress which is the important thing.

...Is never-ending.

Sarah: I can understand that. I was thinking too rigidly in a physical sense as opposed to...

You are thinking more of those lower planes of existence, I feel.

Sarah: Yes, probably.

Yes, but it is a good question to be asking of yourself, because it shows that you have moved forward in your thinking.

Sarah: That’s nice to know anyway.

George: Possibly connected with that, last time, Salumet, you used the expression ‘graduations in time’ (yes) in spirit. Does that refer to aspects that have lived lives in different times on Earth?

Not necessarily. It is a graduation of energy. We are talking on difficult subjects here, difficult inasmuch as you can understand, but of course there are graduations of time, but it belongs to the refinement of energy.

Lilian: Would it be a coming together of spiritual knowledge?

It is a refinement—that is the best way that I can put it to you.

George: I think I’m seeing it as a more general condition of spirit.

Yes. It is just a progression, yes. Perhaps the word ‘graduation’ was not a wise one on my part, but as always, to use your physical language to explain spiritual knowledge, has always been a difficulty for us.

George: Yes, of course.

Now...

Jan: Salumet, excuse me, before you go, if appropriate, could you give a few words of encouragement to the young lady on my left, please?

I would like to hear her voice, please.

Cheryl: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening—yes. We have met before, I believe (Yes)—yes. I have spoken to this one before, yes. I believe there was some doubt as to what she was seeing, yes?

Cheryl: Yes.

Yes. But you have within you a spiritual nervousness, I believe. Would you agree? (Affirmed) But you have within you a spiritual nervousness, I believe. Would you agree? (Affirmed) Yes. But you will move forward and your life is moving forward and sometimes you feel that you do not understand your own pathway in life. (Affirmed) Yes. But do not be too concerned, because many surround you for upliftment and guidance. And if I may suggest: that you have a young gentleman, a brother, who can help you in many ways—that both of you could develop spiritually by speaking deeply with each other; there is a bond there that you are not aware of. But your life is moving in the right direction, do not doubt that.

Cheryl: Thank you.

But I do not usually speak personally, but I will tell you that your life path will take a different direction as you grow a little older, and it is for the best.

Lilian: Yes, thank you Salumet.

Jan: thank you very much.

Now, my dear friends as I leave you, I hope my words this time have inspired you in some small way and that each one of you can take from these words some little comfort or some hope that you may go forward with your own lives knowing that there is much you can achieve. I leave you always, my dear friends, encompassed within my love and my healing for you all.

(Grateful thanks)

George's notes:

Meditation: Salumet's words were spoken slowly and with deliberation. It is clearly an important instruction on meditation for all.

Ego: The statement that humankind cannot (in general) differentiate between true knowledge / awareness and knowledge that is non-progressive, is interesting. Immanuel Kant was one who singled out a priori knowledge (that some today might prefer to call 'awareness') as of heaven and superior to that arising from experience and intellectual reason. He was one of a few to know the difference! But mostly, humankind does not appear to distinguish.

Dictionary (Concise Oxford) definitions:

Ego: (metaphys.) part of the mind that reacts to reality and has sense of individuality; self-esteem.

Ego-trip: activity devoted entirely to one's own interests or feelings.

Egoism: ethical theory that treats self-interest as foundation of morality; systematic selfishness; self-opinionatedness.

Egotism: self-conceit

Clearly, 'ego' and associated definitions make uncomfortable reading. It is a restrictive zone that we need to look beyond. Intellect is sometimes admired and not without reason, but it is perhaps unwise to dwell within this restrictive zone. As Salumet says, the ego really needs placing to one side in order to access our spirit connection and truth.

~24th September 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time, I feel upliftment is needed for some. As I draw close to you, I feel that the subtle energies need to be uplifted. Therefore, for this one time only, I wish you to listen to my voice so that each one of you feels the love and light which surrounds you.

(Salumet's voice assumed a slightly slower intensity)

I would like each one of you to focus within, to allow yourselves to feel the love and energies which come to you this time. I want you, my dear friends, to make connection with that part of yourselves which has connection to our world. I would like you to focus on this energy as bright, white light which comes close to each one of you—to feel that pull that is connecting to you spiritually and therefore physically, to enable you to forget for just a short period of time all of your woes of this Earth life. Focus, my dear friends, on the centre of your bodies. Imagine yourselves as a beautiful flower in bud, allow yourselves to open to that energy, that white light, and allow that bud to now begin to slowly open and to absorb that all-encompassing energy. Feel it in every part of your being. Allow it to empower you physically in every part of your body, in every cell of your body. I want you to be aware of this energy. I want you to feel the upliftment that comes to you, and when you are ready, allow yourselves to close down and to return to the physical and to continue to listen to my words whilst that energy continues to quietly uplift each one of you. (Pause—1.5 minutes followed)

Now my dear friends, I would like to say to you that on our next meeting I wish to discuss with you some information which will help you along your pathways, but for this evening for a short time I will take any questions that you may have.

Lilian: Yes, thank you for that, Salumet. George?

George: Yes, thank you. Yes, that was a wonderful feeling while you were talking. Thank you for that. I have a question. Can I refer back two years—we had a personal question and it was about Tina Birch, who had a spirit presence with her and the question came from her sister, Angela, who lives on the Isle of Wight. Tina passed to spirit—that was nearly two years ago. She leaves two young children who live in their home at Walthamstow. One of them, Natalie, is quite severely handicapped with cerebral palsy and I understand that she has been talking of seeing a presence, a male presence and I know, within the family there is some fear that it might be the same spirit in attendance as with the mother. My own feeling is that Natalie would be close to spirit and there would be others wishing to help her and I wonder if it's a helper or guide. Would you have anything to comment on that?

Yes, I understand your question. Let me say this to you: although this young one is physically handicapped, she is also spiritually aware—as was her mother. So, there is nothing to be fearful of, but of course what is happening is that fear and negativity come from other members of the family. I can say that any energies being seen, if they meant any harm would have shown that aspect by now. So firstly, I say the family must relax and the child, if she so wishes and does not want to see, then they must approach someone who has the awareness and the ability to make connection to visit that home. What I would not recommend is that fear and negativity be allowed to build around this young one. It is a little worrying for her, but it can be altered and it can be stopped. There is energy that is present but is not harmful.

George: Yes. Would I be right in thinking it can only be made harmful by fear and attitudes around?

Yes, it comes from those who are fearful and negative, and of course that can be built upon.

George: But if the presence can be accepted, then would I also be right in thinking that it's likely to be helpful to the little one—or am I making too bold a statement?

Yes. I do not wish to place words into your mouth, but you are making too much. It is a presence that is seen by the young one, because of her ability to see, but it is energy—but rather than allow fear to build, it would be better at this time for someone to make connection and to move the being forward.

George: Yes. At the same time, many of us would welcome such an ability to see...

Yes. Is it not just confirmation of what is achievable when you allow the mind to be free and open (yes) and is available to all.

George: Yes, thank you and I'm sure that will be a great help to the one who enquired about this and I think it has also been an instruction for us all.

Yes.

George: Thank you Salumet.

There is so much here within this Earth plane without even the recognition of fear. So many live their lives in fear—fear of the next moment, of the next hour, of the next day—when they should be focussed on this second.

George: Yes. Yes, and then we have freedom!

You have clarity—yes. I hope that will be helpful to you.

George: Yes indeed. I'm sure that's a great help. Thank you, Salumet.

Rod: Can I just ask one question? Last week you said that meditation on the Earth plane is a wonderful thing and it would be of benefit when you went into spirit. And I thought, well when we're on the Earth plane we want to go within, and I understood that as to get within our inner spirit. And I thought, well what happens when we go into spirit, we're within spirit—is that the same kind of meditation? Would you be trying to sort of get within, within? Is that a stupid question?

I feel that you have become a little confused.

Rod: I thought I may have!

Yes. When you return home, you of course are spirit. On Earth you are cloaked in this garb of flesh. You are not physical beings with a spirit you are spirit with a cloak of human flesh. Therefore, when you return home to us, there is no need to seek meditation as such, because you have exposed that true self which is spirit. You understand?

Rod: I do now yes.

Meditation on this Earth plane is to make connection with spirit. You understand now?

Rod: I do. I misunderstood that little bit and I can see where you're coming from. I haven't re-read it and I haven't seen the script and I see where you are coming from now. Thank you very much.

After all, what is meditation? It is only to help you to focus. Once you have the ability there is no need for ritual, but I have to say that for many, many human beings it is a focus which is necessary for you, to still that ever-enquiring brain that you have. But it comes only with practice. I hope that has helped you.

Rod: The initial talk you gave to us to go within tonight, if you were there every night like that, that would be a lot simpler—that was quite a lot simpler tonight. Maybe within this room, I don't know, it was easier to go within. It was lovely. Thank you very much for that.

I think you have just made what you would term a compliment!

Chuckles

So for that I will say is 'thank you', but of course there is no need to.

Rod: Thank you very much anyway.

Lilian: Can you take another question?

I will take one more this time.

Lilian: Has anyone a question? Di?

Di: No. If someone else would like to ask one, I'm happy to listen.

Lilian: Paul?

Paul: No, I don't think I've got one this week.

George: I have what might be a quick one. Perhaps I'm digging too deeply, but we used the phrase last time 'graduations in time' or 'transformation of energy' and it left me feeling: can one conceivably see even 'time' as either an energy or something that connects in a rather subtle way to energy?

Time is an earthly matter. Time as you know it in our world does not mean the same as time upon your Earth. But yes, of course there must be passing of what you call 'time' and it does belong to an energy field, a subject which we have not touched upon as yet; but it is something I feel would be of great interest to you, my dear friend.

George: Yes, indeed. I think we've taken on board that time doesn't really exist in the deeper spirit (no) but there's a memory of it (yes) or a phasing of it in the astral planes.

It is transmutation of energy. Perhaps that is a simple way of putting it to you at this particular time.

George: Yes, I felt there had to be a connection with energy.

Yes, of course, but as a group you are not quite ready for this kind of information.

George: No, I think you're flattering me too. I'm not quite ready myself, I'm sure.

Lilian: We'll believe you.

Midst some laughter

Well I would not wish to contradict, but I know you have a most active brain.

George: Well, thank you. I do tend to rummage through the papers every so often and think about it.

But we need you to summarize and to place from your small machines onto your discs in order that many may listen to these words of truth. After all, that has been my mission for you, to bring to you at this time many aspects of what has always existed and known as truth.

George: Yes, we do our little best. It's Paul, across the room there, who produces the discs. Yes, that's a little beyond me at the moment.

You are all individual, but you remain as one. You all contribute in your own ways and it is heart-warming, I believe would be the expression, to see such unity within a small group of people.

George: Yes, we must of course include yourself within that unity, because where would we be without these teachings?

Rod: Just—I'm a very simple person—you just said something to George about time not being the same as here, but we have a guide in spirit who comes through from the Egyptian side, back from the pyramid time—it must be thousands of years ago—and I look at this fellow, who has been in spirit those many thousands of years, and he cannot be aware of that period of time like we see it. Would I be right that he wouldn't be aware of that period of time in the same way as we look at it? Or have I asked that question stupidly?

Do not put yourself down. Any question that you put to me cannot be stupid, because you seek an answer. People who come to you from any time—and remember what we have just said that time in our world means not the same as time in your world—what they bring back is their memories. They come to inform you of their lives, because it is something they wish to do for the betterment of others and of course their knowledge is now greater in spirit than it would have been when they walked this Earth. So, the answer to your question is, yes they are much more aware. You understand?

Rod: Aware, yes. I just felt, would they have a feeling of time? Is that right?

Of now—the here and now? (Yes) Yes. Well of course they have the knowledge of life now. After all, how would it be possible to return to a time and a place which is so different from their existence if they had not looked and understood what they were coming to?

Rod: I see where you are coming from now.

Yes, now you are beginning to understand.

Rod: Yes, yes. I see that. Thank you very much!

George: Would I be correct in thinking that that would be an aspect of a soul that comes through to us (yes) and that soul has progressed since that distant time, and that aspect has the influence of that progressing soul. Would that be a central point?

Of course. That is a very good way to address it, yes. The one who has lived that previous life is not existing as you would imagine, but has grown in understanding in our world and of course the aspect of the self desires to help others, if only by bringing information to them to help in earthly understanding. You must always, my dear friends, look at the wider picture of communication with our world. It is not to have a pleasant evening just talking of past times, but to allow you to know and understand that communication is possible and does exist. That is the purpose of that kind of exercise. You understand?

George: Yes. On a purely factual basis, that one who came through from Ancient Egypt was well tuned to making a little water go a long way in dry conditions and he was being helpful as regards the way we conduct ourselves now in conditions of extreme dryness. So his information was actually helpful.

Of course, and where you are fortunate is that the connection is made directly, whereas in many instances all people are influenced indirectly. You understand? (Yes) Such as your doctors or your farmers or—no matter what occupation, we in spirit try always to influence, but if you have an awareness and a connection directly through the medium, then that is much better, much clearer for you to understand. Would you not agree?

George: Yes indeed, yes. Yes, I follow that.

Well, for this time I will withdraw and I am sure that as your evening closes this time that you will feel that upliftment this time.

(General thanks)

George's Notes:

Time: This further reference to time, perhaps leads one to feel that the space-time basis of physical creation might be the energy field Salumet refers to ... or time belongs to the material realm because it is fashioned in space-time. Spirit is not of course, but progressing ones in spirit have had and know of planetary life, so that there is 'a memory of time' in spirit. That surely takes us a valuable step further in our understanding of the elusive 'time'.

Influence from spirit: Salumet points out on this occasion that, communication via a medium is direct, and therefore better and clearer than other influences such as those we might call 'inspiration' given to scientists, doctors etc.

~1st October 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I am happy to join with you once more. The instrument would seem to have a little irritation to the throat. Therefore I will try to deal with it for her.

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

Once more, my dear friends, we welcome your healing thoughts for all of those in need. But this evening I wish to place before you a question which I hope will bring to your minds much thought. My question to you this time is this: is there only one spirit—one spiritual existence? That is my question this time.

Lilian: So, is there only one spiritual existence?

Yes.

Sarah: I think I would say 'yes' and we are all one little part of it.

Do we have any more thoughts about this?

George: I would think we are all one: there is one spirit, but the spirit has many parts and those parts also have many parts. I feel it is one spirit, but a very, very composite form—complex form.

And where spirit resides, is there just one spiritual plane?

Sara: I don't know. My daughter asked me the other day: 'Where is heaven? Where is her idea about spirit—(yes) and I didn't really know what to say, but I told her it's all around us—(yes) it's within us and around us. (Yes) But I'm not very clear. (Yes)

Sarah: I think it's a bit like the spirit itself; it's probably divided up into different planes, into different compartments, perhaps you should say, where you have the different...

Paul: Stages...

Sarah: ...stages of growth.

Yes. I therefore pose to you another question: You now know and understand of life on other planets, of other universes, galaxies, that it is not only this universe which exists. Let me ask you my dear friends: those people who exist upon these other planets, do they return home to spirit in the same way as you people upon this Earth?

Sarah: Yes.

Lilian: We've created our own spiritual place...

George: Yes. I would say there is the one what we sometimes call the 'deeper spirit', but there are these connecting zones to planets which we call the 'astral planes' sometimes.

Yes. Now we begin to think just a little. Let me say this to you my dear friends that those beings on other planets, when they pass to spirit are of different form, speak different language; therefore what do you suppose they would do if they came upon a place that was inhabited by human beings?

Paul: They could adopt a similar appearance and maybe they can communicate more with thought?

Yes. That is possible at a later stage. What I would say to you is this: that spirit is here and now and when you leave the physical garb and you are in spirit, you are still here in a sense, in the same way as those from other planets meet those of like kind in spirit—but at that point they do not unite or communicate until such stages as it is unnecessary to have any form. Do you see where I am going with this conversation? (Agreed)

George: The astral planes contain beings of form (yes) and this is the difference (yes) from the deeper spirit.

And up until now we have only discussed the astral planes for human beings such as your selves. And of course spirit is all one, but the united completion of people of different, how shall we say, different aspects of being come together at a much later stage when only the mind is used for communication.

Sarah: Yes, that makes sense.

Therefore you have many—and I use this carefully—many ‘spiritual worlds’ which are separate but still united. You understand?

(Agreed)

Paul: Yes, and we can still, like we do with Bonniol, communicate with them and I guess in the astral planes, maybe, there can be link-ups as well.

Yes, of course, there can, but the majority of the time is spent in taking each plane of existence more slowly. And, although there is only one spiritual home, there are places within spirit which are separated—perhaps that is a word to use. You understand what I am trying to tell you? (Affirmed) Do you have any questions about this?

Paul: So there are ones that are separated, even in deeper spirit, or...

When you reach deeper spirit, all beings are united. There is no separateness, there is no individuality and that comes when you enter deeper into the spiritual realms.

George: Can we think of this as: there are beings, but they are united?

Yes—yes.

Sarah: In this planet we have made contact with Bonniol, we are able to contact him through our minds.

Would we not still be able to continue that contact through our minds once we go into spirit, even though we are separated—but we could still maintain that contact?

Yes. If so desired, that is possible, of course—all things are possible—but I am trying to make you understand that the wider picture is not as you have seen up until this point. So I would like you to think a little more deeply about these different areas of existence.

Sarah: That does make sense.

Paul: Yes it does. It seems like a gradual blending as we progress.

Yes, I like that word, ‘blending’ of spirit—yes, that is good.

Lilian: A bit like the people on this planet, as they began to travel...

Paul: Yes, you have like the blacks and the whites and the...

Lilian: The Aborigines and so on and so on.

Paul: The Orientals—and slowly we are blending. (Yes)

Sara: The more we progress spiritually on this side, the more we are capable of blending. (Yes) That’s not to say that we can necessarily spend long periods with people who are unlike us, but we have the ability to blend at any time. As long as it’s not for too long, we can feel that blending with anybody.

Yes. That is why it is most important that you allow spirit to come forward whilst you inhabit these bodies, because then you forsake those astral planes which are limiting, shall we say, for your progression.

Sarah: And is this always going to be the case, these separate things, because this planet’s going to come to an end at some point and we are going to be...

No matter, it is what happens in spirit, that is important, not any physical planet, but the progression of spirit.

Sarah: Because I was just thinking that by the end of this planet our spirits will have progressed, we will have got more spiritual...

Hopefully!

(Much amusement)

Sara: So it’s a progression on this side, it’s a progression on the other side (yes) and we’re always progressing towards a great blending.

Yes, but it is important that you try to at least understand the workings of spirit so that you are not in this constant wheel of reincarnation—that eventually when you return home you can go forward.

Lilian: Yes, that would be nice.

But again that it up to each individual and their own progression.

George: I think I imagine each planet in the universe to have its own blending zone.

Yes, you are correct; that is what you must understand. It is not instantaneous, because there are too many differences—although you are all spirit, you all come from that Great Creator, but it is a step-by-step union.

Rod: When you said the Great Creator, I just imagined him in our universe, which is mammoth enough, but then when you said ‘universes’, is the same Great Creator involved with all these other universes? Is it the same spirit?

It is all part of the perfect plan.

Rod: Good gracious!

Creator—it can be confusing to use earthly words like ‘Creator’ as if that energy was of your kind; that is not so. That is much too deep for you at this time.

George: Yes I found it difficult to imagine another universe. (Yes) Yes, a simple question: this physical universe is based on space-time, (yes) would other universes be based on something different?

They are all tied to the ‘laws of creation’, which means that in some way ‘time’ is of some importance, but can be slightly different to your own experience of tangible time.

Graham: Would these other universes have galaxies and planets in the same way that we understand in our universe?

Yes.

Rod: I know that this might be a hopeless question, but are there many universes?

Yes.

Sara: If we wish to step off the wheel of reincarnation, presumably we simply have to embrace each new growth opportunity as it comes and go within as much as we can?

Yes. You have to allow the fruition of spirit in this life. That is the purpose—that you grow and understand and no longer need that great pull back to any planet. Yes.

George: I have the feeling that certain structures within this universe that we understand, would connect to other universes.

Yes, there cannot be separateness in that sense. All is united in the great plan of existence. Does that help you?

George: Yes, because there are certain structures, like black holes for example, (yes) where this universe seems to be disappearing, so I’m tempted to think of that as one of those connecting points to a different universe.

Yes, I would encourage that thinking.

George: Thank you.

Graham: Are you yourself, able to communicate with other universes or are you within this universe?

My purpose this time is with you here, but because we are a conglomerate of beings, we have reached the point of unity with many. So therefore my answer to you must be ‘yes’, if we so desired we can communicate.

Paul: How—I’m not sure of the word, but how much of this unity—because your ‘roots’, if you like, will have come maybe from certain universes and you will be uniting with other universes and blending. So presumably you’ll then have all the awareness of all of them, and yet perhaps also maybe your own roots from where you’ve come from will slowly disappear, if you like.

You must not, my dear friend, presume that this voice that speaks with you has what you call ‘roots’ in any planet. That is something we have not touched upon, but I would say to you, I understand your question, but it is—means nothing. You understand?

Paul: Yes.

George: Yes, could I add to that that our understanding of angels/angelic beings (yes) is that they have no roots to any physical planet...

Of course.

...and I’m tempted to think of yourself as very similar to an angelic being.

Yes. I will use your physical word ‘rootless’. Is that correct?

(Affirmed)

...‘rootless’.

Paul: Yes, we can understand that, yes.

Yes.

Sarah: So why is it—you probably can’t answer this question, I don’t know—so why is it that you exist and the way we needed to come back to this Earth—what is it that determines, those that are in need of physical existence and those like you?

I understand what you are saying. Let me say this to you: I can only tell you that it is my existence to be what I am. That is in the hands of the Creative Force. It is not for us to question what our purpose is in this existence. I feel we are getting to very deep matters...

George: Yes, and it brings to mind (yes) a phrase from one of our religious books: ‘I am that I am.’

I am—yes. I am that being of existence, because that it what the Great Creator has made me. It is my part of all being.

Sarah: I can understand. So it’s the Great Creator’s choice as to how he portions out, if you like, the spirit world.

Again we are confused by earthly words. It does not come to choice; it is just part of existence. That is the only way at this time I can explain it to you.

Sarah: That’s fair enough, yes. I can take that, thank you.

I know these thoughts are powerful thoughts for you to digest, but I feel that you have come this far and it is time for those minds of spirit to seek further, to understand truth, to understand existence, and to know the spiritual power that you all have in order to go forward.

Lilian: I was sort of thinking about the parts to a plant: the roots, the stem, the leaves, the flowers, the petals, the stamens—that makes a whole. Would that be a simple way to put it?

Yes. All of existence has purity and wholeness; it is part of the Creative Force. Therefore all of these things must apply to what is and what existence is. And I feel for this time I cannot say to you much more. I have to at this point take my leave of you.

The voice was fading, an indication that the energy was just about spent

(General thanks)

George’s notes:

The Tibetan Book of the Dead accounts ‘the great vertical path’ to ‘undying’ immortality, leaving behind all karma. This equates to the progression beyond astral planes described here.

~29th October 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

Again I am most happy to join with you again.

Lilian: We are very happy to be together again.

At the beginning of this your earthly year, I said to you this would be a year of self-development, of getting to know who you are. Again, I wish to say to you my dear friends: what have you discovered about yourselves? Who are you? And what you would wish to achieve spiritually. This, my dear friends is no small question, but something that you need to harbour within your own minds—you need to cultivate that knowledge. So, therefore, for this time I wish to speak to you as individuals and to find from each one of you that deep knowledge which you should have found within yourselves. So, if you are happy this time, we will discuss this for you. Would one of you like to begin?

George: Yes, well I feel that each one of us is the representative of a greater soul body, a temporary representative here on Earth and we have these inner feelings about direction and belief, and how we should move forward.

Yes. You are the spokesman for this group, but my dear friend, what have you found out about yourself, your true self?

George: Well, I can't go into any greater detail about that. I have my personal mission to become as aware as I am able and to present the details of this and of your teaching to as many others as possible. I feel that is my present mission here.

Yes—you feel comfortable in what you are trying to achieve. Thank you.

George: I feel comfortable in that I'm aware of problems of acceptance by many and I sometimes feel or wish I could do a better job than I'm doing, but I know the direction and that seems to be the important thing. I have feelings of—I wish I could achieve more.

Yes. I thank you for your comments and I will say to, not only you, but to each one of you, you must not allow thoughts of self-deprecation to enter your mind, but what I would say to you all is: it is not in the doing, but in the being. Do you understand those words?

Sara: Yes, I'm trying to appreciate each moment of whatever I am doing, (yes) so that I'm trying more and more to enjoy each moment of what I am doing (yes) rather than think of it as a task that must be done. I'm trying just to enjoy each moment.

To be in the moment—yes. In that way you become as one with all things.

Sara: And then the tasks don't seem arduous; everything is light and enjoyable.

Yes. Once you allow negative thoughts to enter, you are holding back from that being.

Sara: And you lose energy I think (yes)—you become tired.

Yes, you are correct.

Lilian: Yes. That's probably my fault—the negative thoughts. I realise very much when I have made a mistake—either with my thoughts or words.

Yes, I feel sometimes my dear friend, you do struggle a little with those thoughts, but as you say, you have the awareness to turn those thoughts around.

Lilian: Yes, I certainly know when they've been wrong.

Yes, and remember also my words about negativity and illnesses and how you can avoid these things.

There are many aspects to just being. You understand what I am saying to you?

Lilian: Yes.

Yes. What, my dear friend, do you see yourself doing in time to come?

Sara: Me or Lilian?

Lilian. I am speaking spiritually, of course.

Lilian: Of course. Hopefully much more improvement on the thoughts—and words. And I think above all, as I see it at the moment, I've become much more aware of how many people are on this same pathway (yes) through books that we read and what we hear on the media.

And remember always too, you have already used words, that words are healing, and you all my dear friends have that capability. So, again, live for this moment. Would someone else care to tell me what they feel?

Sarah: I still feel, I have felt for quite some time that I'm quite drawn to South America to help underprivileged people in South America. I've had that feeling for quite some time, but my mother is ill and I feel that my duties are there. But I very much feel that I'm in a much more 'wanting to help others' mood than I was before. I think before I was very much out a lot for myself and I feel there's been a change there.

You mean you felt for yourself in a negative way. Is that what you...

Sarah: No, no, no, no. I don't think I ever felt negative about myself, but I have done a lot of things with me in mind rather than other people in mind, whereas now I'm beginning to feel that the other people are coming more to the fore. I want to help other people more. I would get more satisfaction helping others, than I would helping myself now, whereas before, I had satisfaction helping myself, if you see what I mean. The children—I was happy to give and help them, but I think overall, I now feel much more that I want to—okay I do get satisfaction—I feel it's right helping others and making others happy. I get a lot of satisfaction from that rather than just purely making myself happy.

Yes, I understand, but before you can help others, you must have priority for your own spiritual being.

Therefore to say 'I would feel better' is in fact speaking of the ego.

Sarah: Yes, I suppose that's true.

I do not mean that disrespectfully to you, but what I am trying to help you to understand and see is that each one of you, as spirit, has the responsibility to look to yourself first and only then can you go forward and help all these other people, not because it makes you feel better, but because you feel that this is part of the universal law and what you should be doing.

Sarah: I think actually when I said that it makes me feel better, I've realized I haven't actually done it to make me feel better, but I've realized that because I wanted to help others it actually has made me feel better, not that I've done it just because it makes me feel better.

That is better, yes. Thank you. Yes, your awareness has grown in that way, yes. That is good.

Sara: I think I'm learning also to help people when I really want to help them, rather than coming from a feeling that I should help them (yes) or ought to help them. I'm learning to balance helping myself with helping others.

There should really be no forethought. It should be something natural which comes from you; that light from your spirit, yes.

Sara: I think I have a natural tendency to enjoy helping people, (yes) but I think at times in the past I've possibly done it too much sometimes. So I feel happier now that I can say 'no' quite happily when it doesn't feel right, but I can enjoy doing it when I have energy to spare.

That is part of knowing yourself. Yes, that is good. Now we come to the gentleman.

Paul: This year has been a sort of transitional year I think in some ways. I've been working outdoors more now, and I do less talking probably in my work than I used to do. I think talking less seems to suit me anyway. It's surprising how little you need to say. You can tune yourself into your surroundings and get by without many words.

Yes, rather than speech, you can feel. (Yes) Again it is a development of the spirit. You are right there.

Paul: Sometimes, when you're not speaking, I've noticed you can find a very pleasant space inside you—when you're not meditating, but you're in the everyday world, you can be in a good mental state, but when you start talking, you lose it a bit.

Yes. In actual fact, it is a better state of what you call meditation, because it is a natural lift of the spirit without thinking: 'I must sit down and be quiet'. In that way, it is occurring naturally. So, I say to you, you are making good progress in your achievements of spirit. Continue to allow yourself that quietness and that attunement with us.

George: A further factor in Paul's development has been the way Bonniol speaks through him, and I see that as augmenting your teachings, Salumet, to a large degree.

Yes, I am pleased that you see that connection, because you are correct in your words.

George: Thank you. There have been many involved in this exercise from spirit, but I think I would be right in saying that you were the guiding factor in making this arrangement.

Yes, because you needed to know the connection of minds. It is something that can be developed by each individual.

George: And it has been so good for us to compare notes with Planet Aerah, a planet that has advanced more spiritually than the present Earth Planet. (Yes) It has been so good for us to compare notes in that sense.

There are so many who are more advanced than you human beings. I have told you that Earth is a very young planet, so try not to be too amazed that there are others who have greater gifts, as you might say, than yourselves.

George: Yes. While on this topic, the book that is nearly complete now (yes) which logs the interplanetary conversations, with your commentaries built into it—I hope you are happy with that arrangement?

I would have said by now, my dear friend, if we had not been happy. But a word to you is that it is not a topic which will be readily accepted by many, but what it will do, as I have often said, is to plant those seeds of knowledge. That is what is important, that always we move forward in all ways of the spirit, that the TRUTH be known to larger amounts of people; and as you know my dear friends, one little seed of knowledge grows and grows until you have a forest. Is that not true?

(Agreed)

Now we have another gentleman, please.

Rod: Well, I feel that I'm on the fringe a little bit, but I would like to say that in the mornings I go out and stand and look at the hedge that I've got—it's multi-coloured—and I look at the beauty of that and I get a lightness—I feel it does something to me. It's rather beautiful and often I feel lighter in myself and I can meet people and feel much lighter. It's rather lovely and it's rather nice—I didn't get that before, I didn't have that understanding with nature that I've got now. I've never said this to anyone before but in bed in the morning I take in, I hope, energy from the universe, breathe it in—so I do hope I'm improving.

Yes. Of course, how could we say otherwise? Again, you speak of being in the moment when you are taking in all of that beauty. What you are doing is taking in that love-energy, that energy of spirit which is available to you all. Continue my dear friend and you will find that your ability to blend with nature will become greater.

Rod: Thank you.

Lilian: Graham?

Graham: Yes, I feel over the last couple of years since I recovered from the condition, (Dystonia) I've been able to go back to teaching, and teaching very different types of children with very different types of backgrounds than I had been used to before. I found it rather startling at first and a little unnerving, but I think, particularly this year, I've felt a much greater sense of oneness with the children I'm with now and I feel a great joy to be amongst them. And I realize that they are all beautiful beings and I feel as though I can see the beauty in all of these children—and then this extends out beyond the classroom and all around the world, I can see the oneness I have with all beings.

Yes. Of all of you within this room, you my dear friend are the one who has grown most. I have to say to you that you had to go through that course of illness before we could guide you to where you are today. It was a necessary step for you in order that you would open up and grow, because you had reached a stage where you had become almost 'still' as a spiritual being; and we needed to open you up to those experiences in order for you to find the beauty in those children; because my dear friend, we know at times it has been difficult for you. The situations that some of them have is not always easy to accept, but you are learning well.

Graham: Thank you. Yes, I do feel very lucky and there is a lot of joy in my life through this—it's amazing.

Yes, because you have opened up. You have blossomed, my dear friend, like a beautiful flower.

Graham: Thank you for that.

I am most happy to have joined with you my dear friends in listening to your own thoughts and feelings of your own growth. I hope that each one of you, in listening to the others, has achieved a sense of accomplishment and that the love you feel within your hearts for others continues to grow. And with those words, I will leave you this time. I say to you: know always I am close to you and I leave you bathed, as always, with my love.

(General thanks)

There was also this evening a child rescue. It was a sad case of dog-attack and some help was given to encourage the little one to move forward to the light and to those waiting.

George's notes:

Re the book:

Title: The Chronicles of Aerah.

Principal Author: Bonniol.

Co-author: George...

Commentaries by: Salumet.

Tagged: The Bonniol Texts – Intergalactic Conversations.

It is good to be reassured that Salumet is happy with the project so far. His comment that the topic will not be readily accepted by many, would be consistent with the fact that a number of mainstream publishers in the UK and US have been approached but they are just plain not interested. So it may be that it will just be available from ourselves and on the Internet ... and not the high-street bookshops.

Materialisation: Completion is currently being held back in anticipation that Bonniol and his team will be able to successfully materialise an Aeran object. An account of this and a photograph and possibly some analytical data would of course make a splendid note on which to conclude.

~12th November 2007~

We were instructed by one through Sarah, to think about any queries we had and that these would be answered, by other communicators. Salumet spoke towards the end of the session, to answer the last query. The other communicators spoke through Sarah. We were finally taken on a guided meditation/journey by Sue.

Good evening and welcome to you all. I have come because there is one who has a problem with health and I would be happy to discuss this with the gentleman concerned. If you are happy, we can start now.

Rod: Thank you very much yes.

Can you tell me your question please?

Rod spoke about his diabetes and his prayers for himself and others and his concern that they were a little repetitive. He also wondered about the friend in spirit responsible for the flashes he often experienced when starting a car journey, after asking for protection.

Let me tell you, you are being helped by many and each time you ask for help not only for yourself but for the many others, you are attracting more and more from those in spirit and you are surrounded by a throng of helpers. Each one of these helpers is listening to you and I can tell you that your prayers are being answered. You may not feel that what you are doing is sufficient or maybe a little repetitive, but I say to you, continue the way you are going and if you feel that something is not quite right, this is where you must change. If you feel you are repeating yourself, without enough feeling, then perhaps you should pick out the, what you might call, the most important to you names and ask specifically for these people. I also wish say to you, you ARE helping yourself and you need only focus a little more on the prime areas. Do not just ask for help, but focus yourself on the areas that are most affecting you. This concentration of thought will together with those who are surrounding you, produce what is needed for healing power. And finally I would like to say to you, that the light you are seeing does not come from one, but from many. And now I have answered those questions, is there anything else you'd like to ask before I leave?

Rod: I think you've covered the two things that concern me most—the healing for myself and those around me. I know my prayers go out to the Universes—I suppose a bit of that's a selfish thing but thank you, I do appreciate that.

I can only repeat words that have been given to you by one other and that is, you must look after yourself first, before you can help others. And I will take my leave now and hope that my words have been of help to you.

Rod: Very much so.

(Thanks expressed)

Another followed also through Sarah:

I want to say that there is one who is concerned about the effects of the Earth on other planets. I am trying to FEEL what this one is meaning exactly. Could that one please express a little more, what his thoughts and worries are?

(Lilian asked about this, but nobody seemed to have been thinking along these lines)

I feel that there is still one who is very concerned about this, but maybe I am picking up a thought from another. I only wish to say to that one, if any of you encounter this query that this Earth planet is going through a slightly turbulent time, but it is with much light at the other end of the tunnel. The other planets are working together with you and you have no worries. So I—excuse me for coming in at this time, but I was aware of this query and maybe it was not appropriate at this time.

George: I have had thoughts about this in the past and I'm never quite sure exactly what thoughts are buzzing around in my head at any one time. But yes, I have read about Earth's connection to other parts of the Universe and yes indeed, we are going through turbulent times, but I think I understand that Earth is currently into a very considerable progression and that progression connects with other parts of the Universe and it is therefore a rather important progression that we are going through. Does that make sense?

That is what I am trying to tell you. I am trying to say that although we have seen much trouble and strife, it is but part of evolution and without these problems you will not go forward. So I know you have much concern for other countries and their populations, but allow me to tell you that it is as I said, with much light at the end. So please do not be too concerned, but it is wonderful that your thoughts for others are going out to them and it is of significant help to those who are living at this time and through this conflict.

George: Yes, those thoughts are a personal prayer—a daily prayer at the present time, that we hope to have a small influence by putting out thoughts of love and increasing the light of awareness and the thoughts of peace. Yes I know these thoughts go out daily.

