

~14th November 1994~

Good evening.

Les: Good evening to you, and welcome from us all.

It is good to be amongst you again.

Les: Thank you for that. It does please us to know, you find it agreeable to be here.

There is a mission and a purpose, as you know, and so it must be that I continue to come to you.

Les: Thank you. But you could do it for duty. We hope that you do it also for pleasure, or that it gives you pleasure to do your duty here.

I feel love shine from all of you—for that I am truly grateful. It makes my short stay with you, a little more comfortable, each time I come to you.

Les: That's good to know. Thank you for telling us.

The spirit of each one of you shines forth in a different pattern. Together it makes me much more comfortable, in the mission I have to achieve. Each time the bond is becoming much stronger. (Good.) For this I am eternally grateful to you all.

Les: And we are very grateful for what it is doing to us, even though we are not aware of it perhaps.

Yes, of course, in return, you are endowed a little, with what is left behind. This you are not aware of, but I assure you it is so.

Les: Yes, we believe you absolutely. And as we hopefully develop as we should spiritually, we shall become aware of it.

Of course. Each step is a tender one, but it is being taken, step by step by step, until the link is so strong, that it cannot and will not be broken.

It is a link which will be strengthened and strengthened, until such time as all that you hope for can be achieved.

Les: That's splendid information.

But it is a tender thing and it must be worked towards—

Les: And cannot be rushed—

And, of course, cannot be rushed, as you say.

There is too much at stake.

Les: Thank you. And I'm sure we shall all exercise the utmost patience in this, because we do realise how important it is.

This evening, I wish to bring a little upliftment to the young lady, not next to me, but the one next to her. She is in need of a little upliftment and so it is given.

Les: Thank you. Hear that Debbie?

Debbie: Yes, thank you.

I say to all of you, be strong in your search for light. Do not despair from your everyday pitfalls, but lift up your hearts and smile, even to those things that you feel must bring you down. Look to your hearts, let it shine forth from all of you. Know that you are loved, each and every individual one of you, that you are being supported in your daily lives. I can assure each of you that although I cannot say your life will not have any problems, what I do say to you, 'You are not alone at any time.' Become aware of those around you, and as I have said to you previously, call upon me, when you are in much need. I can only offer myself to you, when the call is given.

Les: I thank you very much for that, because it is very opportune as it happens. I know there are people here tonight, I'm not mentioning names, who are a little puzzled as to the receipt of help, because they are aware of a person who feels warmth, when help has been asked for. But they themselves do not have any awareness of it being given to them.

It matters not. The help is there, that is what is important. The awareness may not be there for them to see. It may not be a tangible thing to them, but it is there.

Les: So they can rely upon that then, all the time, when they call for it.

And let me say, it may not always be the results that they so desire, but it is ultimately what the soul needs at that time.

Les: Quite. Thank you very much for that Salumet.

Now, shall we have your question this time?

Les asked a question on behalf of Brent and Soisy, who were moving to America. The answer involved personal information, which has been edited here and we start with a question from George:

George: Could I come back to a further question about corn circles. Looking at a field of corn, we know that each flower, or each ear of corn, has it's energy field, or aura. So a field of corn, is really a sheet of energy—perhaps one could see it in this way—a little above the ground. And if one is writing in it with energy, it's a very nice writing tablet. And the formation of crop circles, is an indication that there is another intelligence beyond Earth plane. It is also an indication that there is another energy, which mankind does not know of. Would you care to comment on that?

I think I have already commented on that.

Les: Yes you have actually. You've had the answer to that, in the past—

Yes. It is not a new question. There are many energies, as such, which have not been tapped into, if you like. There are many unknown energies, which have yet to be discovered. I believe I have told you this previously. (Yes.) Is there something specific you want me to talk about? You wish me to name the energy that is being used?

George: Well, you may say there is a more subtle message in the corn circles, than simply indicating another energy and indicating a 'beyond Earth' intelligence. Or would those factors be the main message in the crop circles?

The message you seek within these circles, as I have said, are left by those space travellers, who come to your Earth plane. I have told you, that is why we have gathered at this particular time. (voice getting stronger)

Of course, these space travellers have knowledge, which far exceeds your own.

The energies used within your corn circles, is one that is not known at this present time. But of course, there also lies the energies of your Earth, the energies of your Earth, plus the corn, plus the energy used to flatten it. It is a combination of each energy. It is not one single energy being used. If all that exists is energy, does it not make sense, that each energy is an individual energy in it's own right, as each of you are individual? Can you see that?

George: Yes, thank you.

So, I say it is a combination, but the energies used by the space travellers, is an energy as yet unknown to you Earth peoples. I have said to you, I will not say what it is at this present time, because I intend to bring someone to you, who will give you much, much more detail.

But I wish you all to see that all of life is indeed ENERGY.

Do you understand that?

George: Yes, that does make it clearer, thank you.

Les: I'm hoping that when you are able to bring these other messengers that it may be possible the physical experiments may be carried out here.

We shall see. Of course experiments within your scientific groups are already taking place. They have already shown that the effect on your corn is that of something they have not experienced in the past.

Les: Quite and they still deny it.

The corn is indeed imbued with a new energy. That is something which they will discover for themselves. It cannot be denied.

Les: And this energy will be apparent in the usage of the corn?

It already is.

Les: It already is?

They have the knowledge. It is being denied at this time. But the experiments have shown that the energy within the corn, is that of one which is, until now, unknown. And indeed, if the seed of the corn is re-planted, it should be, and will be, a much stronger strain.

Les: Is that so? Thank you. Sounds as though you better get in touch with some of your chemist friends George. And get them to find out what is going on, because the government won't admit it. Nice little side-line job for you?

It is a simple thing, for someone who is in touch with one of your corn circles, to take for themselves, to test for themselves, if they have the knowledge.

Les: This gentleman is a retired chemist. (George) There we have the one who can test what I say to you—

Les: Good, I thought I'd drag him into it. He's been sitting there very quietly saying nothing. (laughter)

I will be interested to hear what he has to tell me.

Les: George, you have a mission.

George: Thank you for that.

Les: I think he has the knowledge and the correct contacts probably, to follow this right through to the end now.

There then followed further personal information and the names have been edited for privacy:

Sitter: Could I ask something? Can I ask what X should do about Y's 'hyper-mania,' and how you see it going?

Yes. Yes, we have many problems with this one. But I have to say to you, she cannot be responsible for another's life. She can offer support, she can try as she may, but indeed this one needs help. (stronger) I would say to you, here we have a troubled soul. Indeed it is something which goes deeply within him. She should not in any way feel responsible, should feel guilt, because she cannot do more to help him. Let me try to explain it simply to you—Any type of neurosis, any type of craving, no matter what it be, whether it is his problem, (hypermania) whether it be alcoholism, whether it be drugs, no matter what the problem. This one needs to be in touch with that aspect of himself that can help. By that I mean he needs to see one who can help him spiritually, because until that part of him is fully expressed, and he can admit to himself what the underlying problem is, then physically he will be barren. He needs to speak to someone like our good friend who stands before me. (Les) He can help and I too am willing to try to help. Even I cannot interfere, if he does not wish it to be. I would say, tell your child to encourage him to come to one who can bring forth that understanding of spirit. He is like an animal, who is trapped on a 'merry-go-round.' He wants to stop, but he does not have the means or the knowledge. Can you understand that? (Yes, thank you.) He could be helped, if he so desires, but the desire must come from him. We cannot interfere in anyone's life, I have told you all this before. He has to come to that inner knowledge. He has to expose his soul, if you like, before the help will be available to him. I say to you, I say to your child, to think long and hard. Again, her free will is uppermost in what she decides, but I would say to her, he really is at a loss to be helped, until he comes forward and realises what life is truly about. He will continue on this merry-go-round, until such time as that can happen. Your child is having her own energies depleted by this man.

Sitter: May I ask a further question? Is it a good thing to stay with him?

This is what I say, when I said her free will comes into play. I would say to her, think long and hard. Think of the child, who is the creation of this bond. Do what is best for the child, because sometimes in your lives, what you see as being cruel, is in fact being kind. You have to know the balance, you have to decide for yourselves, what is best for you. I would say to you, continue to allow her to speak to you, let her make her own choices. She has to have that choice. But she must not allow herself to become overwhelmed by guilt. If she should decide that he is, I don't like the word, a 'lost cause,' then she must move forward with her own life. But he can be helped. He needs a little guidance towards the correct help. Please see if you can do anything for them, Please. And I will see what can be done. She has shed too many tears already. (Thank you very much) I would say to you, much more than healing is needed this time. He needs to become aware of that inner soul. He needs to lay bare that side of him, that aspect of him, that is causing the problem.