Yes they are of much help. But I can tell you that the conflict is needed for the progression of your planet and it will be for the better in the future.

George: Yes, thank you for that.

I am much relieved that I have found the source of the query, because I was beginning to think that maybe I had come to the wrong place.

George: I'm probably also a source of confusion, because I've attempted to put out several different thoughts. Thank you for your words.

I am very happy that you are able to give out so many queries. But I'm afraid that I can only answer this one. Now I will take my leave and make way perhaps for another to come to you.

(Thanks expressed)

Salumet followed:

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I could not leave you this time, without answering the question my dear friend has put out about the difference between myself and Angelic beings. I do not wish him to struggle with this till next time. Therefore my dear friend, it is quite simple, this answer to your question. I as you know, belong to a conglomerate of beings. I and others, come from that divine source of energy, as do those Angelic beings. And to put it simply for you in your Earth language, let me say it is only the difference in a job description. Do you understand what I am saying?

(Agreed)

George: Could I just add one further thought? (Yes) Your concern is with all Universes, not just this one.

(Yes) And a word we have in our language is 'omnipotent' (Yes) and perhaps this applies here. The Angelic beings, would they be less widespread in their influence?

Not at all, but only in different guises for different planets. It is only in your association with them and your recognition of them that is different.

George: So their tasks would extend into other Universes as well?

Yes, in the same way as 'we' as divine energy are more knowing of all things. You understand?

George: Wonderful, yes thank you that really does clarify it for me and it is something I have pondered on.

Yes, that is why I could not allow you to leave it any longer.

George: Thank you, I do appreciate that, I'm sure we all do.

Yes and with those words I will take my leave and continue with this instrument.

(Thanks and farewells)

~19TH November 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As we come together once more, I hope my dear friends that you feel the peace and love which I bring to each one of you. Once again, your thoughts and thanks for healing have been noted and again I say to you, continue with this love for your fellow man and you my dear friends will be repaid in kind. But of course, that is not a reason to do and ask for help, that you may in return receive, but that you continue to do it from the heart and with Love. I do not intend to stay too long this time, because we have, my dear friends, an exercise for you this evening. When I leave you, I would like you to focus on a loved one in spirit and see how close they can come to you and how much your awareness of them has grown. I hope that you are happy to do so. (Agreed) I would say to you, I will take just a few questions this time, and I will continue my work with this instrument.

Lilian: Thank you, if I could start. Did you have anything you wanted to say, Richard, to Salumet about what happened to you?

Richard: If there was any part played in the weather at our wedding, we both give our extreme thanks for that. But my question would be: I had a voice wake me up the other night after we came back, with a girl introducing herself as 'Arnia' or something like that. I believe she's come through to play about with the levels so that I can actually hear who's trying to come through to me. She comes through sometimes quietly, sometimes loud and it's difficult to judge. I think she's there to help. I just wondered if you were aware of that?

She is indeed a helper for you. Let me reassure you, as I did last time we met, that you are now beginning to accept what can be achieved. If you are open enough, we can come close, but because of the human spirit and the doubts which creep into the consciousness of the human being, very often these occurrences are denied or put down to be 'in your mind', as you might well say. Only when you allow the awareness to take over and you can fully accept that these things happen, then we can give you so much more. Not only will you be aware of this female as you say, there is with you close by a gentleman who is waiting for you to accept that you cannot only feel but see and hear. In fact my dear friend, you have the gifts of spirit at your very finger tips, but until now you have had too many doubts. Now is the time to fully open, to allow that spiritual being to come to the fore. You must not listen to the voices of others who are not sure of spiritual happenings, because then your sensitivity becomes such that you then begin to doubt also. Is that not true?

Richard: Yes, there are quite a lot of people around like that.

Yes. You must rise above all of that and be true to yourself. You can do it and you will achieve it.

Richard: Thank you, Salumet.

Lilian: Will this gentleman who is waiting from spirit, will he eventually give his name?

Yes, in time—only when the time is right. All happenings of this kind must be done slowly but surely; it is a two-way communication, as you all now understand within this room. But our dear gentleman friend is quite young in this knowledge. Although he has always had these abilities, it is only now that he is beginning to truly understand; but it takes time. I hope that is helpful to you.

Richard: Very helpful, thank you.

(Lilian then asked if there were further questions)

Sara: I recently gave a talk on colour healing and it was the first one I'd ever done, but I did feel that it was a great platform to put across something of the teachings and I felt that it was perhaps something I should do more of. Would you agree, Salumet?

I believe I have told you that your sweet voice is healing. So, yes of course, I would encourage you to use it in any manner that you feel is useful, not only to you but to others.

Sara: Yes, thank you.

All answers are available to you my friends. It is only that you do not listen clearly enough. All of you still say, 'was it my imagination'...

Lilian: That's so true!

... when by now you should realize that we are always close to you.

Sara: Yes, I knew that people were helping me with that talk. I knew because it took on an energy—a new energy. It was a good feeling, thank you.

Yes, and you may find at times there is a strong voice comes from you that is not perhaps recognizable to your own, but is indeed part of the help you are receiving. I do not mean the voice of a male, but a strength within your own voice.

Sara: Yes, I felt that I was being given some inspiration when they were asking me questions—I did feel it then.

Good.

Jan: Salumet, in time as you've mentioned to Richard, I have a deep feeling within me that this will lead to platform mediumship eventually. I don't think that the work that Richard is on the pathway for is just for this room—I have a sense of much, much bigger. Can you comment on that, please?

Let me say this to you: Each one of you has come here with a pathway, each one of you has chosen the pathway to meet once again and each one of you at some time has made choices either for good or not so good, but that choice has been attributed to your own spirit. What I would say to you is that whatever choices are made to go in any direction, that responsibility lies entirely with the one who is treading the pathway. I could tell you what is in store for this young man, but I do not intend to...

Jan: No, I see now that would be unfair.

... because—not unfair but unwise, because he is still of an age where he can influence his own movements and it would not be wise for me to tell him where he will be in 20 years' time. You understand?

Jan: Yes I do, yes I do.

Although I could, I will not. If he so chooses he can develop the spirit to a degree, because, as I have said, he has all the abilities to do so, but only he, only he can make those decisions. Once he has developed, not only developed, but he has chosen to understand and become much more aware, then the choices that he makes in life will be the right ones.

Jan: Maybe the question was unwise of me to ask ...

No, not at all.

Jan: ... but I have had dreams or clairvoyance about him in the past in that way.

Yes.

Jan: So we will see.

Sarah: Could I just ask one quick thing. Somebody who was dying a little while ago, I don't know if he was frightened of dying in the beginning, but eventually he kept saying, he didn't want to go there because it was a terrible place, it was awful. It was obviously his fear at that point why he didn't want to let go. What exactly was he seeing? Where exactly was he going? Because he said he thought he had sort of died and gone somewhere horrible. He wasn't a bad man as far as I know, so what exactly was ...

No, but it was fear.

Sarah: It was fear.

Fear created the conditions and although he was not, as you say, a bad man, remember my words: you either have fear or love. So if you approach your passing with any kind of fear, then your surroundings as you well know from your rescue work, it creates many situations of being lost, of being uneasy, of just not knowing what is happening to you; and that is all that it is—that is why it is important that we have good mediums on the Earth plane, who can help these people to pass into our world safely and with love. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, I do. I did say to my daughter to tell him to look for the light, which he did, and he did actually go soon after that. It was actually my daughter's boyfriend's grandfather and I had meant to ask before what it was he was actually seeing: I knew it was the fear but I just didn't quite know how to explain to him.

So many people say they are not afraid of dying, but deep within their hearts, it is the unknown which creates the fear. Instead of allowing the spirit to go forward, they create fear and anxiety and therefore their own conditions. I hope that is helpful to you.

Sarah: Yes that is, thank you very much.

Now, I feel for this time, I will allow you to quietly await those who wish to come close to you, but you must send forth that thought to one particular person for this exercise to work, and with those words my dear friends I will continue to work quietly and allow our good lady to guide you and allow you to speak as necessary.

(General thanks)

~26th November 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time, I have been listening to your conversation. As always my dear friends I am pleased that your understanding of the human being is growing; not only does it enable you to understand yourselves but those that you come into contact with. I would like you to know that as we approach one of your holidays/festivities in the earthly world, I wish you to know how much activity takes place in our world because of this. Put aside any religious aspects to what you call Christmas and begin to understand the love and the joy which is abundant at this time, starting with the very youngest of your children who are still full of wonderment and surprise. They bring close to them those angels of love and protection that surrounds all young children on this Earth plane. It also brings closer to you, my dear friends, all who feel sad and lonely, or those who feel abandoned and helpless and homeless. All of these things bring from our world a great upsurge of love and activity. So I would like you to just consider for a moment how much love that is, how much joy that it brings to this Earth and to those in spirit, even to those who are not part of this religious festivity. That love is extended to all people in your world; so this can only be for good. I know you will agree with me. I come this time to speak to you gently and to take any questions you may have. I will be with you one more time when I hope to bring to you something else, but for this time I will take questions and allow each one of you to think about this past year of your lives—and not just to remember, but to feel, to know, to understand deep within yourself what it is you need to achieve in the coming time. Do we have any questions this time?

George: Perhaps I could begin by asking a question about the many universes. This subject has come up and I would like, if I may, to read a paragraph written by one of our more forward-thinking scientists and, if you would be happy to comment on his words, I just think it might simplify things for us. (Yes) So, if I may just read this paragraph: This is by one Paul Davis and I should precede it by explaining that Goldilocks is a children's story character who found certain conditions to be 'just right'. And he says: "A popular way to explain the Goldilocks factor is the multiverse theory. This says that a god's eye view of the cosmos would reveal a patchwork quilt of universes of which ours is but an infinitesimal fragment. Crucially each patch or universe comes with its own distinctive set of local bye-laws. Maybe the bye-laws are assigned randomly as in a vast cosmic lottery. It is then no surprise that we find ourselves living in a patch so well suited to life, for we could hardly inhabit a bio-hostile patch. Our universe has simply hit the cosmic jackpot. Those universes that can't support life, the vast majority in fact, go unobserved." Now, I suspect that he has some things correct there but not all (Yes) and I would be most interested to hear your comments.

Yes. I thank you for those words and an opportunity to speak just a little more. Firstly, yes—and you all know that there are many, many universes—that is nothing new to you. What I would say is that there are no lotteries, as you put it, because that would go against the perfect law. You understand?

George: Yes.

Yes. How I would like to put it to you: each universe within this perfect plan is but one small stitch in time, one small aspect of reality, one tear in all of the tears of the world. You have to place it in perspective. There are no chance planets or universes; it is all part of the plan that everything that exists has meaningful purpose. You understand?

George: Yes.

So, yes, he is far-seeing and he understands a good deal, but it is most difficult, as I have told you before, to give explanation to something that is beyond your understanding.

George: Yes. I'm sure that his understanding would come from the direction of mathematical calculation and connect to quantum theory.

Yes. That is why he speaks of lotteries. You cannot use those words—it is misleading because all life belongs to perfect law.

George: I wondered about his statement that life does not exist in the majority of universes.

Well, to most of humankind there is no other life, but as you, my dear friends, are beginning to learn, there is much more life available, not only within your own cosmos, your own universes, neighbouring universes, but throughout all of life.

George: And I would imagine much depends upon our definition of life (Yes) and there are probably many life forms which we would not necessarily at first recognize as such.

Yes. You are beginning to read my words before I say them. Of course, yes—always, that is the problem with humankind—it is the limitation of words and the limitation that is placed upon me in trying to explain to you in a simple manner. But that has been a most useful question.

George: Yes, good, thank you. Yes, we think in terms of a patchwork quilt, but there may be more that can be said there. I suspect these various universes would have some dependence or interaction with each other?

Yes. Of course, with a patchwork quilt there are four endings. You understand?

Graham: A square.

Yes. In our existence, it continues unending. There is no ending, it is ever-moving, it is alive, it is energy ever-moving.

George: So are you saying that any boundaries between universes would be physical?

Yes. You must look beyond the physical understanding, of course. Has that helped you in any way?

George: Yes.

Graham: I think a lot of us think about our universe in a physical way with our physical brains. We think that maybe if we go in any one direction for long enough, eventually you will run out of stars and galaxies and you come to some sort of edge. Some people think that perhaps there is an edge and some people think there isn't and that it goes on forever. Is there anything you could say about that?

I have just said there is no ending. In the same way as in past times people of this Earth believed that you could fall off the edge of the sea, in the same way are your learned ones thinking that there has to be—in all of the universes, it has to be neat and tidy. Is that your words? But energy is not static: it is always moving, expanding, growing. It is most difficult to explain, but do not limit yourselves to thinking that it is like a patchwork quilt. No.

George: I would imagine within all this there are flows of energy and if, just supposing, it were possible for us to go with a flow of energy, perhaps we could find ourselves in a different universe without actually experiencing any edge. Does that make any sense at all?

That is a simplified way of putting it, but for your understanding, yes, of course. Yes, that is possible.

There are many in your world today who travel in spirit, but yet are still attached to their physical bodies. If that is possible while you are in these cumbersome clothes, imagine what you can achieve when you are truly spirit—evolved beings—there is nothing to stop you discovering the joys of all existence. You understand?

Graham: It must be wonderful.

George: I think you are saying that through mind projection, we are not restricted to one universe.

Yes, of course. All restrictions fall away, yes. All things are possible. Do not forget that we are all small parts of that Great Energy; you are part of that energy; you are that small stitch in time. You understand?

George: Yes, thank you. I feel that is a wonderful clarification again.

But, the writer of those words is indeed beginning to become enlightened in his thinking.

George: Yes, I think he is one of our more progressive scientists.

Yes, he is to be congratulated, I feel, for those words. They may not always be accepted in your world—there will always be many to say ‘how can he feel that way?’—but each one of you my dear friends knows within your own heart what is true and I trust each one within this room to have that awareness and that knowledge of love and truth.

George: Two other things that we’ve just touched upon, gravity and space time. I think again our forward-thinking scientists consider that gravity is a distortion or warping of that space time and you have mentioned to us that—how did you put it—that the different universes would have a different time ordering within the space time, something like that.

Yes. All universes are inter-related.

George: So I feel that our scientific understanding which involves these connections between gravity and space-time and its distortion, I feel there’s something really coming together there.

Yes. Do not forget that these people will be influenced by those from our world to make the correct judgements and assumptions, but being human with human traits and freewill, it is almost certain that many will misinterpret that influence. But I would say to you, to all of you that your world is moving in the right direction. There are many discrepancies of course, in the same way that the people of your Earth feel that information from our world has many discrepancies. But as I have told you, you can only give of what you know. It does not mean it is wrong, only different and of the capability of whoever is giving the information.

George: Yes, well if there are discrepancies from your world, Salumet, I imagine that depends upon...

Excuse me! There are no discrepancies, only in how humans view the information given.

George: Yes, I was thinking more in terms of astral planes and I was going to say ‘where in your world’ but clearly from deeper spirit, there will be no discrepancies.

No discrepancies.

George: Could I put it like that?

Yes, I will accept that from you.

Chuckles

George: I was just hesitating how to phrase it.

Yes. Now I will once more work with this instrument and allow the others to work in the best way that is available to them.

George: Well thank you so much for further clarifying a difficult area and I feel that we are all much—I’m sure we are all much happier about that now, following that clarification.

Yes. Thank you for that question—I have waited for it for some time! Now, my dear lady friend, I will leave it with you once more. As I take my leave, I bathe you in the love of spirit. Know always that many stand close to you, that whatever questions you may have can be answered, not only by yourselves, but by those who love and cherish you in our world.

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

(General thanks)

~10th December 2007~

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time I would wish for you to recognize what has been achieved in this past year of earthly life. As always my dear friends, after this evening I will be withdrawing for a little while over your holiday time. As always, I will return to where I belong for just a short time. But as we come together this evening I would like to say to you my dear friends just how much I recognize, as do others in our world, how much each one has grown. I know I tell you this on many occasions, but it is for your own spiritual growth that I do so. I hope that all of you have become much more aware of who and what you truly are. The time is coming my dear friends when I would ask that you leave behind you all that has already gone, that you live in each moment—which we have recently discussed—and to put your thoughts into what lies ahead for you, not in any gratifying way, but in a way that you can see yourselves as a whole being. Remember that time—time as you know it, includes past/present/future, but in spiritual time all of that is as of one. That my dear friends will be what I ask you to try to achieve for yourselves in this next year of earthly life. Now, as we approach the end of your earthly year, I will say but one earthly word to you which is a powerful word for all of you, as I am sure you well know what this word can create—that word my dear words is ‘Thought’.

Last word spoken softly

Sarah: Love?

Thought.

Jan: Thought.

The power of your thought creates the love.

Sarah: Yes.

Yes. I would like you to think about it. I do not apologize for again reminding you of how powerful your thought is, how thought creates what you are, who you are, what you will be. Thought has the power to change all things, not only within this Earth plane, but throughout all of existence. With those words my dear friends I will ask you if you wish to discuss anything with me this time.

Jan: Salumet, we’d like to know if you’re aware of the traumatic rescue that we had here last week, that we were all very much part of collectively helping in, and if you had any comments on that rescue, because we felt that we did—we were very proud of what we had achieved by the end of the evening; we felt that we’d done really well with a tremendous feeling of love for the person that we helped.

I was not with you last time, but I am now aware of what you are speaking of. Yes, I understand how pleased each one of you were to help another. I understand that it creates overwhelming emotions which I am now seeing. Yes, yes indeed it was a difficult rescue—and we do call them ‘rescues’, because they are being saved from that darkness which they create themselves.

George: Yes, it seemed a particularly extreme darkness last week.

But you would not have been asked to take part if we did not feel that you were able to.

Jan: We did mention that after the event that we felt that we were being protected—and indeed through myself there was somebody here who indeed wanted to protect the room. (In fact Jan had been controlled to stand with arms outstretched as if to encompass and protect all—a stance sometimes used in biblical illustration depicting an angel) So we knew we were able but we felt, in particular I did I know, and the others were humbled. We’ve had other rescues obviously, but it was just so traumatic at the time and very frightening actually but we worked through our fear.

Do not be afraid. Within the confines of this place, you will be protected.

Jan: We realise that. The fear which I talk about was something that—I know Richard and I discussed afterwards—it was as if our soul was being touched by that fear, not ourselves as personalities. It was a very different feeling.

It is because you have not as yet encountered anything to such a degree as that darkness, but now you have that experience, you would cope much better with those emotions and those feelings. Yes, you are right when you speak about the soul. After all, it is the spirit which is helping, not the earthly being. You understand?

Jan: Yes, I do now after that experience last week. I wouldn't hesitate—there was no hesitation, but I would recognize from a personal feeling, and I know everybody else would, that yes, we are protected and that feeling, that shudder, it reached a deeper level.

Yes, you have awakened your own spirit—that is what has happened. You understand?

Jan: Yes I do.

The spirit that you are is beginning to recognize that there is far more than at first you thought.

Jan: Definitely.

I hope that has helped you.

Jan: Yes.

Richard: Salumet, during that episode last week, I felt as if I was being used as a channel (yes) for a lot of energy, a lot of what I felt before as love, as I have told you. Is that something which I'd be used for quite often? Is that something which I'm best at? It was an extreme sensation.

Yes. Because you are clairsentient also, as well as clairvoyant and have other gifts, it is more powerful when you experience the feelings and the knowledge of what is round and about you.

Richard: Yes. Over the last, even the last couple of months, I've noticed there is a huge amount more clarity and understanding.

Yes, because you have opened your heart and your mind to us, we can step towards you more closely to use you in this type of work; but not only that type of work, but many areas of spiritual work. So I would say to you dear friend, do not close your mind to one pathway, keep that spirit open that we may use you as the pure channel that you are. Do you understand?

Richard: Yes I do, thank you very much.

Lilian: Could I ask a question about your channel 'Eileen'?

Yes.

Lilian: The last two times when you've finished talking to us and she sits there quietly, suddenly she has quite a cough, and she's back. I wondered if there is anything we could help with this or could you explain why this quite hard cough.

Yes. There is nothing that you can do.

Lilian: I see.

It sometimes happens that because I have to use the physical voice box to speak to you, that sometimes on withdrawing it maybe a little too quickly. But I try to keep those occasions to a minimum.

Lilian: Yes, we don't get many of them I must say.

No, it is nothing to be concerned about and I will tell you that the channel feels nothing afterwards.

Lilian: Right. Well that's good. Thank you.

It happens sometimes, too, at the beginning when first I use that voice box. It is no problem.

George: There is a question that I've hesitated to place to you for some time, because words translated across hundreds of years tend to lose their value; but our old friend, Nostradamus, he referred to a prophet—was the word he used, who chooses Monday for his holyday. And that one he describes as travelling far to deliver a great many people from imposition or subjugation. Those who have studied him have wondered as to the meaning, but you Salumet are delivering a great many people from, shall I say 'dogmatic, traditional religion'. So the question that arises from that is, 'Have you been seen by the seer?'

Thank you for your question. I have to say to you 'no' it is not the one known as Salumet—no, but thank you for those thoughts. There are many who come to this Earth, who wish to help others and I have told you in past times just how many people from our world come to help mankind. Whether you give them the name of prophets or not, they are all spiritual beings on a mission of help for mankind.

George: Yes, the word descriptions change sometimes.

Yes, yes. But I will tell you that that prophecy has yet to come.

George: Oh! Oh!

I need not say more, but it will be made known amongst those who know and understand that there is one who will indeed travel far in his mission.

George: Would that be in the physical sense or in travelling through the vibrations as yourself?

In the physical sense.

George: Well thank you very much for clearing up that—that has bothered me for a little time.

Sarah: Would I be able to ask, would that be in our sort of lifetime?

I would say perhaps not. But as you should know by now, that time can alter many plans and so, although time does come into these prophecies, they can be altered and changed slightly. You understand?

George: Yes, I think we all appreciate that now.

Yes. Do not be fooled that time stands still: nothing exists which is static, nothing. I hope that has helped you also.

George: Yes, that really clears that matter up, thank you. I have sometimes used the rough figure of prophecies being something like 98% accurate. I imagine one can't really put a figure to it, but I imagine that might illustrate the principle of being mostly correct.

Yes, of course, yes.

Sarah: I was just thinking of—could I say 'evil' spirits and, as you have said to us there's always the balance of the good and the bad—those in spirit that are perhaps trying to lure others into their negative ways, who ...

Let me stop you my dear friend. There is no such thing as 'luring others'. When you come to our world, you naturally graduate to where you belong, but you do not have spirits who are trying to congregate others into their way of thinking or existing; they would automatically go there if that is their place.

Sarah: Ah, because I was just thinking of physical beings that say they're attracted to negative spirits, but it's actually their freewill—they're the ones that are creating that.

Yes.

Sarah: Yes. Ah right, that's good.

If they did not create that aura around them, those negative spirits could not touch. It is fear once more, fear and again looking into matters that they should not without the support and the help of those from our world. You understand?

Sarah: Yes. So if they are looking into things that they perhaps shouldn't look into, it's at this point that—what's exactly happening then?

They are creating their own reality.

Sarah: Ah, right.

Do you remember?

Jan: Like the rescue last week.

Yes.

Sarah: That's what I was thinking about really.

Yes I know, but again that is why I have spoken to you about thought. That thought, that fear, that darkness—that creates your reality, not only here, but in our world. That is why it is so important my dear friends, for you to censor every thought, to recognize the power of each thought. Do you understand?

(Affirmed)

If you surrounded yourself with love and light of spirit, these negative forces would not encroach upon your lives.

Richard: This is something I can vouch for—positive moments like last week after we had done it and moments when, like I've said before when I was in the flat and I got extreme positive love and surrounded myself with that, in total contrast to times before when I've been depressed and everything seems to get much darker and smaller (yes) and not very friendly, but it's purely created by oneself.

Yes, yes, you cannot blame others. After all, you have been given freewill; I cannot express this enough to you. It is the responsibility of each one of you, however you live this lifetime, you must take control, you must be in charge of your thinking. You have to, you cannot depend upon another for help if you do not allow that love and light to be part of your very being.

Sarah: When you talk about that 'negative force', is that energy that has been made negative by your thought. It isn't a force that exists as such, you've just turned the energy into negative with your thought. And as I have said, negative forces or thoughts will attract others of the same ilk, therefore making that energy stronger. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, I do.

Therefore you have that graduation of 'darkness', shall we call it; remember all is light and dark.

Sarah: Yes, I have a good understanding now, thank you.

Paul: When we attempt the materialization with Bonniol, is there anything else that we can do to help it along? I know that I try to just empty my mind and allow Bonniol to do the work. I'm wondering if there're any subtle changes that I could do to help it?

No, only to be positive, only to allow each one of you within the room to see it happening. Again, the power of the thought will create the energy that is needed for it to happen. Do not despair, all of these things take time and however positive most people are, you will find within a room such as this that there will be a few doubts or a little fear—perhaps not recognized, but nevertheless is still there. You understand? (Affirmed) So I would say to all of you, be patient. It is something that humankind is not good with—patience.

George: And I was much impressed with your teaching a long time ago about stigmatic holy ones and how that relates to power of thought and how those ones attract like-minded and that all adds to the effect. I felt that a wonderful illustration of power of thought.

Yes. You will always have those who feed from the energies, yes. But I thank you for your compliment. Thank you.

George: It was a powerful teaching and a powerful thought!

And a powerful thought. That, my dear friends is my gift to you this coming time. This time when people's thoughts are generally with others, when human beings in general are more accepting, more loving and more giving. I give to you the gift of thinking deeply about thought. And with those words my dear friends, know that I am always close by. I wish you a happy and peaceful holiday time and until we come together once again, I leave you cloaked in the love of spirit. (General thanks)

George: We are truly blessed.

Paul: Our loves goes with you.

Lilian: And we wish you a nice holiday and look forward to the New Year when we meet again.

Later in the evening one spoke through Sarah about the rescues through the year counselled by Lilian with team support.

George's Notes:

Power of Thought: This has been a central part of Salumet's teaching and of course rightly so. Thought underpins our reality and the entire creation, and as part of the creative process it lies at the cutting edge of evolution. Thought is at the seat of all existence, and so, as part of the perfect plan and as part of the creative force, our thinking makes its contribution. Love too is tremendously important. And as Salumet says: power of thought creates the love. Therefore mind / thought powers all.

Stigmatic Holy Ones: Ref. 31st July 2000, Salumet Book p122. The bleeding from the palms says much!

Nostradamus Prediction: Ref. 'The Centuries, II-28'. It is interesting that Salumet acknowledges the prediction and points out that that one is yet to come. That one is also described by Nostradamus as 'the penultimate named prophet', so it seems appropriate that he should appear quite late in terms of missions to this particular civilization. Time seems a little bit 'stretchy' where prophecy is concerned ... like a concertina that has accurate events printed on its folds so that the spacing may vary a little. Some Nostradamus prophecy is remarkably precise on the time scale while certain events are sometimes just a year or two out. This is one of the quirks of true prophecy.

Materialization: As explained, patience is called for and we still look ahead for that happening. But, as an interplanetary experiment, that will certainly be an unusual event when it happens.*

~17th December 2007~

There was in fact a meeting on this date. Briefly, what transpired was a delightful visit and lengthy chat via Eileen, from Ruth, Leslie's wife. She brought news of her own and Leslie's further work in spirit, and with mention of others known to us.

Much Love and thanks to YOU the reader! This particular transcript ends here, but lots more available here: www.salumetandfriends.org

~28th January 2008~ SALUMET

During our meeting of 21st January we received the welcome news that Salumet would return for this meeting:

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening. I am happy to join with you again.

George: We, too, are all delighted I know, to have you back.*

I thank you my dear friends for your love and your willingness to meet with us once again. I have been absent from you for just a short time—your time—but it is most welcome by me to have that breaking-off of connection in order that I might re-join to that space in time from whence I come. It gives me the opportunity to speak and also to seek counsel about many, many subjects; and as I come to you this time, I want to say to you my dear friends that each one of you has indeed grown spiritually and I know I say this to you often, but it is true—even when you are not aware of that growth, it has happened. And for some it may be one of life's experiences that has helped you grow, for others it has been an awakening to things spiritual, but no matter what the cause has been, let me reassure you all how much you have grown.

Lilian: Thank you for telling us that. Probably we are not aware of it as much as you.

No, no. You cannot always see it for yourselves, but you have indeed grown much and for this I say to you 'well done'. And let us begin this, another of your earthly years on a positive note, that you may all remain positive throughout whatever comes before you, whether it be troublesome in nature or whether it is something that you feel is good for your life; let it all come and be positive, because when you refuse to entertain fear, then indeed you become stronger and life becomes less of that struggle, which I have to say, belongs to you all. This coming year I would wish my dear friends that you feel that each one of you are inter-connected with each other, not only yourselves, but all of mankind, not only on this earthly plane, but throughout all of creation; that you can feel that connection more strongly, because without the knowledge of inter-connection, you would be lost I have to stay. Whether mankind realizes it or not, you cannot be one single entity. You understand what I say to you?

Lilian: Yes.

George: Yes, I'm sure we do and I love the way this time you spoke of returning to 'space and time' and this is something we all understand and accept so much better now.*

Yes, it has taken a little time for you, but, as you know, that has always been my purpose: to serve you simply, to continue to reiterate those truths that stand before you, but which are not always seen to be truth. I would like you to feel part of every planet, part of all existence, to become aware of that 'integration of energy'. That is what we will try to achieve in this coming year. It will be taken slowly and each of you will again experience it in different ways, but you will experience that coming together, that union of energy, which I know you feel within this room, but not always when you are away from this room; it then becomes a little more difficult for you, I feel, but that will be our goal in this coming year. I do not intend to say too much this time, but I am comfortable here with you so I will take only a question or two before I leave you to ponder my words and to continue with whatever comes to you next.

George: Yes. Our dear colleague, Jim, is unable to be here this evening. He has asked that a question from him be put to you (yes). If I could just read that: It concerns what is known on this planet by many as 'salvation'. He explains: it is a feature of the world's religions—the Saviour is of course Jesus who died on the cross. We are all saved from the dire consequences of our sins if we repent and ask for forgiveness and accept Jesus as our Saviour. (I would say this is very much a Church belief.) I understand that our sins include original sin, so no-one is excluded, but Salumet has taught us differently from this: we do not progress in this way, but billions of people are going to rethink on this important matter. In fact, it seems to me that the Church is offering salvation in the name of Jesus and no-one is excluded. If the story of Adam and Eve is myth and their sin in disobeying God is also, no doubt the authors of this had no clear ideas of reproduction and this was their explanation—the best they could do. I do not feel held by this any more than most, although one hears that there are groups in America which still have this belief. There are many side issues to this and all things could usefully be gathered up. The question would be non-specific, but Salumet's comments about it as a very fundamental issue would be invaluable.

I feel myself this is very much a Catholic Church item and the confessional is strong in the Catholic faith, where sins are confessed in the name of salvation. I'm sure Jim will be very grateful for any comments or discussion that you may have on that?

Yes. Our dear friend of whom you speak is of course still strongly attached to the belief systems that have been given to many of you and hold you, jail you to beliefs in order that many people have power over you. We have discussed on many occasions about religion and my views about them. You do not come to this life, and I quote his words, 'with original sin'. How can an all-loving energy produce something which is so imperfect? It takes from the human being the right to live a life of love and hope and to be dependent upon others for their—again I quote, 'salvation'. This cannot be. These words were purposefully used in order for mankind to be kept down. That power could be used to keep the masses under control. This you all know, but our dear friend Jim still struggles with all of these questions.

George: Yes, this may relate to close family and so many on the planet will be, I know, in this very situation. There will be many around who have the old influence, if I could call it that and I think those ...

And they have become their own jailers, because they cannot release these thoughts and they are negative thoughts. Whether they understand this or not, it is negative thinking to think that you come from a source which is all powerful and cruel—and it cannot be, it cannot be.

George: And of course in the days of the Roman Empire when the Church basis of this religion was founded, it was very important to the Empire to control millions of people.

Yes. And of course they took their information from all other sources of what you now term religions or beliefs. So, if only mankind with his intelligence now would use that knowledge to think for himself, to allow that spirit to come forward, he would realize that all is not as it should be. And I believe my dear friends I have told you that the world's religions are taking a back seat to what humankind is now beginning to know and to understand about himself and the source of good. You cannot be saved from any deed that you have committed. You cannot take on another person's—and again I will quote his words, 'sin'. That is where your personal responsibility comes into play.

Lilian: In some case it's almost a comfort zone, isn't it, if they think someone can save them from their sins?

It is very easy, do you not think that you can be absolved in one second of all that you have done in a lifetime? It does not make sense if you think about it logically. Why should what you call the 'evil' people of your world—and I of course would dispute that use of the word, but for your understanding, why should they be absolved, while there are many, many good people? What is their reward? It then becomes an unfair equation. You understand?

George: Yes. I think one of Jim's deep concerns has been that so many millions of people are bound to the church in this way, by this forgiving of sins.

Yes. He cannot change or alter what is here; only each individual can change and that, as I have told you in the past, takes time, but it is coming. Many people who have been taught in this way, and it is not only Christianity, it is widespread throughout many of your so-called religions. I await the day when there is no title to what people feel. The love that encompasses them, that all people feel part of each other with the responsibility only for their own actions, not those of another, or for one to step forward to absolve them from their deeds.

George: Yes, there is so much thinking for so many to do in rising above the traditions (yes) of so many years.

It is deep-rooted, but it is happening—be assured it is happening. It needs one small light within a darkened room for that knowledge to spread as the candle flame does. Gradually and slowly the room begins to light, in the same way it takes one person to spread the word of truth, as each one of you my dear friends has done in your daily lives. I am sure each one of you could tell a tale of who you have helped just by the use of your words.

Lilian: Thank you Salumet.

I would say to our dear friend Jim, to continue to look but do not be influenced by the words or the actions by those close to him, because I say to him, he is on the correct pathway. He will be helped, helped in his understanding, helped to realize that he cannot change another's thoughts as much as he would so desire to do so. He must remain positive in the knowledge that that Creative Force is all-loving and protective.

George: Wonderful to have your words on what I feel is a big world issue.

Yes, it is. It is part of the scheme of change that is taking place on your Earth at this time.

Lilian: Yes. We can see and hear in discussions that—it's either on our televisions, on the media of some kind—discussions which are very interesting. You can see the change a little bit.

Yes, it is happening, but until mankind feels an inter-connection with each other there will always be disagreement or disharmony; but it is up to you who know the truth to steadily move forward. Be assured that what you know, not what you believe, but what you know to be truth is carried forward in love and in light. That is the way forward. Light that small candle in the darkness and watch it grow.

Now my dear friends, as I leave you, I give thanks to that Great Creative Force for joining us together here in the name of love, that we might for this very short time feel the energy of each other. Take the knowledge that is given and continue to grow spiritually on your own individual pathways and learn to share with others that knowledge. For this I give thanks to you all.

Lilian: Thank you. Would it be okay to ask about a lady who has shown a wish to come, Valerie Hallet? I just wondered if you felt she was okay. I really don't know this lady very much. She's reading the book that George has written.

Yes. If all are prepared to welcome her, I have no objections.

Lilian: Thank you.

George's Notes:

Let us not forget that the deeper spirit that is Salumet's natural domain is both timeless and it is without space. And there are other beings of pure energy (formless beings of light) with whom he has counsel whilst away. On this occasion, and for the first time, he refers to his return to 'space in time'. Albert Einstein and modern scientists would more often use the term 'space-time'. Our world has been created in and occupies space-time, whilst the deeper spirit does not. At last, the terms of science are seen to move closer to the spiritual picture for a fuller understanding by those of us living in the 21st-century

~4th February 2008~ SALUMET

Before the session commenced, the group were discussing the early evolution of humans, possibly starting with animal species prior to ape-like form.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I am happy to join with you once again.

Sarah: It's nice to have you back, Salumet, thank you.

Lilian: We wondered if you had been listening in on our conversation just a short while ago.

I understand your conversation, not only here, but in your daily lives also. I wish to say to you my dear friends that it is heart-warming to listen and understand how you take all information given. You absorb that information, but it is right that you should at some time question knowledge; I have always imparted this to you. Therefore it makes me glad when there are discussions among yourselves, with various comments. I would just say this to you: I will wait until there are a few more of you present in order that we can discuss a little further about humankind.

Lilian: That would be nice.

You, of course, understand that the whole of this planet has evolved, but what we have not discussed is the reincarnation of humankind and the reason behind that reincarnation. It has an impact on what you were speaking about, so I will return to it for you and hopefully we can clarify any thoughts that you may have.

Lilian: Thank you.

Because you are few in number this time, I will take only questions and remain with you for a short time only and hopefully when we come together with more people, we can have a longer evening of information. Do you have any questions this time?

Paul: I've got one. I've always been interested in the story of Joan of Arc and how this farm girl was able to rise through and eventually lead the French armies in the 15th Century in France. Her rise to leadership was partly because of her visions and clairvoyance that convinced people that she was sent by God—those were the words at the time—to become a sort of saviour of France when she was at war against the English. I think it has fascinated me because—I wondered about how humans are usually influenced by spirit and I can't quite see—I think when they become military leaders, I wonder about it, whether they're misinterpreting their guidance or whether it is necessary sometimes to fight in combat situations, because otherwise some humans would dominate the world too much.

Yes, I understand your questions. Firstly, you have to understand that the person you speak of had already chosen her lifetime; it was not an easy life to live. No matter what time in the planet's existence, there are those souls who choose to come for more difficult lives; this is part of their own spiritual growth. That is the first point I wish to make to you. For the wars, the cruelty, the leadership, you have to remember that you live on a planet where learning is uppermost. You must remember that mankind creates wars, not spirit, but, as you say, sometimes it becomes necessary for humans to be involved in some form of what you would term 'wars', because mankind has created these things for himself. Therefore you have to have leaders or strong human beings, who can become involved in order for peace to reign. This may be confusing to many of you and I understand why that is so, but throughout your history, man has fought against his brothers, unnecessarily so. Every nation has been involved at some time or other in conflict with his neighbours. You wonder about the influence of spirit on the one person of whom we speak: she was indeed influenced from spirit to try to create a situation which was able to sustain a peaceful country, but in order to do so, she had to become involved. I would say to you, she was influenced correctly at that time in history (yes), in the same way as your leaders today in this world have to take decisions which are not basically their own true nature, but because they have become leaders, it is necessary to do so.

Paul: Yes I understand that.

You understand. It does not mean that they have to lose their own spirituality, but they have to do what is best for the whole. I know it is difficult, it is always difficult to place into human words the workings of the spirit.

Paul: But I think that one, Joan of Arc, did go down in history. Well, she was later given various titles, a saint and ...

That was only because of the religions of the time. She was no more—I do so wish that these titles would be dropped from humankind. She chose her destiny, and although each one of you do so, there are points in a life where you meander along that pathway, but that does not mean it is not your chosen path. You understand?

Paul: Yes.

Sarah: You get leaders like, for example, Mugabe who, many believe is not being a good leader, but we shouldn't criticize, it's not our place to criticize, but it seems hard—I mean maybe he's doing what he's doing for other people to learn, but that's quite a difficult one to swallow really.

Lilian: The good comes out of the bad.

You cannot have black without white; you cannot have that darkness and that lightness apart, because they both belong to the same energy. And it is how it is used, that is the important point, what the human being decides to do with that spiritual energy. And there is so much fear in this world that it creates more problems. That is why my dear friends I urge you always not to be fearful, because it is a negative emotion, and as humankind you are emotional beings.

Rod: I would imagine the fear now is increasing because of our advancement in media—televisions, paper—and it's repeated over and over and over each day. If you come across an old person, they look at the television and they get really upset by that day's news and the fear must be enhanced, and possibly it's not a very good thing then, from what you're saying; we're sort of making ourselves worse.

You cannot, not live in this world, because you are already here. What you have to realize is that you are responsible for the way that you react to every given situation—that is your spiritual responsibility. You may be surrounded by fear and evil, as you like to call it—I prefer to say misguidedness—but you have the ability my dear friends never to be fearful, because, after all, you will continue for all time, so what is there to be fearful of? Look to the wider picture. Always look to the spiritual aspect of all things.

Sarah: Yes, those were some good words, Salumet.

Rod: That was fantastic.

And if I may say to our dear friend who asked the original question, I would say: do not dwell on what has gone. Give your thoughts to what is to come, live in the now and do not question too much about what has already passed and in that way, you, as a spiritual being, will grow and grow. Give your thinking to those in need now. 'Now', that is the important word.

Paul: Thank you.

I hope it has helped you.

Paul: It has, thank you.

Sarah: Those words were very good.

Lilian: Yes, interesting.

Rod: I am always very, very—not puzzled, but whatever question is put to you, and we go back thousands of years, George comes up with somebody hundreds of years ago, Paul comes up—and you are able to go to that area, that person and you know the facts. It's like a computer! That amazes me.

Sarah: It's better than a computer, Rod!

(Laughs)

Yes. That is indeed new technology. I have to say, I am just a little older! Yes.

(More laughs)

Rod: You go back very quickly and come up with the answer very quickly.

Because truth does never, never change.

Lilian: Can you take another question?

I will take one more.

Lilian: I was wondering about, on this planet we have brains and we use our brains, and we have a mind which belongs to the spirit. On other planets, probably much more evolved than we are, would there be any species at all that would not need a brain, they would only need a mind, because they were very spiritual people, very knowledgeable on spiritual matters. Is there a planet like that?

If you had only the mind, you would be spirit. There would be no necessity for a form of some kind.

So no, no matter what form, there is always a form of brain, not necessarily the same as humans on this planet, but all the same, there has to be something functional other than the spirit mind.

Lilian: Yes, obviously that's simple now you say it. We wouldn't be here if we ...

No, if everything was all spiritual, you would be in spirit. You understand?

Lilian: Yes, thank you.

Sarah: Bonniol (from Planet Aerah) told us about—on a planet they had something like mushrooms, (the Mushroom people) but they must also have some form of brain then.

Yes, it is an intelligence, perhaps a better word than brain; it is an intelligence that is used. But, yes, if you have form, there has to be some form of intelligence, but once that is discarded and you are pure mind, then of course, you are in the spirit realms. Has that helped you?

Lilian: Yes, yes, thank you. But going back to Paul's question, I wonder if Winston Churchill in a much more recent time, he was influenced from spirit on a peaceful level to help.

All leaders would be influenced to make the best decision, but of course, with freewill they can override what spiritual information is given to them. That is why our dear friend wondered why Joan, as she was called then, was receiving the correct information.

Lilian: Yes. It is just that I had read that this particular man had had his quiet times and I thought: 'yes'.

Yes he was influenced, but so are all leaders in your world. But because we try to influence, doesn't mean that those thoughts are accepted.

Sarah: Eileen, who you are using at the moment, she's just read a book where characters on the television are imparting information about universes and various such things, so they are also probably being influenced, and they're in an influential position where they can pass messages on as well.

Yes, the more aware, the more open, the more dedicated you become to the spiritual way of life, then you go beyond the realms of this Earth. Your own knowledge will take you further; that is part of spiritual awareness. It is open to each one of you my dear friends. So, accept or do not accept; that is entirely up to each one of you. If any information does not sit well with you, then disregard it for the time being. It does not mean it is right or wrong, it means only that you are not ready to accept that information, and you never will whilst upon this planet accept all that is available to you. You already know how diverse information can be and it is up to each individual, either as part of a group like this one or by themselves, to decide what they accept as Truth. I can come to you my dear friends with many words, but remember also, I have told you, if you cannot accept my words, do not be concerned, it will come to you when you are ready.

Sarah: I have to say that everything you've said, Salumet, I haven't need to query—it just seems right what you tell us.

Yes, because I waited until such time as each one of you was ready to open up to develop and to accept the words of truth.

Sarah: When you say 'each one of us', you mean each one of our spirits—you've waited many, many lifetimes then to bring us together?

Yes. You have all ... even now you are developing at your own pace. Everyone within this room now and the others who are not present, have your own individual development. It matters not what you feel physically, but it is what you are accepting as spirit; that is what shines through to the physical form—it is that spirit within that shines. Again we return to the word 'responsibility'. You are all responsible for your own thinking, your own actions and, of course, the acceptance of any truths given to you. So you see my dear friends, that as your awareness grows, so does the responsibility grow also. You cannot then deny what you know as truth.

Sarah: That is true because when you do something that you know hasn't been quite right ...

You know.

Sarah: You do definitely know.

Yes, and therefore the responsibility is much greater. Now my dear friends ...

Rod: Just butting in there a bit quickly, Salumet, it's no good asking for forgiveness, as you said, to somebody on Earth?

Do not ask for forgiveness.

Rod: You can't ask for forgiveness for that sin?

You are responsible for whatever action you do; you cannot be absolved just like that. There has to be cause and effect, that is the natural law and that cannot be changed.

Sarah: You did say, at least if you recognize what you've done wrong, you are half way there.

Yes, that recognition is the beginning of understanding. Yes, of course. There is so much, is there not, my dear friends to think about? When you feel you know a little, you suddenly realize you know very little.

Sarah: Yes, that is true.

Yes.

Rod: As George says, the more you know, the more you know you don't know.

Yes, yes, it is true.

Lilian: Thank you once again.

Sarah: It's been very useful.

But we will discuss why evolution takes place in the way that it does and hopefully it will be clearer for all of you.

Lilian: Yes, we look forward to that.

(General thanks)

George's Notes:

Joan of Arc, Maid of Orléans (1412-1431), broke with French troops, the siege of Orléans and drove the English from the Loire towns and remarkably turning the tide on the war with the English. She was said to hear heavenly voices urging her to save France. She was finally captured and burned at the stake on the trumped up charge of witchcraft and heresy.

~12th February 2008~ SALUMET

It should be mentioned that during the discussion about human evolution prior to last week's meeting, the subject of reincarnation was also included.

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As we join together this time I feel your energies. I thank you for your welcome and say to you that each time I come I feel that love bond strengthen; for this I thank you.

George: We are very pleased that that is so, all of us.

I am pleased to see that there are more of us this time.

Lilian: Yes, that's right.

Yes. We spoke last time of evolution and we had some questions from our dear gentleman friend (Paul) and I did say that we would discuss it when there were a few more present; I think this may well be an opportune time. As you know and I have said to you, the essence of your life, not only human life, but all life, is to evolve. This I know you all easily accept. We also know that there are many diverse opinions about this subject, not only from our world, but amongst your own scientists and we have discussed it previously, have we not? (Agreed) Yes. Our dear friend asked the question about the evolution of mankind, is that not so? (Agreed) Yes.

George: Yes, indeed. I think we're fairly clear on the biological evolution going back as far as what we term 'apes' walking on two legs and their ape-like predecessors that walked on four, but I think we have no knowledge beyond that. Please correct me if I'm wrong in this.

Yes. We will talk a little further, but firstly let me say this to you my dear friends, that ever since time when spirit communication has taken place—and that has taken place since the arrival of humankind who had understanding—when that point of evolution had been reached, then we in spirit were able to communicate much more easily. You know my dear friends that there exists not only this planet, but many, many planets throughout many, many universes. We also discussed that that life form on many other planets is not the same as this one. Within this galaxy, this Earth planet is a place of learning and evolving. All of existence belongs to the same essence, whether you belong to the category of human or animal or angelic existence—and there are many more—no matter which one you belong to, originally we all stem from that same essence. This I know you fully understand, do you not?

Lilian: Yes.

If you do not, please let us discuss it now.

George: Yes I think we all understand the essence, but we probably don't understand the fuller nature, should I say, of that essence or perhaps how the essence relates to what I might call the 'Mind of God'—the 'Creative Principle'.

The Creative Principle, that is much better. Yes, all of creation is part of that greater, shall we say 'mind', just to help you in your understanding. On every planet which comes to your focus, there has to be a beginning and we begin at the very basis of existence, and this your scientists are now beginning to realize, that even the tiniest of existence has intelligence. It is this intelligence within all kingdoms which unites us. I have told you that the angelic kingdom, especially the higher realms of angelic beings, have never walked upon this earthly plane, nor any other planet, because they are belonging to a different branch of energy. Let us speak of 'branches of energy' to keep it simple for you. Humankind has indeed evolved, but what you do not understand is that that strain of evolution belongs to those who have intelligent understanding. The question asked by you last time my dear friend was: 'Can we evolve into other animals—do animals evolve to human beings?'

Paul: Yes.

Yes, that was your question.

Paul: That's right, yes.

Yes. There are many different avenues of evolution and you cannot change from one to the other, and much has been spoken within your world that from the tiniest, tiniest life, man has been created. That is not entirely true, because there are evolutionary trails of life which do not intermingle. I have spoken of this before.

Paul: Yes.

Yes. Do you have a question at this point?

Paul: Just to clarify then. There is a completely separate evolution for the animal kingdoms.

Yes. The elemental kingdoms, the animal kingdoms, the human kingdoms, although we do belong to the one essence and that cannot alter; there has to be that trail of evolution separately, for these things to take place.

Sarah: So that includes apes and monkeys as well?

They follow the line towards human evolution, but they would not intermingle with the elementals—the sylphs, or the elemental kingdom, although much has been spoken that this is so. You have to go from the beginning and this is what others do not understand, because they do not have that knowledge.

Paul: I wondered about native American-Indian beliefs about 'power animals' and I wondered because people have particular animals that seem to give them strength at times at times (yes), whether that was due to a past life as that animal?

I think you have to remember my dear friend that you have the power to transmute energy and that may be one explanation for why the connection—and do not forget that that race of people lived closely with the animal kingdom, therefore the blending of energy of spirit would be such a strong one.

Lilian: I remember Bonniol telling us that they had evolved from two species, so it would be a blending of the energies?

They would have evolved because they had chosen to evolve in that way. This is what you do not fully understand. When we have spoken of evolution, all that you know is what your earthly scientist have discovered or feel they know. They do not know of the spirit within. You understand?

Paul: I think, yes...

But remember energy can be transmuted into anything that you desire. So therefore, those from our world, if they wish to come to you in some evidential way, can transmute their energy into being a butterfly, a cat, an animal of any kind, but it is a transient energy. Do you begin to understand? But the line of evolution for the human being is one that is slightly different, but it would belong to the line of the great apes and that line of animal. You understand?

Jan: Why spiritually did man, evolving from those great apes, why did he spiritually almost 'branch off' into a human away from an ape spirit?

It is called the evolution of the mind of spirit, the understanding and intelligence of the spirit.

Jan: If somebody could write a book on it, where did we consciously decide, that because the way we were evolving, our intelligence ...

Because, to exist upon this planet, you had to evolve to exist.

Jan: But we left our cousins as they were...

Because they have not evolved enough. Those who remain in that state, in the same way as you have children within your schools, if they do not learn, they remain in one class while another will grow and have more knowledge.

Jan: I perfectly understand that on a physical level and how would we have evolved from apes...

But you cannot separate physical from spiritual. You cannot have that separateness, because they go hand-in-hand.

Jan: So, basically really, the apes being our ancestors were more than happy to stay as they were and how should be...

Some, not all, otherwise there would be no evolution. Energy is ever-moving, ever-growing, but these decisions you have to remember are made from spirit.

George: I would imagine that an important part of the biological evolution would be the development of brain (yes) and the capability of its transmitter mode.

Yes. You can speak of physical improvements all that you like.

Jan: But I'm trying to get to the spiritual side of things.

Yes, it is the spirit that decides.

Jan: So the spirit world decided that some of the apes would split off and evolve in the way we have. So the spirit decided.

The spirit decides.

Jan: Right, I understand perfectly now. Thank you.

Yes. Always the problem is that you see things on a physical level and it is very difficult to try to put into physical words natural laws. That is always our problem to make things simplified for you.

Sarah: So, Salumet, going back to the apes, if an ape spirit at some stage now, decided it wanted to grow, would it the next time come back—it couldn't just suddenly come back as a human being, or could it?

No. It would be ... it would go back to that animal soul, which then realizes how much it has grown. It is only when there is love-bonds with humans that animals have that interaction and then the spirit within goes forward. It is not really a conscious decision as you would know it, it is a natural evolution.

Lilian: It seems to me that if we watch the wild animals, they are not so different to what we are.

There will always be leaders and followers and the leaders of the animal kingdom are the ones who are moving forward. This does not take place in an instant, this happens gradually over time.

Lilian: Really they are as intelligent as we are, only in a different way.

Jan: Their intelligence is their instinct (yes). Their instinct is what they survive on (yes). We've come away from instinct—we've lost that. Well, we haven't lost it but we have just sought out our intelligence as our driving force as opposed to our instincts and the instinct is what keeps the animal kingdom, I believe, as a whole consciousness in their spirit world. They live in the moment, they don't live in the past or the future, they live in the moment (yes) and that's the difference.

Humankind has become very analytical much to their own detriment.

Jan: Yes.

Yes, that natural instinct, that instinct to survive. That is why so often you hear: the strongest will survive, in the animal kingdom.

Jan: It's a law of survival that is so balanced (yes) that, I believe as humans, we've completely lost that balance and we're striving for it, as is this group, to feel that you are in balance once again. But animal kingdom feel that all the time. They don't judge when a lion is attacking a buffalo and he is being eaten alive, he doesn't judge that lion, he's just ...

And that is the law of all existence (yes). Yes. That is what I would wish you to dwell upon, to go a little more deeply into what existence is about.

Rod: Could I just say that we do get some beautiful pictures on the television and some of them have been looking into an ape's face and looking into their eyes and there seems to be a very deep thought pattern going on behind those eyes.

Jan: You can see into his soul.

Rod: Yes and I often think there's something there they can't give and we can't see. I would love—I don't suppose you can say if there is some inner depth there?

Of course. There is intelligence, there is spiritual intelligence, but they cannot express in the same way as you of humankind, because once man has developed speech, a lot of the instincts they have are lost.

Sarah: And of course the other difference between us—you've always said to us it's wrong to kill, it's wrong to kill anything and yet the animal kingdom, they wouldn't survive a lot of them if they didn't kill, so that's a little...

Jan: But they very rarely kill their own kind. Sometimes apes do...

Sarah: Some animals do, don't they, if it's a rival's litter they'll kill those.

Paul: They're also capable of altruism as well, protecting other animals, not just their own.

Sarah: That's true, too.

Yes. You cannot judge another species, because you do not understand the thinking or the instincts behind it. In the same way you cannot judge another human being, because you do not have that wider picture. You therefore cannot judge the animal kingdom.

Sarah: The animals that have been domesticated—cats and dogs—is that their way of growing as well?

Yes, yes, that love-bond is not broken, but after a while they also return to the pool of animal energy. It is a difficult subject for you to understand on a deep level.

Lilian: Will we be able to understand it more when we go back to spirit?

If you so desire.

Lilian: Yes. That's good.

Paul: I think we've touched on it that nature spirits are on the same evolutionary path as the angelic realm.

Yes. They can evolve into the angelic kingdoms; that is part of their evolution.

Paul: So what would be the pathway for our cats and dogs then? Where are they going?

They will always belong to animal kingdom, but they have the ability to interact with humankind—to feel that connection with humankind, to help humankind; and they will remain because of that affection and love-bond for some time to come, but then they also will return to the energy of the animal kingdom, to then go forward on another pathway. Is that helpful to you?

Paul: Yes. Thank you.

Rod: Could I just ask one little thing: in the world today we've got people who are facially quite different—Japanese, Chinese, Mongolians, Europeans as we know them—different facial features. Does this mean to say they originated from a different kind of ape in the past?

Yes, it has to evolve from somewhere. Yes, yes, that is a simple answer.

George: I think in the beginning, Salumet, you mentioned the intelligence of the individual cell.

Yes—memory and intelligence also. Remember, too, that cells have memory.

George: Yes. So I imagine there's a general influence from spirit regarding cells apart from the more specific and understandable influence via brain. Are there two forms of influence from spirit, or does the cell intelligence not have a particular connection?

All intelligence stems from spirit so of course spirit has an influence.

George: Yes. So there would be this general influence concerning all structures as well as the particular influence through our wonderful brains.

Yes, and of course the brain is the physical aspect, but yes, intelligence comes from spirit, is influenced by spirit, but the human brain plays its part of course. One without the other would leave you non-human. You understand?

George: Yes. It's ...

All organisms have intelligence. It may not be the intelligence that you understand as human beings, but there is intelligence.

Jan: Some organisms, if I'm right, have a collective intelligence as opposed to individual intelligences.

Yes, you are correct.

Jan: So their collective intelligences work purely on instinctive intelligence (yes). Turning to Rod - We discussed, do you remember a couple of weeks ago, the three of us discussed just that, after the meeting.

Rod: The small insects.

Jan: Yes. And if I can ask another question please? If I can make it sort of joined as it's the only way really I can get my point across. When spirit decided, for want of a better word, that we were going to 'branch off', if I can use that term, from the apes and our brains were going to evolve, from spirit's point of view, how did man do? When spirit looks down and says, 'Well, we have set him off on his way, he came out of the trees, he learned how to light fires, hunt, everything that we've actually done over millions of years—when spirit looks down, how do they view how man has done?

I understand your question my dear friend. I understand what you are trying to say, but to make a comment would be very judgemental—that we do not do. Mankind comes to this planet, to learn, to grow and, because of freewill, to make many, many mistakes. The most intelligent being upon this planet does not make him superior. Therefore, to make judgement is wrong; I have told you this on many, many occasions. So what we would do from spirit is try to encourage right thought in order that that mind can evolve in the correct way, but we do not make judgements as you would suppose. You understand?

Jan: I do, I do and maybe it was a pretty naive question.

Not at all.

Rod: You were looking for a progress report.

Jan: I was looking for a progress report, yes (yes), because, you know, we know ourselves that we've been pretty—we have made mistakes.

And is that not good that the human mind can make those judgements for himself?

Jan: Yes.

Yes, so would you not say that that is a step in the right direction?

Jan: Yes.

Yes, thank you.

Rod: And I suppose if you look at when we came out of those trees and now we're flying out into space and we're sending stuff right out with satellites going around the Earth and what have you. In that way there's been some wonderful progress. They're very clever people and with input from spirit, obviously—that's where it mostly comes from, I guess.

Paul: But we're still in our infancy.

But we're not impressed by clever people.

(Lots of laughter)

We wish people to look inwardly to recognize what they are, not how clever their brain is. The brain is just part of the uniform, it is not the spirit.

Rod: That brings us back down to size, doesn't it?

George: Returning to the cell intelligence (yes), perhaps the science of kinesiology is a demonstration of collective cell intelligence.

Yes, I would say you are correct. What your scientists do not know about the workings of the cell, is just how intelligent the cells are. There is much more to be discovered.

George: Yes, wonderful. And I think I would be right in saying that the principle of kinesiology is not generally and widely accepted on this planet!

Not yet, but we are hoping to make improvements in all manner of things. These things are not new in your world—they have been lost, but they are things that mankind has already used, has had the knowledge of for some length of time, but to you humankind now, it all seems like something new. We are trying to move you slowly backwards, not to the animal state, because with intelligence you can use it properly for good.

Jan: You are now trying to open our spirit channels. I know what you mean by not going backwards, but in a way we've got to step one step back and look within again, which everybody has stopped actually doing until the last sort of ten years, in my opinion, and now it's widely spoken about and as we've mentioned before. So, yes we all need to step one step back into ourselves.

Paul: And sort of to the land as well.

Jan: Absolutely and feel that ...

Paul: ...not so much concrete.

Jan: ... and feel part of ...

Rod: Like the Indians.

But before you can be part of anything else, you have to go inwards, you have to know yourselves, you have to be content with that knowledge, before then you can integrate with the rest of what you call nature or the animal kingdom or another human being. Until you have the knowledge of what and who you are, all of these other things are surplus to your requirements.

Jan: We have to know our own attributes first before we can know somebody else's.

Yes, and then you become that very essence of energy, which you will then shine and show to all that is around you; then you truly begin to show that you are spirit first and foremost.

Sarah: And for those who are ill, if they were to go more inwards, they could perhaps see why they're ill?

Yes, of course. Again it is that the human brain almost interferes with what can take place, because the human consciousness is always looking for a negative to the positive. Again we speak of light and darkness and although they cannot be separated, they can at least be recognized.

Sarah: So that's why spiritual healing works so well, because it goes straight to the spirit, which is where we should be trying to get to ourselves.

When the spirit is touched, then healing can take place, yes. Now I will ask our dear gentleman friend if what I have told him this time satisfies his questioning.

Paul: Yes, I understand much more about the animals now and human evolution. Thank you. Could I just squeeze in one more? (Yes) It seems like the dolphins and maybe whales seem to be—I wondered if they are a slightly different case to the other animals, because 'dolphins' it's said have got even more developed brains than us. So are they perhaps...

But they belong also to a different line of evolution.

Paul: Right, so they've got a different one again to other four legged animals, for example.

Yes.

Jan: They are an older knowledge—they've been here far longer. Their evolutionary line is so much older than a lot of land mass animals.

Yes.

Sarah: When you say that the animals, when they progress and when they go back into the pool they can go forward. As long as that animal is of a particular line, will they reincarnate at all and if their spirit were to come back again, would they always come back as the same animal?

This is where we have many contradictions in your world and those who come and tell you of these things can only express and explain to you their own knowledge of such things. And this is a deep subject because we are going back to the very essence of all being. We are speaking here of creatures who come to this planet for a learning experience, no matter whether they are humankind, of the aquatic milieu, whether they are angelic beings, no matter what, they are here to grow. But whatever growth is made is never lost. What I can say to you is that once you have travelled the road of evolution, you will then want to continue along that road. Does that make sense to you? (Affirmed) You would not evolve into humankind and then wish to return as a wasp. (Laughter)

Sarah: That's actually why I asked about the animals, because I wondered if say, a wasp, then wanted to come back as something with perhaps more intelligence or had evolved a little bit further.

But it would be within that animal kingdom.

Jan: It has no experience of any other thing ever, ever. It has not experienced anything other than a wasp.

Sarah: So it would come back as a wasp?

Jan: Yes.

Sarah: Always come back as a wasp?

Jan: Yes.

And then evolve from there.

Sarah: But evolve into what?

Jan: King wasp, queen wasp!

Lilian: Evolve back in spirit.

No.

Jan: It wouldn't need to evolve.

Yes. This is where confusion begins, because as humankind, that brain is thinking, 'it must want to do this, it must want to do that, it must evolve to this, that or the other'.

Jan: It doesn't need to.

It does not need to.

Paul: It's perfect.

Sarah: Ah, yes, okay. I just wondered when you said that it will continue to evolve, I wondered ...

It can evolve in spirit. It will return to the pool of energy from whence it came.

Sarah: Yes.

You understand?

Sarah: Yes. So, once it had become the 'king' wasp, if you like ...

Jan: No, that was just ...

Sarah: Yes, I know, but then it wouldn't need to come back again?

I feel you are trying to make too much of the evolution of these creatures. I think you need to rather travel along the evolution of your own kind for understanding.

Sarah: Right.

Jan: Because the wasp belongs to that one consciousness again, the wasp, he's not an individual, he doesn't need to experience life again; he experiences whatever he needs to experience in spirit once he's gone as part of one essence, one whole. He doesn't need to return here again.

Sarah: I can understand that.

Jan: Salumet explained to me once when I asked him the question; that our domestic animals do, because of the love-bond that they have with us. They can return again. They have come onto a different path almost than that one consciousness, because they're individuals and they do have individual brains, personalities—because my two dogs have come back to me the second time. They're totally different breeds, they're different genders, but they've come back to me again, because that love cannot be separated. But the wasp doesn't need to have that love with us as individuals, because they're part of that one consciousness.

And remember that love is energy; please do not forget love is energy, it is the strongest form of energy in this world.

George: Could I just go back to dolphins? They seem to express joy and love and they have a healing property. People who swim with dolphins are often healed in some way (yes). I wonder if that healing ...

Because they exude the energy of love—it is simple and again, as human beings you try to complicate all of these conditions. These animals—dolphins or no matter what, who interact with humans, only want to interact in love, and when that takes place, there is great healing.

George: I can easily accept that because they seem to exude love.

Yes, that is their purpose on this planet. Everything has a place, everything has a time. You cannot change the laws of existence.

Rod: I said, I think last year or the year before, there are children being born now who are being given more spiritual knowledge.

They are not given, they have earned it.

Jan: They're being impressed.

Yes. They are beings with that knowledge. They are not given it, they have earned it.

Rod: But they will probably make things open more.

They have the opportunity but again with freewill, you can never be sure. But you are here to experience joy, you are here to grow, you are here to be Spirit, but as always with freewill and this intelligence that you are all so keen to speak of, there are many, many mistakes.

Jan: I feel I should apologize tonight Salumet, for jumping in, but I...

No, do not apologize, my dear friend. I am always happy when you question anything, because then the opportunity is given to you all to think for yourselves, to feel for yourselves, to either accept or not, what is given to you.

Jan: When I'm talking to you in this way, the feelings that I have and the clarity that I feel, that's my spirit coming forward, isn't it?

Yes.

And that's when I can approach the subject and—well, it is clarity.

Yes and that is good for you.

Sarah: Going back to these animals and the love-bond, I was just thinking that my daughter is not well at the moment and neither are her guinea pigs and they are very attached to each other, all three of them and ...

Because they are feeding from her energy.

Sarah: So they are becoming ill because she is unwell?

Yes.

Sarah: And if she were to get better, would the guinea pigs get better?

They should do if she gives out the right energy. You cannot have a love-bond with an animal or another human being and not have some response.

Sarah: Right, thank you for that.

Rod: I notice when you come through, and I never get it normally, but when you come through I get a strong love feeling that I've never had before into that corner (where Eileen sits)—incredible, it's a lovely feeling.

I thank you my dear friend. I hope that each one of you, when you leave this room, feels the connection between all of you.

Lilian: Yes, I'm sure we all do.

And I do try to bring to you some love, some understanding from our world, in order that you may go forward and feel that you have gained something from these meetings.

Jan: It has certainly enriched all our lives beyond expression.

George: We certainly do gain from these meetings—yes, wonderful.

Sarah: It always feels very comfortable in here when you are with us, Salumet. Well, when you're not here, this room always feels very good, but especially when you come through, it always feels very good.

Thank you my friend, it is good. And I know when I join with you, even sometimes when some of you are feeling a little low within your human shells, that that spirit is soon lifted, that all of you unite to make the brightest light, and for this I will be always grateful to you.

Sarah: Thank you very much.

Paul: Thank you.

And now, my dear friends, as I take my leave from you, let us give thanks to that Great Force that we know of as God but is Love, that is all things and say, until we come together again, we say thank you.

Lilian: A big thank you.

George: Yes, wonderful.

Paul: Yes—lots to ponder.

Sarah: You wish the whole world could sit in on these meetings, don't you?

George's Notes:

1. Creative Principle: Creative Principle, Creative Force, God ... there are many names / titles in our literature. We know that Salumet's preference is for Creative Principle or Force. I feel a point is that Creative Principle or Creative Force are expressions that link to the entire creation of its Creator, and is understood throughout all the cosmos. 'God' is much revered here on this particular planet and derives from Earth's antiquity, and continues of course to be recognised by all. Salumet is not of this Earth, nor even pertaining to this one galaxy. That he looks to the whole of existence (not just this one minute corner) and to the Creative Principle that made and loves all, is understandable indeed!
2. Single cell intelligence: Exactly as Salumet says, the intelligence is a modern finding (re-discovery) and kinesiology utilises that intelligence to find out about illness, diet etc. through muscle response (body interrogation bypassing brain).
3. Transmuting energy: It is quite well documented that angels (and elementals) can present themselves in any form to suite the situation. The implication is (and again there are accounts) that sufficiently developed humans can also do this. As stated, it is transient, not a part of any evolution.

~18th February 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

Please forgive the slight delay this time as there are others who wish to look upon this meeting. I am always happy to include those from our world who wish to learn for themselves what takes place at these meetings.

Lilian: That's interesting.

George: It's so nice that we can all gather from above and below, as it were, on these occasions.

Yes. Sometimes it depends upon your light, your energy, whether we can allow this to take place; but, as you know, there is always around each one of you your own helpers and they will always stand close to you, no matter what degree of energy you are giving out. But it is what we call the 'onlookers', where extra energy and love is needed. Your energies here this time, your light of love, is most strong and it gives us all the opportunity to say 'thank you' for this, because of course, I say again, without your love, your energies, your devotion, these meetings could not take place. I felt that last time has brought to each one of you a little more to think about, to think about your own space, your own time, and what is happening within that time.

George: It is a great encouragement for us to think more widely and not only about the biological side of things, but the most important influence that comes to us from spirit in relation to evolution.

Yes. Although all of these things are interesting for you, they, of course, are not the essential parts of the teaching. All of your questions, all of my answers, hopefully brings you to the realization that there is more to life than most people can see, but my dear friends, we have reached a point where, no matter what I say to you, the important thing is that each one of you takes that knowledge and 'lives' that knowledge, because in the expression of that knowledge and love, that is how you grow. I could say to you a thousand of your words, but if you do not take those words and utilize them for good, what is the purpose? You understand? (Affirmed) Therefore it is essential my dear friends that we give some time to going within each individual and to realize who and what you are, to never forget what the essence of life is about—and that is love, the expression of love in your daily lives, not the emotional love that you all are so fond of, but the spiritual love which comes from within. I have shown you mind connection that comes far from your earthly world. You have communications where we have told you a little of life in our world. I have declared to you truths for this world and also denials of words which have been spoken. All of these things are indeed good for your growth, but there comes a time when we have to have fewer words and more action. You understand what I am saying to you?

Lilian: Yes, exuding love a little more, we do—each one maybe?

You have to now live lives as spiritual beings; you have to put to one side the human side and show and live Spirit. I therefore say to you my dear friends that I will continue to remind you often of the truths I have given, but I may not always be with you quite so often, but that does not mean that I am not aware of you. But we wish now, for you to develop your own spirits. You have reached a stage where you have gone through learning, finding knowledge of spirit, learning of truths of spirit, but you have to know yourselves, it is important. It is important for the work to go forward and that, my dear friends I must give all of you some credit for, because each one of you works so well in extending that truth which I have brought to you. I believe I have said on many occasions, there is no new truth—it has always been with you—and now it is your responsibility to utilize those truths, to help others when appropriate, never to judge, and to feel, FEEL with the spirit within, and that is different from feeling with the emotions. You have to take control of those emotions and that I would say to our dear gentleman friend (Rod) who is new or newer to our group than others that he still finds that part most difficult, because he is an emotional human being, as you all are, but to allow the spirit to come forth, you must take command of that emotional being. Have you any questions about that?

Rod: That's a tough statement. Are you talking to me, Salumet, in that case? (Yes) Yes, I'm an emotional person and they do overwhelm me a bit (yes) but to say—I don't know if I could contain them, I've got to I suppose. I was trying to take in your other things, to conquer fear (yes), to push out love. Now I often wonder whether I push out the right love. I lie in bed and push out this love to the universe as you tell me to.

Yes. But it is emotional. It is coming from the emotional being rather than that pure love, without becoming involved. There is a difference, but it comes in time. I feel that you could take examples from our dear friends within the room.

Rod: Yes, you're right there.

We all have emotions here, but to a certain extent they are contained.

Rod: Yes, I realize this when you do the rescues—and I realize that. They overwhelm me, but I must try and ...

George: There is a sadness in the room this evening. Our dear friend, Jim, who is now in spirit (yes). We know that he is in the light...

Although he was seeking, all of you have helped him; by being here with you it helped to secure some knowledge of what lay ahead, although he was a little reluctant spiritually to leave that old body behind, but of course he accepted it as you know. But he will be helped.

Rod: He's probably asked a thousand questions since he's been up there, I expect.

He has had to rest for a while. Yes, he will no doubt want the answers to many things, but I know he would wish to thank you all.

George: We know he was physically very weak, so yes, I imagine it would take a little time (yes) to recover from it.

Yes, just a short time, but it helps when you have some knowledge of where you are going home to.

Lilian: I think it's quite tough on his wife at the moment.

Yes, we never cease to be amazed by humankind and how distressed they become when their loved ones are being reborn. If only you could see the tears shed here when spirit decides to come into another physical body—there are tears shed then. What you call birth is to the spirit darkness for a while until they realize that it is for their own growth that it is happening.

Sarah: You mean the one who's being born sheds tears or the ones left behind?

Sometimes and those who are close to them, but not tears as you would understand tears but a heaviness.

Sarah: Parting for a while...

Yes, until they return home and then there is much joy. It is only you humans who are left that feel this deep loss and this pain when you should be rejoicing for those loved ones.

Sarah: We're lucky that we have the knowledge now; it makes it much easier for us.