Les: Well the lady knows that if she can persuade him to come here, that it will be treated with absolute confidence—

The lady, too, can help, by keeping the situation quiet, by not allowing any situation to become explosive, because then you see, spiritually, damage is being done. Try always to maintain that composure, that quietness, that gentle healing voice, because you see, all these things have a 'boomerang' effect. But I say feel pity for this one. It is not as bad as you all feel. Too often do I hear criticism, when instead what is needed is understanding and love. I hope that has been helpful to you.

Sitter: Yes, thank you very much.

The child is suffering too at this time. But don't be concerned. It will right itself. Don't worry about the child too much. (Thank you.)

Sitter: Can I say something Les? Seeing that it's becoming a personal evening tonight—I feel that at the beginning of the year, I made a big decision in my life. I feel that it was the right decision, but since then, it seems everything is going wrong. It's as if I'm being punished for making that decision. Whether I'm just feeling sorry for myself, I don't know. It just seems like everything—My sister and her husband, it all comes down onto them as well. They feel slightly responsible—

Let me say this to you, my child. Who do you think is punishing you?

Sitter: Well, me probably.

Yes, let me say you are your own worst enemy. There is no being who stands to one side and says, 'They are too happy, they must be punished.' No, no, no. (chuckles)

Sitter: Well it just seems like everything is going wrong.

Let me say to you, there cannot be good, there cannot be the good times, unless you too experience bad times. Always you will have positive and negative. It is all to do with the pattern of your lives. I can say to you, all right, you have suffered problems, it may not be what you want to experience, but because of them, you are becoming a much stronger person. I know that is not what you wish me to say to you, but I must...Each and every one of you, go through these hurtful experiences within your lives, cry out, 'Why me?! What have I done to deserve this?' I say to you, thank that God consciousness, that you have had the opportunity to learn, because you see, it is a lesson of life. Instead of saying, 'Why am I being punished?' Thank God. Say, 'Thank you for the experience. I have come through it, and now I am a stronger person.' It does not make the hurt in the heart go, and that is what we are speaking of; it is the heart within your heart that we are speaking of. Let me say to you, put yourself a little to one side, stand back from all that has happened, put things into perspective. (stronger voice) What has happened to you, is just a 'hiccup.' I think I can say to you, within the next six months of your life, instead of the unhappiness, you will be smiling. Note my words to you. (Okay.) Fear not. Ask for help and guidance. It will come to you. Your family should not take on the responsibility, the pain, of another. Because of the bond between you, I can understand why it happens, but they should not feel responsible. The person concerned will return. You do not believe this at this time, do you?

Sitter: Sometimes, sometimes not.

But I say, the person will return. You can begin on a new footing and I say six months from now, I will see your face aglow. (Thank you.) Try not to be so negative. Sometimes you cause your own problems.

Sitter: I was wondering whether it was because I was feeling sorry for myself lately that everything seemed to happen to me.

It is a natural feeling in your world. But the very fact that you have recognised it, is very good. Once the recognition comes, of course then you can deal with it. All of you go through bad times. That is natural. But do not blame yourself, and do not blame who everyone blames. 'Why am I being punished?' No, no, no. No one punishes you, but yourself. Send out your thoughts of love. Use that very powerful thing, thought. Again, we come back to it. All of you could transform your lives if you so wished.

Remember your thought waves rebound. In the same way too, do those negative thoughts rebound. So which would you rather have, the thoughts of goodness and love, or those negative ones, which are so destructive? Listen to your heart, my child. Be guided, be still. All will be well. (Okay.)

Lilian: Can I say thank you too? Your words have helped me as well.

My child, I am aware of all that goes on within your lives. Sometimes my heart is heavy when I see you so despondent. And all of you, each and every one of you, have times when your hearts are heavy. You would not be human, if that was not so. All of you have days of loneliness, of sorrow, of heartache, and I say to you all, the same as I have said to the dear child I have spoken to. Thank God for the very act of the despondency, because in those very dark moments, that is when your soul comes into it's own. That is when the soul's growth is at it's very best. That may be a difficult thing for you to understand, but believe me when I say you are never, never alone. (Thank you.) Your family, my child, will sort themselves out. (Thank you.) No more tears please. (Right.) No more tears—
Lilian: Thank you, I'll pass the message along.
Now I say, enough this time.

Les: Yes.

My blessing to you all.

Les: Our words are quite inadequate to thank you for these meetings. We just hope you can feel it from our hearts. God be with you.