Yes. Yes, you must always bring it to the fore of your thinking, it will help. But because of your conditioning, your many years of seeing 'death', as you call it, it has led to this deep sorrow within each one of you when in fact the union which takes place in coming home to our world is something to behold.

Rod: I suppose way, way back in our lives, well in my life anyway, when you were in your teens and early twenties and somebody was killed, it was a blackness that we just didn't understand, it was the end (yes). So there were certain factors and that takes a long while to shun that.

Because it is the lack of knowledge—it is the fear of not knowing and I have spoken too many times about fear (yes). Yes. You only have love or fear and why not live your earthly time in love and leave those fearful thoughts behind.

Sarah: I must say that my daughter has had a long time of being ill—she was depressed and she has got through that and now she's just been ill again, not with depression but just physically ill, but she said, 'Mum, you know, I think I've had this illness to make me think and go within.' So your teachings have helped her enormously.

Those are wise words and the recognition from within will help her.

Sarah: Good, thank you.

Now my dear friends, have you any questions this time?

George: I would just like to say something about your words to us on evolution last time, Salumet.

There are so many in our world who feel that the scientific material side of evolution explains all, but it's very good for us to have this information, this much wider information, because there are many who read the transcripts and I feel it is important that we put that fuller picture to others.

Yes. Of course I have told you in previous time that all of these people are being influenced for the right information, but it takes much time. And of course the information which can be given to you is very limited because you are one small part of the whole and your understanding is not great enough to accept what lies beyond the tip of the iceberg, and that is where we are, at the very tip.

To know what lies beneath will take many eons of your time before full understanding could be complete. That is why it has to remain simple in order that understanding is acceptable. Because you see my dear friend, everyone is at a different stage of development and understanding, so you can therefore understand the problem in teaching. It is like taking a school of people of different standards and ages and trying to teach them all one thing; it would not work, you agree? (Yes) And this is what is happening now when we try to give of the truth. There will be those who never understand in this lifetime, there are those who might pick up a glimmer of hope, there are those who will accept the information readily and make use of it and there will be those who always just question and procrastinate forever. You understand? (Yes) That is why I have always tried to keep these teachings simple for you, in order that all kinds of people will take something from it for their own growth.

George: Yes, I'm sure you have given us a sufficiency Salumet, if I could put it like that.

Yes, thank you, thank you.

George: We spoke of the physical brain last time and its connection to mind (yes) and there is also the facility to translate thought into language (yes). Wonderful! But I just wanted to say that we also appreciate that the development of the brain had to have its connection to spirit in the first place.

Without the connection to spirit, there is no brain!

George: Yes, so, although we speak of that physical thing, all comes from spirit really.

Spirit is the spark of all life; it is as simple as that. We spoke last time about intelligence in all things—and that is the element which has grown in humankind—and of course, that also includes the brain. But it is most interesting, do you not agree, to see how much more a brain can be developed if it is utilized properly and also how confused it can become in giving out of information. I, of course, am simplifying those things, but it is true and that is to do with the evolution of man as he has come through many stages of his evolution. But that brain from the very beginning has had all the essentials of truth, because of the connection to mind. You understand?

George: Yes.

Do not forget that. Although we speak of developing brains, it is only that the brain has not fully activated.

George: Yes. It is our connection to soul (yes) and to all-knowledge ...

All knowledge is already there.

George: And we appreciate the brain has much spare capacity which has not quite fallen into place yet.

Yes, but it is a wonderful piece of equipment for human form, do you not agree?

George: Yes! In a sense, as far as this civilization is concerned, there is much forward planning there and much spare capacity which will doubtless come into use at a later stage (yes). Is that a true statement?

But as I said to you last time, we are not impressed by intelligent people.

George: Perhaps I talk too much!

No, you seek. You are a seeker, and for that we would always help you, but what is more important is that you go within and seek that knowledge from within. You understand?

George: Yes, indeed.

Jan: As human beings we're five-sensory but when we become spiritual beings we have six senses and it's that sixth sense, as it's commonly known, that I feel that we're here to develop.

Is it not interesting that man limits senses to six? You will be surprised.

Jan: How many more there are...

Yes.

Jan: I would class the spirit at the moment, because I am five-sensory, but I'd like to think that my spiritual side is my sixth sense (yes), but if I can develop many senses, then ...

Your sixth sense, as you call it, could enable you to expand throughout the universe. There would be no limitations, shall we say, whereas what you call human senses of the brain are very limiting, as you now know it.

Jan: Yes, they are limiting (yes).

Rod: We can only get this by meditation I think. Is that right?

That is what mankind now needs to do, to go within. For some it is simple; they have come into this world with their senses intact. They are your mediums of the world who have known from quite far back that they have been given, or so they think, some gift when in fact it is a natural happening that you all have.

Rod: So for a person like me who has great difficulty in doing this, the only way is to persevere, I guess—there's no easy way out.

You have to give of time. You have to go within if you are to become in touch with that knowledge and truth. You cannot do it by saying 'I am a spiritual being and I will do this'—it does not happen. You have to now, and I will use your earthly words, you have to earn that knowledge once again, because it has been forgotten.

Jan: So when you mentioned to us, Salumet, and suggested that you will be stepping back from us a little more at these meetings (yes) that is for us to develop precisely that.

Yes, it is important that we take you forward.

Jan: That's fine, thank you. Jokingly, we all have the equipment. We all now need to...

Use it.

Jan: ...'spark' it.

Yes.

Sarah: I know you say we mustn't have emotions, but I have to say the thought that you're not going to come regularly makes me quite sad.

Jan: I think we all felt that sort of jolt.

It only means it will not be most weeks as it is now, but there will be many opportunities, I assure you, but it's important that the times I do not come that you really sit and let the others come to you and help you to grow.

Jan: I can understand, Salumet, why you feel that we're at the right junction in time to do this, because it's very comfortable for us to sit here and listen to your words, but I feel that we need to do more as a group (yes) to blend that energy and to take that forward.

Yes, you have to experience other things for yourselves and although it gives me great pleasure, it makes this heart full. I have to be responsible in all of my actions. It is comfortable too, because my love for you all is so great.

Rod: So you won't mind if we shed a few tears!

Jan: We won't shed any tears.

(Some chuckling and muttering)

Jan: It's joyful to know that Salumet is still with us and watching over us all.

I would like you to take those words as a great respect for you all my dear friends, because I know that you can achieve much. I know you are already spreading the word and, as I have said, there comes a point in your realization that you have to go deeper and I will of course try to help each one of you.

(General thanks)

Sarah: And, Salumet, will it give you a chance to go back to where you belong more often now?

Of course.

Sarah: Yes, good.

I do not remain here, but I will be aware and of course, will be able to continue with my own growth, if you like, because it is never-ending and there is much that I can achieve.

Sarah: And do you feel you have grown since you've been with us?

I have seen over the last few times of leaving you that we have been treading the right pathway and that of course—I almost said brings me ‘joy’, but that is an earthly word—but of course without you I could not have undertaken this work. But that does not mean you can begin to slacken off because I am not with you!

(Chuckles)

Jan: The people that—I’ll use ‘people’ loosely, but the spirit beings that you brought with you tonight, are going to become, are they not, a more active role with us in our meetings?

Yes, that is the purpose of their visit here this time, but a lot, of course, will depend on each one of you.

Jan: And how we develop...

How you develop, how you blend with them, your connection with us and...

Jan: I feel them in the room now...

Good.

Jan: ...my voice is wavering. It is very powerful.

They are overjoyed, yes.

Jan: Very powerful and a lot of love being brought in the last couple of minutes.

Lillian: So will they be coming through to speak to us at all?

Not this time.

Lillian: At any time?

They will use you in the way that is best for each one of you and they will choose those of you who make the connection most strongly with them. There is much still for you to learn. But there are of course other subjects, which I have promised at times to speak about, and of course I intend to do so.

Sarah: That’s good. Yes, ‘pyramids’ comes to mind.

There have been some that I have promised to return to, yes.

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

Now my dear friends, if you have no more questions, I will take my leave and allow the rest of your evening to continue.

Rod: Can I just say, Salumet, that if you’re going to go on learning and you’re on top of that mountain, and I can see a mountain, then we must be down here somewhere and we’ve got a long way to go.

And you say many eons, but we’ll never get to where you are, I know, but thank you for the words you’ve given me and the rest of us.

I thank you my dear friend. Now, I leave you bathed, as always, in this light of love.

(General thanks)

Lillian: And our love goes with you this time.

George: We cherish these meetings and shall look forward to the next.

George’s Notes:

Living the Knowledge: Most importantly, this is what we now need to do. Looking back in time, it was Aristotle who said of the mysteries that they are to be ‘experienced’ not ‘learned’. He was right. And I know, as we all know, that to sit before one such as Salumet, is in itself an ‘experience’ that far outweighs centuries of learned (and learning) societies debating the validity of mind and spirit in the scientific parlance. That is one application of Aristotle’s truth. That we should now ‘live the knowledge’ as taught by Salumet is a further application of that truth.

Love: Salumet makes the point that it may spring from emotion or spirit. On an earlier occasion he spoke of that love between mother and child as being an example of the purest love. I think it might be correct to say that, with love in its purest form, the emotion of fear would not even enter the equation.

Brain has all the essentials of truth: This is a big statement. Daily meditation strengthens our (soul aspect) connection to parent soul. Parent soul as part of spirit, has all-knowledge. Masters who, in various modes, come to Earth to teach have perfect connection to soul / spirit / all-knowledge. Hence, they are able to work what we can only describe as 'miracles'. They are able to manipulate the cosmos in a way that physical humans cannot. In Salumet's case, he has on occasion as part of our instruction, 'arranged for' soul aspects from our history to come and speak with us and to answer our questions. That he comes to us in the way that he does, is perhaps another miracle, although we have become aware of some of the considerations involved. It is well reported how Jesus was able to heal. Ordinary humans are not able to do these things, at least not quite in the ways as understood, and we can only describe them as miracles. These things are made possible by and follow from that perfect connection.

Influence: Salumet has spoken several times on the way scientists and politicians receive 'influence' from spirit. This is how 'discoveries' and 'political successes' eventually come about. Perhaps the information that our little group receives must be tempered within or just behind this Earthly progression format. It would simply not work if we tried to dictate to our leaders!!! So information given has to be very carefully weighed, and we should not receive too much.

~25th February 2008~ SALUMET

Just prior to the meeting there was mention in our conversation that certain scientists consider there is now experimental proof of multiple universes.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I am pleased to join with you once again.

Great pleasure and surprise was felt by all at Salumet's visit.

Lilian: Yes. I don't think we expected you tonight, but we're very pleased you've come.

George: Wonderful!

That is why I have come!

Laughter

I could feel, my dear friends, some of your disappointment at my words last time, but, as you know, there is always a purpose for these things and you have accepted most gracefully that there is much to be achieved on a personal level for each of you. (Agreed) Therefore, my dear friends, I am here to say that although I am withdrawing, it will be few and far between misses until you become much more acquainted with my absence. So as always, we will take it slowly.

Lilian: That's very kind of you.

Yes. I was happy to listen to our dear gentleman friend about your scientists and their discovery of what we know already, and also I would wish to say that there are many advances made with discoveries in the line of medicine from the waters of your planet. I am sure that you would be aware of this already happening. Yes. There is much more to come, not only in the field of medicine, but in the production of energy. There is much to be achieved, so I forewarn you of these coming advances, but of course you already know.

George: Certainly there is much thought going into energy sources.

Yes, I did advise you some time ago about this step and there is much for them to discover, yes.

George: It's nice to know that that's going ahead steadily.

Yes. We are focussing at this particular time to help those men of education to realize that all does not come from books, but that nature has provided amply for them if they would but listen to that quiet voice which guides and helps them.

Sarah: When you talk about energy, I was reading—it may not have been your words, but I have a feeling it was your words—when you said, or whoever it was said, they were afraid for our planet and that nuclear energy wasn't good, but you've said to us since that nuclear energy is okay but we're using it incorrectly.

It should have been used for better purposes, but also that is being utilized once more into the correct channel of use. Yes, we have discussed that previously, yes. There is much still in your world that is uncharted—uncharted territory, that mankind can make full use of and this you must do, because the supplies that are now being used in your world are gradually becoming depleted. Yes, therefore man now has to look further than he has done thus far.

George: Yes, we're very much a mixture where the nuclear issue is concerned. I think I would be right in saying that industrial use of nuclear material for energy production is acceptable, at least to a degree, while—yes I'm afraid we're very slow to rid our planet of nuclear weapons. There have been treaties and signatories to declarations, but we're slow to put those things to one side, which is sad for us to observe here.

Yes, I feel my dear friend that each nation in your world is cautious, because they realize the devastation that nuclear energy can bring, so there lies with each nation an innate fear that although they may use this energy for good, that others will use it unwisely. So there is always a situation where there is so much fear.

George: Yes, it seems to be an uncomfortable balance at the moment (yes) and fear is certainly a part of it.

Yes, we have to influence in order that this fear can be dissipated, yes, but remember also that a form of nuclear energy is useful again within the field of medicine.

George: Yes, indeed.

Yes, so always remember my dear friends: 'good' and 'bad' belong together as in all things, light and darkness in all things.

Jan: Salumet, going back to what we discussed last week, our going within; can you suggest some ways to us as a group, of spiritual mind type of exercises that we can—what I'm asking is really: everybody's meditation is obviously different, but can you suggest while we sit here for the rest of the evening, an exercise for us to concentrate on that will enable us to see that spirit within?

You have only but to ask, each individual one of you, to be allowed to see at that moment what is necessary for you. There is not one exercise that is suitable for you all, only in the fact that you come together as one and the energy that builds from you is as one, but you are all different in how you are evolving.

Jan: Before you came through tonight, I was actually asking if I could look within, so I was obviously doing the right thing.

Yes. Just ask that you be shown what is necessary for you and always remember to stay in the moment. Sometimes you humankind are apt to want to move forward too quickly. Take your time, allow the bond with us to take place naturally and you will be surprised at what you can achieve.

Jan: That's really helpful. You've told us so many times about controlling our thoughts and that's what you mean by staying in the moment.

Yes, you must be in the moment. You must have that love bond and allow the spirit to be free in order that greater communication can take place.

George: I think we are generally aware that the whole planet is moving forward and I think this process is being stepped up by a number of measures. You told us some time ago about the etheric change around the Earth (yes) and we've talked about soul input from different sources (yes) to aid the process. Graham asked me to ask a question of you concerning this and relating to the year 2012. There have been a number of prophecies concerning a change in the planet at that time. My own feeling is that there is a connection to ancient Mayan prophecy which links to their calendar and in their calendar the fourth great cycle of existence ends in December 2012 and what they have termed the fifth great cycle of existence begins then. But there have been prophecies from a number of sources more recently concerning big changes in the planet in the year 2012. Is there anything you can say about that?

Yes. Firstly let me say that changes do not take place at any one particular time. What is happening—and remember what I have told you that energy is never static, it is ever-changing, it has to evolve, it has to move forward. What is happening in your world, is of course many changes that involve those in my world and those in your world, and remember there is always an etheric counterpart of the Earth planet taking place. What is happening in the year you call 2012 is an accumulation of those changes which have taken many, many hundreds of your years to evolve, but by that year of your time there will be a wave of understanding. That is the great change. It is an understanding that will take place.

George: It concerns the consciousness of our planet...

Yes. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes, that does make it all become very clear.

Lilian: That's interesting, because Sara was talking to me about it as well.

Yes. It is a realization. But always, too, you must remember that the consciousness of mankind can alter these, what you term 'predictions'. So always keep that to the fore of your thinking.

George: Yes. We also have the, I think it's a fairly general feeling, certainly in the group here, that the current material system of things on our planet has to come to some quite big change (yes). It can't continue in its present direction and by about that time I have a feeling that there should be a realization about this.

Yes, those changes, as I have said, have gradually been taking place, but that is why my dear friends it is most important that in your daily lives you be truthful, you live the life that you know you must and be an example of good living to all people in order for that wave of knowledge to grow. You understand?

(Agreed)

Yes. But that is why there is this excitement about this one year, but I would say there are many, many more exciting dates in your calendar.

George: Yes. Thank you—I'm sure Graham will be very pleased with your clarification of that.

Yes. Thank you for your question.

Sarah: I just wanted to say, Salumet, I think I jumped in a bit too quickly earlier on and I remember where those words came from: the radio was on and I think it was 1974, I'm not quite sure, but it was in the Hannington area and over the radio came a voice from—wherever it came from—giving these words over (the airway) and the BBC couldn't stop that interference, because it was from a wave they didn't understand.

Yes. We have spoken of this previously.

Sarah: I think it was perhaps before my time, but I just happened to read through that transcript the other day.

Yes.

Sarah: Thank you anyway. I apologize for ...

Not at all ... now my dear friends I will take my leave this time. I have been happy to come just to clarify that there will not be long periods of my disappearance.

George: We are delighted to receive you and are delighted to have that message from you.

Yes, but of course I will inform you if I will not be with you on the following meeting, in order that you can, if you so desire, choose to develop in some particular way—and remember my dear friends that we are always here and are always glad to hear what your desires and wishes might be and of course we will help in any way with your individual development. And with those words I take my leave and as always I cloak you in that spiritual light and love which I hope will sustain you until we meet next time.

(Thanks and farewells)

George's Notes:

Proof of multiple universes: New Scientist, 24th Nov 2007 article: 'Standard Cosmology Cannot Explain Such a Giant Cosmic Hole.' A void with very few stars and galaxies, observed in the constellation Eridanus, is nearly a billion light-years across. It is thought to be the imprint of another universe beyond the edge of our own. It is cited as the first experimental evidence for another universe, also vindicating string theory. (String theory sees the ultimate building blocks of matter, sub-atomic quarks and leptons, as strings of mass-energy vibrating in 10-dimensional space-time.) The void was also revealed in maps of big bang afterglow (NASA's WMAP satellite, 2004). And the string theory itself leads to there being many, many universes. This is all becoming totally in line with Salumet's earlier simple and straightforward statements.

Discoveries in line with medicine from the waters of your planet: There has been recent publicity concerning this, which just shows how Salumet keeps so much in touch with Earthly developments (or should I say: knows them in advance). Clean water and sanitation have been very recently voted / hailed as the biggest advance in medicine in the last 200-years. This matter of course is also currently extending to 3rd-world projects.

Nuclear Energy: Sadly, there is still much more reference on the Internet to weapons use than to peaceful application. Regarding peaceful energy production, the world has 439 nuclear reactors spread through 31 countries, the US, France and Japan accounting for 57%. The French reactors produce 80% of their country's power. The US figure is 20%. Overall, 15% of the world's electricity is nuclear. Iran has its Bushehr reactor (and if that is seen as a problem by some, then what of the other 438?) Some navy ships and submarines are nuclear powered; also ice-breakers. The long-considered cold fusion process remains controversial while research still continues. There are programs producing a number of radioisotopes for medical use in cancer therapy and universities have associated research and upgrading programs.

Nuclear Peace Moves:

1995- Canberra Commission on elimination of nuclear weapons.

1996- World Court, The Hague Peace Palace: ruled use and threat of nuclear weapons to be illegal.

1999- The Hague Appeal for Peace Conference: called for abolition of nuclear weapons and landmines.

2000- U.N reported that 5 nuclear nations – Russia, USA, China, France, UK had each agreed in principle to rid themselves of nuclear arms.

2005- Nuclear Nations should take the lead in disarming – British Pugwash Group, reported in Nature 9th Feb 2005.

2006- Nations should disarm and stop the spread of nuclear weapons – Kofi Annan, Sec General U.N. Final address as Secretary General.

NOW! - United Nations Nuclear Watchdog: US, Russia must disarm! Reported – Associated Press, Oslo.

~3rd March 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Welcome to you, Salumet, and thank you for coming.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As we come together this time, let us give a welcome to our dear lady friend. As always we are happy to join with those who seek and as they come and go, it only enables us to spread the truth of life a little further. I hope you would agree my dear friends. (Affirmed)

George: Yes. This is always a nice feeling.

I will take questions if the lady has any to ask.

Lilian: Thank you. Valerie?

Valerie: Please could you tell me how we can heal ourselves, please?

Yes. Everyone has the ability to self-heal, but to be able to achieve this, you have to go inwardly; you have to allow that spiritual being to be the stronger force in your life.

Valerie: I understand now, thank you.

As all of the others within this room realize that sometimes earthly life can be harsh, but the ability that is within you to heal is a natural happening. But firstly, as the others know, you have to allow all fear to leave you and we know full well that you human beings find this most difficult. You have to allow the fear of life and loss and sickness to be forever gone from your thought, because you see my dear friend, your thought is that strong force, which can bring to you help. But I have to tell you, it is a huge responsibility for you, but it is achievable. Are you happy with that explanation?

Valerie: I am very happy. Thank you very much. I will try very hard.

You will find that after this meeting you should feel some upliftment of spirit when you leave the room. It should carry you forward and allow you to realize the power of spirit.

Lilian: Thank you.

Valerie: Thank you.

Lilian: We have another—I'm sure you know what I am going to say, but we have another person who has shown an interest to come and listen to your words. He is on our television ...

I have already noted your excitement!

Laughter

Lilian: I don't need to explain (no). If, and I say if, because I guess he's got a long way to come, I don't know—if he could come, you're happy to speak with him, are you?

Of course! Any seeker of truth should be welcome within this group. I am always happy to meet with those who seek, to express and to grow.

Lilian: So I'm sure if we can arrange this, you would come through and speak to him, thank you.

Yes. I will be happy to speak to him.

Lilian: Thank you. Did you want to ask a question, George?

George: Yes please. Connected with that, he being in the position that he's in, it would be nice to be able to predict a suitable date—I'm not sure how possible that is going to be. I would also mention that we've had correspondence and he has actually brought up a question. I know that it's a question that's a great concern to some people. It concerns what is known as the Yellowstone Park in Wyoming, USA. It is a volcanic area, it is a large caldera of volcanic workings, an area of hot springs and there is geological persuasion, shall I say, and coupled with satellite observation, also psychic prediction that there is a huge potential disaster developing at this time. I don't know if you would wish to comment on any way at all regarding the possibility of this form of disaster?

I will make comment for you, only because you have broached the subject. You will not stop the evolution of this planet. There will always be what you term 'catastrophes', 'disasters'—this we have previously discussed. I deliberately do not bring to you predictions of this kind, because I feel that it is more important that we bring the positive aspects to life that mankind can look forward with that positive state of mind, rather than dwelling on predictions of disaster, which, at times, cannot be avoided.

George: Yes, I was rather expecting you to comment in general terms on that, which you have (yes). Thank you very much for that.

What purpose does it serve to tell you of pending disasters? It would only allow your thinking to become warped or fearful and that is not my purpose. But you cannot stop the evolution of this Earth planet. You understand? (Yes) I am not evading the question, I am rather trying to steer you onto a more positive way of thinking.

George: Yes, and I would comment myself that I would expect a Master to handle this in general terms. Thank you.

Yes.

Sarah: Salumet, last time you were talking about when we go back and everybody is pleased to see the returning spirit (yes). I just wondered how it is when you have a returning spirit who is in his or her own darkness. When do they recognize that person coming back, when they've come out of the darkness or when they come over nonetheless within that darkness?

The recognition is there before they leave behind the physical garb. No one is left alone, whether they are in spiritual darkness while on Earth, they still have those of us who are trying to support them at all times. So no one is ever left alone. But, as you know, it is up to spirit to recognize for himself what he must go towards; he must learn to recognize the true self. So do not be fearful for them.

Sarah: I was just wondering if they would still be just as pleased to see that spirit come back?

Yes, because they can see the wider picture.

Sarah: Yes, this is our problem, isn't it? It's too narrow.

Yes. You are speaking of one lifetime of darkness perhaps, when in fact the whole picture is a different story.

Sarah: Yes, yes of course.

You understand?

Sarah: I do, yes. Thank you very much.

George: Yes, that of course is a very important point, which hadn't occurred to me in quite such plain terms, but yes, in spirit the picture would be that much wider.

Of course, yes. If you take a snapshot of someone or a group of people, you are limited to what is within the scope of the frame, but if it was to be extended, then you would see the fuller picture. Think of it in those terms and it will become a little more understandable.

George: Yes, so that would be a huge asset and incentive for a soul in darkness.

Yes, it is only that the soul has not created for itself the purpose of this lifetime and is spiritually unaware of what should have been attained, but the whole of the spirit does not rely on only one lifetime.

Lillian: Yes, that's the thing we forget.

If you had a child in a classroom who was very bad in one subject, you would not judge that child on one lesson, would you? He may well excel in all other fields. So, again I say my dear friends, be careful in the way that you judge. It is another lesson on judgement.

George: Yes indeed.

Yes.

Valerie: Is it wrong for us to judge people?

Yes. You must avoid making judgement, because you do not know the whole story.

Valerie: It's the pebble in the sea?

Yes, you can put it that way if that is understandable to you, but to pass judgement makes you unsure, because you do not fully understand the whole picture of that being.

Rod: It's the thought that comes up almost daily in our house. One says something and then immediately says: 'hang on, you cannot form a judgement!' So your words have come out frequently in our house, Salumet.

That is because your awareness is growing. If you pass judgement and think that you are correct, then that is when you must be wary and realize that you must not judge another human being.

Rod: Nothing to do with that, but we had in our house this morning a little baby. She's coming up to five months, and I just look at that little soul and think 'that's a brand new spirit in there', and it always amazes me. I've got no statement, but I just think it's such a wonderful thing to see that life and the spirit starting from that little child.

It is a brand new human being, not a brand new spirit. Be careful how you judge her, because you are making judgement when you make that statement.

Rod: Oh dear, here we go again!

(Chuckles)

Yes. You do not know what the purpose of that spirit is—because it is in the form of a human baby that means very little.

George: Yes, I rather think Rod might have been seeing the purity of the young child.

Yes.

Rod: It is the purity of the eyes, the purity—it's beautiful.

Yes, you are looking at the human frame and the beauty that that in itself creates, and the love that it brings forward from other humans. Yes.

Rod: Grandmothers and what have you...

Yes. If only humankind could retain that kind of love for all of mankind, what a wonderful Earth you would have!

Rod: There would be a lot of nuzzling, kissing going on as we do with these little kids, don't we? Smell them, kiss them ...

Well, they are human emotions. I speak of the pure love which you feel. Yes, I hope that has helped you my dear friend.

Rod: Yes, I better dig that pure love out I know. It's something you spoke about recently with me.

But I have not objections to you kissing!

(Laughter)

Lilian: Yes, I think the rescue that we did once with the little girl in the kennel and then you commented the next time you came. I think that was such a big lesson to us on 'judgement'.

Yes. It is a huge issue for humankind, because it seems to be a natural instinct when you are in human form to think that you know better than another, and as I have said to you in past times, firstly look within at yourselves and if you find fault with another, then look to yourself first.

Rod: Would it be a wrong thing to, say, if you had a lot of policemen in here, lawyers, judges; where do they come in on this?

Where do they come? They are spiritual beings in the same way as each one of you are. It depends on where they stand in their understanding of who and what they truly are. It matters not what the title of the human form takes, it is what is within that matters.

Sarah: I think perhaps Rod: did you mean they have to judge people?

Rod: Yes, they're forming judgements.

But that does not exclude them from being spiritual people. That is only a profession on the Earth that they have chosen. It does not make them right or wrong, it is what is deep within the heart that matters.

George: Would you, Salumet, differentiate between judgement of a person and judgement of the ways of a society? This might be a little area of difficulty, because in judging the ways of a society, that could usefully lead to a better way forward. So that's an area that I've been thinking about.

Yes, but in whose opinion?

George: Ah! Yes!

(Much laughter)

I need say no more.

(More laughter)

I would like you to think about that.

George: Yes, well I think the way forward should be positive for a society and not negative.

It would be a much better way if you were rather than to judge, would be to send positive thoughts that all of those people work and find truth for themselves. In that way positive thinking grows.

Valerie: Does this also apply to our government?

Yes. They are being inspired and helped, as all of the others here know. They are being helped to make good judgement for the people who surround them.

George: So they are being helped from spirit and our own positive thinking could add to that.

Yes, of course. But do not pass judgement that is not your place to do so. There are many areas, are there not, where judgement takes place without you even recognizing it?

(Affirmed)

But again, it depends on your cultivation of awareness. So, I feel I have given you a little more food for thought this time.

George: You have indeed and judgement is a very complex area.

It is, it is, but I have to say my dear friends that you do well, but forgive me if I constantly remind you.

Sarah: Please do.

Valerie: Please do, we need it desperately.

Lilian: Yes, that's true.

Valerie: Should we be living a simple life? I suppose our thought processes should be simpler and not so concerned, anxious—to achieve more within ourselves and our thoughts. Can we make our thought processing simpler to make things a lot better?

Everything that you wish to achieve, no matter what it is that you choose in this lifetime is possible when you go within. That is when changes can be made. On an intellectual level, you can, of course, make changes in the material world, but to make lasting and spiritual change, you need to go within. Do you understand?

Valerie: I do understand, yes.

Yes. But you do not need to live a completely simple life. There is nothing wrong with the material world provided you do not seek and make a great love of all material life, but accept it as just part of the life you have chosen to come to. It is the love of materialism that is wrong, but in itself, there is no problem with it provided you are generous of spirit with your fellow human man. Is that helpful to you?

Valerie: Yes it is very—thank you.

George: Yes, so there has to be a balance and the material consideration could stifle spirit—nearly.

Yes, only if you crave for it, and place it far above spiritual growth. It is the spiritual growth which is the important factor in your lives. When the spirit is to the fore, materialism is less important, but it is not wrong provided all other areas within your life are good. You understand?

(Agreed)

George: Yes, because a society such as ours has to develop some complexity in order for such devices as computers to emerge (yes) and these, I think I would be correct in saying, are proving to be useful in connecting to spiritual development and other things.

Yes, and we are using such machinery to make contact with some. It is a new form of energy and as with all things, there is positive and negative aspects to it. But, as you know my dear friends, as I have told you often, all of life is light and darkness, but you have to have balance. That is what is important—that is important.

George: Yes and I think we have to observe that not all roads that have been taken are light. Genetic modification work (yes) I think has to be seen as an area of some darkness.

Yes. There will always be light and darkness, it is the nature of your world; it is a world of learning of many things. So, accept what comes to you my dear friends, accept it with love, because you know fully well that love can dissipate all darkness.

Valerie: Yes.

Yes.

George: Yes, it could even dissipate problems that arise from genetic modification perhaps?

Yes, it has the power to do that, but it is in the recognition that that power becomes activated.

George: Yes.

Yes. Now my dear friends, I feel for this time that I will withdraw and allow those who stand close to come a little nearer to you; and as always I leave you surrounded with my love and light and that you all feel some upliftment from this evening.

(General thanks)

George's notes:

Yellowstone Caldera: Several points arise; not least of course that Salumet reminds us that prediction is not his object in coming to us. His mission here is to teach and to uplift ... and back in 1994 when it began, his stated mission also included: to steer us away from the nuclear oblivion that we sadly headed towards. But whatever ensues from Yellowstone it will doubtless become part of our learning. Perhaps we should go within if personal decisions are to be made. And we should stay positive in our thinking! A further factor is that our thoughts on positive and negative issues, feed into earth's collective consciousness, and during the past decade our science has been able to actually measure and record the energy peaks of elation and despair that exist in earth's consciousness collectives. So our thought impressions exist as a scientifically proven reality.

Computers: These are of course useful in transcribing and sending out the Salumet emails; also book preparation. But our teacher has also referred to direct-interaction-from-spirit with computers to convey messages. This method of spirit communication is a new phenomenon but we already know of instances.

Genetically modified Crops / Foods: Salumet has spoken on this ... an 'unnecessary step for humanity', but nevertheless it has been taken ... there will be light and dark issues arising. Fresh in mind is an article in New Scientist, 15th Sep 07: 'The Itch that won't be Scratched'. It concerns Morgellon's disease, the very existence of which remains in dispute. But some evidence is cited that it is a real and rather strange fungal condition of the skin, connecting to 'cross-kingdom genetic modification of food crops. Time will tell on this matter.

~17th March 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I come close this time I want to say to you my dear friends, if only you could see for yourselves the intensity and the change in your asking help for others, I think that you would be in awe of what you have all achieved. When first you started to ask for help or pray, it was on a much lower level of asking, because then you did not realize just how to give out those healing thoughts; but now I say to you, be pleased with yourselves my dear friends for the love that you give out to others. Those who stand close by, those who receive these healing thoughts give thanks to each and every one of you. And remember that a thought for others can be given at any time throughout your living day. There is much unity here this evening amongst you and it is good to see; that is not to say that at other times the unity is not there—of course it is, but just sometimes as we come close together, the light from you seems to be so much stronger. That of course makes it easier for me to join with you, to have that connection with you, and for that I thank you my dear friends.

George: That's wonderful, that's very good to hear. Thank you, Salumet.

Lilian: Is there a reason that sometimes it's better than others?

There can be many reasons: it can be how your emotional being is, what has happened during your week of life, how the instrument that I am using is also feeling. All of these points make some difference and although we are able to modify many things, understandably it helps if conditions are good. Yes, but I wanted to say 'thank you', because your thoughts this evening have been carefully taken.

Lilian: Good, thank you.

What you must never do is to send out healing thoughts without that true expression of love in your hearts—that is what brings results.

Pause

That surprises you?

Rod: Maybe it does. I don't think I've had that in my mind at times—I just say a prayer, but I haven't done that.

It is easy to use words ...

Rod: Yes it is.

...it is much more difficult to feel those words. Next time you wish help for another, try to leave the words and to feel what you are giving. You may be surprised.

Rod: That's interesting. So spread the love out to all that you normally pray for, yes.

Send the thought to us and we will do the rest, but it has to be heart-felt. It is too easy to allow words to come from your mouth without the feelings of those words.

George: Yes, we've heard and accept that a prayer can be wordless and I think this is perhaps another way of putting it, it can be entirely feelings.

Yes, as your 'thinking' is wordless. Yes, you do not formulate words for your thinking; the thinking comes to you naturally, does it not? Yes. Try to achieve that state with your healing thoughts. It will help. I am sure each one of you will feel that unity with us here in spirit when you can achieve that. That is something for you to attempt when you are alone. When we are together now as this group, then of course words need to be said, to know who you are asking help for; but try to achieve this when you are alone.

Lilian: So when we first hear, say someone who is ill or going into hospital or if a disaster happens in the world and we feel real sympathy, would that really be the best time to ...

Yes. That sympathy is instantaneous and so should your thought. At that moment that you feel, by feeling you are sending the thought for help. Do you understand? (Yes) Do we have any questions about this?

Paul: Is it a bit like a blending when you're ... I guess when you see someone who you think needs help—it's more like a feeling (yes) like an empathy?

You should almost be part of that being that you feel for, that you desire the help for them, yes. It is the feeling that is important, not so much the words.

Paul: Because the feeling is—words are never going to be quite as accurate as a feeling. The feeling is everything I suppose.

True feeling; not emotional feeling; do not become confused by emotion; the feelings I speak of are spiritual feelings. Again my dear friends be careful that you do not confuse the earthly with the spiritual. You will know my dear friend when a thought is a spiritual thought rather than an emotional, earthly thinking. I am sure that each of you already know the difference.

Sarah: A sort of connection.

Yes.

Lilian: We have a young lady with us tonight who's not been in very good health lately. Are there any words of encouragement you could say to her?

She is treading the water at the moment. She feels that she is going nowhere. But again, a lot of emotional thinking is taking place, but if she sits quietly this time, we will try to help her to clarify her thinking which, of course as you know, commits itself to the physical body, but the spiritual thinking has to be right. She feels that she is going forward one or two paces and backwards double that amount; but I say to you my dear friend, try, try—and I know that it can be difficult for you human beings when life seems to be hard—but try to keep yourself uplifted.

Do we have any more questions please?

George: Would it be true to say that the highest spiritual thinking would be completely without any attachment to fear, while emotional thinking could well have shades of fear attached?

Yes. Emotional thinking creates fear. That is why I have told you in past times that it is important that you keep emotions under control.

George: So that is one difference that one could look for in, shall we say self-analysis.

Yes, yes. You know that you all have an emotional being and that is part of what you have enjoyed with physical life—that is part of it—but you do need to keep control, because I am sure all of you are aware of what can happen when the emotions are not stilled: people unfortunately become unstable when the emotions are allowed to run riot. You understand?

Lillian: Yes, it is most unpleasant.

Yes, so it is most important that you are in charge of your spirit and its actions.

Sarah: There is a young lad—actually he's the son of ... my husband is with another woman and it's her son, and he has a very strange ... he has a very adult thinking for a young lad: he's vegetarian, he's spiritual, but he's rather on the dark side. They are having a lot of problems with him. Would his problems as a young lad be caused from the emotions of the parents?

If he takes aboard their emotions. As we have said from the beginning, you keep away from those you do not have an affinity with, because the spirit feels that those connections are not right. As you know, you do not always like some people. That is not because you truly dislike, but because your spiritual sense is telling you that you are not compatible.

Sarah: But this child would have chosen his mother, he would have chosen his parents, so can that be that you come and then find that you're not compatible with your parents?

Of course; it is not so much that the parents are so important, as the conditions that that situation can give to the spirit. You may choose your parents, of course you do as you know, but it is the situations in life which are more important. And of course as a child, the parents will have an effect on the human being, but should not on the spirit. You understand?

Sarah: Yes, yes, I do.

Because the spirit already knows what is right and what is wrong for them to achieve.

Sarah: So if he is sort of like a little bit of a misfit within his community, but his spirit knows that maybe what he's doing is right for him?

It may well be. It is difficult to comment, it is difficult to generalize what someone should or should not do. What I am saying to you is that spirit innately knows what is right and what is wrong. But we all know that in this earthly life there are many problems for many people and, of course, the effect is wide when there are problems which are not dealt with in the correct way.

Sarah: So that's the important thing, to deal with the problems correctly.

It is not the problems that you face it is how you deal with them.

Sarah: Right, yes.

You see, two human beings can have the same problem and one will go a true and steady path whilst another will err, shall we say, or take the wrong pathway even although that clear pathway is open to them—it is your freewill, it is your choice. All of you, I am sure, have earthly problems—that is not a question, because I know that each one of you in some way, big or small as it may be within your own thinking; problems occur, but it is up to you, my dear friends, the way that they are dealt with. And I have to say, truly you know which is the right pathway and which is the wrong pathway and it is, my dear friends, your own responsibility for your life here. Have you any questions?

Rod: It's just a comment really, but I was listening to a gentleman this morning who was giving me his marriage problems—his marriage seems to be folding up, he's got a couple of kids, one 1 and one 2 year old and for once I was speechless and I said: 'I don't know what to say'. And he said: 'Well, pray for me', and I said: 'I'll do that'. And then a few minutes later we had a big hug, which I find quite nice to people like that. And I said: 'Two years ago I wouldn't have been doing this', thinking of you—having a hug with another guy and saying a prayer for him—and so I thank you so much for that.

Does gender matter?

Rod: Not at all—not now, no.

Spirit is spirit whether you be a child, an adult, a male, a female—it matters not my friend.

Rod: No, it doesn't.

Lilian: So, again, that first feeling of sympathy was the best time for healing.

That was the beginning of the healing thought, yes. That is the genuine healing thought, when you 'feel' it. But I would like you to try when you are thinking of another, to try to feel what you are giving out.

Lilian: Can you take any more questions?

I will take one more before I leave you this time.

Lilian: Has anyone a question? George?

George: Yes, it's one I'd like to raise. You spoke some time ago about Jesus and Mary being of the same soul energy and it being rare for two to be on Earth at the same time, of the same soul energy. Did you say something similar of Jan and her son Richard?

I believe I said there was strong connection, I don't believe it was soul energy; there is a difference. You are all connected; each one of you has had connection, spiritual connection, but when you speak of Jesus and Mary, that energy is almost—I am trying to find the word to simplify it for you—it is almost a division of the same energy. It is, how shall I say, like identical twins (yes). Yes, in every way. But spiritual closeness as a mother and a son, that is slightly different, although you all belong to the same energy.

George: Close but not identical.

Yes. This is something that we have not discussed before, but I will return to it for you in order to clarify the difference, because so often I tell you we all come from the same source, which of course we do, but there has to be degrees of energy at different times and that is what we need to discuss further.

George: Thank you for clarifying that rather special identical set of energies or pair of energies.

Jan: Richard and I were together in a different lifetime ...

Yes, as you all have.

(The voice that came from Jan seemed remote, as if it might have been coming from a soul aspect.)

Jan: ...and this time we have been brought back together for our own learning and purpose ...

Yes. Do not struggle with your words. I know what you are saying.

Jan: I am not really here at the moment, Salumet. That's why...

No. Just try to save your energy and I will say this to you all, that throughout many lives you have come together, many of you, as you well know, but that does not make you the same kind of soul energy as the Jesus/Mary energy. Because you come back together in the one lifetime does not make you that soul energy. It is a complicated subject which I will go into in greater detail, but for now I wish only to say to you that that is a different type of energy, or different usage of the energy—perhaps that is clearer. Is that helpful to you?

George: Yes, thank you very much. That has clarified it to suit our understanding—I think that is a way to put it.

Yes. It is the understanding which creates the difficulty and of course the usage of human words to create that which is not understandable to you—that is always our problem and that is why it is most important to simplify everything for mankind. And on saying that, I will take my leave my dear friends.

Lilian: Thank you once again.

I would ask my dear lady friend (Lilian) if you would place your hand upon the head of our visitor (Emily) for a few moments in order that we can give a healing to her, if she is happy to do so.

Lilian: Yes, I will ask her.

Until we come together next time, I leave you my dear friends clothed always in spiritual love and light.

(General thanks)

~7th April 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time I would like to begin by just saying to our dear friend, the one known to you as Jan: I give you some upliftment this time (Thank you). Sometimes you allow your fears to overwhelm you. I am here to say to you: Do not be fearful, because we are round and about you at all times.

Jan: Thank you. What has sparked this? Is it something in my everyday life that I'm fearful of or is it a spiritual matter?

Sometimes you are fearful of life, but you are beginning to overcome that, but just sometimes you do allow it to overwhelm you. I know you understand...

Jan: Yes I do.

...but we wish you to know that you are never alone.

Jan: Have you been aware that I've been calling on you personally just recently?

Do my words not verify this for you?

(Chuckle)

Jan: Right. Well that is so nice to know. You hear everything I think, because I haven't spoken them out loud (no) but I've asked for your protection.

There is no need to outwardly say the words. You know that all thoughts reach us and I will always endeavour to help each one of you if that is how it should be. Of course, I cannot ever interfere with your pathways, but we can help in many, many ways.

Jan: I know that you're aware when I asked for protection on two occasions in the last couple of days and I did have an overwhelming sense of calm come over me and I knew nothing would happen to us. But I have realized today that I don't need that 'fear' on this particular—and you obviously know what I'm talking about (yes)—and I believe that the animal in question has come to us as a real gift and I really do thank spirit for bringing him to us.

Trust in us. That is all you need to guide you. Each one of you must give of yourselves, allow those thoughts and feelings and offer it to that great divine spirit, or whatever name you wish to give to that universal love. No matter what you call it, allow it to go and you will always have an answer for your questions. This applies to each and every one of you.

Jan: I know you've said this to us so often but you have to actually experience it first hand; and now that I have, I don't feel as alone (yes)—I'll never need to feel alone.

You never are alone. All of you have many who stand close by who are waiting to help and to uplift you in your everyday lives, but so too must you not believe but know that that help is there for you. It is not a belief system but it should be a deep knowing, a knowledge that we are always there for you when you are in need.

Jan: Well, if there were any doubts before, I don't have them after this conversation and I promise you I will do everything within my power to expel those negative, fearful thoughts.

Those words from you are most welcome and I know that it has helped you in your understanding.

Jan: It has, thank you very much.

And that leads me now to a question my dear friends that I wanted to say to you this time: What is your understanding of the phrase 'brotherhood of man'? Would anyone wish to say?

Jan: I believe it's our spiritual connection to every spiritual being that walks this planet.

Very good.

George: I would say a oneness that has many details within it.

Yes.

Rod: Everyone being interlinked.

Yes. So you see, by your expression of those words, you show that your understanding of that phrase has meaning; whereas most people on your earthly planet would say it was a connection to his fellow human being, where they feel that equality breeds that phrase 'brotherhood'. But my dear friends it shows to us that you have allowed the layers of materialism to drop from you, that each and every one of you understands and you are like the butterflies emerging from the chrysalis. So I say to you my dear friends, to us it shows just how much you have really grown. It is now time my dear friends for you to begin to fully emerge, to become that beautiful butterfly that spreads its beauty throughout your world.

Lilian: That's a lovely way to put it.

But of course it is no easy task. Butterflies as beautiful as they are have a short lifespan in this material world, as so do you all as human beings. This one lifetime is a very small part of your existence and I also know that you understand this also. So my friends, that is another reason why in times to come we are going to devote more time to your individual development. Can you now see a purpose for this plan? (Agreed) Yes. Each one of you shines like a butterfly—has the beauty and the gentleness of the butterfly.

George: Yes, I think you—to perhaps phrase it differently: you speak of a spiritual cell of influence on the physical planet.

Yes. It is a realization of all that is already known but as always ... (Salumet was silent for 15 seconds) ... forgive my silence but to each one of you this time I extend that spiritual love that bonds between you all. I hope my dear friends that you feel it from us.

George: There is a very special feeling here tonight.

(And discussing afterwards, some of us clearly felt a tremendous 'thick' energy at this point.)

Yes, there is a unity here this evening, even although we have one who is quite new to our group, but indeed has had a bond with us through your many recorded words. Please accept the love that is being given to you this time; it comes not only from myself but from many, many others who have gathered here this time. So I say my dear friends, accept the love and the light and the knowledge of spirit that it uplifts and upholds you throughout each stage of physical being.

George: Wonderful. I think our silence means that we are almost overwhelmed by this.

Yes, and although my stay this time is short, I hope you feel the power of the love which is given to you.

Paul: Yes.

Lilian: Yes, thank you very much.

And I will say only my dear friends that your next time together will be given over to those who wish to come to help you to develop your own individual gifts—not even gifts but your spiritual rights. With that my dear friends, I will leave you. I will continue to work with this instrument (Eileen) for a short while and leave you all in the capable hands of our dear friend known to you as Lilian.

Lilian: Thank you. Our love goes with you.

(General thanks)

~5th May 2008~ SALUMET

As is our regular practice, at the start of the meeting we voiced prayers for healing and for those in need:

Lilian: Good evening Salumet

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always my dear friends, your out-pouring of thought for others is indeed commendable and we, of course, thank you from our world that you give of your time to think of others. I, on behalf of many, say 'thank you'. It is, of course, good to join with you once again, that we come together albeit in small numbers (six on this occasion), that we join this time in order for you all to grow. Sometimes I feel you are puzzled my dear friends by your own individual spiritual developments, but I say to you, do not allow those thoughts to gain entry into your physical thinking, because only those of us from our world know how much you have grown spiritually. Do not be too harsh on yourselves. All of you are treading the pathway that is meant for you at this particular time in your existence.

George: It's very nice for us to have your reassurance on that.

General thanks

Yes. You are inclined to have doubts but do not allow them to take hold. It is understandable and we do understand my dear friends that sometimes when life becomes troublesome, it is difficult to rise above all of these happenings, but I say to you, redirect that thinking into something more positive and then you will begin to see results from that thinking. You notice my dear friends how often I return to the subject of thought and thinking. It is only in order for you to become more aware of the tremendous power which you have within yourselves.

George: Yes, I think we are beginning to learn that. I think that we're so much more convinced now that mind is really everything and the power of course is connected with mind.

All of your life is thought. You cannot exist, my dear friend, without the power of your thought.

Remember that your thought is creative; it is a great part of your physical life. Therefore you must begin to understand, accept and acknowledge that power which it has for you. You understand?

George: Yes, happily there are a number of individuals in the world who are recognizing this. Our learned societies perhaps have some way to go, because of their very much intellectual thinking, but there are signs that many people in the world are recognizing the true power and nature of mind.

Yes. Over time I have given you many analogies of a seed that is sown; that is all you need to do for others, then it becomes their responsibility, not yours. Once the seed is sown, you must let it go; you have done what you have to do. Then the responsibility lies with how you deal with your own thinking. That is the great responsibility of your physical lives; responsibility for all that you think and what you do. I am sure you agree with those words.

George: These are wise words.

Sarah: And even those who are, say, mentally impaired—I think we've gone over this a little bit before—mentally impaired, that's their responsibility even though perhaps they're not thinking as a 'normal' person would.

Yes. You must separate spirit from the physical conditions.

Sarah: Yes, of course.

There are many conditions in your world which affects clear thinking of individuals, but the spirit remains unharmed; that is what you must try to focus upon.

Sarah: Yes, that's my failing—I tend to think sometimes too physically.

Yes, you have to learn to separate that spiritual aspect, which after all, is the part that continues, that survives the physical conditions. So always focus upon that and your understanding will then become clearer and greater.

Sarah: Yes, thank you for that.

Yes, I think for this time we will have just some conscious discussions, if you so desire.

Sarah: Yes, thank you.

Rod: Could I just make a comment. I emailed a very elderly gentleman in Pennsylvania, America—an old friend from my village in Gloucestershire—and he came through and said, 'Where do you go every Monday night?' And I know he's a church-goer and I thought that this was going to be difficult. And I wrote an email and my wife said, 'I think you've over-stated it a bit'. And he came back and I said, 'Would you like me to send a transcript?'—I did and he thought we were rather marvellous and I thought, from what you've just said, I'm going to send this transcript as well, because it's so meaningful for him as well. It's very, very apt. Thank you very much.

Yes. I would say that that country is becoming much more spiritually aware and this, my friend, is a good lesson for you: it teaches you that you must never pre-dispose yourself to what another person will say or do or react to. You understand what I am saying?

Rod: Yes I do.

You are pre-judging what the other person might be thinking or saying or doing.

Lilian: Especially if they are of Christian or any other religion—I find myself being a little careful.

Rod: You've to lead in very gently.

Lilian: Yes. I don't want to destroy what they have.

You could say that was being kind, that was being thoughtful; but also my dear friend I wish to say it is you being a little fearful, because you anticipate a reaction from another, instead of being yourself which you must, all of you, know and understand—you must be true to yourselves. If someone cannot accept or refuses to accept, then that must stay with them.

Rod: Well, I look forward to his reaction to this transcript that we shall send him. Thank you.

Yes.

George: Perhaps I could bring another one into this discussion. I've been having much correspondence recently with one who I will name as William and he has read the Salumet book and is very keen to spread the knowledge of the teachings, which is very nice—and he is in a position to do that. I just wonder: you have this great awareness—would you be aware of the person I am speaking of?

I, as you speak, am aware, yes. I would say that anything that comes from any of us in spirit, we are most grateful for anything that can be given to a wider audience. We, of course, do not seek publicity as you call it, we seek only to bring to many the truth of spirit.

George: Yes, I can certainly feel this happening and I just wondered to what degree it might have been orchestrated from spirit.

Remember my words: there are never any accidents!

George: That's right and I was aware during this sequence of one particular synchronicity! Anyway, our friend has a concern and a question about claustrophobia and he's wondering, I think, if it is always something carried over from a past life and secondly, if it is proper to confront and attempt to deal with it.

Yes. I understand his question. Firstly, let me say this to you: all problems of a physical nature do not necessarily come from past times, but of course, you know my dear friends from even our experiences within this room of one of our dear friends (Graham), that when those problems surface in a lifetime and come from a past time, they need to be addressed, they need to be confronted to allow—and let me say this to you, again it is based in fear. So to allow the physical life now to be free of these fears, it is wise sometimes to face whatever the problems may be. I can tell you, his fears are from times gone, but also were exacerbated when he was a small child. I would say to this, our dear friend of correspondence, that it probably would help him to go back in time and face his fear.

George: This would be a self-monitored regression, would it, going within?

It would be much better to allow someone to help him bring that time forward. It is a time for regression if he truly wishes to abandon that condition. But it is something, as I have said, that has been exacerbated when he was a small child and fearful of small spaces.

George: Yes. I know a number of children find their way sometimes into small cupboards and become fearful.

Yes, it is sometimes within their own nature to make themselves afraid, but with some that fear remains.

George: Well, thank you. He'll be very pleased to have that information, I'm sure.

Yes, but of course, his freewill, his judgement is entirely his own, but he can be free from it if he so desires.

George: Yes, and perhaps still on this subject of human fears, which is connected, I have a question. I was talking with Graham today—Sara and Graham have sat with us many times ...

I have noticed their queries, yes.

George: They have difficulties with young children and baby-sitters and the distance. They are away at the moment. They are going through a phase during which they would dearly wish to be here, but are not finding it possible just now. Perhaps I could read a question that they have placed.

Lilian: The name is Andrew Smith and I think you're possibly aware of what we're going to ask.

George: It does concern this approximate time of the year 2012 again. Andrew Smith is speaking at meetings concerning Earth changes around the year 2012. He claims great tidal waves will devastate coastal areas following a North Pole shift from current position to Tibet and that Earth's axis of rotation will align to vertical which will effectively end seasonal weather and make a moderate climate worldwide. This seems dramatic with a great potential loss of life for people who are in the wrong places. My question is this: is this speaker who claims his words are truth, originating from a number of angels, whom he names, and spirit beings and ones such as Mother Mera and the Count de St. Germaine—he names a lot of people as sources of his information. It's our understanding that nothing is absolutely certain and with positive thinking such things can be modified or averted.

Andrew Smith is in process of publishing three books called 'The Revolution of 2012'—so, if you can add any comments to that, Salumet, those comments would be gratefully received, because this gentleman seems to be saying a great deal and publishing books in support of what he's saying.

Yes. I understand your questions. It is not for me to say who should listen to spirit beings who come to others to, let me say, to judge them—that is not my part—but I hope that you know my dear friends, I have come to this Earth plane for positive reasons: to uplift, to deliver truth and to help those that we possibly can. I would say there are many in your world who give information—and I will not use the word 'wrong', but I will use the words 'misguided'. How many people who have listened to these words are now living with a fear?

George: Yes, indeed.

Yes. I cannot condone that kind of spiritual message, but in saying so, as I have told you all on previous occasions, this planet has an evolution which must take place—that there is no doubt, that cannot be averted; but there have always been what you Earth people call 'tragedies' on your planet; we view them slightly differently. Therefore I say to our dear friend Graham, he must make judgement from what he hears for himself. I, myself, feel that it is unnecessary information which has been elaborated to bring fear to people and also for monetary gain in writing these things.

George: Yes. I had those feelings precisely, almost precisely.

Yes, of course.

George: And the other thing is that there are so many names from spirit mentioned—this is not the pattern to which we are accustomed; we are much more accustomed to...

Why would those of us in spirit wish to bring so much gloom and doom when the majority of us as spiritual teachers are trying to make Earth and mankind much more positive in their responsibility for this planet?

Sarah: And can their fear, if so many people ...

Create reality...

Sarah: Yes, exactly.

Yes, that is the problem.

George: Yes, the fear itself can be such a problem.

Yes that is why you have to counteract this way of thinking.

George: And, as I say, we are accustomed to your own mission, we are accustomed to White Eagle, we are accustomed to Silver Birch, but we're not accustomed to large teams of such ones coming through to one person.

No, I feel that perhaps, and I do not like to dismiss people, but I feel that somewhere there is some ego involved.

George: And to use one of your expressions, we should not readily accept something which sits uncomfortably with us.

Of course, always I say that to you; whatever I say, whatever any other spiritual teacher says to you, whatever you read, no matter what it is, if it does not feel right to you then you do not accept.

Sarah: So that would be the answer to the next question I was going to ask, Salumet, because Sara, Graham's wife, had asked me to ask you if the group she was in, was right. So that would be the answer: if she feels comfortable there (yes), it's okay, and if she doesn't, then it's not.

I cannot say—I cannot interfere with her spiritual life, that is decisions which each one of you has responsibility for, but what I would say to them is that whilst they are concerned about what is happening with this planet, they are not living in the now.

Sarah: Yes.

I hope that will help them.

George: I'm sure it will help them. Perhaps there are too many people endeavouring to make plans for the future and being guided by fears (yes) and this is, as you say, not living in the now.

They should be living for this moment. Spiritually you should live in each moment, all of you. Of course there always will be changes to your planet. There inevitably will be many changes. You only have to look back in your history of time to see what changes have taken place, but you cannot live your earthly lives in fear.

George: That in itself is a valuable message.

Yes, I feel that is the point of what I say to you: that whilst you are worried, concerned and—you are not in the moment of time, you are not living as spirit at this time. I hope it helps them to begin to question and to try to understand the reasoning why someone should bring to them his fears and doubts instead of trying to bring more positive thoughts and upliftment.

George: Yes, I'm sure this will help enormously.

Yes. Unfortunately, there is always a problem with some people who are not looking to do spiritual work, although they would always dispute this and say that they do, but I can assure you my dear friends that at times you must use your own spiritual thinking to understand what is round and about you.

Lilian: We're very lucky to have you helping us along the way.

Sarah: We certainly are.

I hope that has helped. I will bring, or try to bring to them some comfort, some peace of mind to allay any fears that this has brought to them.

Sarah: If they could just tell that Andrew Smith that maybe he should start thinking positively to stop anything that he has ...

George: Yes, I think they were looking for clarification of thoughts and feelings and ...

Sarah: I think that's the thing; if they had doubt, and they obviously did have a bit of doubt, otherwise they wouldn't have looked for the confirmation. And if there is any doubt, then obviously it's not right.

Do we have any more questions this time before I take my leave of you?

Rod: I'm always pleased that you remind us of the important words that we're supposed to keep—we do need constant reminders—I should write them down and put them in my kitchen: Thought, Fear, Love—there's a core of words that you've got to constantly to remind yourself of on a daily basis.

Yes. If you remember those things, write them down if you so desire, but always remember 'Love' above all things—to love your fellow man. After all, you are all on a journey together: Truth.

Rod: Truth...

George: Yes and there's so much happening today that is good and positive and these, I feel, are very exciting times.

Yes. I am happy that you have adopted that attitude of thinking, because I am sure each one of you, my dear friends, understands now how powerful you all are, not only as individuals, but as groups such as these; how much good you can do, like you start every evening giving out thoughts for those in need. That spiritual light my dear friend is what we are trying to cultivate throughout all of your planet, and I am happy to say that even with your so-called 'disasters' and 'tragedies' that the spiritual word and acceptance is slowly spreading.

George: I would like to give thanks for the continuing, wonderful synchronicities, which we now understand is a synchronizing of the two universes.

Yes, of course, that is wonderful to understand. Do you not agree?

George: Yes, indeed. And the recent book that has come my way—it was written 40 years ago by Helen Greaves, called 'The Testimony of Light'.

Which only goes to prove my dear friend that truth is unaltered.

George: Yes and having experienced the wonderful Bonniol communications (yes), mind-linked communications physical being to physical being via spirit, this particular book is also about mind-linked communications, in this case a physical being with a dear friend who had passed to spirit.

Because, you see, mind is the very essence of spirit (yes). That is the basis of it all and is it not so simple when you use those few words 'Mind and Spirit'?

George: Yes. And it was so nice to discover this book, this account of mind connection having had the Bonniol experience (yes). It seems to connect extremely well.

Sarah: We're still looking forward to our gift from Bonniol—I think he's working on it hard.

There are many parts of your jigsaw to put into place still, but my dear friends I wish to say to you and thank you also for your time, your devotion to these meetings that we have. If only I could take you all now and show you the light that you have created within the spiritual realms of life, I am sure you would be quite pleased with your achievements.

Sarah: That's kind of you to say.

George: Thank you for telling us.

And now, for this time my dear friends, I will take my leave.

George: It's been a wonderful communication and there have been so many excellent teachings involved. Thank you so much for all that.

(General thanks)

I will always endeavour to help each one of you in any way that I am permitted, but even so, know my dear friends that I cloak you in spiritual love, in spiritual knowledge and we will endeavour, especially in this coming year, to help you develop even further.

(General thanks)

George's Notes:

Timing: This was the time of immediate aftermath of the Burmese cyclone and the Chinese earthquake, each with huge loss of life.

Fears: It is clear from what has been said that it is well to differentiate between 'personal fears' and 'fears of future'. It would frequently be useful to confront a personal fear but fear of future is a different matter. Fearing the future or consequence of what might happen, takes us out of the 'now' and leads away from inner spiritual guidance. It seems important that we seek our own 'guided' pathway regardless of fear of a possible future event constructed from, at least in part, intellectual thinking. That is not to say that intellectual reason has no place; it has ... just that it should not take over and swamp, other relevancies.

Now: The Power of Now, Eckhart Tolle, Hodder & Stoughton, London is suggested as further reading. A power that goes beyond words ... a place where our thought-created problems dissolve and we discover what it means to create a liberated life.

Testimony of Light: Helen Greaves, Neville Spearman Publishers, Saffron Walden, 1969. Currently available from Amazon. The book accounts mind-to-mind communications between Helen Greaves and Francis Banks, M.A. (formerly Sister Francis Mary of the Community of the Resurrection, Grahamstown, South Africa).

~19th May 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always, I am happy to join with you once more.

Lilian: Yes, it is lovely to have you with us.

Again, we hear your healing thoughts, we hear you talk of the many disasters in your world. I would like to remind you my dear friends, not always to dwell upon those happenings in your world that create so much disturbance. I would wish you daily to remind yourselves of the beauty and the love which surrounds you all. Even in your darkest moments, seek out the beauty and the light of earthly life. Each one of you, my dear friends, is blessed in this way. That is not to say your lives at times can seem harsh and cruel, but it is your individual responsibility to maintain that aura of light, that love which is round and about you at all times. Seek always the beauty of life.

George: Yes you are quite right, of course. The love and the beauty are always there, come what may. But because you are human you sometimes allow those unhappy times to over-cloud the joy and the beauty. I am not saying it is easy but nothing that is gained for good is so easy. So, just remember my words my dear friends, remember my words daily in order that you may help yourselves. Again, it is a gentle reminder of what you are seeking towards—searching, finding - it is an ever, never-ending trail. Even when you come home to us, this journey is ever onwards to seek the brightness in your lives. Not always is this recognized but I tell you my dear friends that the continuance of life is ever seeking, ever looking for Love. That is what is important to you, or should be, and that is why I ask you now to think about it and to put those thoughts into action. I hope you will agree with me.

George: Yes. And I think, now we see the return to spirit as, shall I say unexceptional, but it is just the trauma involving so many sometimes—we see the strife of it and, as you say, because we are human, we feel for those people. (This refers to the cyclone in Burma and earthquake in China, each taking the lives of many.)

You extend your love to all of these people and of course that is as it should be, but what you should not do is dwell upon it, but send out your love for these people and we will then do our work in helping them. If you cannot change a situation, you must look it fully as it is, as it is happening and then you must continue onwards. Have the recognition but do not hold on. Do you understand?

George: Yes. The love factor is really all-encompassing.

Yes.

Rod: I think we've got such an efficient media system that probably every time you put the television on, it's there and they are very, very efficient at putting all the doom and gloom on—they're very good at that.

Yes. It is impossible in your world today not to know what is happening in all parts of your world, and that is not a bad thing, but I am saying only that you must offer your love, your help, your support and then focus on all that is good in your world. It would seem too often that your 'media', as you call it, dwell too often on those what you call 'disasters' and do not focus enough on what is good in your world.

Rod: That doesn't make news—you're exactly right.

Paul: I think as well there's a tendency for people to think that nature can be cruel. And it's just that we don't understand nature, that's all, because we don't see that it's always trying to balance itself out (yes) and it's actually trying to do things that are going to improve itself, because it's got far greater intelligence than man (yes), but because we don't understand that intelligence, we look at it as something cruel.

Yes. I wish you to look at the fuller picture. So often I use those words, but I have to reiterate those words for good reason, because you are so limited in your understanding, not only of your own world, but of everything else that exists. Therefore it is difficult for humankind at times to fully understand that this planet has its own evolution, that this planet has to balance both light and darkness, which I have spoken to you of; and always it has to be a balance of love, evolution and knowledge and continuance of many planets. But when you see the fuller picture, then your understanding should be a little clearer and the only way that that understanding comes is if you allow yourself to be open to all things, to all happenings in your world. You have to strive to be more than who you think you are, because you are not just these frail beings clothed: you are light, you are spirit and you must always strive to bring that forward.

Paul: Yes we should remember that we are not human ... that's the...

You are human, but you are spirit clothed as humans. It is a very short time as a human being, but a much greater time as that true being of spirit. It is something I would like you all to think upon this time.

George: Yes it's easy in this day and age to be brainwashed into a kind of awe of desolation and disaster, but that leads nowhere and is really inappropriate for us. Yes, I think I understand that, but there is so much more to life that is highly relevant.

Yes, and you must begin with yourselves before you can take the wider picture of the world on board. So that is why I say, look for the good in all of your lives, even in the moments of despair. There is always something that can lift you that can make you find the good. It may be some small thing, it may be that you see a beautiful flower that you look deeply into and you realize that you are part of something much greater. That is up to each individual to find their own beauty, their own light in their everyday lives.

Sarah: For those who are leaving this life, who are in despair, who are perhaps depressed, dementia or whatever, it's difficult to be able to tell them, to look for the beauty.

Yes, but they will be being helped from our side—the spirit is being helped. Yes, I understand your question and, yes, I understand there are difficulties, but they are human difficulties. Again, look to the wider picture, look always to spirit. There are those in our world whose task it is to help those people in their transition into our world, a world of beauty and light if that is where they belong.

Sarah: Yes. And eventually everybody will, even those who go over with their own darkness, they will eventually reach that light.

Yes, no-one is ever alone—never alone.

Sarah: Thank you for those words.

Now my dear friends, I will leave you with those words this evening. I want to say only this to you: whatever you feel, see, hear this evening within this room please discuss it quietly amongst yourselves. We will try to bring something to you because the energy this time is good. So as I leave you, as always I say: take my love which surrounds you at all times. We do hear your thoughts and words and they are never wasted.

George: And thank you so much for your timely message this evening.

(General thanks)

The evening continued with some of us receiving impressions and finally a rescue. A gentleman had died in a pub and had difficulty in accepting this. He spoke through Eileen and one waiting for him in spirit spoke encouragement through Sue. With this and Lilian's counselling he eventually accepted his situation and was able to move forward ... but not before checking with Lilian that he could take his pint of beer with him!

Audio link: <http://www.salumetandfriends.org/resources/rescue+beer.mp3>

George's Notes:

There are a few echoes here from earlier teaching: Our lack of understanding so often connects with a devotion to intellectual thinking as opposed to spiritual thinking / It is the soul's ongoing progress that is important, to which this brief earthly life makes contribution / Recognition of nature's intelligence is often lacking (but nature will ensure by her various means (which include angels and elementals) that the planet moves forward ... and human existence depends on this factor).

And there is perhaps a danger: if media preference dwells too much on the exceptional ... then the exceptional might become the norm. So we must, as individuals, be circumspect.

~16th June 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Welcome to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always, I thank you for your welcome. It is always good to join with you my dear friends.

George: And wonderful for us of course, to have you with us.

I wonder how many of you have noted in recent times how much progress is being made within your medical world. I have told you that many medical discoveries would happen in this coming time and already these things are taking place.

George: Yes, you are perfectly correct, Salumet. I'm aware of the various applications of stem cells and there are a number of improvements in delicate instruments that help to correct eye sight and hearing.

Yes. In all areas of help there will be improvement, but within your medical profession there will be a new knowledge amongst those who work closely with the peoples of this earth plane. They will now begin to understand that in treating people, there is more than just the physical body. That realization will be slow to begin with, but it is gaining momentum amongst many of your professional people. It is an exciting time for those who wish to help others. There is much influence from our world in order for this to take place.

George: Wonderful! We're also aware of the work of spirit doctors and one in particular, Ray Brown, has come to our notice, and the one who works through Ray Brown seems to be doing wonderful work.

Yes. There are many in your world being used at this time with the same kind of work which he achieves, but you will always, my dear friends, be guided by us to help each of you to maintain that balance of spirit, mind and body. Do you think that it has been coincidental that these meetings should happen? Not at all! There is always a purpose in our work.

George: We accept your guidance and teaching that there are no accidents!

Yes. So that should give you something to think about. Also in this coming time, you will find that new ways of finding resources for your world will begin to happen. You remember I have told you on previous occasions that the seas of your world will become important.

George: Yes.

Yes. I would like you to keep this information to the forefront of your minds. Yes.

George: Yes. I think we shall all be much happier to see that development as regards energy, and possibly wind power as well rather than nuclear reactors which have serious disadvantages I feel.

Yes, but do not forget that all power given to this earth plane also has good purpose. This we have discussed before.

George: We have indeed.

Yes. Only mankind turns all of these things into negatives. Yes, so it is mankind who needs to change.

George: Indeed, and given my preference for sea-power and wind-power, it's difficult for me to conceive how mankind could be negative with these sources.

Yes, but it can happen; it comes from greed, it comes from a needing to take for themselves all that should be shared.

George: Yes, I'm afraid there is still that about.

There is too much still—too many materialistic people in your world.

George: Yes, I think we are aware.

So, because of this state of affairs, it will be, I feel, a slow progress but nevertheless, it will be progress.

Rod: Would there be people on Earth doing research and development on sea waters at this present moment or is that to come at a later date, Salumet?

It is already beginning, yes. All influence comes from our world. We try to influence those who are connected with all of these projects. We try to guide and to impress upon them what is necessary. But as I have told you in recent times, my dear friends, always try to focus on positive aspects of life. Try to dissipate those negative energies which surround you—and it helps and makes our work so much easier.

George: I think from what you say, Salumet, you imply that energy from the sea is rather more important than energy from wind-power.

I would not say more important; it is just one aspect. Yes, so be aware that these are things to come.

George: The reason I asked that question was, it can be more of a person inclination or personal effort, in setting up small wind-power devices.

Yes, of course. Mankind can take responsibility for that kind of energy, but sea-energy is something that has to be focussed upon by professional people who know what they are doing, and to whom we are trying to bring the knowledge. You understand?

George: Yes, these would be large projects.

Yes. It is not something that will happen as you would say: overnight.

Rod: I take it this does not just include just tidal movement, but using the actual water as a product of energy?

Yes. There is much energy that has not been tapped into as yet. There is new knowledge to come. Now, my dear friends, I will take any questions this time before I leave you to continue with your evening.

Rod: I haven't got a question, but just a word of thanks really. Two or three weeks ago you mentioned about when somebody got 'gloom and doom', to push it to one side and look at the brightness alongside. And from thereon, for that couple of weeks I was forever telling people just to do this. I must get more practice—I think I've been a little bit dormant this week—but that was a wonderful, wonderful piece of information for myself and people around me, because we do have a few 'gloomy/doomy' people and we seem to get gloomy as well, so thank you very much for that.

It is human nature to not always be full of sunshine, but the more you practise being positive, showing love, receiving love and helping others, the easier it will become. But it takes a little focus sometimes, because we in our world understand that life for you at times can be difficult, not only your own lives, but those of friends and family that surround you. It is too easy for mankind to allow those worries and concerns to feel as if they carry a heavy burden, but each one of you is spirit, is love, is light and that is what you should be trying to cultivate each moment of your lives here upon this earth.

George: Focussing on the sunshine of our lives, we have such wonderful memories of the Bonniol visits and we feel so privileged to have had those visits over such a period. I have the feeling about that that we really need to upgrade ourselves, improve our spiritual expertise, should I say although that's not quite the right word, before Bonniol will visit us again; but I feel that we need to develop our group activity more in terms of the aspects of mind projection and group energy perhaps. I just have that feeling that we have to work on ourselves a bit before we can expect our visitor to come to us again. Have you any thoughts on that yourself?

You wish me to comment? If you would remember the initial reason for that visit was to show you mind connection (yes), that was our topic at the time and that is why you have been brought such information. Of course it is necessary for each one of you, not only in groups such as this, but in people who have everyday lives and perhaps who do not even have the knowledge which you have got, that every person seeks further to expand that spiritual being whilst here upon the earth plane. And of course the purpose of that knowledge, of that change, is to grow and grow and grow. It would be an enhancement of communication with those from other worlds if you could try to perfect your spiritual gifts which you all possess. After all, you cannot allow spirit to be dormant; you cannot say: 'We know enough' because you know so little. You understand my meaning?

George: Yes. This is getting towards my feelings about the matter.

Yes.

George: I was just a little bit puzzled with—there was a loose end in the attempted materialization. It showed signs of happening but it didn't quite come off and I wondered if our friend had the desire to carry that through. But I just had the feeling that we need to work on ourselves a bit more.

Yes. There is more than one energy needed for what you term 'materialization' and of course each person within this room is a conduit for that energy, so therefore, you have to be together first and foremost in your desire to use these energies properly. You understand? (Yes) But firstly, as I have often said to you, you have to look inwards to yourself first. You have the ability ... all of you, for all of these happenings, but you must truly believe and want these things.

Rod: I need to strengthen my system up because I'd been up the top of the garden in my place and I'd been working hard and I thought: 'I could do with a cup of tea', and I could see Daphne in the kitchen down there washing up and I think 'Daphne, tea – tea – tea!'. I look at her and I make the 'T' sign with my fingers and she doesn't even look at me and I feel a complete failure. I think—I don't think I can be giving a lot of strength to this group if I can't get my wife to get me a cup of tea!

(Laughs)

I appreciate your humour my dear friend but I will use only one word to you: 'practise'.

Sarah: In fact there was one who came through last week who said it was a message from you—I don't know if that's right or not but anyway that was to practise mind projection (during our meeting) last week.

It is no good my dear friends to do any 'exercise', as you call it, occasionally; there has to be continuity, there has to be that regularity of purpose. You cannot expect these things just to happen.

Sarah: I think that was a little memory jog for us.

Yes. After all, many, many groups sit together as you do for many, many, many years and find very little happens. It is not because they are less spiritual, but they do not focus on the right aspects of themselves. They allow everyday worries to come with them to their groups. They allow everyday living to become that important part of themselves, when in fact it should be the spirit that is to the fore; the use of the gifts of spirit, the clear seeing, the clear hearing, the materializations—all of these things happen when the spirit is to the fore. You understand? (Affirmed)

Rod: Continuous practise.

Yes.

George: We are a little bit sporadic at the moment and, actually, I projected a coloured triangle, a red triangle this week. Paul picked up a triangle, but I'm afraid my red colour wasn't a very pure red and he picked up a green triangle! That about sums up our efforts sometimes—we're partly there in projecting to each other sometimes.

But if you have part success that is what should spur you on to continue, and I might suggest to you my dear friends that you keep it simple: instead of a red triangle, try either the colour or the triangle, until you are more proficient at this thing. Keep it simple.

George: Yes. Thank you for that advice.

Now, with those words, I will take my leave this time and allow the rest of your time to be used by those who wish to come to you. As always my dear friends, I leave you cloaked in that light of love.

Lilian: It's been lovely to be together again. Thank you.

(General thanks)

George's notes:

Medical Advance: A further very recent advance has been a cure for skin cancer melanoma using cloned tumour-killing cells originating from the patient. Can other cancers be treated in this way?

Energy from Seawater: There is in fact a recent discovery reported on the Internet that is the likely item to which Salumet alludes. John Kansius working in the field of developing a frequency generator for cancer treatment has applied radio frequencies to seawater with a surprising result. Elemental bonds within the seawater are broken with release of hydrogen. As long as the seawater is irradiated, it can burn like a candle due to the hydrogen released. And the phenomenon has been demonstrated at a university. In this way, seawater can be used as a fuel! This is a ground-breaking discovery!

Mind Projection: We are all of us ... group members and readers ... encouraged in this development. Still the mind, exclude thoughts, picture a simple object and see if it can be picked up by a friend. Play the game with a friend as a mind exercise! We have done it with Bonniol and we continue to practise it amongst ourselves. It works, and can always be improved upon. And it could eventually replace the mobile phone!

~23rd June 2008~ SALUMET

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time let us extend a warm welcome to our dear friend.

Lilian: Yes, it's nice to see her again.

Ann: Thank you.

I have to say you are just a little nervous, but I hope that as this evening continues you will feel more relaxed and comfortable.

Ann: Thank you.

George: Ann, my wife, has been reading all the transcripts and she's familiar with your words, I think.

Yes, but it is not quite the same as being here within this room.

Lilian: Yes, some people find the darkened room a little strange.

Yes. Because we are small in number this time, we will give our dear lady friend an opportunity to ask any questions that she wishes.

Ann: Thank you. I have had several questions, but I don't think I shall be able to put them into words very clearly, so perhaps I'll ...

Lilian: I shouldn't worry, because I think you'll find Salumet will know anyway.

Ann: I expect he will.

Lilian: Even if you stumble.

Ann: Well I'll try. There is one question concerning the best way to serve. I wonder whether—I'm often distracted by the world and I wonder whether one can serve best by doing good works or by going on retreats and meditating and being in the silence and raising one's consciousness, and hoping to heal the world that way; or whether one should try to achieve a balance living in the world, and trying to be peaceful as well and meditate. Sometimes I find it difficult.

Yes. Firstly let me say this to you. You are a good soul. You have an innate goodness that many people do not possess. That is the first thing I wish to say to you. I know you wonder often that what you do and the path that you travel ... if these are the correct things to be doing. Let me say this to you my dear friend: each one of you in this world has many opportunities given and of course you are well aware of your freewill, which must always come into play when choices are made. The pathway that you try to follow is the correct one for you, because that has been your choice. There are many pathways to our world; let me say that categorically to you. We all, do we not, believe that our pathway is the true one. I am here to tell you all that whatever pathway feels right for you—that is right from within the spirit, cannot be wrong. When you follow your life's pathway, your actions and your thoughts become as one. You do not have to think about the words that you say, the deeds that you do, the joining together with spirit, because it comes naturally to you. I am sure each one of you within this room has said or done something and immediately you know that those words or actions should have been avoided.

Lilian: That's true.

We do not ask more of you. After all, the human element whilst on this earth is a great part of your lives, but it is the understanding and the knowing that is important, because only then can you fully understand the way forward. I will say to you my dear friend what I have told the others, that meditation is most important to your spiritual wellbeing, because only in that state can you achieve that union with us. So, if I were to say to you only one thing to help you, it would be to be quiet and to go within; by going within, not only do you unite with spirit, but healing also takes place. But ultimately as in all things, the choice is yours and I believe that each one of you knows and understands when your lives are running smoothly and that spirit is to the fore. Would you not agree? (Affirmed)

I hope that has helped you just a little.

Ann: Yes, thank you very much.

Do we have more questions?

Lilian: Do you have another one, Ann?

Ann: No, thank you.

Lilian: Anyone? George?

George: Yes. I would like to refer back to last week and you were talking, Salumet, about energy from seawater (yes) and there was the implication that this was something really new. And I looked on the Internet following that, and I note that there is a gentleman who has noticed that if you irradiate seawater with radio frequencies, there is bond-breaking and release of hydrogen ... and I just fancy that this could be a new energy source. There is much work to be done still and there is already criticism that in a closed system you cannot put a small amount of energy in and get a large amount of energy out, but the critics are overlooking several factors. Anyway, I just wondered if this might relate to the energy form to which you alluded last time.

Yes. Firstly, let me say: if I gave you the impression that this energy is new, please forgive me. As you know, there is nothing new: it will only be new in the minds of man when he rediscovers what has already been lost.

George: Yes ... yes, we understand.

Yes, so in that sense it is not new, but in the mind of mankind at this present time, it will seem to be a revelation, it will be a discovery and, as always in your world, there will be disagreement. Yes, always there will be disagreement amongst men, but how often throughout your history have these things then gone on to be correct. So do not be too concerned about the disagreements—that is a natural process, but I am sure it will be something that is beneficial for mankind. I hope that has helped you.

George: Yes, it would not be proper I imagine, to say if this is the line of development which we are re-discovering.

Not at this moment in time. But I understand your curiosity and of course we know, dear friend, how much you wish to investigate in your own way, but for this moment I will leave it like that.

George: Yes, I appreciate that, thank you.

Lillian: Did you have a question, Rod?

Rod: I've had questions in the past, Salumet, and I've said, 'I must ask Salumet that'. There's one thing that gets bad as you get older ... it's your memory. I should write these things down, and I will do, write these things down, because you come up in conversation and I think: 'I will ask that'. This isn't the question I was going to ask, but I find it uncomfortable on how people die. They don't know they've died and they don't pass on very well, and they seem to hang around. In fact they get there and they still don't know they've died. I know I find this uncomfortable and obviously I can't do anything about it.

I understand my dear friend. It is because you have not conquered the emotional state. You have to capture those emotions and put them in place before you will find it easier to accept what has to be. It is physical emotion you are feeling, not spiritual. You understand?

Rod: You've mentioned that before.

Yes.

Rod: I have tried.

But it will come. You are too harsh with yourself. Of course it is distressing, but as you continue with this work, you will find that acceptance comes more easily, so do not be so harsh with yourself.

Rod: Thank you for those kind words.

You must remember that of all of those who seem lost are never alone. They will not always remain in those states. That is why groups such as this and others are used to help them.

Rod: Wonderful. Thank you, that's wonderful. These two, these three, are wonderful! (Rod refers to the mediums receiving 'rescues' and Lillian who counsels.)

George: I think the time factor comes into this as well...

Yes—which is of course also difficult to understand.

George: I mean, those in spirit will not be as conscious of time as we are. I think that's correct.

Yes, of course. Our dear friend has a little way to go in his understanding, but let me tell you dear friend (Rod) that you have grown.

George: I think we all have some way to go in our understanding; and that leads to another question. Our health service/our hospitals, they dwell on cleanliness at the present time (yes). There's great effort in making the places scrupulously clean/sterile, but it occurred to me recently that the birds and the animals, they are quite different—any old puddle will do for a drink!

Yes. I understand your question and yes, of course, there will always be in your world what you call 'germs', but what are in fact parts of life, an existence of life. But there has to come a point where man and, I will use your term 'germs', have to adapt to each other, as have many things in the past that man has not been able—and let me use these words kindly, 'take control of'. You understand what I am saying?

George: Yes. 'Adapt to each other' is a nice expression.

Yes. That is the best way to put it to you. Sometimes there can be too much what you call 'cleanliness', but it is a destruction of a natural thing in your world. Mankind, unfortunately, has interfered rather a lot in this world and caused many problems and this is just another one of them. At the moment in time, that is the best way they know how to deal with your germs, but, as in all things, there comes a time when the 'adapting to each other' takes place.

George: Yes, I rather fancy something like that took place when Albert Schweitzer, a rather enlightened one, was in Lambaréné in Africa and there were open sewers there, and in that sense there was not cleanliness, but there were hospitals there and I suspect that people get a chance to develop their antibodies in their systems when a few germs are about...

Yes.

George: ...but in extreme cleanliness conditions perhaps we don't build up the antibodies well enough.

Yes. As in many things in your world, medicine also has been abused at some points and not used correctly, but always we are trying to influence so that mankind grows in understanding, that mankind becomes as one with everything in this earth.

George: Including the germs!

There has to be balance, yes. You may find that some people will be shocked by those words, because they see your germs as alien to good health, when in fact all things have purpose. But I would say the important word here is 'balance'. I hope that has helped you.

Lilian: Interesting.

George: Yes, I'm sure that has clarified.

Rod: It must be exasperating for people on your side who are trying to influence doctors and what have you, to bring in a new product and then see it used in an incorrect way later on. I guess this isn't just medicine, I mean this is ...

Throughout your world, yes of course...

Rod: But it must be exasperating for you to think, 'what've we got to do to get that lot organized?'

Well, I have to tell you my dear friend that we do cultivate patience.

(Chuckles)

George: And would you classify 'exasperation' as an emotion?!

I feel that, yes that is a physical emotion. So I will leave that one with you.

More chuckles

Now, I will take my leave this time and allow the evening to continue.

Sarah: Thank you very much for coming.

George: Thank you for those educating and inspiring words, Salumet.

Rod: Are we allowed to wrap you in our love?

I feel your love each time I come to you. For this I am forever grateful to you and know always that I am close by.

(General thanks)

George's notes:

Many Pathways: In the early days of his teaching Salumet likened this to the many longer and shorter routes across a sports field. Equally, there are many influences from spirit so that the future appears to us to be largely ordained. But there is always that freewill factor ... always choices. Whatever the actual route forward, meditation ... spirit connection ... remains a key factor.

Energy and Seawater: There has already been much research in the direction of 'fuel cell' to produce hydrogen from water, but there are difficult problems ... not least that the expensive platinum catalyst is easily 'poisoned'. Seawater is a complex mixture. Does it include its own inexpensive catalyst for hydrogen production? Many questions need answers.

Germs and Disease: In contrast to today's hospitals, Albert Schweitzer's first is described in George Seaver's biography (1947): '... he utilised a windowless broken-roofed fowl-house for his surgery, his bungalow for his dispensary, and the open sun-smitten courtyard for the treatment of his patients till the regular evening shower drove them for cover to his veranda.' Today, we attempt to eradicate germs and as a result develop problems of poor or non-resistance to disease. It is a pity that there are slogans such as: kills 99.9% of all known germs, when at least 98% are actually helpful to us, in fact without microbes we simply cannot survive. Half the planet 'excludes' such diseases as foot-and-mouth at great cost and with periodic animal slaughter (the shame of which is felt by many of us) while remaining countries allow such diseases to be endemic. This is a difficult situation for our world in which animals of the 'exclusion countries' build no antibody resistance to the disease in their blood, while those of endemic countries have been allowed to build their natural resistance. The latter may on occasions succumb to disease to the extent of a few percent of the herd ... depending on quality of diet. Good diet is of course another very important factor.

~7th July 2008~

The evening's events took all by surprise. Firstly, one giving his name as Samuel spoke through Eileen to say that Salumet would be away for 2-weeks and something of interest was planned for this time. Next, one via Sarah indicated that several would join with us and we were to see who or what could be sensed. We were to compare notes and finally one would be with Eileen of whom we should know the identity, and that person was described as a great spokesman. It was apt description.

Paul quickly felt the one drawing close to him wrote diaries. This was later confirmed as the historical figure of Samuel Pepys—famous for his diaries. Several minutes passed as we voiced our various impressions. Then Sarah named 'Churchill', and this seemed to be a key word to unlock proceedings—youtube link: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ho5xz99kyzM>

Churchill: That is I.

Sarah: Oh right!

(Sarah had also mentioned Elizabeth 1st earlier and so this was quickly clarified in a strong speaking voice through Eileen)

Churchill: I have refrained from speaking too soon and to say it has been a great opportunity to say to you all: not all things...

Eileen coughed

Churchill: ...dratted voices cause you nothing but trouble ... this I have to say to you: not all that is said is true about spirit and those who come to speak with you. It has been said that those well known in the world only return to those they love—not true. There are those, as myself, who still need to communicate, and will take any opportunity that is available to us.

George: Wonderful! And I am old enough to remember your speeches whilst you were on the Earth, and I note your voice is still strong and has that kind of intonation.

Rod: And the inspiration you gave us all. I was 10-11-12-13-14, but the inspiration to me and the whole country—thank you very much for that. It's such a humble thing to say, I know.

Churchill: I was amazed by the attention I received when I passed. I suffered many disappointments in my life, unknown to many. But I have to say that my heart was touched to see so many who had good thoughts of me.

Lilian: I think the country and everyone in it needed a figure that was giving us hope.

Churchill: One thing I will say: to give up any habits that you may retain...

Jan: Are you referring to smoking?

Churchill: Indeed I am.

Laughs

Lilian: We've been told that.

Churchill: I assure you that this is so. And I did for some time, 'suffer'. I use the word guardedly.

Jan: Did you have emphysema?

Churchill: Slightly, but not widely known.

George: But we realise, it was more than just a cigar, was it not—it was a symbol that went with you.

Churchill: It was a presentation of myself. Yes, even now I feel my hand go to clasp one.

(Chuckles, as Eileen's hand was raised a little in clasp gesture)

George: And whatever one's feelings about war today, it's strange having lived through that period in the '40s; it seemed to me then, and on reflection to have been a very special period in our history, when we were getting things sorted, and on reflection I cannot see any different solution or outcome for that period. But hopefully, world-warfare has now ended and there will be no more of that. Have you any such thoughts?

Churchill: I do. I follow all that takes place in your world—even today. I wish I could rewrite history, but that is not possible. My part I played was to the best of my ability and although many errors were made, I feel justified in saying that I travelled the right road as far as war was concerned.

Sarah: You were probably being influenced from spirit anyway, weren't you?

Churchill: I now know that—at the time I hoped, but did not fully know.

Jan: Mr Churchill, I'm too young to remember—well actually I can remember you being prime minister when I was a little girl. I can't let this opportunity go by without asking you if yourself and Mr Hitler have met in spirit and spoken—and I'd just like to think that you actually shook hands and made friends.

Churchill: I cannot say that to you. For some time my 'goodness' was not strong enough to do so. And still, although I am aware of this gentleman, I have no desire to meet with him, but of course, all forgiveness is there.

Lilian: I think we've been told he'll be in darkness, of his own doing of course, for eons of time; so possibly he is not even ready to...

Churchill: He is not ready, because he feels he was justified in making a new world. But there is no resentment, no malice, and I have to tell you: I admired his earlier strategies of war as a man who knew where he was going—not the actions that were committed, but in the earlier part...

Jan: ...as a strategist...

Churchill: Yes, that part of him I can congratulate him for, as being a person myself of great detail.

Jan: Yes—I hope you didn't mind me asking you that question.

Churchill: Many people have made and written judgement. I am happy.

George: Well, we all realise that this is a learning planet. We are all learning and where you are now, I think I'm right in saying: you are still learning

Churchill: We are all learning, yes.

Jan: Has your viewpoint on warfare now you have passed over, changed completely?

Churchill: Slowly, I am changing.

Jan: I believe you've been in spirit a relatively short time haven't you, compared to ions of time?

Churchill: Yes, it does not happen in a moment.

Jan: No.

Rod: So what about your wife? Have you got a happier time meeting your wife again?

Churchill: Families are always different than acquaintances. There is always a love bond, which isn't severed on passing—that still stays strong.

Rod: That's lovely.

Churchill: But I have to say: I am still interested in my family of the present day and I am sure at times they feel my presence.

Jan: I'm sure they do.

Rod: Didn't one drive down the road the other day with some children in the back of a car? Is that part of your family?

Sarah: Soames (Surname) that was, wasn't it...

Churchill: My family has extended greatly—as all here, as you know.

Jan: Are you a public speaker in spirit?

Churchill: Every opportunity I can, I will speak. I do not now command such attention, but the oratory still takes place.

Jan: That's nice.

George: You said...you referred to a desire to rewrite history, but I would add to that, that while you were on the earth, you did a very good job of actually writing the history in three volumes I think it was. (Originally 6-volumes and various abridgments followed)

Churchill: Yes, I have to say my pride took a place to the forefront at those writings, but I speak not only of the time when I was with you, but previous history.*

Jan: Do you look down on 'No 10' and are interested in what goes on behind the big black door?

Churchill: I have to say: no.

Jan: It's of no interest any more to you?

Churchill: It is of interest, but not so much anymore.

Lilian: You're on a different journey.

Churchill: Yes.

Lilian: And I believe you used to meditate—I've read about you in a book—you used to sit quietly and meditate.

Churchill: Yes, I had connection with spirit, but I suffered many black days when knowing and feeling spirit was my salvation.

George: Yes, I can feel and imagine that.

Churchill: Yes.

George: And you painted...

Churchill: I suppose you would say I was an artistic person.

George: Yes, and did that also help you to relax?

Churchill: Music...It helped me—you must forgive me, my voice is going, because my energy is leaving. I found expression in my writing, my paintings—many forms of art.

(General thanks as power faded. Further questions were attempted, but the energy faded, so we said our thanks and appreciation.)

*There were many causal factors leading to WWII, for example, the failure to honour armistice agreements of WWI and then the re-arming, and yes, it would be a huge advantage if we could have rewritten this part of history!

George's Notes

Winston S Churchill completed his epic work: The Second World War in 1950. He makes unrestrained statement on episodes of the conflict. And that he refers to 'MADNESS' as an affliction that, in war, carries with it the advantage of SURPRISE, may be seen as an example of his literary flare as applied to political confrontation.

~21st July 2008~

The evening began with a rescue, followed by one through Sarah, who gave further details to the group concerning our past lives together as monks, which was first mentioned on the meeting of 30th June 1997:

Lilian: Nice of you to come.

I am very happy to be able to come back to you again, after such a long break.

Lilian: Well it's very nice to have to—taking the time and trouble to come.

I do not consider this to be trouble!

Chuckles

I am most happy to be able to come to you again. And this time I would like to tell you that we are able to bring you a little more information about the time that we spent together when we were on another continent.

George: Wonderful!

You remember when I came to you and we were working in the area near the Nile?

(Affirmed)

Now this time, I would like to tell you that although you were not with me at that time, we were together, but in a different area. We have been together as a Closed Order and I believe that you have already been told that you were monks together?

(Affirmed)

Now this is where I fit into your picture.

George: I think I'm right that last time you told us about Egypt and it was your time or one of your aspects time—it was Ramasses 1 who was in power then. Are you that one or is it a totally different aspect?

This time it is of course the same person speaking to you, but it was a different aspect that was on the planet in the Closed Order, as opposed to when I was in Egypt.

George: That's interesting to know the connection.

But of course now that I am speaking to you, this is the same spirit as before.

George: Yes, I think we understand—interesting.

Now, you have been told that you all worked together and I believe this information was given to you in a light-hearted manner.

Lilian: Yes it was.

But this was also a connection to be given to you, so that when I came to you, you would be familiar with what has been in the past. I was but a very small figure in this community, but I was one who had a lot to say.

Eileen: Are you saying that we were a religious group, in that time.

Yes, this was a Closed Order and dear lady, I believe you were not in this order.

Eileen: No, they wouldn't let me in!

(Laughter)

Eileen: I was a mendicant.

George: Eileen has a different and most valuable purpose in this group.

Yes, you did not need the strict—how can I put it—the strict regime to learn, because you were a much freer spirit than those in the community. Those who were together in that order, they needed a little direction, a little push towards the right pathway and although as you know, that line in not perhaps the one you would wish to be in, in this lifetime, it was a ...

George: ...a necessary stepping stone—would that be it?

That is a much better use of the language than I was going to say—yes, that is correct, that was the beginning of your search for the truth. Now, dear lady—dear lady mendicant I can say to you—you had already found that little light and you came to the group at the Order, because of the previous connection you had all had together. It was for you just, shall we say, to make contact in that lifetime. So, you have all been together and I have touched upon your lives before. So, it is with the greatest of pleasure and no trouble that I have come this evening, just to tell you that we have been connected in the past and we will again be connected in the future.

George: Lovely.

So, I am most happy that we are now all together one more time.

Rod: Does this include me?

George: Yes, I was going to say, are able to tell us if Rod here had any connection with the groups, because Rod is a relative newcomer to our circle here, but he fits in so well.

I am just asking where this gentleman fits in. If you can bear with me for just a few seconds, I will find out for you, where he first became connected with you all.

Pause—another then spoke via Sarah:

I am here to tell you on behalf of my dear friend, that this gentleman was an inn keeper and his connection with you all is via the work you did in the monastery. You provided the wine and other drink for his inn. He was not part of the religious Order, but he did indeed have contact with you.

George: Nice to know that he was around and nice to know that Leslie, our group founder, made the wine!

Rod: Was that what I was—a wine maker?

Eileen: Yes, you were an inn keeper.

Rod: An inn keeper—thank you very much for that lovely information.

Lilian: So we made the wine...

Rod: ...and I sold it for you.

Lilian: Yes—we sold it to you.

Rod: You sold it to me...

Eileen: And I just came round begging!

Laughter—the first speaker then returned to finish through Sarah:

Now, I hope that my friend has been able to help you with that piece of information and I now will be happy to go back to where I belong and look forward again to another meeting—maybe I will be able to tell you something else. But I do not know at this moment if any other aspect of my being was in connection with you at any other time. I am sorry I cannot tell you this now, but should I be able to come back, perhaps I can bring you another story.

George: And we can assure you, you will be most warmly welcome.

Rod: A real history lesson.

(General thanks)

~11th August 2008~ SALUMET

We began somewhat hesitantly on this occasion. A rather nasty type of summer cold had been about and in particular, Eileen was left with a cough which could really be a nuisance. She had a drink of water and we hoped for the best...

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

I thank you for your welcome. As always, I am pleased to join with you once more. The instrument has been concerned about communication with us, but we will try to help in any way that we can. There are many of you in need at this time. Be assured that those in our world will draw close to you this night and we hope that you will feel the benefit of our love.

Lilian: I'm sure we will.

George: Thank you. There do seem to be a few viruses and germs about at the moment.

None of you are infallible!

Laughs

Therefore it is not unusual for you, any of you, to be plagued by human ailments. So do not be overly concerned. Each one of you finds strength in illness and overcoming many obstacles in your daily lives. This is part of the growth of spirit—but you fully understand this, therefore I will not repeat my words. This time, my dear friends, I wish to say to you just a little about your own growth which you know, each one of you, how much and how far you have travelled the road of knowledge and Truth. In your world, since the beginning of human existence, we hear so often: 'Show us the way.' Or: 'Why are we here?', 'What is the purpose of life?' You, my dear friends, have travelled with me along a pathway of discovery, of knowledge, of truth—truth that has always been. You have made discoveries, not only about yourselves, but about mankind and all those who exist within this planet. Not only that, you have been associated with mind connection, with planets further afield and this, my dear friends, you have all accepted, you have all gained from this knowledge.

George: Yes. You have brought us riches beyond measure, Salumet, of which we are so appreciative. It is, of course, our earnest wish that we can place all these facts before others and we strive to do this, and there is much enjoyment in that as well. So, thank you!

Yes. You have grown, but the purpose of growing spiritually is that you continue to expand that consciousness. We have spoken much about Time, Energy and Growing ... so many things over time have we not? What I would like to say to you all this time is: I would like to take you just a step further in your understanding. You know full well that when you discard these physical overcoats, that you are once more reborn to spirit. Of this there is no doubt within your human brains and thinking. You have accepted that mind belongs to spirit and that there is much that is open and waiting to be experienced. So we come to the first question placed before us: 'show us the way'. This, my dear friends, this is what I have tried to achieve with you over the many years that we have come together. (Salumet first came through on 27th June 1994) You have moved forward in your thinking, in your experience of spirit, of your understanding of all things greater than yourselves, because you know you have accepted that you are more than yourself; you are all as one, you belong to the wider picture of Life. So for you my dear friends, you are finding your way in beginning to know what the plan of life is. There is much you will never understand whilst here. This, too, we have discussed, but let us take the next question: 'Why?' Why is there existence? Why does mankind strive for this knowledge? Because, my dear friends, it is a natural inquisitiveness within him to find the reason why. That is why mankind in time past has become more interested in that which lays outside of this planet ... of this universe. That curiosity is a form of searching for 'why?' I wish to tell you that as you leave these many universes behind, you realize that still you remain within a 'Void'. Your scientists and those who are interested in other life forms are beginning to understand how little they know. Do you understand that each star, each planet, has a form of communication? (Pause) This we have not spoken of; but if you accept that all of life, all of consciousness is expansion and knowledge, then of course there has to be a form of communication—not in the sense that you would understand, by words, but by energy. Each form of energy has colour—this we have spoken of briefly.

George: Yes, and Bonniol spoke of a pulsing light (yes) which would be seen from out in space on approaching planets and suns. Is that something you ...

This is an experience that is open to all within many universes, but I am trying to take you just a little further. As you leave behind those lights, those planets, those universes, still you realize that although you belong to the whole, you are still within a void. But within the void there is knowledge, knowledge of all planets, all universes, all things. This is a knowledge that is the 'WHY' of existence.

George: Might I ask if the void is synonymous with Great Creative Force?

The void is the result of the Creative Force. It is this seeking, the returning of the energy of the Creative Force. We are speaking of deep matters here.

George: Yes. So, in a manner of speaking, the void encapsulates all.

Yes ... yes. As you are one small planet, you are captured within that void, which again is only part of the knowledge; it contains many vibrations of energy and each vibration of energy belongs to colour. And as it is upon this earth and spirit, where communication needs a blending of energy, so too within the void are there communications with energy. Do you understand my dear friends? I do not want to take you too far without understanding.

George: So there would be blending of energies within the void and that is how we should see communication.

Knowledge ... that is where knowledge lies and that is only part of the whole. Do you therefore see the expansion, the continuity of life, the knowledge, the growth—all part of the Creative Force; and yet here you are, one little being and how really insignificant you are within the whole. Would you like to ask any questions?

George: Insignificant and yet we connect throughout...

Yes. You can imagine yourself as the bottom of your big toe, reaching and searching for the top of the head. Can you see how mammoth that would seem?

George: Yes. I have read articles about the question 'why?' Why are we here, why is the entire system here? And some authors have dismissed this rather flippantly and compared it to a 'free lunch', which isn't really an answer at all. But you have given us a wonderful insight.

We are here in order for the Creative Force to express all things. For that ... I am searching for the word that you would understand—perhaps just to say that the Creative Force is looking for expression in all forms of existence. Therefore, to continue that expansion of consciousness, which in turn affects every being, every universe—all of existence. Do you understand my dear friends?

Rod: I think this is far more complex than I'd ever envisaged, obviously. Does it need ... do you have to organize it? Does it organize itself? Do you have to control it?

There are—and I use the word reservedly—there are laws to abide by, of course, but not in the way you would understand. Of course, there has to be structure, there has to be intelligence, and remember my dear friends these are earthly words which I use to really describe to you something that is really far beyond what you could truly understand.

George: It seems to me that the Great Creative Force actions all this into growth (yes) in order to be able to examine its expression or grow further from that expression.

There has to be expansion; that is why the Creative Force needs to have some form of expression. But that basically answers the question 'why?'—a question which has puzzled mankind and those on other planets for so long, because the understanding has not been available to them, although nothing has changed. It has always been, but consciousness has grown, evolution has changed planets.

George: This question 'why?' has been examined, as you say, by our exploring outwards (yes), it is also being currently examined scientifically by a huge cyclotron (yes) constructed at CERN in Switzerland which has taken many, many years to construct and it is specifically to answer or attempt to find out 'why?'—and that construction is about to come on stream, I understand. Now I don't know where the Great Creative Force would fit into this construction or perhaps it is part of the growing expression.

Yes. I am aware of what you speak of, and of course any attempt to try to understand ... in our world can only be for the good, because it shows that mankind is opening up in his own consciousness to try—and I hasten to add, they will never fully understand, but they are trying to understand.

George: And a refreshing part of this development is that it's seen to be huge investment for no, no monetary gain whatsoever (yes)—and this is rare in our history.

That is why I say it can only be good, because it is affecting the consciousness of man; not the emotional being, not the monetary gain being, but because they are seeking. And remember, if you seek you will be given answers. You understand?

George: Yes, and I know there are a number of scientists who'll be absolutely delighted if they find answers.

Yes. The seeking is important.

George: And their excitement will probably travel around the world.

Anything to do with the 'way' and 'why' will always find ears to listen. They will also find ears that disbelieve or refuse to listen, but that does not halt the progress that is being made by many, not only in your world as I have said, but in other planets who are also seeking. Now my friends, I hope I have brought to you a little more to think about.

(Affirmed)

George: Yes, that is a wonderful teaching for us.

It becomes ever more difficult when we reach this stage of explanation, because it is difficult to find words or expression to explain to you something so wonderful, so magnificent that it is just too much sometimes for the human brain to take and understand—but I hope I have brought it to you as usual in a simple and understandable way.

George: Yes. And these words can be written down and they can be read through more than once if necessary (yes) and that always helps with the thinking.

Yes. You tend to absorb that information a little more easily, I agree.

Rod: Can I just ask a simple question? When we come back onto earth, they wipe the computer (memory) completely clean and we come back with no memories of our previous spirit life, or very little, although I understand on a previous talk you did say they were bringing children down with some memories. The question is, you talk about other planets all over the universes, do they have the same problem? Do they come down with the computer completely cleared, their memories completely cleared of previous life?

That is part of spirit world, whether you come from this planet or another, those who reincarnate for whatever reason tend to have the memory erased, otherwise what would be the purpose of learning? But not all people have that memory erased—some are able to remember, but that is not the normal. Most people do not remember why they have returned, but it does not apply only to this planet. Is that helpful?

Rod: It does, thank you very, very much. I didn't want to feel we were the odd one out!
(Chuckles)

There is nothing odd, there is nothing special—you are just part of being ... on this one planet. You understand?

Rod: And may I just say on my behalf how honoured I am to get this information from you—I know the rest are, but I feel very honoured. Thank you very much.

I never cease to be amazed by this humility that each of you show towards my words. I should be the one who comes in humility. I am most grateful to you all that you accept not only my words, but that you extend to me much love, which in turn enables my own growth. And as always my dear friends I will take this time to say to you, I leave you with the thoughts of this evening, with my love, with my upliftment and with the support of all in spirit who draw close to you. I will let your evening continue.

(General thanks—it is remarkable to observe that there was not one single cough throughout the proceedings!)

George's notes:

Clearly, this was one of those wonderful deeply philosophical teachings for which a few, more extensive than usual, scientific notes will hopefully help to clarify. As the scientist present on this occasion, I will do my best:

Space: We have come a long, long way since that period in the mid-20th century when the majority who taught physics strongly asserted that space was nothing and I recall, as a young student, being 'put down' for daring to think otherwise. There were just a few who thought that if we have to assign any properties at all to space then it cannot be written off as 'nothing'.

VOID: In astronomy, void is a term used to denote areas in the sky of 'cosmic nothingness', defined as 'empty space containing no normal and no dark matter'. Normal matter includes planets, stars and galaxies. Dark matter is matter that does not interact with electromagnetic force but its existence can be inferred from gravitational data. The largest void (recently) found is nearly one billion light-years across. Recent articles declare its reason for existence to be unknown. This, in astronomy, is a hot topic.

In classical physics the void is nothing (no matter or energy) and it remains a mystery.

[Quantum theory/physics: That tremendously significant and successful branch of theoretical physics based on the assumption that energy is comprised of quanta or tiny discrete units.]

VOID deduced from Quantum Physics: This is the exciting concept that connects strongly with the Salumet teaching. Quantum theory sees the void as a virtual mass of virtual particles that forever appear and disappear. This theoretical phenomenon is called 'quantum fluctuations'. It follows that there is an intrinsic energy within the void, and this is known as zero-point energy. This energy would be infinite if it takes the form of a continuum, and each cubic millimetre would contain enough zero-point energy to create a new universe! This derives from the theory. And a general statement of quantum theory is that every particle (of our universe) is a (waved) excitation of an underlying field. This is of course adequate description of how all solid matter of our familiar universe derives from the underlying energy. In 1948, Henrik Casimir had predicted from theory that two facing mirrors in 'empty space' placed one micrometre apart ($1/1,000,000$ metre = $1/1,000$ millimetre) will produce a disturbance in the quantum fluctuations that will pull the mirrors together. Only in this last decade has nanotechnology advanced sufficiently to be able to use the 'atomic force microscope' to test Casimir's prediction. He is now seen to have been perfectly correct and zero-point energy is now a scientifically proven property of the void.

Therefore, the enormous energy of the void that has the capability of converting to matter, to which Salumet refers, has recently become a part of our scientific reasoning process.

27th May 2002: When we first got to hear of the term 'zero-point energy' or 'zero-point field', we checked with Salumet if this was one of the newly discovered energies that he had mentioned as a significant advance for humankind sometime earlier. His reply then: I have held back my words to you ... because did I not tell you that there would be many discoveries on this planet that were unknown to you at the time? And now, 6-years on, he evidently considers it the time to speak in some detail on this subject. Timing has always been important.

[Universes: Salumet has from time to time referred to a plurality of universes. This plurality agrees with 'string theory' requirement and while our universe is based on space-time, others will have different dimensional arrangements.]

CERN: Conseil Européen pour la Recherche (European Organisation for Particle Physics Research), outside Geneva is funded by 20 European member states including UK. The project began in 1952 with the construction of a small synchrocyclotron (1954) to accelerate and study colliding atomic particles, under the direction of Prof C Bakker. The current enormous accelerator is 27Km circumference, built into the countryside. A very special camera to record collision data of particles travelling near light velocity weighs 20 tons and has taken 10 years to build. It is the total assembly of a giant synchrocyclotron that has taken so many years to construct and it is about to come on stream. It is clear from Salumet's words that the void that envelops all contains more subtle qualities than will be found in the CERN project, and it relates quite closely to Creative Force = universal consciousness = God ... and the creation -----

~25th August 2008~ SALUMET

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I came close this time, I listened to you speak about the good feeling around your earth, because of the joining together of many nations. (Olympic Games in Beijing) It gladdens the heart to know that peoples can live in harmony, be happy for another human being's success. If this can happen at such times, why not in everyday living?

(Affirmed)

But it is a very good example of unity—of energy together.

George: Yes, it is hoped the effect of this will have a lasting influence and will be remembered well by the many nations who came together.

Yes. Unfortunately with humankind, these things do not always happen, but it is good to see when it does happen—much to think about by all people—yes.

Sarah: And if we could get all the religions to be thinking along the same lines instead of having too many discrepancies or too many arguments about what should be and shouldn't be, that would be even better.

Yes. It is of course step-by-step. There are changes within your world, but of course always they are slowly taking place. I hope and I know that my words to you last time gave you much to think about.

(Affirmed)

My purpose was not to confuse but rather to stretch your thinking.

George: Yes and of course our own terms that we use sometimes confuse and I was going to ask you: we have the term 'zero point field' and 'akashic field' and 'source' and I suspect these refer to much the same thing; certainly these three things are beyond space-time and they all involve communication. Would you care to clarify?

Yes. Of course, as always, words are limited for descriptions such as these, but, yes, because of the expansion of knowledge within many scientific communities, these things are given human terms. I would say to you, they are related, but the source will never fully be defined—that cannot be because consciousness is still expanding to that point—is always seeking, always growing. But, yes, I would go along with names that you have used for the understanding of something that is not yet quite understandable to the human brain. Does that help you?

George: Yes, and we appreciate that additional factor concerning source.

Sarah: It is the void that I was ... I think of a void as being a certain space, empty space—well of course the void you're talking about is certainly not empty. Is this void an infinite void or is there something ... again you're probably going to tell me I'm thinking with a human mind—but it's difficult to imagine. The only way I can imagine it is as an infinite void and there are no beginnings or endings to it. Am I right in thinking like that?

I would suggest, if that is the way you feel comfortable with the explanation, then hold on to that for now. The void I speak of is of course, ever-growing, ever-expanding knowledge, because it contains all knowledge and is partly a mirror-image of Source; which again is something we have not broached.

Lilian: If we start to say why and wherefore and everything ... that started us searching—does that mean that the void expands a little bit to accept our 'whys'?

Your own consciousness will become part of a wider consciousness, which then belongs to a wider consciousness and, yes, so it continues. You cannot use the mind, which is after all spirit, without some effect.

Paul: Is the Source the same as the Great Creative Force?

I would say as far as my knowledge goes, that is what we call the Source, the Great Creative Force, but that is for our own purposes; all is striving towards the Source.

Paul: I was thinking of the void then as ... it sort of comes out of ... as you say, it's like the mirror of the Great Creative Force or Source ... so it's like a manifestation of it.

Yes, it is an expression of the source, yes.

Paul: Just as we are made, some people say in 'God's image'—we are one kind of expression of the Creative Force.

Yes, you are creative energy. You need to think of yourselves as particles of energy to begin to understand. Is that helpful to you?

(Affirmed)

Lilian: That makes it more simple, for me anyway, if you think of everything as spiritual energy—each person and so on—and blending together, that makes it much more simple for me, this energy blending.

If you take each individual human within this room and you take the energy which is in the void of this room but you cannot see, all is expanding and growing—nothing remains static. But that is a very primitive explanation. I feel that this explanation gives you something to think about for some time to come.

George: Yes, and the synchronicities continue!

Yes.

George: And I was reading a book that had been passed to me and within a few days of your teaching I was reading about the ancient Indian 'Rishis' and what is termed 'Vedanta' and it seemed to be a version using other words of your teaching to us.

Yes. Always this is a problem to use human words for your understanding. So many times I have told you of these difficulties; that is why you must keep these explanations simple in order for you to find a little understanding.

George: It's very nice that, as you have told us, there will be confirmation from other sources of what you tell us and this has happened already!

Yes. There would be no point if the information does not also come from elsewhere, because then it shows you the truth of my words. And remember, dear friends, the simple truth is that all truth has always been, nothing is new. Do not forget those words: nothing is new.

Paul: Talking of synchronicities, there was quite a good one a few weeks ago: it's quite rare for lions to give birth to albino cubs, but there was a zoo in Germany where actually two females both had albino litters on the same day. People thought that was incredibly lucky—but nothing is luck ... so some say white lions represent part of the change—the new world that's taking shape, because the energies are changing. So somehow that can affect these things? I don't know if there's any truth in that.

Always mankind looks for explanations, does he not? But if you think about the colours and the representation of colour, white is at the end of the spectrum of pure energy. So think upon this and perhaps you will find your answer.

George: I suspect there is a greater incidence of albino animals being born today. I know there are several lots of albino squirrels—and it's very unusual. I just get the impression there are more albino forms being born today than in the past.

As there are more who join your human race as teachers. So we are speaking of the animal kingdoms; there is a comparison. You understand?

Paul: So these albinos are ...

Have a purpose within the animal kingdom.

Paul: Ah, right.

Sarah: Salumet, can I change the subject? Have you finished with the albinos?

Paul: Yes.

Sarah: You said that nothing is new and you said that this void and all that's in it is a mirror of the Source. We are seeking to be perfect, so ...

You are seeking to return to the Source.

Sarah: Return to the source, but in order to return to the Source, we've got to get ourselves 'right'!

Yes. You will encounter many obstacles in your way, such as human life. That is part of one of the obstacle of expanding and growing.

Sarah: So at one time, the mirror of the Source was perfect—was the exact mirror image and as things have gone on it has expanded and we've had the difficulties along the way. So is that right? And will it at some point—in fact I don't think it ever will, because you said we will never reach the Source—but will it ever be a perfect mirror image?

No.

Sarah: And was it ever?

No.

Sarah: Ah, right.

The mirror image of the Source is ever-growing, ever-expanding; trying to reach the Source of all life—the Creative Force, whatever words you wish to use. But that is why there are many universes, many different people, many sources of learning, because all is trying to reach the Source of all things. You really now are beginning to touch upon deep matters.

Lilian: Yes, like where did the Source come from? When did it start?

Sarah: It always has been.

Lilian: Pardon?

Sarah: It always was, it always has been, I would think. Isn't that right, Salumet?

Yes. So now my dear friends we will leave those words with you once again to ponder. It matters not if your understanding is not great at this moment in time, but gradually, if you are willing to open up, to transmute energy that is needed, then your understanding will become much greater. And so, we will leave it there for now.

(General thanks)

George: Can you take other questions this time?

I will take just one more.

George: Thank you—there is one. The one we know as William who asked about claustrophobia, he was very pleased with the answer given and he is most appreciative. He has asked the question again about the year 2012. There have been some crop circles recently and William has some knowledge of astrology and there seems to be an astrological reading from one that indicates a shift or a spread from that year to the year 2019. I think you will say that 'I told you so—it's not all going to happen in one year'. Can you say if there is any significance in this reading?

You are correct in your assumption. I said to you that it is the expectation of that year that people are clamouring to make as special. As you know, energy can be changed in an instant as can any predictions given by those on your planet who have the knowledge of what lies ahead. It can be given but it can also change in the natural expansion of consciousness and how things are created and done within that space of time. So I would say to our dear friend, not to become too absorbed in particular dates and years, but to take them only as guidelines of what is happening within many worlds, not only this one. And that would be my answer to him. I hope that will help.

George: Yes, thank you and it occurs to me that the year 2012—that's the next ...

Olympics that you speak of...

George: Yes, our next big Olympic Games event, in that year!

Now my dear friends, I will take my leave of you and allow the rest of your evening to continue.

(General thanks)

~8th September 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

It brings great joy to join with you once more. I am pleased to see so many of you join with us this time. I hope my dear friends that you found the last meeting of interest for each individual—there was something just a little different.

Lilian: Do you mean the last one that we had?

Yes.

Lilian: Yes it was, it was different—interesting.

(This had been an individual development evening each trying to sense something—and that which was sensed equated to each one's individual needs.)

There is much more for you this time, therefore, I will stay only a short time. Therefore if you have any questions, I will be happy to answer them for you.

Lilian: Thank you. Okay ... George?

George: Yes, I have one that relates to the last time you were with us. There is the Greek legend of the Cornucopia and it is said that the father god, Zeus, was raised by a goat. He accidentally broke a horn from the animal and he returned it, and the horn would produce any wish that the person having it would have. It was normally depicted being held by the goddess 'Fortuna'. I felt the horn was rather like the 'void', beginning from the father god and expressing everything—in the Greek legend it was frequently depicted with bearing fruit and flowers ... and clearly the father god was able to see the fruits that were produced and we were able to experience our fortunes. I felt it was rather like the Creator and the Void except that that is rather more complicated with the expressions going on forever to infinity.

Yes, I accept your analogy. Let me just say to you my dear friends, that within Greek mythology there are many elements of truth, as there is in many of your ancient civilizations, many elements of truth, because in those times many people were closer to what today you call 'the Creator'. Therefore to make these truths palatable to others, they were given in the form of stories of gods and ... dare I say 'magic'. But, yes, I understand how you see the relation between what you have spoken of and the void. There are many examples that could be given, but I feel, partly for simplicity and for your understanding, that we could perhaps make an analogy more simple for you in everyday terms: You, as human beings, are the houses of the mind. Within the human form, the mind is restricted, but in actual fact the mind contains all knowledge. So, you could say that the mind was the analogy of the void. Do you understand?

George: Yes, the mind...

The mind knows all things, but is only a shadow of what it truly knows, whilst within the void of the body. Does that make sense to you?

George: So the human mind would connect...

The mind is the spirit.

George: ...would connect with the universal mind and...

Yes, and therefore expand in that way.

George: And thereby have all knowledge.

The mind holds the knowledge of all things and it is only in the process of expansion that that knowledge is made available, whether it be housed within this body, whether it is taken home to our world, then the mind is freed to continue with that expansion of consciousness. You understand?

George: Yes. Thank you for that!

Sarah: On the subject of mind, Lilian and I were talking about the mind projection that Bonniol and Paul have together, and we were wondering: when Bonniol projects his mind into Paul's mind, he uses Paul's mind, but does his mind ... I sort of felt that maybe his mind took over Paul's mind, and maybe Paul's mind ... I wasn't quite sure how it works. Can you explain a little more how it does work?

You cannot take over another mind—it is a blending.

Sarah: Just a blending—yes.

It is blending and making use of the knowledge that is already within the person you call Paul. You understand?

Sarah: Yes.

It is not a matter of taking over the mind.

Sarah: No.

Lilian: Yes, that makes sense to me now.

Sarah: I suppose it's like you have said to us before: it's a blending of energies, really.

Yes. Yes.

George: Going back to the Creator, one could almost think of the Creator as being a summation of all the initial expressions from zero to infinity.

Yes. That is Creation.

George: A mathematician might wish to express it in that way.

Yes. And whatever way is acceptable or understandable, that is good for you. It helps in expanding your own knowledge in the same way as your scientists are trying to understand all that exists.

Even if you have a blueprint of something, it is not totally the full picture. You understand?

George: Yes. And it's interesting that you use those words at this time when the CERN particle experiment is coming to fruition.

Yes, yes. But I feel you have to try to understand that existence will never be static: it is ever-changing, ever-growing. That is why with what you call 'prediction', so often there is variation of the happenings.

George: Yes. Perhaps one can think of prediction as a very useful 'guide'.

Yes, of course. Anything that helps to expand the mind can only be good and, after all, is that not what each one of you is striving for: growth and knowledge, and of course, I have told you that you already have all-knowledge. It is almost like the children in your schools, that to be successful in their learning, they need to revise the facts. Would you not agree?

George: Yes indeed. We are endeavouring to get into that process of revision.

Yes, that is what is needed. Now, I think for this time I will take my leave. I know you still ponder my words and that is what I wished for you that you would think just a little more deeply and remember it is an ongoing process.

George: Yes, a wonderful process (yes). Thank you for helping us.

So, with those words, I will, my dear friends, bathe you all in the love of spirit. Know that many stand close to you. Know always that you grow more and more each time in the body of full and everlasting spiritual love.

(General thanks)

George's notes:

There are pearls of wisdom in this brief narrative that are truly profound:

Mind is likened to void but it is a mere shadow whilst housed in the human body.

EXPANSION is a vital key factor in achieving the all-knowledge enlightenment.

But we are reminded that existence is never static ... and this may well mean that those scientists who grapple with the incredible apparatus at Geneva may well be evaluating a moving target ... in more ways than one! Tomorrow's world in bound to be different from yesterday's world or today's world, because that is the ever progressing way of the creation.

As a part of the CERN experiment, an item called the Higgs boson is sought. It may or may not exist. It arises from purely theoretical consideration to help provide an explanation for 'gravity'. But we know from several other communications that mass and gravity change as planet spirituality changes, so it might be interesting to see how the hunt for the Higgs boson develops.

The diagram over page is an attempt to illustrate how the 'void' might be compared to the legend of the Cornucopia. And by making this comparison it might just give us a better picture of the void and how the expression of Source is ongoing.

DIAGRAM: EXPANDING EXPRESSION OF SOURCE WITHIN VOID

CORNUCOPIA LEGEND: In Greek Mythology, Amalthea was the goat who raised Zeus. When he accidentally broke a horn, Zeus gave it back with the power to give the possessor whatever he or she wished for. The goddess Fortuna was often depicted with This 'horn of plenty' filled with fruits and flowers that was also a symbol of fertility.

~22nd September 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I come close to you this time it gives me great joy to see how well you blend together on this evening. That is not to say you do not always blend together well, but only on certain occasions the light that emanates from each one of you is even brighter, and this is so this time.

Lilian: So if we've had a laugh and a joke before we come together, does that help?

Laughter helps to raise the vibrations within the room, but it is not only that, because when I come to you, many preparations have already taken place. But what does help is that each one of you, even with earthly troubles, has entered this room in a positive frame of mind. This is what helps—helps you to blend together as one.

George: That's nice to know. Thank you.

I do not intend to stay with you too long on this occasion, because I would wish to work quietly with this instrument this time. I know sometimes there is puzzlement about what happens when I work with this instrument. I can tell you only that the unity and the blending become more powerful each time this exercise takes place. It is a refinement each time, of those very subtle energies which are necessary for communication. The instrument is perfectly safe and it is our endeavour that we work even more closely together whilst I take part in these meetings. If you have any questions this time I will be happy to take just one or maybe two questions.

Lilian: Thank you. If I could just ask what maybe a very simple one: sometimes if you are listening to a singer or a piece of music and it somehow touches you, not to make you feel sad, but there has been a young boy just lately who has appeared on our TV screen and his voice is really beautiful, and I wondered why sometimes it seems to touch something in us—not to make us feel sad, but I can't describe the feeling...

It is only recognition of those spiritual gifts, whether it be from music, whether it be from the laughter of another or whether it be just appreciation of all nature. It is a certainty that it is you blending more closely with all that is spiritual.

Lilian: Ah, thank you.

All of you at some point have felt this I am sure.

(Several agreed)

Rod: There's a record called 'Angels' with young singing on it. There's one or two tunes in that—you can't help but cry, they put it over so beautifully—it overwhelms you.

Lilian: But it's not a sadness, is it?

Rod: Oh no.

Lilian: It's difficult to describe.

It is a recognition and a blending with the sound that they give forth.

Lilian: Does anyone else have a question?

George: I wonder if I could tell a story. It's a story that begins 2,000 years ago with Paul of Tarsus, who was I feel, very much the servant of mankind. He carried the then pure teachings of Jesus to Ephesus and on into Europe. Paul also spent time with the Essenes and during that time experienced a vision which he wrote about. It was a vision about description of 10-spirit realms with subdivisions, and what happens in them. That document was sealed in a jar and did not come to light until the year 1945 at Nag Hamadi in Northern Egypt, and a translation was not made known to the world for another 32-years after that. In the meantime, Paul trained as a doctor (in spirit) developing wonderful medical skills and assembling a team of doctors. Now, at the present time, he works as a spirit surgeon through the medium Ray Brown, and his wife Gillian organises the clinics. Now, Ray Brown and Gillian and Paul have between them written a book. I should say that this is an unusual spirit surgeon arrangement, involving Paul being able to work for up to 7-hours at a time. And Ray Brown is looked after by an Indian gentleman named Waters Running who 'unhooks' him and takes him to spirit where he spends some time in the Halls of Learning. So that Paul is able to work for 7-hours in his medium host. They have written this book and Paul has written a quarter of it himself, and I note that he lists 10-spirit realms in much the same way as he did 2000-years earlier. While on this topic I would also say that the book we published in year-2000 had mention of Ray Brown and Paul working through him, and 3-pages were devoted to Paul's work 2,000-years ago and included a listing of the spirit realms of his vision with the Essene. Well, it's quite a complicated story that stretches across 2,000 years, but there are wonderful connections. And as to the book published in 2000, I was aware that there was much help from spirit in writing that, and it was my aim to include all the important happenings on the Earth and it's noteworthy that Paul got such mention in it. Well, that's the story, and I just wanted to say if you have any comments on that or any elaboration, we would be delighted to hear it, Salumet.

I thank you for your time in telling what you call 'a story', which is in fact the events in the life of one gentleman connected strongly to spirit. I wish to say to you, my dear friends, there are many in your world who have the same connection to lives of the past, who are what today you term 'psychic surgeons', but I will agree in part that this particular gentleman has cultivated the use of spirit for longer periods of time than most people. There have been others, perhaps not so well known, but let me assure you there are many in your world today who do the same kind of work. Yes of course, when the gentleman leaves his physical body, it is an agreement with spirit that he is well cared for, in the same way that this instrument is placed to one side whilst I speak to you, albeit for a shorter length of time. Two thousand years you say—it is but a small amount of time, when we speak of that eternal part of spirit. Two thousand years may seem to each of you to be a very long time, but as you know, time means little to us in spirit. So do not be surprised that these happenings take place.

George: Another factor is that several of us have in recent months paid visits to Paul/Ray Brown, and it has been quite a joy and a privilege to have actually spoken with Paul of Tarsus! I have consulted him with a view to possibly improving my hearing, which he is endeavouring to do through reconnecting neurons. And he seems to have a particular skill in doing that sort of neurosurgery. Anyway, it's been wonderful to have met and spoken with this gentleman.

You have to remember my dear friends that nothing happens by accident! There is always good reason for these happenings.

George: I felt this web of connection seemed rather significant.

Yes ... yes. I welcome your story, but of course, for me I see many, many in your world who do equally good work—maybe different, but nevertheless, excellent work for spirit. Is there anything more you wish me to say?

Rod: I would just like to add that Gillian, the one that George mentioned, would love to hear your voice, would love to hear you in this room; I thought that was rather nice.

It was stated that Gillian has indeed received a book, CD and this transcript will of course be forwarded to her

Now, my dear friends, I will take my leave, I will allow your evening to continue and I will endeavour to work quietly with this one.

~20th October 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As always I am happy to join with you this time. There is with you this time a feeling of tranquillity and peace which is not always with you.

Sarah: That's nice to know, thank you.

Lilian: We don't always seem to notice these things that you do.

Yes. It takes a little more sensitivity to use the spiritual aspects of yourselves to recognize within this room the energy which is being given off by each one of you; but that brings us nicely to what I wish you to do this evening. I will answer any questions you may have, but for this time I would like you to take part in an exercise whereby the spiritual sensitivity comes to the fore with each one of you. To do that my dear friends I wish that each one of you goes around this room, looks deeply at each person and to find one thing that is positive, one thing that is not so positive, and perhaps give us your thoughts as to how the less than positive aspect can be transmuted into more sensitive areas of being. Do you understand what I am saying to you?

Sarah: Do we physically have to get up and look at the person or can we do it from our seats?

From your seats, yes.

Lilian: Just one person or everyone in the room?

Each one in the room—yes. You will find it interesting, I hope, but it is an exercise for growth. You understand?

Lilian: It is the spiritual aspect ...

That you will be using, yes. It is all too common that you use only those physical senses, rather than try to see the true aspect of the being. So, I hope you will take part my dear friends and whilst this is happening, I hope to work a little more deeply with this instrument. Therefore, I ask that any conversation may not be too loud.

Sarah: Will you be coming back to comment on what we say?

No, but I will be aware and perhaps next time.

Sarah: Yes, thank you. I always find it interesting to know how far off course we are!

Yes, I understand. Now before we begin, do you have any questions for me?

Lilian: Any questions anyone? I'm sure George has...

George: Yes. I'd like to refer to the TV news this morning and the stocks and shares market worldwide seems to have settled somewhat at about 2/3rds the value it had earlier this year; and secondly we seem to be heading into an industry and trade recession; and thirdly there was a very honest reference to a UFO encounter that happened in 1991 over Heathrow Airport—nice to have a really honest reference on the news media. And with those three things, it left me feeling that these are all things that the world needs and it seems to be in line with the teaching, and I just wondered if you would agree with that.

I, of course, cannot dispute the teaching, but, yes, when honesty and truth surface, this can only be for the betterment of mankind. Only when mankind realizes that honesty is part of the spiritual being, only then will mankind realize the true aspect of living. No matter what time in your earthly history, there has always been highs and lows of earthly living, whether it entails the many wars, the ravaging of land, or as you speak of now, the deep depression as regards trade and monies. All of these things are part of the evolution of your world. Remember, I have always said, there is positive and negative and if you wish to simplify your lives then remember those two words: positive/negative, good/bad, dark/light. Each needs the other to survive and this crisis that you are all feeling at this time, of course will pass, but it will leave behind the recognition for change and that is the true purpose of these things: the realization and change which must take place.

George: Yes. I was wondering if it was part of a process (yes) of simplification of life.

Yes. It is to help mankind recognize what is important in your lives; that importance is not 'gain through wealth and materialistic things', but by going inwards and recognizing, how you say, the brotherhood of all mankind in the goodness and the love which should be extended to all peoples in your world. That, that is what mankind must strive for. You understand?

George: Yes, yes, thank you. That is a nice clarification for us. I know a number of people are finding it quite difficult to understand what is happening, because there's a tendency to think of it entirely in physical terms.

It is only a physical thing—that is what you need to remember. And of course it is important that you survive and live well. We do not mean that you should live your lives on this planet in poverty and deprivation; that is not our meaning. I have spoken in the past: you can have much wealth and still be the most spiritual of people, so do not assume that wealth is wrong—that is not so. It is the craving and greed which goes with it that is so wrong.

George: Yes, I think 'how it is regarded' were your (yes) words before.

To many of men in your world, it has become their god, to the neglect of all things spiritual; and I will leave you with one word again which conquers all things, and that word is 'love'. It is small in number, in letters, but it is huge for your existence. And now, with those closing words, my dear friends, I will withdraw and work with this instrument and allow each one of you to go around this room and let us see what happens.

Lilian: Thank you. It's been lovely to be with you and thank you for being with us again.

George: And might I just ask if your instrument (Eileen) is included in this?

No, I will be working with her. She will not take part this time.

In the exercise that followed, I think we all sensed 'love' as the major positive attribute and as to the 'less positive' attributes noted, these seemed to reflect back to self. Perhaps we were being polite!

George's Notes:

Positive / negative: Concerning the above, it is probably correct to say that both extremes of the physical condition are needed to create the REALISATION that links to spiritual pathway. So the financial 'crunch' can be seen as a learning process that results in a realisation.

Ray Brown / Paul and further details following on from our 22nd September report: There was a further visit by three of us on 18th October. We arrived early and it was 'break time' with Paul not in residence and there was a wonderful opportunity to chat with Ray about the healing work and the travels of Ray, Gillian and Paul. It seems that there is a forthcoming book, by Paul on the spiritual teachings. That should be interesting! Statements by Paul of Tarsus, I would expect to relate very well to the original teaching of 2000-years ago and the Nag Hamadi scriptures dating from Paul's sojourn with the Essene. The three have travelled to Paphos, Cyprus, and it seems the famous 'whipping post' is genuine but it has been moved for some reason from its original location!

Healing results: I am able to say of friends and family that one who had a painful wrist due to carpal tunnel syndrome is now free of that pain, one whose walking was restricted due to a foot condition is now walking further and faster, and one with an ankle that ached during work sessions (due to an injury years earlier) is now free of the ache; we think proper tendon condition has been restored. And as to my poor hearing, I still wear the aids but sound quality is improved and I now listen to TV news at 13-volume setting instead of 17 ... a distinct improvement for which I am grateful.

There is a thick folder of testimonials and letters of thanks in the clinic waiting room, from: Sir John Mills, professional footballers, surgeons and many who have endured pain from trapped nerves, and various conditions for months and sometimes years ... and who are now suddenly free with full life enjoyment restored.

~27th October 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time I take just a moment or two to assess what is happening with each one of you. I know my dear friends that last time you found the exercise I gave to you to be a little frustrating, to say the least. Therefore, this time I would like you to further consider what I have asked of you and to continue what you have started; and as you think more deeply, then when we come together next time we will discuss it more fully.

Lilian: Well, I found it easy on the positive side, realizing how each and every one of us has grown spiritually, but on the negative side it was a blank.

I will say only this to you: do not think so much about negativity, but rather traits that each of you have, but those traits can be transmuted into better ways of living. For example, and I hope this may help each one of you: if someone focuses and worries about money, to us it is a negative, but to you, you may just find it part of life's habits. So you see, it is not negative in the way that each of you are conceiving it to be. Is that more helpful for you?

Lilian: Yes.

Sarah: We were a little confused last week, well I was anyway, as to whether we should be looking at the spiritual aspects or the physical—how the person is actually living or trying to get the answer from spirit? You are looking with spiritual eyes at physical conditions.

Sarah: Ah right, okay, thanks.

And then you should be able to assess each individual in a most valuable way, because sometimes as human beings, you need to be guided by the thoughts of others before you recognize any of these negative traits. You understand?

Sarah: Yes.

You are all being very kind to one another, but you must look with spiritual eyes if you are to discover and work through this form of exercise. So my dear friends you have another chance this evening to see what you can achieve.

Rod: Salumet, I might be a bit dim on this, but to say that I could look at ... just take an individual ... look at Paul now right across, to know Paul and for me to discover ... I know what makes him buzz ... but to go in deeper than that, I don't know him that much. I have a difficult thing even with my dear wife here, she's difficult to understand. So, perhaps I'm looking at it at the wrong angle, am I?

You need to go inwards before you look at another person. You cannot do it with the physical eyes only.

Rod: Ah, so you have to meditate.

Yes. You go inwards and it is a knowing.

Jan: I find it's absorbing that person's energy that you are able to...

Yes, that is correct, but to enable you to do this, you must use spiritual eyes. Of course you cannot find negatives, because you do not know each other so well in physical lives; therefore to understand another being, you have to use spiritual eyes. You understand?

(Agreed)

I do not say that you will achieve too much this time, but it is the beginning of understanding yourselves. Does that make sense to you?

Sarah: Yes, it does, thank you. It's clearer than last week.

Rod: But if I'm looking at another person, does that help me look at myself?

You do not look, you feel and of course that will help you in your own self-understanding as to what may be achieved by going inwards. You understand?

Rod: Right.

Do not be too concerned, but it is an exercise which will be most beneficial to you, not only within the confines of this room, but in your everyday living. Now, I will give you the time to work with yourselves and to try to discover your fellow 'men' within the room. But if you do have any questions this time, then now is the time to ask me.

Sarah: I just wondered, Salumet, when you're working with Eileen, can you tell us a little bit about where she actually goes when you're working with her?

Yes. I believe I have said before to you that her mind is placed to one side whilst I take control of the voice. I use her voice to speak to you. She is perfectly safe and is of course taken care of by her own guardian spirits. She is not aware of the place where she is, because we do not have sufficient time for her to have that spiritual understanding—but it is not important. What is important is that she remains safe and I am allowed to use her voice in order to communicate with you.

Sarah: Once or twice Eileen has said she's had some sort of feeling about being in a place, when she's coming back, not when she's going, when she's coming back.

Yes, because her own spirituality is growing the more I work with her. That is why at times I need time to work with her quietly in these conditions.

Sarah: So really you're just working on her voice, are you?

I use her voice, I am using the body to some degree. As you can see, I am able to move the arms; I could use the whole of her body but it is not necessary; it is her voice box that I need to use.

Sarah: So when you say you are working with her, you're just really working on her voice box...

No. No, I use only the voice box to speak to you, she is being cared for by her own guardian spirits.

Sarah: So what exactly are you doing when you say 'I'd like to work with Eileen'?

We are giving her time in the realm of spirit to grow and to enlarge as a spiritual being, so her understanding grows greater.

Sarah: Ah! Right!

You understand?

Sarah: Yes. So you're doing it for Eileen and not for you?

Yes.

Sarah: Ah! Right! Because I always thought it was for your benefit.

It is in part that the more we work with her spiritually, the easier it becomes for me. It is not easy to explain something that you do not experience for yourself. She is apart from her body just for a very, very short time. It is no different from what happens to you all in sleep state. You are not aware of anything in sleep state, are you?

(Agreed)

No. It is similar. But no harm comes to you whilst you sleep; in fact in sleep state the spirit is rejuvenated. You understand?

Lilian: Yes. That is an easy way for us to understand.

Sarah: So this is also part of the reason why we need a certain amount of sleep, so that spirit has time to rejuvenate.

Yes, yes. It is as any form of machinery; you cannot work it continuously without it breaking down. And so the spirit needs to be free whilst the body rests and recuperates from the stresses and the strains of your earthly world.

Sarah: So if people have ... you said 'break down' and I was just thinking of a 'nervous break-down' ... has that got anything to do with the amount of time that the spirit has over the other side?

It has to do with the responsibility that each of you has in taking care of the housing of the spirit.

Jan: On a dream theme, I have a house in a different part of the world to here, and I know that I'm much more relaxed and open when I'm there and I dream such a great deal more, and I believe it's because my spirit feels freer from the stresses that I feel here and I actually look forward to going because I have such strong spiritual dreams—that is a good description of them really. So our physical, in our dream state, does affect to a huge degree our spiritual side in sleep, I believe.

Yes, yes. The two cannot be separated. Whilst you are in human form, the spirit is housed within the flesh of the body, but as you all know and understand, you cannot ignore the needs of the human flesh, of the human situation; and that human part of you has to eat, has to sleep, has to rest for it to function fully. But to be a good vessel for spirit, that part is most important for the well-being of both flesh and spirit—you cannot separate them, because one will always affect the other. You understand?

Jan: Yes.

Sarah: So, the only time they are separated is when the spirit returns to its home again, back over the other side.

Not only in sleep-state, but in meditative state. When you meditate, the spirit is raised from the body, the mind is separate. In true meditation, you are joining more to the spiritual aspect of yourselves and in so doing you improve the human flesh side of the being. Does that make sense to you?

(Affirmed)

I feel sometimes, as human beings you cannot see or feel that close connection. Sometimes the body is viewed as the all-important thing and the spirit is some distant form which is spoken about.

Jan: I think everybody in this room wishes immensely that it could be the other way around. As we've spoken on numerous occasions, our physical lives do encumber that spiritual side (yes) but for many people on this planet—and they're so easily recognizable—the ones that are spirit first, physical personality second, I think we can all admire from afar and the more you're involved in this work, the easier it is to recognize them.

Yes, and you recognize other human beings either by form or spirit, by expanding your own spiritual self. The more you expand spiritually, the more aware and sensitive to your fellow man you become.

Jan: It's a sensitivity that grows much more with maturity. It's a sensitivity I've found that's more empathy than sympathy and with your teachings, I've found it much easier to separate the emotion from that, apart from in my everyday life with my own children and that's my hardest part of all—to separate that.

We have never said it will be easy for you and I am sure many people who you would speak with will have some area within their lives that they find difficult, even with spiritual knowledge, but that is also part of your spiritual growth, because the struggles of life make you stop and view life differently. Would you not agree?

Jan: I would.

That is why I would say to you my dear friends: that is why people struggle when there is illness, when age comes to the human form. Why must there be pain/suffering? Because within those limits of pain and suffering, the spirit grows. The spirit recognizes itself, but the human side of you finds this most difficult to understand. How many times have you seen someone who has suffered much, shine through that pain ... that suffering, and they almost glow with that spirituality that they find. They are the inspiration for spirit. They are people who have found themselves and know that the pain and the suffering are but temporary.

Rod: Yes, amongst ourselves in the past we've always said that these people have got something special—they have something that we haven't got and that is right. I see where you're coming from.

That is wrong! That is not right, that is wrong, because you all have that ability.

Rod: Well they seem to outshine the likes of me.

Jan: That's because, Rod, their where they are at the moment on their growth and they've chosen to come with disabilities this time or ... and that's why they shine.

And you are being much too harsh on yourself my dear friend.

Lilian: That's nice to know.

You have many, many, many spiritual qualities my dear friend.

Rod: What, me?

Lilian: Yes.

So do not place yourself in another's shoes, because you are unique, you are individual and you have those spiritual qualities which are needed to see you through this lifetime. So do not be so harsh.

Rod: Well I will just say something that's a bit funny really, but this morning I went and spoke to a chap digging a hole and he got down to some concrete and he must have been in a temper. I was trying to make polite conversation and he was an angry man and it didn't matter what I said, he barked back. And I thought: 'I am getting nowhere here boy', so inwardly I said: 'and a happy Christmas to you boy' and I went. I felt rather miserable with that chap. I didn't give him anything, no happiness at all.

You gave him everything: you gave him your time, you gave him your thoughts and your consideration. Those, my dear friend, are spiritual qualities; it is just that you do not recognize them as such. Still you doubt even though I have told you otherwise.

Rod: Yes.

Yes, but do not be concerned. Your heart is good.

Rod: Thank you for those kind words.

Daphne: Salumet, if I may interrupt and speak to you. I'm a new-comer to the group and I'm very happy within it. But I was shopping one day and I went into a shop and a lady came up to me and she said, 'You're spiritual'. And I said, 'Yes' and she said, 'I could see it as soon as soon as you came through the door. Would you say a prayer for me, please? I have epilepsy.' And I said, 'But how did you know?' She said, 'I just knew as you walked through the door that you would help me.' And that made me feel very humble to think of that.

Yes, but she had that spiritual knowing. She could see what you humans term 'the aura' of a person.

Daphne: I see.

When you are attracted to another or you feel comfortable with another, it is because the spiritual lights that you all exude blend well together; in the same way as you feel uncomfortable with another. But you never should wish any harm to another human being, but what you do is you step backwards and you send a thought of love to that person.

Daphne: I understand, thank you.

This is what I am speaking about when I speak of spiritual eyes and spiritual knowing. You have to work on it, you have to expand your own consciousness and that realization becomes easier for you.

Sarah: I think probably all of us have noticed that ... you saying about some people just see the physical beauty. But you can meet a very, very pretty person, or beautiful or handsome person and you don't really like what you see and yet you can see another person who really isn't very attractive, but you just think what a wonderful, lovely person they are! And that obviously is the spirit coming through.

Yes, that is true. Do not be fooled by the outward vehicle, because, imagine a very old, rusted car, for example, and if you are clever with your paint brush or whatever you use, you can make an old, worn down, useless vehicle look very good. So, you see, it is easy for the human eye to be fooled, but not so those spiritual eyes. That is what I am trying, my dear friends, to get you to understand. It is important for your own soul growth.

Lilian: Yes, well I think what you've said tonight will really help us.

And with those words, I will take my leave. As always, I leave you with many things to think about, but to know that so many of us stand close to you, each and every one of you and even those you love; because those you love affect the way you think and feel. So, my dear friends, I will let you focus and have your discussion and hopefully next time we will see how much better you have done.

(General thanks)

~3rd November 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I come close to you this time, I have to say my dear friends how many have been listening to you and your conversation.

On this occasion, following our healing prayers, there was talk of World Change. That the US electorate have voted for a non-white president offering new ideology, signals widespread change and follows the earlier rationalisation of racial unity in South Africa. Equally, the world's deteriorating financial systems with large industrial blocs heading into recession, signals a turning point and our planet's move away from excessive materialism. The changes are welcomed and understood by many and our group recognises that all is very much in accord with communications received from both Salumet and others.

George: I think I felt their energy; there seems to be very good energy here tonight.

Yes. I withheld speaking to you in order for others to listen. It is interesting for those in our world to listen to discussions and debates about your world, how you view the people within your world and how those of us in the world of spirit view the same things in a slightly different way. Nevertheless, what comes from your conversation is that one word 'love'. This, my dear friends, shows how you have grown, that each one of you may have differing opinions, but at the end all agree on one thing and that is the distribution of love in your world. There are those, my dear friends, who stand by each one of you, who are attracted by your words, who also, I hasten to add, will try to influence you in the way you look and feel about your planet Earth. All of those here this evening are most interested in the development of your world and have decided this evening that they will come close to you and help to focus on your opinions; and it would indeed be most interesting to see how your opinions form as you grow older and your world becomes wiser. I hope each one of you will accept the help of those who stand with you this time.

George: Yes, I'm sure we would very much appreciate that and I'm sure we all feel that it's a very interesting world at the present time and there are many signs of change, and we are optimistic that these changes will lead to a better Earth.

Yes. Optimism is important: from optimism grows love. It is most important that each one of you, not only in thinking about your Earth but also in your daily lives, in your home life, in your work life, that love in some form is cultivated well. I hope that I do not overwhelm you at times by stressing how important love is, not only for each other, not only for this planet, not only for this universe, but for all of creation, because without it there would be no planet, no universes, no peoples; and for a word that you use so seldomly in everyday living it is important that you learn to express love in many ways.

People on Earth do not always recognize what we mean by love. It is not the romantic notion that Earth people have of love, but of that innate knowing that comes from spirit, because, you see, initially you come from all-encompassing love. I will leave you to consider what love means to you as individuals and for this time, my dear friends, I would ask you to continue with your discussions, but also to become more aware of those who stand by you this evening and to feel their considerable love for each one of you.

George: Yes, it feels rather like a 'cosy mist' encompassing all. That's just the mental picture that I have.

Rod: I find there are days, Salumet, when you meet a load of 'doom and gloom' guys and women and they take some getting used to—you walk away and think that you've lost that one and there seem to be so many of them. But if I'm wrong—I hope I'm wrong, because it would be nice to get someone bright who you can bounce off easily. But there are a number around, quite a number around who see everything as black and they can't see any good. Am I mixing with the wrong people, or what?

You my dear friend are seeking. You cannot change others, but what you can achieve is to shine your own spiritual light more brightly so that when you leave these people that you speak of, they are the ones who go and say 'I feel much better for having spoken to that gentleman'. So you give rather than take their energy. You will always have negative people and I am sure you can all speak of peoples who make you feel that way, but you have to become stronger spiritually to lighten that darkness in other's lives. That is all you can do. But do not dwell on anyone else's negative aspects; you leave it behind and send love to them.

George: The mental picture that I have relates to the Peter Pan story and there's this fairy that sprinkles a little stardust everywhere. It doesn't matter that she's moved on—and the people that she's been with, they're just left with that little bit of stardust, which will have some effect eventually.

Rod: I can see that, yes.

Yes. I always feel amused by your analogies my dear friend.

(Chuckles)

Rod: I think he thinks I'm going to be a fairy, Salumet, waving a wand.

It could be arranged!

(Laughter)

Of course. I am having what you call 'fun' with you, but you understand what I am saying to you.

Rod: Yes, you have to have laughter.

Laughter is part of the spiritual aspect of your beings—yes. But, as always, you need to recognize dark times, to recognize the light, so it is not always a negative thing to experience some negativity, because in recognizing you can then make change. Yes.

Rod: I see.

If all was goodness and light, there would be no reason for us to come to this planet, because this planet would have no use, if all was love and brightness. You understand?

Rod: Yes.

Thank you.

Rod: I did look at a baby ... we had a little baby with us yesterday, well what was the baby—six months old—and I thought nine and six—fifteen months ago, that little spirit was up with you. And you can see in that child, it is so beautifully new, the spirit is so new, it's lovely. And I thought of the sadness of the persons who knew that spirit and is left up with you. It was very nice of them to let us have that spirit.

The spirit is not new, only the earth being is new; it may be that the spirit is much older than you would imagine. But all who come to have this earthly cloak have chosen to do so, so do not be too sad for the spirit or spirits in our world 'left behind' as you say—they will be glad that the spirit has decided to come to this earth for whatever reason; but they will be even happier when that spirit returns home.

Jan: I'm looking forward to meeting the spirit that's returning to us via Richard and Anna (yes)—we're really excited about that.

Yes. Remember, any spirit who decides to return for whatever reason, will be known to all of you within that family group and even further afield of the family group.

Jan: Yes, I had an innate feeling that that would be so, and so has Richard.

Yes. It is impossible almost to not know and recognize the spirit that comes to a family, because you have been united in many ways, through many lives, although it may be in different formats such as mothers, brothers, sisters—no matter what, the spirit itself is recognizable. You understand?

Jan: I very much do. I'd like to share with the group—as the group knows, Richard and I were with each other in some format as Salumet has described before...

Yes.

Jan: ...what we were is of no importance to us. But when Richard was born, I looked into his eyes and I said outwardly, 'I know you!' and the family around me thought I'd gone a little bit 'cuckoo'. But I just knew that I knew this spirit. I have no idea why I knew, but I knew I knew him.

Yes. And you all have that knowledge, but it is just that as you come to the earth plane in human garb, most memory is erased—but some do remember, yes.

Jan: Thank you for letting me share that.

Rod: I'm going to be a bit rude here, Salumet, so please forgive me. We've got a good sense of humour here on earth in the main, haven't we? Where you are in spirit, you are way, way up there, I guess, have they got a good sense of humour as well, all your friends up there, your peers?

Because you pass to spirit, does not immediately make you change. As you are here, so you become in our world, but if you are speaking of conditions from which I come ...

Rod: I am.

...you are speaking of something entirely different and humour as you would know it is not necessarily present at that stage of development, if you like.

Rod: Thank you.

[Salumet's domain is deeper spirit, beyond Astral Planes, beyond form. Unless otherwise made clear, Salumet's references to spirit concern that deeper purer spirit. Humour is a quality that relates in the main to Earth and Earth's Astral Planes and perhaps the lower spirit realms.]

Lilian: In fact the emotions that we have now, whatever they be, are lost along the way through other things, I take it?

Gradually they are not needed. It is difficult to explain because you have nothing on this earth planet to compare it with. Therefore, to try to describe it for you is difficult. It is a state of being where there is complete love, harmony, unity, call it what you will, it is a state of being. It is not something you will understand.

Rod: But a great deal of happiness...

But for much of your time in spirit, there is humour—of course there is, you do not change so much—and, after all, if you are to pass through the realms of spirit to go beyond humour and love and laughter, you have to develop to a very great degree. I hope that has helped you.

Rod: Yes.

George: Yes. I think that may be understood slightly better in the ancient Indian way of thinking—rather more understanding than here in the West. I think they have a number of words for these much higher states...

Yes. All ancient civilizations, as I have previously told you, were much more aware of their own spirit and I have told you much of it has been lost, but I would agree that those people who you say live in the Eastern part of your world—although to me your world is one unit—they do seem to have survived the use of deep meditative practises, which enables them to be more spiritually aware.

Rod: These are people like in Tibet—that kind of person.

More so, but it is available to you all.

George: Yes, and we have spoken in the past of scientific remote viewing and I noticed only today that there is a report on that subject that comes to us from India and within that report there is reference to Indian spiritual tradition being in keeping with the ability to scientifically remote view in that way, which is really a form of mind projection, I believe.

Yes. Again, as I have said to you previously, all of these things are available to anyone who wishes to develop their own spiritual senses, but in the past, these what you call ‘remote viewing’, have been misused, but mankind, as always, recognizes when these things should be used more wisely and that is being recognized.

George: Yes and the report from India ... their usage concerns anti-terrorist work, which I think is reasonably understandable.

All what you call ‘gifts of the spirit’ are meant to be used for the benefit of mankind—not to hurt one another. And it has been used in this way in past times, but that is part of our coming to you at this time, to influence all of man for good, for love; again that word ‘love’ is so important—and if it is being used as you say, it is to protect mankind (yes) from actions and deeds of another who think that they are right, but that the majority of your world would call ‘evil’. But again, you have to know the wider picture.

Jan: Salumet, I feel that I’m being impressed from spirit to write in some form.

Yes.

Jan: But I’m concerned that I don’t want any ego to be present in that writing. So, obviously if I just keep going inward I’ll receive the right information as to how to format that, won’t I?

Well, I would suggest to you that you give out thoughts before beginning any form of spiritual act that you ask that only truth and love be formed in those words.

Jan: Right, okay.

That whoever may wish to use you in that way comes only for good.

Jan: Right.

You must always begin that way for your own sake and protection and also I would say to you my dear friend to give thanks to those who wish to use you in that way.

Jan: So you’re confirming that those feelings that I’m having, the impressions, are correct—I am picking up the right messages.

That you must ask for protection, that the messages you receive are for...

Jan: For good.

...For good, yes.

Jan: Right.

There are always opportunists. That is why you must be sure that whoever uses your hand is using it for love and truth.

Jan: The opportunists seem to follow me around and that's, I think ... well, I don't want to use the word 'fear', because it's not a fear, it's just a concern. Yes, I will practise more on the asking.

You must take control; you cannot allow it just to happen. It would be much better if it was done in a controlled way with you taking control.

Jan: Right.

You understand what I am saying to you?

Jan: Yes, I do.

Yes, you must be in control. Yes.

Jan: Right. I must be my own gatekeeper.

Yes.

Jan: I'm the source...

But you must not be too open.

Jan: No. I control what happens. If I feel uncomfortable, I should say so.

If you are uncomfortable, then you ask them to leave you. Any discomfort is not acceptable.

Jan: No. But there will be those that stand beside me that are for my protection as well ...

Yes.

Jan: ...but they need my...

They need you...

Jan: They need me to say.

Yes. You must ask.

Jan: Okay. Thank you.

It is quite true, those words that are used in your world: 'Ask and you shall receive'. Yes.

Now my dear friends I feel I have spoken to you enough this time. The instrument's voice is dry and I do not wish to cause discomfort. Therefore, I will take my leave this time, but as always, I leave you my dear friends with love, with upliftment, with the wish for joy in your lives and that your understanding might grow daily.

(General thanks)

George: A wonderful evening again, thank you Salumet.

Paul: And we will continue with the exercise.

George's Notes:

Our debate continued and doubtless there were influences within that debate from those others who came close. It is probably true to say that there was thinking in different directions with a striving to see how others might think or feel.

There was reference to Northern Ireland and how things resolved once NEGOTIATIONS began. 'There is hint of negotiation with Taliban ... that could be good! And there is the Winston Churchill quote: jaw-jaw, not war-war!'

Terrorists don't do what they do just for fun ... have they been treated badly? How are they thinking?

The most honourable soldier is perhaps the United Nations soldier involved in policing.

Mercenaries: must do it for reward and macho image ... occasionally idealism.

S.A.S./Intelligence officers: so often give the impression of elitists on an ego trip.

Through history it has been the male that has principally fought wars. Why should gender make such a difference? Is the male blocked in some way?

It has been part of the military system to conscript youth, to put guns into the hands of youth with license to kill. They become part of a team so that personal thinking gets lost. Not always. There is the story of a conscientious objector who in trench warfare went over the top three times and did not fire a shot throughout the war. Another conscript argued that he would not shoot to kill ... better to wound, and take two out of the battle (one combatant and one medic)!

Motivations in general: orders, politics, survival, fear of disgrace, threat of firing squad ... and love of all life. 'Love of all life' brings to mind that Cecil B De Mille's film 'All Quiet on the Western Front'. A soldier seemed mesmerised by the beauty of a butterfly that settled on the trench parapet, but in the moment of reaching out towards it, he was shot by a sniper.

Middle East reprisal killings often involve totally uninvolved kids and mums ... what must they be thinking? Can it be in the name of their religion? Never!

There is now the full and obvious realisation that in 'blanket bombing', whole families are wiped out; in 'rocket attacks' targets are approximate; landmines get anyone, and all leaves mess and chaos in its wake. The more all concerned can talk, the better for everyone ... and for nature!

This week, there followed Remembrance Sunday, when the fallen are remembered. It is well that such events are not forgotten or dismissed lightly from consciousness. But what of the millions slaughtered who did not fight, who were not involved other than to be killed by those who did. They were not represented in any parade or did not receive posthumous medals. Theirs was a silent passive role. Perhaps their deaths somehow highlight the dogged self-indulgence of those determined to perpetuate warfare. Perhaps their deaths will help others to become more aware ... more spiritually aware.

~10th November 2008~

Salumet did not come through this time. One through Sarah gave instructions that we were all to be 'overshadowed' by beings from different planets. We attempted to describe the individual being overshadowing each sitter, and afterwards feedback was provided as to the accuracy of our descriptions. We were pleased with our attempts and it was explained that this was an exercise in mind projection and learning to become aware of what was being projected. We all got impressions of certain details: Paul described his as having a prickly face/rough skin with small red eyes—a greenish cactus colour. (The one through Sarah explained that he was shadowed by one resembling a lizard and Paul agreed that this had crossed his mind.)

Emily described her hands and arms as straight...almost like a 'Lego man'. She felt like a tree, with legs as one, but felt movement from arms. (It was explained that she was being overshadowed by one who was from the planet where the beings were like mushrooms, as described during a previous Bonniol session: 22/08/2005—these beings also had very well developed mind projection, like the one with Rod)

George felt a solid feeling in the fingers—all except the little finger and a tough skin. (He was told by the one through Sarah that he had one digit free, while the others were webbed together. The tough exterior was due to the hostile conditions in which it lived. There was a long nose—not quite a trunk, but projecting well forward and ears like long fish gills.)

The one shadowing Rod, it was explained was thicker and quite rigid and it was explained that on their planet, they had no need for mobility. They were most proficient at mind projection, which was the reason why they did not need to move.

Lilian had the feeling of a small mouth and thinner than we are. (It was explained that she was in fact being overshadowed by one like a fish and indeed more elongated. Although they don't live entirely in liquid, they do spend considerable time in liquid—not like our water).

Sue had the impression of a sphere, like a bubble with no arms or legs—translucent and a pulsating movement to get around. (It was explained to her that the lower part of her body is not unlike an octopus, but the top half is quite different. They lived in a liquid, though not as thin as water and they were able to float on top, but the top part of the body is subjected to much heat and there is a skirt that flows over the top of the 'octopus', which protects it from the heat—the bottom part being in the liquid and the top part in the heat. The top part also has a shell-like formation protecting the body.)

Ann felt her middle part to be quite bulging. She sensed a small head and a sense of heat and a reddish colour. (It was explained that the red was not actually the colour of you, but is a reflection from the red sand. Her body was like a type of glass and it absorbs the colours around it. The life has several aspects, including life upon the red sand—the round part that Ann sensed in the middle was due to the fact that they roll in the sand and the glass-like structure reflects this. At other times you are another colour. One part of the life involves rolling around the sand, but like the butterfly, you then develop into a much lighter being and you rise off the sand into the atmosphere and you again absorb the colour of the skies, which are a deep purple colour. So this being is a 2-part being.)

Daphne felt a tightness around the middle and shoulders—quite stiff. (It was explained that they were a form of—not human and not tree, but something in between. The head is able to move quite freely though. Sarah explained that we had been helped in this exercise by many and we were encouraged to try to use our Mind Projection as much as possible in order to make exercises such as this easier in the future, and allowing more to be brought to us.

George's sketch:

Representing in a simple way, each of our cosmic friends, illustrating the wonderful variety of forms—a grand Cosmic union of wonderful beings—it was stressed that these were a tiny fraction of the variety available:

~17TH November 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Good evening to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As I join with you this time I say to you my dear friends, it is of much interest to those of us in spirit to see such excitement as you have had this past week.

Lilian: Yes!

George: Yes. It was a wonderful evening last week when we were all overshadowed by ones from different planets and I suspect you would have had something to do with that, Salumet?

I, of course, am involved in all that this group undertakes but I, of course, was not with you last time, but am aware of course with what is happening here. I am aware of you at all times. Let me say this to you my dear friends: although your excitement lies in the fact of experiencing these other beings, the purpose was that each one of you has now experienced an overshadowing of spirit; in order to catch your attention, because after all, I have been trying to encourage you to take note of who comes close to you. Until now some of you have found this just a little difficult, but because of the nature of the overshadowing, might I say, it has got your attention! You understand?

(Agreed)

Now, I say to you dear friends, you have felt that overshadowing, you know there is nothing to fear, that all of you, if I might put it this way, returned to normal and found the experience to be one that gave you great joy.

George: Yes. I can say for myself that it was certainly a very positive experience and I think that goes for us all.

Yes. That is what we meant to achieve. Now my dear friends there is no reason for any of you not to be used by those of us in spirit who wish to use you. You understand? That was the true purpose of that exercise. After all, I told you earlier in this one of your years that your own self-development was to the fore and that has been the reason why I have not come to you so often, in order for this development to take place. Is there anything you wish to say on this subject?

Sarah: I was just wondering if you were the instigator of Eileen not feeling well last week so that we could have that meeting.

Salumet responded with humorous nuance:

I would not deem to take responsibility for that happening! But of course if the instrument had been with you, the format may have been slightly different, yes, yes. But I do not inflict instruments with earthly problems!

Sarah: I did not really think you had!

No ... thank you.

George: It was certainly a very positive experience and the overshadowing was felt and as our organizer departed and there were farewells, the overshadowing just totally went at that point. It was a wonderful experience—very positive.

Yes, with not fear left behind.

Paul: No, I think it was something—we relished it like we so much enjoy looking at nature and all the diversity of life; it felt a bit like a celebration of so much diversity of life.

It is a celebration of opening up to spirit. It should not be celebration, it should be a natural happening for you all, because you have reached a stage where each one of you as individuals should be able to blend more closely with spirit without fear or any worry of any kind that you are not safe or you feel fearful, because as you know my dear friends, it will never happen whilst you have fear. That is why we chose this diversity of feeling, because we know you could not deny what you were feeling. I hope that you will agree with those words.

Sarah: It did seem that everybody felt that what the control (sent/overshadowed) was agreed with.

Yes, yes. I am most happy that you have achieved that state, that state of feeling spirit more closely to you. Now my dear friends it is time for you to focus more on what spirit wants you to achieve, that you listen, that you feel more closely those who come and stand by you, who wish you to undertake the work of spirit for whatever reason. You now know my dear friends that it is possible, and that is most important for your own development.

Sarah: Jan was just saying that when she had a bad leg last time, you told her it was because she wasn't on the right pathway. There are several of us in this group at the moment who have got trouble with our legs and ...

I did not say 'the wrong pathway'.

Sarah: No?

May I correct you and say that it means probably that at this present moment of your Earth lives, you do not wish to move forward.

Sarah: Ah, right!

Lilian: Ah, yes, I remember that now.

...Not that you are on the wrong pathway.

Sarah: Ah, I do beg your pardon. Yes, so maybe there are a few of us who are...

...who need to go forward...

Sarah: Yes.

...and that carries on from what we have been discussing this evening.

Sarah: Yes, exactly—that's what I was just thinking.

You understand?

Sarah: Yes, I do.

You see how all things come together.

Sarah: Yes, yes.

Yes. Has the lady a question for me—the one called Jan?

Jan: I'm sorry if I was wrong...

Do not judge yourself; it was a misuse of words.

Jan: Right, okay. My question I think I've been having all day is on the subject of organ donorship.

(Transplants) I think that's the question I've been having all day—it's certainly been raised in the media and I've sat and thought at length for some time on my own about it and I'm not sure which side of the fence I actually sit on—whether or not it's something we should choose to do or whether our governments are going to try to make us all donors, unless we choose to opt out of that situation. But on a spiritual level, if another person gratefully receives, which we know they do, somebody else's heart (yes), for both sides spiritually it must be an enriching experience. Obviously the recipient carries on hopefully in good health for some years, but for that spirit that has gone on knowing that part of that physical being remains and is keeping somebody else alive, must be an extremely enriching experience. Am I right or could you elaborate on the spiritual?

Yes, I understand, I have been waiting for you to ask, but that is why I have come to you. Of course, if we are speaking spiritually, if we are speaking of disease, dis-ease of man; the answer to that question would be that these donations would not be necessary, because mankind spiritually would learn to heal that body—but that is an ideal earthly world. What is important is the reason behind what is happening, and of course, someone who gives is doing so for good—that would never be judged as a wrongdoing—how could it when the act is done in love? So, yes, I would say anything done in the name of love would not be frowned upon in spirit, but what we, as spirit, would like you to do as human beings, is to focus on that disease of man and change things that way; but that is not likely to happen just yet. So I say to you my dear friend, be guided by your conscience and what you feel to be right for you, because no-one walks your pathway in life. Does that help you?

Jan: It does, thank you very much. The other question I have is: I try my very hardest to go within spiritually, but when I get ... (At this point Jan became emotional and Salumet asked others in group to give help.)

It is good that you allow these emotions to come. That is why my dear friend, I have singled you out this evening. Please give her some healing and I will help.

Jan: I don't know where to take the feelings that I have—I don't know where to go—what to do basically.

You, my dear friend, are so harsh about your own feelings. Your emotions are harsh at this time. I would say to you, as you go to meditation, all you can do is to offer yourself to us in spirit, who will come to you and help you, but you have to allow us to help you. Can you understand?

Jan: I think so.

Yes. Do not be too concerned, do not be concerned.

Jan: Most of the time I know the basic problem is that I'm a 'people's person', and then when I have reclusive times, I just feel so alone.

Do not worry. When you go inwards in meditation, you are never alone—none of you is ever alone; there is always someone with you who is willing to help. Sometimes as human beings, everyday life seems harsh to you, everyday life brings new problems or troubles. That is why my dear friends I say to you so often, it is important to go inwards and to find that unity with us in spirit in order that we can help you to grow. But you are hard on yourself my dear friend. I will try to help you, or make sure that the help comes to you, but all we need you to do, is to put to one side the fear of thinking. Do you understand?

Jan: Yes I do.

Yes. Let yourself just be—that is all we ask—just let yourself be.

Jan: Thank you.

Hopefully you are now feeling a calmness come to you.

Jan: I am.

Yes. Allow it to engulf you.

(Jan apologised to group at this point for the emotions—everybody responded supportively.)

It is what was needed.

(Lilian made further comments about the hardness of living in general.)

She focuses on herself and is harsh with herself. She must just allow herself to be, to allow us in spirit to uplift and take her on her spiritual journeys; that is what she must do.

Jan: Thank you Salumet. I feel as if I've got a big...

Yes, it has been lifted this time from you. We hope my dear friend, that it has enabled you to look forward, in order that we can help you more. You understand?

Jan: Yes I do, thank you.

Now just allow those around you to swamp you in love, in peace. And you will feel before you live this time, a great joy of love.

Now my dear friends, with those words I will withdraw this time. I am happy for each one of you that you have experienced just a level from spirit that has enabled you to let go of a little of your fears. And with that, I will allow you to continue with your evening.

(General thanks)

We chatted amongst ourselves for a few minutes; then noticed that one was coming through, and to our surprise, the one through Sarah who was with us last week came through again:

Thank you, I was just waiting for others to finish. I wished to come, because the energy was beginning to deplete again a little and I wished to come to bring you a little good news.

George: How very nice. Thank you.

Last time, we were so happy that you were all able to pick up on these visitors to you and they were most happy to be with you. So happy were they that they have come back to just visit you to see what the impression they gave last week has done for you. They have been listening to your teacher and have been so happy that they have been able to help you on your spiritual journey and this is what I wished to say to you; so I do not have any other information for you, but I hope that I have now restored a little of the 'excited' energy with you once more.

(General thanks)

George: And could I just say also that amongst those was one we refer to as 'the mushroom people', because we do not have another name. But bearing in mind that one came to us with Bonniol on a prior occasion and amongst your party there was one who helped to organise that, could I just single him out for a very big 'thank you', and I do apologise for not having a proper name.

I would like you to know that that one was more than happy to return to you to help in any way that was possible, but I am sure that your thanks will be gratefully received.

George: And thank you everyone. It was a lovely evening for us.

I am happy that all has gone to plan.

Rod: Did you happen to see the drawings that George made at the bottom of the paperwork?

Pause as energy faded

I have been ... much ... amused ... by ... the ... drawings...

George's Notes:

Jan's question: It is interesting to note that Jan had been wrestling with the question during the day and Salumet was well aware of that fact; and we have noticed this on previous occasions. As to the question, there has been very recent media attention to the idea that organs should be automatically recycled, unless an 'opt out' card is carried.

~24th November 2008~ SALUMET

This was an evening devoted to exercises/spiritual development. It began with one through Sarah indicating that she had others with her who would be joining with us in due course. There was further communication via Sue, who was aware of a lady with a little boy named George. It then became apparent that someone was with Eileen. It was felt that this perhaps connected with the one through Sue and Sue suggested to Lilian that she ask if her name was Martha, but in fact it was Salumet:

Lilian: Would I be right in saying your name is Martha?

Good evening.

Lilian: (Chuckles) We've made a big mistake—welcome!

My intention this time, my dear friends, was to allow you an exercise of discovery of knowledge and to see how you would cope. Our dear lady friend with the children (Sue) is able to converse quietly and to expand her connections with spirit. That is the purpose this evening for her. Did you notice, my dear friends, that both our dear ladies this time were just a little unsure of why the others were speaking, and they came to the conclusion that because this instrument did not use words, that there had to be some connection there.

Lilian: Yes, I certainly did.

I tried to stay quietly but I feel you need an explanation. Our dear lady in the corner (Sarah) of course brought the correct message that there was another to speak, but on returning to her, she became a little unsure of what to do with the words coming. What I would now like you to do, my dear friends, is to focus just a little more so that your gifts of spirit can open more fully. But in saying these words, I do not want you to think that I lay any criticism to you. I only wish to help you in your spiritual unfoldment.

Lilian: Yes, we do understand.

Yes. I am not only speaking of our two ladies, but in fact to each one of you—that whilst in meditation, whilst in connection with our world, you must question, you must seek answers, and in so doing you will become more closely connected, and you will know and understand quite quickly what you have to do. I hope these few words have helped you, my dear friends.

(Affirmed)

George: Yes, I felt there was a need to become more connected, and I was prompted to switch on the recorders so that that action would not interrupt anything that might happen (yes), and I felt a little something about my face, but nothing more transpired so far as I was concerned.

You are all here for a purpose. You are here as a group to work together, but you are also here for your own individual development and that must go forward also. So my dear lady, I will make apologies to you, because your work is always so good, but it was an exercise I felt was needed.

Lilian: It's kind of you to say that.

George: Thank you for your explanation Salumet.

But you can see that when you become a little unsure, that the connections go more quickly—you find that I am sure.

Lilian: Yes.

Now, let us continue and be more focussed in why those in our world come to you, and the main purpose of their visit. It does not matter too much if you get something wrong or you do not connect too well with another one, but you must continue to grow, you must continue to focus and become a stronger unit together. And with those words I will leave you, and I will sit and work quietly with this instrument, but at the same time I will be most interested to see what our two lady friends bring forward for you.

Lilian: Thank you very much Salumet.

(General thanks)

The one at the beginning then spoke through Sarah again:

I wonder if I would be permitted to speak again.

Lilian: Yes please do.

I am afraid I did not bring to this lady the correct message for her to continue, but I now am able to bring those to you who I talked of earlier. They are most close to you all and each one of you should FEEL the hand of one if you are able to open your hands out to them. I have two names for you and I believe the other lady has two more as well. They are all joined together and are also holding hands. The idea is for their hands to link up with yours, to make one big circle. This circle will take round the bond that we all share. We all know each other and when we take a hand of one from spirit, we hope that some recognition can be made, from spirit to spirit, of a dear one that has been known previously to you. So I ask that you make yourselves available for these to come to you. And I give to you the names of John and Andrew.

Lilian: Will you be speaking to us again?

I will stay with you and I will be interested to hear what the others have to say before I leave you.

As the lady continued with some commentary, all experienced a very positive 'pressure' feeling about the hands and apparently those in spirit were very pleased with the results. When she departed there was discussion amongst ourselves regarding names sensed. The evening concluded with another through Eileen who guided us on a meditative journey, available on our website: www.salumetandfriends.org

~1st December 2008~ SALUMET

Lilian: Welcome to you Salumet.

Good evening.

All: Good evening.

As we come together once more I say to you not only should you ask for healing help, but you have come to the stage of asking for help with your own spiritual unfoldment. We welcome again tonight, our dear friend known to us as Richard.

Richard: Thank you Salumet.

You are making many strides in your life and this is part of your own development. When people speak of 'spiritual development' they always assume that it must mean some kind of extra phenomenon. I say to you all: not so. Just being alive in human form and living life, whether it be merely living in this lifetime, is part of your spiritual unfoldment. After all, when each one of you met someone with whom you could share your lives, or whenever you had your children, each of these things are part of your spiritual growth. So, I would like you, my dear friends, to understand what spiritual growth really means. I know how much you have grown, but do you realise how much you have grown? I hear you speak often of the way you recognise what you feel to be 'right' or 'wrong', and that awareness is also part of spiritual growth. But there comes a point, my dear friends, when everyday-living becomes not enough satisfaction for you, and you crave for the phenomenon that you read of and experience for yourselves to continually happen. I would say to you: be humble in all that you have, be humble with all that you have achieved, and be humble in what you wish for. Do you understand what I am saying to you?

(Affirmed)

George: Yes, It's easy to get carried away by the joy of progression...

Exactly!

George: ...And I must say I experienced joy in seeing the website that Richard has recently set up.

Yes.

George: Perhaps I should exercise more humility and temper that joy a little...

Joy ... joy is good, it is a good thing. But I do not want you to temper joy, I want you just to have the realisation that there is more to you as spirit than what happens to you in this lifetime. That is where the humility comes into play.

George: I understand.

I hope that each one of you this evening feels the great love which overshadows each one of you here. I hope that your recognition of the energy within this room is available to you at all times; that all you need to do is to call upon us for any help and unfoldment that you need.

(The energy referred to could be felt this evening—the room had a 'charged' feel to it.)

And again I will say to you, each one of you is developing at a different rate, in a different way, but also, as you come together on these evenings, you become united in spiritual force. If you wish this time to have questions answered, I will endeavour to answer them for you.

Lilian: Thank you—anyone?

Richard: Salumet... (Yes) I think more recently I've felt slightly detached when it comes to spiritual matters. I think it's probably attributed to the fact that there's a lot going on. But there have been occasions when I've felt like I needed help, or assistance, or been looking for guidance, but felt more distant from it than I have in the past.

My talk this evening, my dear friend, has been partly for your understanding; that life itself is part of spiritual unfoldment. I know you have had questions and sometimes you feel that more time should be devoted to what you term 'spiritual matters'. But what is 'spiritual matters' if it is not to be with people that you love, to see love grow and to see life encompass you? That is what I have been saying. Do not expect spiritual growth to be just phenomenon—that is not so. My dear friend you are still growing, you have made the connection with us, and when the time is right, there will always be something for you.

Do you understand?

Richard: I do, I do, and I don't. It's always been said that there'll be something for me—I just...

You must be patient.

Richard: I know.

Time weighs heavily upon you, but what is time? Think of the word, be patient, my dear friend. You can and will be used, but only when all aspects of your life are correct (okay). Do you understand?

Richard: Yes.

Yes—we know and we feel your puzzlement, but I am sure if you speak to the others within this room, they will tell you that they have spent many years developing and growing and accepting—and you are still young in human terms.

Richard: Um ... the little one that we have on the way—myself and my wife Anna—it was said when I wasn't here, or it had been mentioned that perhaps it was someone coming back to us. Do you have anything you can add to this?

You want to know details? Yes—that is so like you—I feel that you are not happy unless you have detail. All I will say to you, my dear friend, is that those who come to us in the form of new souls—babies—are already known to you. You may well have an affinity with the child and recognise that spiritual connection, because you realise that we always incarnate and reincarnate with the same group-soul. So the child knows who it comes to, and sometimes when that knowledge is available, so too the parents will find the connection. You will have the stronger bond with the coming child.

Richard: The stronger connection?

With any children that you have, you will be the one with the stronger connection—not in everyday matters of looking after child or children.

Richard: No, I wouldn't have thought so. (Chuckles)

No, but in a spiritual manner, I am speaking of.

Richard: Yes. Well I hope that Anna will be persuaded to allow it or them to develop...

It will happen anyway, whether one person wishes it or not, if that child is meant to explore their own spirituality, then no other human being can stop it, you understand?

Richard: I understand that for sure.

Although, parents I have to say, in this Earthly world feel that they 'own' children—they do not. Your children are part of your own soul-group, and they may well have been something else in past times, like mothers, sons, daughters—you already have made agreement to what your connection will be in human lifetimes. So again, I will say to each one of you here, that you truly are only responsible for your own selves—your own spiritual self. So often, we have parents who blame themselves, for the way children behave, and of course, there have to be life's rules, I do not say otherwise, but what I say to you is that ultimately that child will grow and become their own being. So much grief and hardship is experienced by being parents in human form, because of the lack of understanding that that baby, that child, is a spiritual-being also.

Richard: I don't think it makes it any easier for us though.

Jan: I think that that knowledge, as mum and I have spoken on occasions, is just having that knowledge does make things so much easier. (Yes) If you just step back and think about it when you are a little anxious or cross—they are who they are (yes) and that certainly makes disappointments and things like that, just disappear.

Yes, and that comes with your own growth of spiritual awareness, and as you all know within the room, spiritual awareness changes the way you behave and the way that you think. You would agree?

(Affirmed)

Yes. That is spiritual awareness—spiritual awareness within the confines of human existence. I do not say because you have awareness, that life is easier.

Jan: I think it's actually more difficult because you have awareness.

It is more responsibility and sometimes a little harder because you have the knowledge.

Jan: With lots of situations, I'm sure we all find ourselves internalising and having conversations with yourself a lot more, than before I was aware (yes). That obviously is awareness—it's tough sometimes—you analyse a lot more.

Richard: Ignorance is bliss!

(Chuckles)

Well, I would not agree with you on that one. Ignorance is not bliss, ignorance leaves you isolated, and you become static in your thoughts and feelings. Only when the spirit is free can it understand fully that all knowledge is available to it.

Richard: There are some people that I've spoken to recently that I work with—I've not come across it before—where they're not even slightly interested—it's almost like opposing magnets and something tells me not to pursue it. It's interesting that you can get such different people, and even different religions and different walks of life, where you'd think were one person would be spiritually minded, actually isn't at all. But you see my dear friend, you are passing judgement. Because someone does not agree with your knowledge, does not mean they are not a spiritual being. They may well be the most spiritual being that you would ever know; because of their actions, their deeds, the way they embrace life. So just be a little careful before saying people are not spiritual. They do not always have need for what is termed 'religion', but they may have indeed a very good heart. They may devote their lives to giving and helping others, without accepting any form of dogma.

George: Another one of our expressions is: 'actions speak louder than words', which seems to apply here. Yes, and you do not always recognise the reason for a human being's purpose in this world. You do not have the wider picture. So, again I am repeating myself when I say my dear friends: do not judge another. Accept that they may be different from you, but they may just be on a different spiritual pathway. You understand?

(Affirmed)

Sarah: Yes, I'm glad you said that, because I think my brother is one of those examples. He doesn't take in what I say that you've taught us, but he is a very kind and generous person.

Yes, always the problem is when you come to what we call 'development'. You have to be a little careful that you do not feel superior to others who have less knowledge. Be aware of those feelings and those thoughts.

Sarah: The thing is, the teachings you've given us—we're so enthusiastic them, we'd like everybody to know, but not everybody wants to...

But as our dear friend Richard has said, he felt he could not say too much and that is the feeling that he should have been aware of, because that is his own spirit telling him that those around are not ready for what he knows. It isn't that they are not as spiritual in any way, but they are perhaps just not ready for the information.

Richard: It is a very strange feeling to be compelled to shut up!

Yes, it is difficult to have, as our dear lady friend has said, when you have enthusiasm for something and others do not share it with you. But be aware of those feelings of stepping backwards from them and try not to be too critical of them.

Jan: I think I liken that to: we don't all have the same musical taste or dress sense or likes in colours etc.—but that's fine, we're all individuals.

Yes, you are correct; yes, that is a good comparison, and you all have come for different reasons. To grow—to grow spiritually, that is the purpose of life, that is your aim; to find the 'I AM', as we have spoken of in the past—to find who you are.

Sarah: I suppose people like my brother, they're still growing, because of the good things they're doing. Of course, of course. But you see, in criticising, you are doubting your own knowledge, in a way. That seems a strange way to say it to you, but you have to allow love to encompass all peoples in all walks of life, in whatever area they have chosen to tread. I know, my friends, it is not always easy, but that is part of your growth also. Who within this room would say that their whole life has been easy? Is there anyone?

(Several responded 'no')

No—then you should think: why is this? And I am sure my dear friends, that there are many, many, many less fortunate than yourselves...

(Affirmed)

And to overcome adversity in life is a great stepping stone.

Ann: And I think we grow from our challenges, don't we?

That should be. Not all human beings are able to, but if they learn something from it, that can only be for their good.
